Orchard Hill Unfinished; 1300 Suffer Due To Strikes

By Bill First

A record-high number of students was accepted to the University this year. Thirteen hundred of them are now being housed in the unfinished Orchard Hill residence hall complex.

According to Mr. Jack Welles, director of housing, the main reason for the failure to meet the completion deadline of August 14 was strikes.

The glaziers' strike, which lasted a week and a half, caused the delay in the yet to be completed faculty residence apartments.

The roads should be completed and paved by October 5, with the exception of those within the complex.

FOR ANOTHER MONTH, the electricity in the residence halls will be derived from a temporary power line, thus limiting each room to a maximum of 200 watts. The use of items such as irons and hair dryers is limited to a special room and restricted to daylight hours.

Two elevators have already passed inspection and will soon be in use. By Wednesday, "B" will have full elevator service, and by Friday, "C." The others will be in use by early next week.

Mr. Welles wishes to thank the students who pitched in and made the best of the situation, and the contractors, who cooperated with the University to complete the rooms in time for the arrival of the students.

He also wishes to remind those who are looking forward to hot water and heat to stay out of the center of the complex so as not to impede the progress of the contractor in installing the steam units. If the students cooperate, he said, the steam units should be in by Friday. The University has spent $800 on blankets to suffice until Friday.

At the present time, there is one phone for each of the four residence halls. Phones and intercoms on each floor are to be installed in about two weeks. All doors will be on in a week Mr. Welles asks that the men students please stay out of the women's residence halls after curfew.

Each of the rooms in the seven-story Orchard Hill Complex buildings comes equipped with two beds, two desk chairs, a wall bookcase over the linoleum desks, a reading lamp over each bed an individual mirror and bureau-equipped closets. Expected to arrive soon are: one lounge chair, desk lamps and waste baskets.

The promised drapes, from Sam Brown's Drape Shop in Amherst will be hung at the end of this week and completely insure privacy for everyone by mid-December.

The modern bathrooms in the men's residence halls are equipped with little white dime dispensing machines. On each machine is written "10¢ will be returned if the machine is empty."

Town Merchants Supply Free Weekend Bus

A free bus from the campus to Amherst center will be operated this year through the Amherst Chamber of Commerce.

The bus will operate each Friday and Saturday afternoon, making a round trip each half hour. The route will start at Women's Physical Education building and include stops at the traffic light on North Pleasant near the women's dorms, the Student Union, Hills House and Van Meter House. In town the bus will stop opposite the post office and in Amherst center.

On Fridays the first northbound trip will start at 2:45 p.m.; the last trip will be at 7:45 p.m. On Saturdays the first trip will start at 1 p.m. and the last at 6 p.m.

Merchants who support the bus will be identified by window stickers. The chairman of the Chamber's bus committee is Jack Mathews.

Task Force To Plan Branch

President John W. Lederle has named a four-man "task force" to prepare and refine plans for the University of Massachusetts—Boston.

Named to the task force are Leo F. Redfern, dean of administration, chairman; Donald W. Cadigan, associate dean of admissions; William C. Venman, assistant to the provost; and Robert H. Brand, associate treasurer.

President Lederle said, "Time is of the essence in preparing for the University at Boston. We intend to accept 1,000 students by the fall of 1965. This means that courses must be formuiated, faculty must be hired, budgets must be prepared, admissions procedures must be established, catalogs will have to be printed, and adequate facilities will have to be found—all in the next few months."

Recommendations will be offered to the President on best methods of solving problems concerning curricula, staff, budget, admissions and student services. The group will devise methods of evaluating potential sites and the varied requirements for location, such as transit facilities, adequate land for future needs, and adaptability of existing facilities.

Members of the task force have had varied experience in building or extending higher education facilities. Chairman Redfern taught in the University of Wisconsin's extension division. Mr. Cadigan was admissions officer for the temporary UMass branch at Ft. Devens at the end of World War II, and is a former executive director of the Massachusetts Board of Regional Community Colleges. Mr. Venman was involved in opening Grand Valley State College in Michigan in 1961. Mr. Brand played a major role in the recent extension of Rutgers University into the cities of Camden and Newark, N. J.

According to Dr. Redfern, applications have been received from numerous college and university teachers who would like to teach in the Boston area.

Chairman Redfern expects that plans for staffing and preparing curricula can be completed in the next few months.

Univ. Orchestra To Begin Second Season

The University Orchestra will begin preparations for its second season with a rehearsal on Thursday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in Old Chapel Auditorium.

Ronald Steele, violinist and conductor, will direct the orchestra again this year. He urges all of last year's members to attend the first rehearsal.

Steele said, "We hope to have more than 85 players this year, and to do this we will need new members. We are particularly interested in bolstering the string section."

Musicians from the University or from the Amherst area are eligible to join the orchestra. Those who are interested in playing are asked to call Mr. Steele at 545-2227.

According to Steele, the first concert, to be held in December, will feature Schubert's "Ninth Symphony." Distinguished soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra will make a guest appearance at next spring's concert.

UM Gets Phi Beta Kappa

The University marked another milestone Tuesday on its path toward overall academic excellence as the 27th triennial council of Phi Beta Kappa approved the establishment of a UMass Phi Beta Kappa chapter.

THE UNIVERSITY was one of seven colleges and universities granted permission to operate chapters. Forty-two institutions had submitted applications.

Provost Oswald Tippo, chief academic officer at UMass, said a Phi Beta Kappa chapter will mean that "outstanding students will receive significant recognition for their scholastic achievements."

Permission to establish a chapter, Tippo said, "recognizes the University's recent progress in library acquisitions, competitive faculty salaries and increased scholarship funds—all made possible through wholehearted legisiative support."

PHI BETA KAPPA, an honorary fraternity of scholars in the arts and sciences, was founded in 1776. The society numbered 180,000 members in 170 chapters in 1962.

Phi Beta Kappa publishes two quarterly journals, "The Key Reporter" and "The American Scholar."

First From UMass Press Is Work By Dr. Howard Quint

The University of Massachusetts will mark the establishment of a full-fledged university press this week with the appearance of its first official publication.

The book is "The Talkative President: The Off-the-Record Press Conferences of Calvin Coolidge," edited by Dr. Howard H. Quint, head of the UMass history department, and Dr. Robert H. Ferrell of Indiana University.

"The Talkative President," which suggests that "Silent Cal" was a misnomer for Coolidge, will appear this Tuesday, Sept. 15.

The University of Massachusetts Press is a direct descendant of two campus ancestors: "The Massachusetts Review," established in 1959, and the University Press Committee, appointed by President John W. Lederle in 1962.

The Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Sidney Kaplan, co-editor of the "Review," published "A Curious Quire" in the latter year.

This publication, which unofficially marked the beginning of the University Press, is a collection of poems by Stanley Koehler, Leon O. Barron, David R. Clark, and Robert G. Tucker, all of the UMass English department, with lithographs by Donald R. Matheson of the art department.

After the first publication, plans were made to publish "The Talkative President" and to establish officially a university press.

President Lederle appointed Leone A. Barron, former managing editor of the "Review" as director, and a 10'-member committee made up of University faculty and staff.

Three additional books are now at the printers and will be published this fall by the University Press. "The Symphonies of Ralph Vaughan Williams," by Elliott S. Schwartz, a former member of the UMass music department, includes a discussion of the historical background from which Vaughan Williams' music emerged and analyses of

New Business Manager For RSO Office

Armand H. DeGrenier of Amherst has been named business manager of Recognized Student Organizations at the University.

DeGrenier, a native of Southbridge, graduated from the College of the Holy Cross in 1961. He attended Boston College Law School and is presently working toward a master's degree in government at UMass.

He replaces Edward A. Buck, who has opened a local travel agency.

The RSO office that DeGrenier manages serves as a source of reference and counsel to more than 250 student organizations operating on the campus.

As business manager, DeGrenier will oversee the financial affairs of student groups and act as an informal advisor on both fiscal and organizational matters.

THE STUDENT SENATE

Nomination papers for the Student Senate will be available in the R.S.O. Office, second floor Student Union Building, for a period of one week, starting Friday, Sept. 18.

When completed, this residence area at the University of Massachusetts will house 5275 students in six 22-story dormitories and nine low-rise dormitories. The dormitory-dining hall complex will consist of 18 buildings, including three commons. Though the total project will cost approximately $36,000,000, it is being built at no cost to the taxpayer. The buildings are being constructed by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority, and are paid for on a self-liquidating basis. Work has already begun on the first phase of the project, and the first low-rise dormitories will be completed by Sept. 1965.

REORGANIZATION

As the temporary Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian, I would like to greet the returning upperclassmen and welcome the new freshmen to the campus. Since last semester, both the campus and the Collegian have undergone a great many changes. Due to the resignation of the former Editor-in-Chief, as Managing Editor, it is now my privilegé to assume the responsibilities of the position of Editor.

During the next few weeks, the Collegian may seem as confused as the campus. Every year, matriculation brings a rush of disorganization, and this year we are forced to revamp our publication schedule as we reorganize. Thus, we will be forced to suspend our Wednesday publication for the next two weeks. By the first of next month, we hope to be able to resume regular publication. The addition to the staff of any interested students would be of great assistance, especially during this period.

A Cautious Optimism

by Kenneth Feinberg

Although last night's "State of the University" speech by President Lederle had an unmistakable primary theme of optimism, the wary fear of program stagnation was one of the major points discussed. The president proudly announced the program offered to the University student, an opportunity unobtainable four years ago. The University has indeed expanded in the proper direction —but will this dynamic move forward continue?

The cautious explanation by the president of the new branch to be established in Boston is the epitomy of the problems facing the University. Although Dr. Lederle announced that the proposed expansion was not "A political response to legislative demands," my cautious attitude towards legislators on Beacon Hill prevents me from sharing the President's optimism. Serious scrutiny of the new proposal should be initiated in order to prevent the Boston plan from becoming a political ping pong ball.

Nevertheless, the President is to be commended. His optimism is shared by the majority of UMass personnel and students. If the University does not lose its "individuality" while continuing its expansion program, we will indeed, as he said in his speech, "as individuals and as a university achieve greatly . . ."

Repeat Performance

by Sandy Graham

At the beginning of every school year, the returning upperclassmen unpack resolutions as well as fall sweaters, and, like favorite clothing, they are familiar, but not sufficiently worn out to lose their attraction.

The yearly vow to "study this year, and really take advantage of this place" is usually expounded halfway through the semester over countless hours and cups of coffee in the Hatch. Then, they are buried like faithful pets, to be ressurrected soon after intercession . . .

That Touch of UMass

by Oleh Pawluk

Hello poor and miserable Freshman! Welcome to this institution of higher learning, chaoes, and red tape. Does your cute little beanie make you feel like Mickey Mouse? Are you sick of waiting in line to get to the john? Does a dormitory without electricity and water make you feel like an inmate of Alcatraz? In short, are you thoroughly disgusted with this place?

Well, cheer up my disgusted Freshman. What you are experiencing can be simply termed as "that touch of UMass." Your next four years (if you have the misfortune of staying in) will make your first week at the University seem like a picnic.

You will be expected to wait hours at the dining commons for meals which aren't fit for flies. Hot, autumn days will find you perspiring in stiuffy, 500 seat lecture halls where you won't be able to hear the mumbling of the professor. Rainy days will find you sloshing waist deep in mud and construction debris. And if you're really lucky, my dear Freshman, some cold winter night you will get a chance to crack your head open on an icy sidewalk.

In conclusion, life at UMass adds up to a Mad-Hatter's Tea Party, and you, my dear Freshman, are the door mouse.

Perspective —

by G. Masselam

For a moment let's be God. A god who sits upon his throne beyond the limits of man's awareness and vision. As we are going about our daily toil of judging souls, an extremely disorderly movement on earth distracts us. As we focus in, it appears that the disturbance is on the North American Continent in the United States. As a matter of fact it's in the North Eastern section, around the western part of the state of Massachusetts. Yes, you guessed it, it's in Amherst, Massachusetts. That is, the southern part of Amherst. The question confronting us is "what is it"?

At first sight it appears to be an anthill, but those moving figures seem too chaotic to be ants. But then it dawns? It's Registration Day at UMass. At this point we are overcome with compassion for those fragile humans, especially the ones with red and white heads with '68 stamped on the back, for certainly they are the beginners. Their seemingly self-confident expressions mixed with anxiety and vagueness reveal them.

How can these neophytes last in such a huge and bewildering situation? Being gods, we are prone to worry. But, perhaps we are a little premature. After all, each new class will eventually find its place. The grotesque hugeness will eventually shrink as they make friends, join fraternities and sororities, clubs and other organizations. No matter how large the University grows, small groups will develop. It is in small groups where one finds meaning.

The harrowing thought is that in this assimilating process countless students will be eliminated from the community that they have so desired to join. And the thought that although it is important to become oriented to the campus, the campus pond can never replace the Atlantic Ocean.

Enough of playing God. It's tiring and it's boring. Anyway, classes start today and they are not so celestial.

Letters to the Editor

Overwhelmed

Dear Editor:

As a freshman at the University, I am gradually being overwhelmed by organization—either by its overgrowth or its lack. I am interested in becoming a part of the University—academically and extra curricularly. But there seems to be little or no opportunity for an incoming student to become a part of established activities. I for one am interested in Collegian, but have not the slightest idea as to how to offer my help. I would greatly appreciate your help in advising me and other bewildered newcomers.

Ed. Note: As you know, we are a student newspaper, and therefore welcome and need contributors from all classes. This year, more than ever, Collegian is anxious for anyone with skill in writing, photography, makeup, typing, or proofreading. However, these needed qualities must be taught, and we hope to offer an opportunity to learn in exchange for your willingness to help. We apologize for our oversight, an outcome of starting confusion, and invite interested students of all classes to drop in to the Collegian office on Thursday night and help put out an issue.

Sincerely,
DN, '68

Traditionless

Dear Editor:

Tradition is a necessary part of any college. Harvard has a Yard, Yale and Princeton have their ivy. But what is the extent of UMass tradition? The button.

As a freshman I have been forced to turn slowly on a Hatch table, in a dormitory room, and in the streets of Amherst, reciting an inane rhyme and pointing to the top of my head. If this is the grounded ritual which is to be my first impression of university tradition I feel deeply disappointed.

Not only am I forced to participate in something which holds no value for me, but I am further forced to display all that remains of my identity on my back. I feel like an autobiographical sandwich man parading my name, origins, new home, and ambitions around town. Can't the University offer a proud tradition and a more subtle way of getting acquainted than now exist?

Sincerely,
H. S. '68

There will be a meeting of all male students of the classes of 1965, 1966 and 1967 who are interested in participating on the UMass Varsity Rifle team for the school year 1964-65 at 6 p.m. on Monday, September 21 in Room 109, Dickinson Hall. All members of the Varsity Rifle Squad during the school year 1963-64 should attend. All students are requested to bring pencil, pen and academic schedule with them.

Redmen Voice Expands To 11 Stations

Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk announced today the formation of an 11-station Redmen football network that will broadcast the University of Massachusetts football games this fall.

The eleven stations are scattered across the state and will enable college football fans throughout Massachusetts to hear the Redmen in action the next nine Saturday afternoons.

Bill Rasmussen will do the play-by-play for the network. He will be assisted by Charlie Hill as statistician and engineer and Johnny Orr as colorman. Rasmussen broadcast the Massachusetts football and basketball games last year and was highly instrumental in enlarging the Redmen network to its present status.

Network stations include WORL in Boston, WACP in Lowell, WHAI in Greenfield, WARE in Ware, WBRK in Pittsfield, WGAW in Gardner, WHMP in Northampton, WALE in Fall River, WMAS in Springfield, WMRC in Milford and WDEW in Westfield.

Student Activities Coordinator Named

Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, a 39-year-old native of Dayton, Ohio, has been appointed coordinator of student activities, Dean of Students William F. Field announced today.

Dr. Noffsinger will be responsible for formulating policy and coordinating the work of the University's office of student activities and for the execution of financial and operational policies of the RSO office. He will also act as director of the Student Union and its programs.

The new coordinator is a 1950 graduate of the University of Toledo. He received his M.A. there and went on to get a Ph.D. degree in education from the University of Michigan.

A former English teacher in the Toledo public schools, Dr. Noffsinger has also taught education courses at the Universities of Toledo and Missouri. At the University of Michigan, he served as assistant dean of men, assistant director of housing and counseling.

Dr. Noffsinger, a World War II navy veteran of the South Pacific campaign, is married and the father of one child.

Orchard Hill - Named For Writers

The Board of Trustees has voted to name the four new seven-story dormitories in the Orchard Hill complex for four distinguished American writers.

The dormitories, opened this past weekend to accommodate 1,300 students, are named for poets Emily Dickinson and Eugene Field, journalist-author David Grayson, and lexicographer Noah Webster — all of whom lived in Amherst.

An experimental residence plan will be conducted in these dormitories this year in an effort to bring faculty and students closer together. Some faculty members will have offices in these dormitories and others will live in them. Classes, seminars and discussions will be conducted to provide closer coordination of academic and residence programs.

GEMA SERMUKSMIS, counselor in "B," said that none of the girls had complained about the infringement upon their privacy brought on by the presence of monstruction workers in the halls, because they really didn't expect that much privacy anyhow.

All girls have been instructed to put towels or construction paper on their windows.

Miss Sermuksmis also said that the honor system would be employed more this year in the new girls' residence halls. She said that it was impossible to climb in and out of windows as in the other dorms because the space was about 4x4 inches.

Redmen Optimistic About Difficult Schedule; Fusiamen Prepare For Yankee Conference Opener

With two thirds of the lettermen from last fall's undefeated squad returning for another year of action, it appears as though this year's Redmen football contingent could jell into another fine football team.

"Getting to the top is much easier than staying there," Coach Vic Fusia told his squad on the first day of preseason drills. "And if we maintain the proper attitude and strive for the consistency that has highlighted our performances for the past few seasons, there is no telling how far we might go."

SIX RETURNING LETTERMEN, Bob Meers, Milt Morin, Dick Bourdelais, John Hudson, Roger Deminico and Jim Fassell, head the list of returning end candidates, and at these two positions there is definitely a surplus of adequate talent. Meers and Morin were both first team conference selections at the end of last year as sophomores and with the year's experience should rate among the best in New England this fall.

THE TACKLE POSITIONS were hit hard by the loss of three lettermen by graduation, but the seasoned triumvirate of Bob Burke, Dick Kehoe and Don Hagberg will be back to form a good nucleus at these two key spots. Senior Clyde Meyerhoefer could help at one of these spots and sophomores John Boyle, Bob Davis and Bill Connor will supply the additional depth.

THE GUARD POSITIONS are the other cause for concern as preseason drills begin. Co-Captain Peter Pietz is the only returning letterman. Red Brooks, a junior who showed great promise while lettering last year as a sophomore, had back surgery in the spring and will probably have to sit out the coming season, and Tom Brophy, a two year letterman, has decided to forego football during his senior year. Juniors Larry Spidle and Don Rana, a converted fullback, should see plenty of action as the season unfolds, and two fine sophomores Bob Santucci and Bob Gogick will be battling for starting berths before the season is very old.

THE CENTER POSITION has three returning lettermen available, seniors Joe Doyle and Charlie Scialdone and junior Bernie Dallas. The latter wasted little time last year moving into the starting lineup and although sidelined two games with injuries, Bernie still played enough football to be called the finest center that Massachusetts has had since World War II.

AT THE QUARTERBACK lettermen Jerry Welchel and Jack Schroeder will split the chores for the third straight year. If Welchel is able to match the performances of his sophomore and junior years, the Redmen could well retain their Yankee Conference laurels and also come close to matching last year's outstanding record.

FIVE RETURNING LETTERMEN, Ken Palm, Phil DeRose, Bob Ellis, Terry Swanson, and Dick Lewis, head the returning halfback candidates. Add to this group two fine sophomores in Dave Giarla and Don Durkin and the end product appears to be a situation that would make any coach envious.

MIKE ROSS, the unsung hero of the starting backfield, is the only returning letterman at fullback, but junior Dave Kelley and sophomore Dick Benoit should bolster this position by the time the first game rolls around.

Milt Morin will probable handle most of the placement kick-off assignments and Welchel, Morin, and Swanson are all capable conversion and field goal kickers. Swanson, Morin, and Ross loom as the squad's top punters.

Coach Fusia has indicated to his squad that on a given Saturday, anyone of this year's opponents is capable of snapping the Redmen's unbeaten skein, and as a result individual and team performances will have to continue at a high level. "Success is often achieved as a result of dedication, determination, and maintaining a high level of consistency", Fusia informed his squad. "If we can add to these ingredients our share of luck during our nine - game schedule, I'm sure that the season will be one that we'll all long remember."

Major Speech by Tippo Slated for Thurs. Convo.

Dr. Oswald Tippo, new University Provost, will preside over the opening convocation next Thursday.

The University will formally open its 1964-65 academic year next Thursday at 11:15 a.m. with a faculty-student convocation in the ballroom of the Student Union.

Dr. Oswald Tippo, provost since June and a 1932 graduate of UMass, will deliver the main address.

Dr. Tippo's address, his first major on-campus appearance before the student body, is expected to be the highlight of the convocation.

President John W. Lederle will preside over the convocation and will present the University's Outstanding Teacher Award to a scholar judged superior by fellow faculty members.

The University Band will provide music for the occasion.

George Michael, president of the UMass Student Senate, will welcome students and introduce major student leaders to the audience.

Dr. Tippo plans to discuss his conception of the provost's post and his plans as chief academic officer at UMass as they relate to both students and faculty.

After receiving a Ph.D. in biology from Harvard University and teaching at Harvard and Radcliffe, Dr. Tippo joined the University of Illinois in 1948, became chairman of the division of biological sciences the following year, and dean of the graduate school there in 1953.

Dr. Tippo joined the Yale University faculty in 1955 as Eaton professor and chairman of the department of botany. He left Yale in 1960 to become provost at the University of Colorado.

Staff Enlightened By Lederle In The Dark

by Dave Haracz

THE ELECTRICAL SYSTEM of Mahar Auditorium in the new School of Business Administration complex provided its own commentary on the state of the University by plunging the hall into darkness moments before University President John W. Lederle was scheduled to begin his second annual State of the University address Monday evening.

Pres. Lederle in the dark

The assembled faculty waited more than twenty minutes while workers and administration officials fruitlessly searched the not-yet-familiar building for the cause of the outage. Finally, Lederle, with the aid of Housing Director Jack Welles and a hand electric torch, began his speech and had completed more than half of it before the electrical service was restored.

DESPITE THE ADVERSE CONDITIONS both in the auditorium and on the grounds of the yet uncompleted complex, the President's speech was, for the most part, optimistic.

After an introduction by Robert McCartney, new University Secretary and Director of University Relations, the President in turn introduced Dr. Oswald Tippo as incoming Provost.

He described the general state of the University as "good" at this time, but said that "it must and will be better."

AS EVIDENCE OF THE DYNAMIC CHARACTER of the University over the past four years, Lederle cited increases of 68% in student enrollment, 25% in average faculty salary, and 61% in the state appropriation, which this year totals $18,639,600.

Also mentioned were increases in the graduate programs, sponsored research, the student aid and scholarship fund, new buildings, programs such as the Massachusetts Review, honors programs and the residential college system.

WHILE ADMITTING that the Orchard Hill complex and the Business Admininstration Buildings have been pressed into use without finishing touches because of delays in contract negotiations or because of strikes, Lederle reminded the faculty that the students at least have minimal living and study facilities in the new buildings and that the contractors are steadily completing the necessary work.

By way of informing the faculty of developments over the summer, President Lederle cited legislation establishing the

THE UNFINISHED WORKS OF WEBSTER, FIELD, GRAYSON AND DICKINSON ARE FAST NEARING COMPLETION.

Such is the promise of the man in charge, director of housing, Mr. Jack Welles.

When not directing operations from his desk, Mr. Wells jumps into a pair of well-worn, but sturdy brown boots and hikes throughout the complex viewing the building progress. When interviewed he sits by a telephone that rings almost continuously. He is very busy.

Record Enrollment Enters University This Semester

by Terry Stock
News Editor

ENROLLMENT AT THE UNIVERSITY of Massachusetts increased 17 per cent over last year's figure when more than 10,000 students registered for classes on Sept. 14.

The largest freshman class in the history of the University, 2,600 men and women, brought the undergraduate enrollment to 7,835 this fall. Special students —those not presently enrolled in a degree program and taking less than the minimum study load of 12 credits—number 200. And 2,028 graduate students nearly double last year's graduate school enrollment.

The number of freshmen accepted into the two-year Stockbridge School of Agriculture is 275 and brings the school's enrollment to 460.

THIRTY NEW BUILDINGS at a cost of $43 million have been completed during the past seven years or are now under construction.

Construction has begun on the first phase of a southwest residence-dining hall complex that will, when completed, house and feed 5,600 students. Fifteen dormitories and three dining commons will make up the complex.

The section now under construction consists of a dining commons, two 22-story dormito-

TRADITIONAL BONFIRE

Rally Planned For Tonight

by Jeff Davidow

The first bonfire of the newborn school year will highlight tonight's full-scale football rally to be held at 7:30 behind the Student Union.

This will be the first chance for the class of '68 to view the traditional bonfire which is set ablaze before every UMass home football game.

The rally, the first of four scheduled for the season, will be followed by a dance in the ballroom, music provided by Steve and the Esquires. The cost is 50 cents per person.

Many of the major campus honorary and service organizations have pooled their efforts under the general guidance of Adelphia, the University's senior men's honorary society, to produce what is expected to be an outstanding evening of campus spirit.

THE OFFICIAL WORD IS:

Steam, hot water and heat are due in "C" and "D" today.

"A" and "B" will get the same Saturday.

"B" has elevator service. "C" will have it today.

"B" will get study lamps Friday.

Wastebaskets, lamps and lounge chairs will follow closely.

They come after the elevators in priority.

"B" and "D" will not have elevator service before the middle of next week.

Four pay phones will be in service in each dorm by Saturday p.m.

Security guards will be on 24 hour duty.

Walks and roads will be installed in the first week of October.

Students are reminded that the delay in the completion of the above items was necessitated due to the placing of a "Top Priority" rating on their individual rooms. For this reason, 2,500 men and women were granted enrollment as freshmen at the University of Massachusetts.

Workmen rush new dorms through to completion.

In addition to Adelphia, other organizations which are adding their time and effort to the program are the Maroon Keys who are responsible for the bonfire, the Revelers, the Scrolls, the cheerleaders, Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, and the Redmen Marching Band.

The band, under the direction of John Jenkins, has been practicing feverishly since a week before the start of school.

The rally march down the hill will begin at 6:30 in front of Butterfield House. The band will start from Alumni Field, march up to the football schedule at the traffic lights, and then on to the East Lawn of the Student Union, where the rally will begin promptly at 7:30.

The rally itself will feature the music of the band, cheers conducted by the cheerleaders, and some words about the upcoming season from head football coach Vic Fusia.

The entire Redmen squad that will be facing the Maine Bears on Alumni Field tomorrow afternoon will be introduced to the assembled fans.

Chairman of the event, Adelphians Bob Healy and Bill Wilkinson, told the Collegian that they felt it was extremely important that all students, and in particular freshmen, be at the rally to voice their enthusiasm for the Redmen as the team begins what is sure to be a long, difficult, but potentially an entirely victorious football season.

New Election For Senate Seats Oct. 1

by Jackie David

The largest Senate election ever to be held at the University is set for Thursday, Oct. 1.

A record number of candidates are expected to vie for the 49 available seats. Due to the large number of candidates, interest in this election will probably be the most widespread in the history of the University.

Nomination papers requiring 25 signatures will be available today through Friday, Sept. 25.

In addition to the normal number of contested Senate seats, there will be eight new seats providing representation for students in the Orchard Hill complex.

The following constituencies will figure in the election: Arnold (1), Brooks (1), Crabtree (1), Dwight (1), Hamlin (1), Johnson (1), Knowlton (1), Leach (1), Lewis (1), Mary Lyon (1), Van Meter North (1), Van Meter (1), Baker, (1), Brett (2), Butterfield (1), Chadbourne (1), Gorman (2), Greenough (1), Hills South (1), Hills North (1), Mills (1), Plymouth (1), Wheeler (1), Emily Dickinson (2), Eugene Field (2), David Grayson (2), Noah Webster (2),

IFC Rushing To Begin

The famed chariot races held on Greek weekend exhibit another phase of UMass life. Here, Zeta Nu prepares for the upcoming race.

Fraternity round robins will be held Sunday, Sept. 19.

Male students will be brought to each fraternity house for a short period, and pledging will begin Sunday at midnight.

Freshmen, from A to L will be picked up from noon to 5:00 p.m.; M to Z, from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m. at the Student Union. They will be driven to all the fraternity houses for a brief look at the different phases of fraternity life.

The IFC's rationalle for this new system is that the houses need money which early pledging would bring, and that a long rushing period taxes the brothers academically.

J IS FOR JAZZ

The Four Freshmen

By Rez

School has begun again, so it's time to bring you the 64 version of "J is For Jazz" d. Each week we have the latest news in the world of jazz, record reviews, and concerts.

The Four Freshmen come to UMass 2 p.m. Sunday, September 27, at the Curry Hicks Cage. I met the group recently at Riverside Park in Agawam. A fine group to watch as well as to listen to, they told me about a future album with Pete Ruggulo in California. In 1952 they swept the country with their recording of "It's a Blue World" launching their spectacular recording career on Capitol Records. With sales now reaching the two million mark, the Freshmen have also won every major music poll during the past ten years in DOWNBEAT, PLAYBOY and BILLBOARD as the nation's "Best Vocal Group." Student tickets will be available at the SU ticket booth starting Monday, September 21.

RECORD REVIEWS: Clark Terry, ont of the greats of the 1963 Newport Jazz Festival, has a new album featuring Ben Webster, Milt Hinton, Roger Kellaway, Walter Perkins, and Springfield's own Phil Woods. The album, is a swinger, a medley. of Ellington tunes "makes" the albums and such songs as "I'm beginning to see the Light", "Perdido," and "Don't Get Around Much Anymore" (IMPULSE, The Happy Horns of Clark Terry).

Don Patterson ranks with the better new jazz organists. Two originals by Patterson, Sonny Rollins' "Oleo," the traditional "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and "The Good Life" (the album's best cut) comprise his current effort. The Exciting New Organ of Don Patterson (Prestige).

Jimmy Smith's The Cat (Verve) is his renditions arranged and conducted by Lalo Schifrin, Smith — backed by nineteen other musicians — romps through "The Theme from Joy House," his title song and six other numbers, including an outstanding treatment of Eddie Harris' "Chicago Serenade."

Atlantic's Milt Jackson shakes you with his Vibrations, a fine performance in which he teams up with Connie Kay, Jimmy Heath and others. Three of Jackson's tunes and two Tommy MacIntosh efforts are sandwiched by three standards. The brilliant young vibraphonist's best cut is "Sweet Georgia Brown," on which he receives big band support.

Coltrane's Sound typical of all Coltrane packages, features long solos and personifies the singular style of the great Jimmy Coltrane. "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes" is especially notable in a noteworthy album.

Stan Getz's The Getz Age (Royal Roost) is a re-issue of a mediocre original. Getz is better than he shows here.

Sing Along With Alan

by Alan Shoeman

(To be sung to the tune of "House of the Rising Sun")

There is a place on campus,
And its called the Hatchet and Pipe.
And its been the ruin of many a poor fish,
By now, you know the type.

They go there between their classes,
'Stead of gettin' their assignments done,
They shoot the breeze with all their pals,
And have all sorts of fun.

To heck with all their homework,
It takes too damn much time.
A coke, a smoke, a friendly chat,
Goodbye to chapel's chime.

Oh councillor, tell your freshman,
Not to do as these people do.
A one semester social hour,
And their college careers are through.

There is a place on campus,
And it's called the Hatchet and Pipe,
And it's been the ruin of many a poor frosh,
Make sure you're not the type.

TURNTABLE TOPICS

We Are The Greatest

WMUA is the greatest radio station in Amherst. Coming to you every day from the heart of the UMass campus, we bring you the chance to get right in the swim, to dunk yourself in the pond. Actually you don't have to, just amble down to WMUA. If you have a flair for writing the news department is looking for you. Perhaps you've always prided yourself on a resonant voice: the program slots are now open for the sound of an audition. You've probably been warned against spending too much time on extra-curricular activities therefore negiecting your studies. We agree, but it's your decision. There is no minimum amount of time required. You decide the time.

SPEAR HEARS: Down megacycle mile, the disc jockeys are claiming their shows. "Shoes Off" (11-12) ambles by. It's a quiet show for study or relaxation.

WMUA is the student station supported by the funds of the Student Senate. We cater to the University campus. As special features we have professors in the English and History departments record their lectures for broadcast, round table discussions with top administrators and student leaders, news, weather and campus activities. Remember—have a long hot summer, try cool refreshing WMUA. We deliver on campus and off, no waiting, just dial 91.1fm. No wait: you make the date.

Now is the time for all good freshmen to come to the aid of their fellow UMies. WMUA needs you. No draft notices, no physical, just a vac vocal. You can woo o'er the airwaves on quiet "Shoes Off", you can "Rock Around the Clock" with "Crazy Rhythms," the only WMUA program live from the Hatch. "Walk Right In" and talk to Pete Fink. We have no formula on how to test yourself for success as a disc jockey but as 'tis said, you'll never learn 'til you . . .

Student Activities Night

Freshmen, do you think this university is impersonal? Are there 300 of you in your psych class? Has your name been mispronounced 5 times? Did someone bungle a digit so you're now a basket-weaving major?

Metawampe loves his own, if all 2600 of you. The old chief's own merrymakers, the Revelers, have converted our S.U. ballroom into a warm, cordial, comfy, Activities Exposition, where you'll be able to meet representatives of all the major activities, sans roll-call, sans lengthy convocation welcomes, and best of all, sans those maddening IBM cards! For a chance to talk to people who are interested in you as a person, rather than a bunch of holes in a scrap of cardboard, be at the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Sept. 21.

SASHA SPEAKS

Write A Protestable Song

New Protest - Ethnic-Beloved Folksong Contest.

The sea of beanies toting guitars about campus is testimony to the still growing popularity of folksongs. "Blowin' in the Wind" mingles nightly with "Twilight Shadows," and pictures of Joan Baez are as popular in dorm rooms as the Playmate of the Month.

????? ethnic songs are constantly being revised, revised, created, and plagerized. Collegian wishes to foster campus creativity by starting a WORLD'S MOST TYPICAL FOLKSONG CONTEST. Although existing ballads do qualify, original work would be appreciated. You do not have to be a "beatnik" to enter.

Writing a folksong is relatively simple—musical and poetic ability, far from being needed, are often a detriment. However, certain rules are to be followed:

1. Always root for the underdog.
2. Heroes and heroines have to be:
   a. undernourished
   b. ungrammatical
   c. killed, jailed, maimed, addicted, and/or molested (although not necessarily in that order)
   d. sexy, or at least capable.
3. Rhyming, although not necessary, should be as obvious as possible.
4. Include the phrase "OK", gang, let's clap, stand up, snap fingers, hum, sing, join hands, stomp, whistle, or groan along together."
5. Omit all words over two syllables, unless they are foreign.

A preview entry, using the above rules, goes thus:

"Twas on a windy August day
That Mousie staked his life,
Having maimed the family dog and cat,
And shot his lovin' wife.

He hurried down to Hogwash town
The toughest in the nation.
With a long black veil an' a raccoon tall
For a little celebration.

Till I do draw some blood there
Said Mouse "I ain't gonna stop
I'll kill a cop and hang him up,
They gave me a lot of crud there.

He drived his Honda past a post,
And by the Forty Seven.
He met his death when he overdosed,
But his soul it went to heaven.

Chorus (everybody noise along)

Baby, let me overcome.
Brothers, we all are one.
It's gonna be a great ol' world today.
Wimoweh, wimoweh, wimoweh.

Please submit all entries to Sasha, care of the Collegian, Student Union Building.

Collegian Surges Forward

As a result of yesterday's Publishing Board meeting, the Collegian has developed a stringent new policy to carry it through until the regular three day a week publication schedule can be resumed on October 5. We have instituted a crash training program to teach new staff members make-up, headline writing, and other basics, and with the assistance of Mr. Al Oickle, Managing Editor of the Greenfield Recorder, we hope to have them satisfactorily prepared for work prior to the resumption of a full schedule.

In the interim, veteran staff members are taking on the double chore of publishing a full size paper for Tuesday and Friday and of running the training program simultaneously. Despite this seeming handicap, prospects for maintaining our necessarily high standards are excellent. Response to a call for aid brought over fifty interested candidates to the Collegian offices last night — many more than we're accustomed to seeing on a publication eve.

Our thanks can only be shown by the quality of journalism which the growing campus deserves and shall get.

A new distribution schedule has been set to accommodate those of you who didn't receive Tuesday's papers on time, and this, along with our new trai[illegible] program and the hard work of our preesnt staff will keep us in stride, and hopefully a step ahead of the needs of our ever-improving university.

He'd Rather Switch Than Fight

by KEN FEINBERG

Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina enjoys having the political stage to himself. He led the Dixiecrat revolt in 1948, holds the congressional record for an unannounced filibuster (24 hours, 18 minutes) and now has decided to bolt the Democratic party and become a conscientious Goldwater Republican. While the former two vaudeville acts are hardly understandable, Thurmond's most recent coup is against the rules of the game, for this is an election year.

Comprehending Thurmond's value in the Senate, Democrats are glad to see him depart. A hindrance, leading Southern Democrats in attempts to block moderate proposals, he will not be sorely missed by Democrats in the Senate. But all is not joy in Republican circles; Thurmond's value to the Republican party is yet to be determined, and Republican leaders who enjoyed Thurmond's antics in blocking Democratic legislation are suddenly quiet. Yet, Thurmond's choice is particularly bad news for the Democrats.

The political effect of Thurmond's decision cannot be overstressed. He is a tremendous vote-getter in the South, especially South Carolina, a Democratic state by only 10,000 votes in 1960. In 1948, Thurmond engineered the Democrat walkout and took 32 electoral votes away from President Truman. If the Republicans are concerned about Thurmond's value in the State, they are overjoyed that he's on their side in November. They feel he will help Goldwater to break the Democratic stranglehold on the Southern states! Strom would obviously rather switch than fight.

FORCED IDEAS
A Step Backward?

by SANDY GRAHAM

Although there is a definite lack of rights for racial minority groups—is the recent passage and enforcement of the Civil Rights Bill a pancea, or even a curative measure?

The problem confronting the American Negro is lack of opportunity, education, and respect. The roots of a history of such deprivation lie in the bigot, and nowhere does the legislation attempt to cure his attitudes. Instead, it attempts to foist upon him the practice of ideals totally contradicting his way of thinking. The segregationist consequently feels persecuted, wronged, but in no way converted or repentant.

Nowhere does the legislation even covertly assert that racial minority groups are capable of self advancement. Rather, it seemingly assumes that they are therein inept, and consequently needy of government patronage.

Such patronage is not extended to this logical conclusion; that is, government sponsorship of opportunity. Instead, it forces the dissenting individual to hire, accommodate, and serve individuals against his will. In the South, reaction against such forced liberalism has caused an even greater growth in the already alarming white backlash. The bigot's view of race inferiority has not been countermanded by better education or fairer voter registration. The Negro now is not only an imagined threat to his property, race, and daughter's chastity, but he is a real and imminent danger to his job.

A cab driver in Jersey City was recently dismissed from the job he had held for twelve years to make way for the required number of Negro employees. Formerly a staunch democrat, he changed party affiliation, not to the Republicans, but to George Lincoln Rockwell's numerically but not ideologically insignifigant following. Workers and proprietors are following suit not only in the Southern delta, but in Northern industrial areas as well. This attitude is exemplified in Boston's alarming vote for Louise Day Hicks on the basis of her support of de facto segregation.

Those who proclaim the advances made by the Civil Rights Bill should, in advocating openmindedness, take into consideration ALL results of it. If bigotry is to become more firmly entrenched in the American public as a result of forced ideals, of what long range advantages are token economic and social advancements?

The State Of Mass. Needs Volpe

by DON ALIFERIS

Massachusetts Democrats have recently demonstrated the inadequacies of democracy. In the September primary, the nomination of a man who has no record other than a personal one of demagoguery, selfishness, disloyalty, hypocrisy, and deceit proves once again the inefficacy of the idea which permits the uneducated, the prejudiced, and the stupid to decide the course of government.

The defeat of Gov. Peabody whose record of moral fortitude, and positive, constructive action fulfilling the mandates of the liberal tradition is unmatched in Massachusetts history, contradicts the fundamental principle of democracy (and of the public philosophy, as Walter Lippmann would say) that the majority of the people possess the wisdom to make the correct political decisions. Mr. Bellotti's victory was half ethnological. Yet, surprisingly enough, he did carry cities and towns outside the metropolitan area. In these places the decisions of those who voted for Bellotti could only have been determined by other superficialities. That is, these people were effected by political personality rather than demonstrated political character. They care more how a politician says something rather than what he actually says. They are influenced by charges as nebulous as "irresponsibility", and are taken in by a man who criticizes the increased size of the state payroll but who himself has doubled the size of his own personal staff and accepted a $5,000 payraise.

Unfortunately the attitudes implied by these realities are consciously accepted components of the American electoral tradition of trying to pick the "best man" rather than the best ideas. And of course it is possible for the mass to know the "man"; they can only know the personality, or "image", and what can be deduced about the political character of a politician by the context of his speeches and the integrity of his record.

Letters to the Editor

Likes Beanies; Thanks Scrolls, Keys

Dear Editor:

In last Tuesday's Collegian a letter to the editor from H.S. '68 appeared. As a freshmen I would like to add my comments as to the wearing of beanies and "bibs".

Personally I can see nothing wrong with them. I have met many kids from my dorm, major, and home area as a result of the bibs and I'm sure that many other students, both freshmen and upperclassmen, have too. As for the beanies, they sort of set us apart as fellow freshmen. When you meet someone else with a beanie you feel more confident to know that he or she is probably just as confused as you are.

All of us have had to "button" at one time or another and most of us have found it very amusing. Considering the hazing that goes on at other schools, we get off pretty light. I can't help but remember that not many years ago, a brilliant young man from MIT drowned in the Cambridge reservior as a result of hazing. I think we are very fortunate to have Scrolls and Keys at UMASS that have the intelligence to think of something that is entirely safe for hazing.

The Scrolls in my dorm, Carol O'Malley and Betty Butler, have been very friendly and helpful not only to me but to all the other lost and confused freshmen in Hamlin.

They have made me and, I am sure many others, feel wanted and welcome. They have certainly made the beginning of our four years at UMASS most enjoyable. Thank you.

I.D. Insolvency

To the Editor:

I don't think that it is proper to start complaining on the first week of school, but I find myself forced to do so, for the following reason:

Today I tried to cash a check at the Student Union's cashier's window. It happened to be a personal check, issued by the First National Bank of Amherst. I have not a yet received an official University I.D. card, since I just entered the Grad. School. However, I had with me A) a copy of my assistantship contract issued by the University, B) a N.Y. State driver's license and C) an I.D. card from City College which bears both my signature and my picture. Unfortunately, due to certain "rules", I was told that I couldn't have the check cashed.

Upon advice by a very pleasant young lady, I walked to the Graduate office and there, upon request, I was handed a white slip to be used as a temporary I.D. card. The answer by the cashier this time was: "This can admit you to the library and other events, but we can't cash you a check with only that piece of paper."

Would somebody hand me a dime, please. I need a cup of coffee . . . Or do I have to show to that generous person, who might hand me a dime, some sort of an official I.D. card?

Re: Poor Miserable Freshman

To the Editor:

Poor, miserable Mr. Pawluk! Whoever welcomed YOU to this institution of higher learning should have forewarned you about all the "chaos and red-tape" in store for you. Perhaps, then, you would have been spared the "waiting in line" and all the rest of the inconveniences you've been forced to endure these past three years. In short, Mr. Pawluk, I am thoroughly disgusted that you had the "misfortune" to stay in school so that you could pass on your encouraging words of welcome to those just beginning their college careers.

It seems rather strange that, as a senior, you know so little about our University. The dining commons isn't open for "hours," you know and the meals, so "unfit for flies" seem only to have affected your "pleasant" personality. Living at home, Mr. Pawluk, how many meals have you eaten at the commons? And about those stuffy 500-seat lecture halls—we don't have any this large . . . yet! So you'd better study real hard this year and then you won't be around to suffer this inconvenience.

Rainy days sure are muddy, but never before have I heard such a big, tough, masculine man like you complain about a little dirt on his shoes.

If you are so dissatisfied, Mr. Pawluk, why in the world are you still here???

On Sitting In The Hatch

To The Editor:

It seems to me that the installation of those new semi-circular booths near the windows has reduced, rather than increased, the availability of seating in the Hatch. Look at it this way: it's a fact which I'm sure you have observed yourself, that students are more reluctant to take seats at a partially-filled circular table than at an equally filled long straight table. Why this is so is not important for the moment. The net effect is that individuals and small groups are forced to occupy a booth meant for at least six people. This results in wasted seats, which other students are very reluctant to take.

This was not the case with the small individual tables which were there previously. These small tables were just right for the single person, or for the group of two or three. With the University boasting of enrolling a record number of students this year, with the greater numbers of students desiring to use the convenient facilities offered by the Hatch, this is not the time to decrease seating space by catering to the very few large parties which may occasionally need an entire booth.

Big Changes For AFROTC

Surprises are in store for the U of M Air Force cadets being summoned to a special meeting Monday evening at Dickinson Hall.

Unwilling to clarify what he means by "big changes" he is making in the program for AFROTC Cadets here, Cadet Col. Keith Ross, new commander of the 370th Cadet Wing, would only admit that the revisions to be announced at the meeting are explosive.

A reliable source has hinted thas Ross has been forced to make drastic revisions in the cadet leadership laboratory program, but Ross is keeping quiet about what is in the mill until Monday evening, when he will brief the advanced cadets.

New commandant of AFROTC cadets here, Capt. Robert Galley, has said that certain changes have become necessary as ramifications of the voluntary status the corps has assumed here.

Faculty Party Honors Newcomers

Newcomers to the University of Massachusetts faculty will be special guests of the University Women at the Annual Fall Get-Together Party to be held Tuesday, September 29, from 8 to 11:30 p.m. at the Student Union Ballroom.

Paul Waldron and his orchestra, featuring Gil Roberts, will provide music for dancing. Cards will be available for those who wish to play bridge. Dessert and coffee will be served promptly at 9:30 p.m.

This informal all-faculty party is the first event of the season and is for men, women and escorts.

Mrs. G. Dale Sheckels, chairman for this occasion, is assisted by Mrs. Harold Durgin, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Joseph Marcus, Miss Joyce Merriam, Mrs. John Noyes and Mrs. Melvin Wolf.

First Classics Prof. Appointed At UMass.

The University has a full-time professor of classics for the first time this fall.

Dr. Richard P. Duval of Yale University has been named assistant professor of classics in the Department of Romance Languages. He is teaching courses in both Latin and Greek.

The University offers a classics major in cooperation with the classics departments at Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges under the Four College Cooperation Program. During the year, Dr. Duval and the chairmen of the classics at the three colleges will map out the complete classics major.

Those University students who have completed the intermediate course in Latin at the University will be able to take a number of Latin courses at the three colleges this year. Amherst college will offer courses in Cicero's Pro Caelio and Selections from Catullus; Composition; Horace; and Vergil's Aeneid. Interested students can contact Prof. Marshall at Amherst College for more complete information on scheduling.

Mount Holyoke College offers The Aeneid, I-VI; Cicero's Letters; Latin Composition; Authors of the Silver Age; and Roman Comedy. Prof. Quinn at Mount Holyoke can be contacted for further details.

Smith College will teach courses on Roman Historians, especially Livy; Catullus; Roman Elegy; and Vergil and Horace. Further information on these subjects is available from Prof. Schneiderman.

A graduate of Williams College, Dr. Duval received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale University. He has also studied at Harvard University. Dr. Duval has taught classics at Yale University since 1960.

He is a member of the Classical Language Association of New England and the American Philosophical Association.

CHICAGO SYMPHONY . . .

Brahms' Symphony No. 3, completed in the summer of 1883, is one of the oldest pieces in the repertoire of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. It was performed during the first season, on April 23, 1892, with Theodore Thomas conducting.

Ravel's "Mother Goose" was originally five pieces for piano duet, composed in 1910 and based on children's stories by Ravel with the hope that he might entice two small friends to play the piano. "Sleeping Beauty" is a short, simple piece expressing nostalgia for fairyland; the model qualities suggest olden times. "Hop o' My Thumb" is the old story of the woodcutter's children who tried to mark their path home

THE National Security Agency is a totally unique organization

. . . and offers creative research opportunities in the art and science of sophisticated communications

There is absolutely no other organization like it . . . no other organization doing the same important work, or offering the same wealth of opportunity for imaginative thinkers in the Liberal Arts, as well as the Physical and Engineering Sciences.

The National Security Agency is a major research arm of the Department of Defense, but its influence and responsibilities are far broader. It works closely with many industrial and research institutions; it has special access to scientific information at universities and other Government laboratories; and it enjoys close consulting arrangements with scientists of commanding stature. NSA staff members enjoy all the benefits of Federal employment without the requirements imposed by the Civil Service system.

What does NSA do that warrants this unique stature?

NSA approaches the subject of sophisticated communications from these original standpoints:

1. Creating secure communications systems and equipments unknown anywhere else, and devising special refinements for computers & edp systems that will increase our handling capabilities. This means that Communications Engineers, Computer Design Specialists, Mathematicians, Programmers, and Systems Analysts, all contribute to the design of antennas, transmitters, receivers, and terminal equipment . . . to experiments using new semiconductors, magnetic film, superconductive devices, etc., resulting in new logic circuits and memory units, better high-gain arrays for UHF radio systems, higher-capacity data handling terminal equipment, more effective speech band-width compression . . . and scores of similar advances.

2. By the very nature of "secure" communications, assuring the continuing invulnerability of U.S. communications through cryptologic procedures and techniques. Because cryptology and its cryptographic counterpart are not taught elsewhere, mathematicians, scientists—and all others with appropriate intellectual curiosity—will be taught this challenging new discipline right at NSA. Work in this field may involve specially-designed computers, television, computer-to-computer data links, and edp programming. (Even music, philosophy, or the classics may be useful prerequisites for cryptology!)

3. Translating written data, and presenting the crux of the material in meaningful form. This is the home of the linguistics expert and the languages graduate—enabling the talented graduate to make the most of his or her particular gift, and quickly expand familiarity with other tongues.

In all that NSA does, there is seldom any existing precedent. Only NSA pioneers in secure communications on this broad a scale, so only NSA offers the college graduate the best chance to make immediate use of his disciplined thinking . . . without years of post-graduate experience. All these features—together with its well-instrumented laboratories, libraries, and professional staff of specialists in amazingly varied fields—provide a stimulating academic atmosphere for individual accomplishment.

On-Campus Interviews for Mathematicians and Engineers will be held later. Consult your Placement Office for dates.

NSA is located in expanding facilities at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland—halfway between Washington and Baltimore. It is handy to transportation facilities, the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins, suburban or rural living (in-town living, too, now that the new circumferential highways are completed) . . . and the Chesapeake Bay resort region.

LIBERAL ARTS SENIORS: Your PQT Application must be mailed before October 14th

This is most important: To apply for an NSA position, all students EXCEPT Mathematicians, Engineers, and Physicists must take the PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATION TEST scheduled for Saturday, October 24th. Stop in at your Placement Office and ask for the NSA Professional Qualification Test brochure . . . fill out and mail in the application card enclosed inside . . . and bring to the test the ticket you will receive by mail.

Even if you are not sure of your career interests yet, get the facts on NSA opportunities now.

STUDENTS SAVE

U.T. Reduces Prices

Returning 'students have been pleasantly surprised by the reduced prices of University Theatre season tickets, as well as the increased offerings. A season of ten Films has been added to the regular season of five plays providing a quality program of fifteen theatrical events.

When questioned about the reason for the lower prices for students, a University Theatre spokesman said that the prices have been reduced to provide a wider opportunity for all University students to see significant theatre in all of its forms and styles.

The plays being offered this season include a bright comedy on political chicanery, "Born Yesterday." Dion Boucicault's hilarious melodrama of virtue, distress, poverty, motherhood, arson, triumph, and revenge, "The Streets of New York," William Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," "Romulus" by Duerrenmatt, the author of "The Visit" soon to be a movie, and Tennessee Williams' poignant drama, "The Glass Menagerie."

The films, added this season, include silent and sound classics. classics.

Season tickets are on sale from Roister-Doisters on campus and from The University Theatre, Rom 378 or 380 Bartlett Hall, either in person or by mail.

S. U. To Hold Open House

The Student Union will hold its annual Open House Sept. 19. There will be different activities going on in almost every room of the Union,

In the Music Room from 7:30-9:00 p.m. there will be a Folk Singing Fest. All those interested may attend and either listen or join in the songs.

Something new will be seen in the Hatch Saturday night. The booths will be moved back to leave room for dancing to the music of the John Chupas Trio from 8:30-11:00 p.m. and for those more interested in country and western music there will be square dancing on the South Terrace between 7:00 and 9:00. In the ballroom for all will be a twist band, the Galdeans, from 8-12 p.m.

For jazz fans Tony Rivosa can be heard from 8:30-10:30 in the Cape Cod lounge.

For the hungry and thirsty or conversationally inclined, coffee and donuts will be served in the Governor's Lounge from 8:30-10:30 p.m. Any information concerning the Program Council will be answered here.

For the active or sportsmen, the Games Area will have cut rates from 8:30 to 10:30.

There has been a great deal of redecorating and the Dukes and Colonial Lounges will be open for inspection along with the Cape Cod Lounge, the Reading Room and the Governor's Lounge.

ries and four five-story units. It will accommodate 1,800 students.

The dormitories and dining commons are being constructed by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority at no cost to the taxpayer. Under the Authority, bonds are issued, and the buildings are paid for on a self-liquidating basis.

A fourth section being added to the Justin Morrill Science Center is expected to be open in July, 1965. The $3,600,00, air-conditioned structure, consisting of two wings, will allow present microbiology, geology and zoology facilities to be greatly expanded.

January of 1965 is the anticipated completion date of two new buildings—a three-story engineering addition to house laboratories for chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, and an addition to the food science and technology building. The food science and technology department, now occupying space in four buildings, will be combined as a unit upon completion of the new addition and remodeling of the old structure.

NOW IN THE DESIGN STAGE are a new administration building and a new football stadium that will be ready for use in the fall of 1965. The new stadium is expected to cost close to $1 million. It will seat 17,000 persons. The old bleacher seats in Alumni field accommodated only 7,000.

Other structures still in the planning stage include an addition to Bartlett Hall liberal arts building, graduate reseach facilities, an addition to the Machmer classroom building, and a fine arts building designed by the architectural firm of Eero Saarinen and Associates.

The University of Massachusetts-Boston is expected to have an enrollment of 1,000 students by the fall of 1965.

The curriculum at the University has also been broadened to offer a greater variety of fields in which to study. In the two colleges, six schools and the department of public health, undergraduates may select courses in 64 major fields.

The addition this year of two new programs at the graduate level—fine arts and statistics—will allow candidates for the master's degree to work in 45 different departments. In addition, graduate programs leading to a master's degree in several fields have been established for practicing journalists.

High School Debater Aided By UMass.

The University of Massachusetts Forensic Society is planning to hold a High School Debate and Clinic on Oct. 17 for over 500 high school students throughout the state.

The clinic will be the first major event of the year.

Amherst Going After Transfers

For the first time in this century, Amherst College is actively seeking applications for admission from transfer students. Particular attention is being given to applicants from junior and community colleges. The administration emphasized that transfer students will receive the same consideration for financial aid as applicants for admission to the freshman class and undergraduates already enrolled here.

Amherst accepted a class of 300 freshmen this year and in addition admitted up to fifty sophomores or juniors from other institutions. Additional scholarship and loan funds have been established for this purpose.

Commenting on the College's new policy, Dean of Admissions Eugene S. Wilson said: "Junior colleges and community colleges are graduating many able young people who, through no fault of their own, would not consider entering a four-year college after leaving high school. It is our hope that we at Amherst can contribute to the education of some of these qualified young men.

"Fifty represents a tiny fraction of the graduates concerned, but we want to support the work of junior and community colleges which are giving so many boys and girls an opportunity to show that they are ready for serious intellectual work."

Oberlin Plans Small Units For Housing

Oberlin, O. (I.P.)—Eight new small dormitory units with capacities of from 30 to 50 students are being planned for Oberlin College. Three units will accommodate a total of 120 men and five units 200 women. As a result of the Ford challenge gift of $2,200,000, college authorities here believe that it will be possible to upgrade the design and quality of these small housing units.

Three of the women's units are to be used as foreign languag houses, with probable capacities of 50 in the French house, 40 in the German and 30 in the Spanish. The other dormitories will each house around 40 students.

The women's dormitories will have decentralized dining halls. This feature, and the size of the units, are in line with recommendations of a special faculty-administration-student committee, formed late in 1962 to advise President Robert K. Carr and the Oberlin trustees on language houses and small dormitories. Other elements favored by the committee will be incorporated into the buildings insofar as good design and economic feasibility permit.

President Carr said that the new housing will give additional diversity to the varied residential system here, which has been one of the college's long-range objectives.

— Club Notices —

The UMass Flying Club has openings for several new members. Members of the University community are invited to attend a meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 23, at 8 p.m. in the S. U. Room will be announced.

MATH CLUB PICNIC

There will be a Math Club picnic for all those interested in joining on Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 6 p.m. It will be held at Farley Lodge. Admission free. Sign up in the Math Office by Saturday, Sept. 19, if you plan to attend.

HIGH SCHOOL . . .

The society will also hold a college debate tournament in the spring. With 10 returning debaters, the team's outlook is "excellent." After compiling better than a 60% won-loss record last year, one of the best records in New England, the team hopes to further establish U-Mass as a debate power in the area.

The society will attend tournaments in New York City, Virginia and possibly the MidWest, along with many tournaments in the New England states.

Several novice tournaments are also scheduled. The topic to be debated is "That the U. S. should establish a public works program for the unemployed."

This year the Society is becoming a member of a national honorary debate society. The officers for the year 1964-65 are: president, Larry Rutstein; treasurer, Lee Morin; vice president, Mike Farrell; secretary, Sue Yokel.

Any students interested in joining the team should visit the booth at Student Activities night next Tuesday or see Mr. Biddle, the club advisor in Bartlett 389.

The first regular meeting will be held on Thursday, Sept. 24, at 7:00 p.m. in Bartlett 356.

INNKEEPERS CLUB

The UMass Innkeepers Club will hold its first meeting on Monday, Sept. 21, at 8 p.m. in Council Chambers A of the S. U. All Restaurant and Hotel Management majors are invited to attend.

FLYING REDMEN

All Freshmen and Sophomores interested in becoming part of the New England Champion drill team of the UMass AFROTC Flying Redmen, are invited to attend a meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 216 Dickinson Hall at 7 p.m. Movies of the Flying Redmen in action will be shown.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS

There will be a general meeting on Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p.m. in SBA 120. Campaign organization and constitutional amendments will be discussed.

BRIDGE CLUB

Every Thursday evening in the Norfolk and Plymouth Rooms of the S.U. at 7 p.m. any interested student can receive free instruction or play duplicate bridge. There is only one qualification for those interested-patience. All are welcome no matter the skill with which you play.

CHESS CLUB

The S. U. offers all interested students the opportunity of learning and playing chess each Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. in the Hampden room. Check the board for the first meeting.

through the woods with bread crumbs only to have the birds eat the crumbs; there is a literal reference in the score to the cries of the birds. In "Laideronnette," a pentatonic scale throughout most of the piece suggests the Chinese atmosphere; the story is the fairy tale of the "ugly one" and the Green Serpent. In "Beauty and the Beast," the conversation between the two is literally suggested by the music; the theme played by the clarinet suggests Beauty, and the Beast is represented by a melody on the double-bassoon. The two melodies combine for the final section of the piece. The "Fairy Garden" is, like the opening piece, more nostalgia than a literal description of fairyland.

Bartok's "Miraculous Mandarin" has been described by Hasley Stevens in "The Life and Music of Dela Bartok," as a pantomime with great realism, vivid and harsh in both plot and music." After its world premiere in Cologne in 1925, it was banned by the Municipal Council because the subject was considered objectionable, and further attempts at performances were similarly frustrated. Finally Bartok extracted from the score a suite which was first performed by the Philharmonic Society of Budapest in October, 1928.

summer was the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter.

Turning to the present, Lederle announced that the basic operating fund for fiscal 1965 will provide $18,501,400 for varied programs, which will include additional library funds, "modest salary increments" for faculty members, building and renovation funds, the establishment of a labor relations and research center, and a mobile TV facility as a laboratory teaching resource in secondary education.

In addition, capital outlay funds of $10,229,000 will finance the construction of a liberal arts building, planning funds for a graduate research center, site and utility development and $1,000,000 for computer and edcational TV equipment.

TURNING TO THE FUTURE, Lederle stated that the fiscal 1966 budget request includes programs to increase the library to 1,000,000 volumes by 1970, provide funds for incerased graduate programs and professional improvement.

As part of a continuing effort to increase the quality of U-Mass as its size necessarily increases, the budget will also include requests for funds to enable doubling the enrollment during summer sessions, changing the faculty-student ratio from 1-15 to 1-13, enlarging the research computer center, and creating an expanded program of continuing education.

In summary, President Lederle outlined the two continuing policies which have and will continue to govern the growth of the University.

The first, he said, is "expanded enrollment to provide educational opportunities for qualified students," but the size alone is not the ultimate goal. "We want to be the best, while being as big as we need to be."

The second policy is that U-Mass is a state university and, as such, has the duty to expand its educational services to include as many of the citizens of the Commonwealth as are capable of taking advantage of such opportunities.

After President Lederle's speech Secretary McCartney read a resolution by the Board of Trustees in praise of all who aided in the preparation of this summer's successful petition for the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter at the University. After a brief question period there was a coffee hour in the main Business Administration building.

Quarterback Duel Expected; Whelchel versus DeVarney

Two of the top quarterbacks in New England meet head-on Saturday when the University of Massachusetts opens its 82nd football campaign by hosting Yankee Conference rival Maine at 1:30 p.m. at Alumni field.

Redman qb Jerry Whelchel has established himself over the past two seasons as a do-everything performer while twice winning All Conference honors. DeVarney, a junior, is the main threat to Whelchel's status as top YanCon qb. Maine was the only team to score a touchdown against UMass last year and it was DeVarney who led the drive.

Playing his first varsity game DeVarney befuddled the Redmen with his passing and elusive running. Dick plunged over from the one at 10:25 of the first period to put Maine ahead of UMass. Statistics show how he took UMass by surprise, with eight of 11 completions in the first period and 13 of 17 for the first half, which ended in a 7-7 stalemate.

Adjustments in the Redmen held DeVarney to three completions in seven attempts in the second half but he was a threat till the final gun. Meanwhile, Whelchel bounced back after a shaky first half. Jerry connected on six straight passes in the final half and had several long runs to spark the winning touchdown drive.

Whelchel went five yards for the winning score and kicked his second extra point to give UMass the 14-7 decision. The final passing status showed DeVarney hitting 16 of 24 for 129 yards. Final 1963 stats found DeVarney completing 55 of 101 for 690 yards and three td's. He had three intercepted and completed 54.4%. Dick netted 127 yards rushing in 67 attempts for a 1.9 average and scored three touchdowns. Whelchel's final stats show 53 completions in 87 tries for 848 yards and 9 td's. He had five intercepted and completed 60.9%. Jerry rushed for 304 yards in 84 tries for a 3.6 average, scored 5 td's, kicked 34 of 36 extra points and intercepted three passes.

Redmen Roundup

by Marshall Karol
Sports Editor

A Saturday afternoon in autumn is indicative of the highest form of excitement on the university campus. The scholar athletes representing their respective schools meet in physical combat on the gridiron, releasing the pent up emotions and inner frustrations so often accumulated in the classroom. Recognizing the exigencies of the husky students, the University has initiated an athletic program which has slowly matriculated to one of the foremost in the nation. The University of Massachusetts has more than doubled its enrollment within the past five years, and with this augmentation of population has come an academic and athletic upheaval. In no area is there a self complacent situation, for only the best is acceptable.

Tomorrow afternoon brings the 1964 "fighting Redmen" into the limelight. Coach Fusia and his staff have spent months in preparation for this contest and the others that follow; however, all the expectations and anxieties of a successful campaign will be revealed to the fans when the Fusiamen meet the Black Bears from Orono. When one scans the schedule and notes Boston University, Harvard, Buffalo and Holy Cross, Maine may seem insignificant. The truth of the matter is that many question marks and enigmatic situations may be clarified in a game which brings together these two determined squads. A year ago Maine, led by her able quarterback, Devarney, scored the first and only touchdown of the '63 campaign against UMass. The Redmen offense sputtered badly before eking out a 14-7 victory. Only a stalwart defense saved the University in its first two appearances, due to the mistakes and frustrations of a lackadaisical offensive thrust. Two mainstays of the forward wall, Paul Graham and Bob Tedoldi are gone, and it is yet unknown whether their replacements can emulate those former stars. The new substitution rule has caused a recrudescence of the platoon system which reign requires good depth. Last year's squad was formidable due to its depth, while this year's squad, although basically made up of veterans, must prove itself under the duress of free substitution. In the past Jerry Welchel has proved to excel in roll out plays, options, etc., but has basically relied upon a ground attack hoping to wear down the opposition through a process of attrition. This year Coach Fusia claims that Welchel has gained confidence in his throwing arm as well as in his able receivers, Morin and Meers. Should offensive expectations be fulfilled, Welchel could be listed along with Roger Staubach and Archie Roberts. In many respects the Black Bears will prove to be formidable opponents. While UMass has a big edge in weight and an intrinsic amount of power, Maine possesses good speed and aggressiveness, along with their experienced quarterback, Devarney. The team that comes up on top should go all the way in the Yankee Conference. Since Maine has a less awesome schedule, she will make every effort and exhaust her energies to defeat the defending New England Champions. UMass must win her conference games by sizeable margins in order to defend her title, since Boston College is on the upsurge and maintaining high expectations.

The first game is certainly not the last, but it is of prime importance to a team hopeful of national recognition.

Redmen Meet Maine Bears

The University of Massachusetts, defending Yankee Conference champions, opens its 82nd intercollegiate football season Saturday afternoon by hosting University of Maine at 1:30 p.m. on Alumni Field.

The Maine Black Bears, preseason choice as team most likely to overtake the Redmen in the race for the "Beanpot," have a veteran squad with a nucleus of 16 lettermen. Maine has a strong offense led by tricky junior quarterback Dick DeVarney, who blitzed UMass with 16 completions in 24 tries last fall. He is backed by junior letterman Carl Merrill. Halfback strength rests with lettermen Mike Haley, who rushed for 392 yards and eight td's in 1963, Ron Lanza, who averaged a whopping 9 yards per carry, and Brent Keene, who netted 305 yards or 5 yards per carry. Bill Perkins and Bob Hurd are fullback lettermen.

Up front the rugged Bears have all lettermen—Ed Sheery and Dave Harnum at the ends, huge Ernie Smith (6'4", 246) and Charlie Harlow at tackles, Floyd Horn and Walt Hirst at guards and Reg Clark at center.

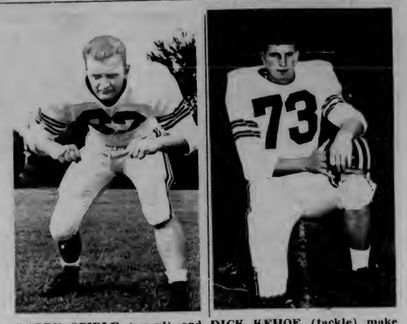
Massachusetts is also starting a veteran team of 10 lettermen. Coach Vic Fusia has his starting backfield intact from 1963 with Jerry Whelchel at qb, Bob Ellis and Ken Palm at halfbacks, and Mike Ross at fullback. The line has Bob Meers and Milt Morin at ends, Bob Burke and Dick Kehoe at tackles, Peter Pietz and Larry Spidle at guards and Bernie Dallas at center. Kehoe and Spidle are the only two new starters.

Fusia plans to use two complete units, offensively and defensively, as much as possible. The second unit is composed of quarterback Jack Schroeder, halfbacks Phil DeRose and Leo Biron, fullback Dave Kelley, ends Dick Bourdelais, Rog DeMinico and John Hudson, tackles Don Hagberg and Bill Connor, guards Bob Gogick and Bob Santucci and center Charlie Scialdone.

The Redmen are putting their 9-game unbeaten streak on the line against Maine. Coach Hal Westerman's club scored the only touchdown last fall against UMass when the final 14-7 outcome was as close as the score indicates. Since then UMass has a streak of 35 periods or 529 minutes and 35 seconds without allowing a touchdown.

With both teams veteran-laden, backed by outstanding offensive and defensive records from last fall, knowing the winner takes a giant stride toward the Yankee Conference championship—Saturday's game should be one of the top attractions on the New England football calendar.

The UMass-Maine series has been a close and exciting affair since its resumption in 1958. The Redmen lead the series with 6 wins against three losses and one tie. Past scores indicate the intenseness of the series. In 1958 Main won, 19-6, UMass followed with 21-16 and 21-13 wins in '59 and '60. Westerman toped Fusia, 10-7, in the Conference title game in the mud and snow in 1961. But Fusia retaliated with 10-0 and 14-7 wins the past two seasons.



LARRY SPIDLE (guard) and DICK KEHOE (tackle) make their first start for Redmen versus Maine.

Cadigan To Direct Planning

Donald W. Cadigan, associate dean of admissions at the University, has been named director of planning for the University of Massachusetts-Boston.

The new position follows his appointment early in July to a four-man "task force" charged with identifying problems involved in establishing the Boston area operation.

As planning director, Cadigan will coordinate the initial phases of UMass-Boston. The new school is scheduled to open in September, 1965, with an enrollment of 1,000. One of the first tasks will be to find a site—temporary or permanent—for the operation.

Cadigan heads a task force group, including University Treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson and physical plant director Harry Hugill, now considering sites for UMass-Boston. According to Cadigan, 30 possible locations in the metropolitan Boston area have already been suggested. "Every proposed location will be visited and studied by the committee," Cadigan stated, "and will be considered further by the President and Board of Trustees."

The newly appointed planning director has been a member of the UMass staff since 1945, and is an experienced administra-

UM President To Present Teacher Award

This Thursday's opening convocation will be the occasion for the third presentation of the UMass Outstanding Teacher Award.

President John W. Lederle will preside over the convocation, scheduled for 11:15 a.m. in the Student Union ballroom, and will present the award to a faculty member selected for the honor by a faculty committee.

The special teaching award, presented last year to Prof. George R. Richason, Jr., of the chemistry department, was a centennial - year gift to UMass from Dr. Clifford B. and the late Dr. Kathryn T. Cherry, husband-and-wife physicians from California.

The Cherrys, both active in West Coast education, have had no formal ties with the University. They realized, however, the need for recognition of outstanding teaching, especially at state universities where funds for awards are usually scarcer than at privately endowed schools.

The Cherrys grew to know UMass through Miss Victoria Schuck, a University trustee and professor of political science at Mount Holyoke College.

Main speaker on Thursday morning will be University Provost Oswald Tippo. He will talk about his role as chief academic officer at the University.

Marshfield senior George T. Michael, president of the student senate, will welcome students attending the convocation and will introduce student leaders to the audience.

JOURNALISM 55 and 95 STUDENTS WILL MEET WITH MEMBERS OF THE COLLEGIAN NEWS STAFF AT 6 O'CLOCK TONIGHT. EACH REGULAR STAFF MEMBER WILL SELECT HIS BEAT AND WILL HAVE A JOURNALISM STUDENT ASSIGNED TO HIM TO HELP COVER THE BEAT.

Four Freshmen To Appear In Curry Hicks

The Four Freshmen, known from the Hollywood Bowl to New York's Carnegie Hall for their unique combination of vocal and instrumental talents, will invade the campus on Sunday, Sept. 27, for a 2 p.m. concert in Curry Hicks Gymnasium.

In their personal appearances, the Four Freshmen add versatility and a relaxed, casual brand of humor to musical skill and artistic integrity.

Bob Flanigan, Bill Comstock, Ross Barbour, and Ken Albers are the men behind the Four Freshmen sound. All are musicians as well as singers — and, above all, swingers.

In addition to concert appearances and recording dates for Capitol Records, the Freshmen have played such top nightclubs as the Crescendo in Hollywood and Birdland in New York.

They have also appeared at both the Playboy and Newport jazz festivals. In 1959, the group joined Stan Kenton and singer June Christy in a cross-country tour that attracted jazz fans from coast to coast.

The concert is open to the public, and tickets may be purchased at the Student Union box office.

Student-Residence Plan Begins In Webster Dorm

Luther Allen Speaks On Viet Nam

by JIM FONDY

Despite structural inconveniences, Noah Webster Dormitory initiated the residence student plan with its first student-faculty gathering last Sunday.

Professor Luther Allen, well-known expert on Vietnamese affairs, spoke to a crowded, but attentive, audience in Webster's fifth floor lounge. He based his talk on the question, "Does the United States have the intelligence and knowledge to deal with the Viet Nam Problem"?

Allen stated that he believed one of the reasons for U.S. failure could be our inability to "control intervention in foreign politics."

An on the spot observer of the Vietnamese political scene, he described Viet Nam as primarily a political battle in which the Viet Cong are trying to pursuade the South Vietnamese people to give up the battle and submit to a neutral state.

Mr. Allen called the Dai Viet party "the most inportant political element in the country."

A little over a year ago, Allen pointed up to United States officials the need of giving more power to the Dai Viet party. This advice has gone unheeded.

He contends that the latest demonstrations stem from Khanh's lack of "a solid political support."

Stressing the complexity of the situation, he noted the awesome possibility of military escalation and the lack of knowledge on the part of a good many Vietnamese people as to what constitutes a life under Communism and who tends to support the Viet Cong.

Assistant To Secretary Confirmed By Trustees

Alan R. Miller, a newspaperman for 12 years, has been appointed staff assistant to the Secretary of the University.

Miller's appointment was confirmed formally by the Board of Trustees Sept. 9, and he assumed his duties Sept. 14.

Miller, 35, was a civilian member of the Stars and Stripes, Darmstadt, Germany, a 160,000-circulation daily newspaper serving U.S. Forces and civilians throughout Europe. During his European travels, from March 1955 to April 1964, he covered such events as the Berlin Crisis, troop movements, and President Kennedy's historic visit to Germany. He also wrote feature articles and book reviews.

He served as special overseas correspondent for the Springfield Union, while in Europe. Upon returning to the U. S. in May, 1964, Miller joined the Union's editorial staff and was employed there until his appointment to the University.

A 1952 graduate of Boston University's School of Public Communications, Miller became editor and then publisher of the Amherst Journal, a weekly newspaper that later merged with the Amherst Record to become the Amherst Journal Record. He left the weekly in March 1955 to join the Stars and Stripes staff.

Motor Vehicle Crackdown

Those students who have unauthorized motor vehicles on campus must return them home immediately.

Colonel Marchant reminds these students that the one week "grace period" as defined in paragraph two of The Administrative Code of the Student Motor Vehicle Regulations ends this weekend.

Marchant also explained that there has been some difficulty with students claiming to be commuters in order to register their motor vehicles. Students must take any problem regarding residence listings to the Dean's Office.

Chicago Symphony

Concert Season To Open

The University of Massachusetts Concert Association has completed arrangements for the 1964-1965 concert series for this season.

The first concert, to be presented on Wednesday, September 30th at the Cage, will be the

JEAN MARTINON

Chicago Symphony under the direction of Jean Martinon.

Other programs will feature Leon Fleisher, pianist, Leonard Rose, cellist, The New York Chamber Soloists, The Julliard Quartet, as well as several other performers.

The Concert Association is composed of students who enjoy music and are interested in bringing celebrated musicians to campus. The group selects the programs for the following year and takes care of all the preparations for the concerts.

Again this year, the Concert Association needs additional members to help with the 1965 1966 series and with ushering, technical work such as lighting and seating, programs and publicity.

There will be a meeting of the Concert Association tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Nantucket Room of the Student Union. It is hoped that all interested students will attend.

THE YOUNG MAN IN THE KNOW: WHAT HE'S WEARING THIS FALL

Here are some of the clothes that rate with college men this fall. We know. Because we asked them. Campus leaders from all parts of the country gave us the word at the 3rd Annual Du Pont College Career Fashion Conference.

These clothes have more than great style. They also have the built-in neatness of Du Pont fibers. They'll stay in great shape through lots of hard wear. And easy care will keep them in great shape.

All the big styles come with the extras of Du Pont fibers. Just make sure the label says "Dacron", "Orlon", "Lycra", "Antron"* nylon, Du Pont nylon . . . and, in shoes, new "Corfam". Stop and see your favorites at KENNEDY'S OF NEW ENGLAND.

A Question of Judgement

As of 12:01 a.m. yesterday, a large number of freshmen males were put in the precarious position of being able to ruin their college careers.

This situation was created by a new I.F.C. rushing policy which allows pledging to take place after one day of fraternity round-robins.

Hopefully no freshman rushed into a situation he will later regret, nor any house endangered the stature of their brotherhood by pledging someone on a brief first impression.

Both parties should examine each other closely with the realization that fraternity is a bargain for four years, and thus be careful to ensure mutual compatability before pledging.

Such knowledge cannot be gained in a ten minute visit, nor for that matter, in a one week period. How can a freshman who can barely find his way to class find the right fraternity? — Obviously he can't. He should be allowed time to orient himself to the university, then to find out if he wants or needs fraternity, and finally to decide which fraternity is right for him.

With a rushing and pledging policy as premature as this year's, the freshman stands to be hurt most by a lack of discretion, while the individual house, the fraternity system and the University will all feel repercussions of what can only be termed poor judgment.

There can be but one redeeming factor: the use of caution and discretion by all concerned. Let us hope hey are responsible enough to be careful.

Heatless Studying Unbearable

Dear Editor,

As a resident of the new Orchard Hill dormitories, I am eagerly looking forward to the time when construction will be complete. The individual rooms are modern, and are the epitome of ideal college living. I did not mind paying an extra $50 a semester for such a comfortable setting with spacious study rooms and modern conveniences.

However, I do mind paying $150 a semester for a seventh floor room which I have to reach by climbing six flights of stairs. In addition to no elevators, the study rooms are non-existent. Freshmen girls with an 8:00 curfew have nowhere to study but their rooms. Although the University has provided blankets, the lack of heat makes studying in our rooms unbearable. (Unless I wish to catch pneumonia). If I want to take a shower, wash my hair, or do my laundry, I have to spend an ENTIRE evening in Van Meter. Since all of the Orchard Dorm girls are forced to use this method, Van Meter is finding their dorm overcrowded. Since we are limited to 200 watts of electricity to a room, I must also suffer the possible consequences of going blind. The absence of telephones is a small thing but doing without an intercom is difficult for the poor girls on office duty who may have to climb to the 7th floor to get you if you have a caller. No curtains may be fun for the boys who use their binoculars to observe the girls in opposite dorms, but I can't experience the same ecstacy over such conditions. The dirt and dust, to say nothing of the danger of climbing over trenches to reach Orchard Dorm D is annoying.

Yet all this could be bearable. We are doing our best to understand the situation. However, I do feel that those brave and cheerful occupants of the Orchard Hill Complex should receive some compensation for their willingness to put up with the existing conditions. I think it is only fair that this University should refund a portion of the rent paid for the first semester, in consideration of the rigors undergone in these first few hectic weeks. Perhaps then we might find it possible to be a little happier over our plight.

Sincerely,
Vicki Brydon '67

Re: Orchard Fruitflies

Dear Classified Ed Editor (or anyone else, as far as we are concerned):

The residents of Orchard "D" wish to sell to the Zoology Dept. or to any interested Entomology majors an unlimited supply of Drosophila, commonly known as fruitflies.

This breed is of an unusually rapid reproducing type, and displays a large amount of healthy energy. These creatures will not be liquified by hairspray, strong perfumes, deodorant, or any of the other common commercial type bug-killers.

Price will depend on the quantity bought. If you climb seven stories to evacuate the upper floors we will pay you.

The means of procuring these little flying objects is elementary, since the supply is ample. They congregate in front of any lighted mirror. (Vain little creatures, aren't they.) The supply in the corridors is not as dense. Nevertheless, we suggest that corridor walkers keep their mouths closed.

Note: Bring your own vial.

Sincerely,
The Emmie Dicks

Civil Rights A Small Help For Negroes

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on Sandy Graham's editorial on the Civil Rights Act that appeared in the September 18 Collegian.

In the first place, I know of no one who considers the bill a panacea. Even Senator Humphrey, the bill's floor manager in the Senate has admitted that the bill cannot be regarded as a cure-all for all our civil rights problems. It is merely a small step to help the Negro.

Secondly, the bill does not attempt to "cure the attitudes" of the bigot because no law can easily change a person's opinions. Human nature is not readily changed. The only chance the Civil Rights Act can have in influencing the bigot's attitudes is that increased association with Negroes may possibly help to break down his prejudice, but even this is admittedly a slow and difficult process.

The editorial states "The bigot's view of race inferiority has not been countermanded by better education or fairer voter registration." As mentioned above, the bill's main intent is not to influence the bigot's thinking; it is to give Negroes rights that they have so long been denied.

As for the unfortunate experience of the cab driver, the establishment of the Community Relations Service will probably eliminate this sort of thing. The election of Louise Day Hicks simply shows that the South does not have a monopoly on discrimination and prejudice.

In spite of the fact that the Civil Rights Act does not seek to alter anyone's views, so far it has proved successful. In a report in The New Republic of August 8, syndicated columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak report that even Birmingham, Alabama is experiencing progress. There has not been any trouble yet, and Birmingham is peacefully complying with the Civil Rights Act even though most of the citizens oppose the law. Evans and Novak conclude:

"There is a great lesson in Birmingham. Over the years, public figures from Dwight Eisenhower to Barry Goldwater have said that progress in civil rights depends on a change in men's hearts, not new laws. Birmingham today seems to prove otherwise, that new laws are what make progress possible."

Letters to the Editor

Re: The Leaves Of Discontent

by CHARLES G. HORNE

Autumn comes and soon leaves will be under the trees, leaves which look much the same and yet are so much different from those which fell a year before. So too, some annual leaves fall into the pages of the Collegian, these leaves of discontent arising from the ways and woes of a freshman's adjusting to "campus" life. This year, as before, the Collegian has accumulated various and sundry letters, each letter being thrown into one of two piles. One heap is for those who are violently in favor of hazing and the other for those violently opposed. Two rather pointed letters have appeared and undoubtedly if teams were to be organized between the two letter piles, the writers of each of these two letters would become the unrivaled captains of their teams. As would be expected, one "captain" proclaimed that she was humiliated by hazing, and the other brandished her slightly worn beanie saying that she felt wanted when stoned.

To be trite, the controversy could go on forever. Nevertheless, there is one fact which remains: all colleges, whether their immediate aims are to develop dog catchers or to derange doctors, are dedicated to at least one ideal. That ideal is to allow, if not to encourage, diversity among its students. Yet the "institution" of hazing seems to contradict this fact. If a college is to develop individuals, it defeats its purpose when nonconforming individuals are forced to conform.

Yes, hazing might establish some class unity, but those who favor hazing are probably the same people who would, in any case, contribute to the class. And when those who do not favor hazing are forced to join it, the school alienates some who might have contributed themselves to the class but now, out of resentment, will in all probability, never be present at a class meeting. Thus the argument of class unity does not stand so well.

Nevertheless, it is as equally wrong to discontinue hazing as it is to force those who are against it to become part of it. It is an individual's right to be or not to be stoned as he wishes. After all, if hazing were made voluntary, which in practice it is fast becoming, perhaps some psychology course described "sophomore identity crises" would like English 1, be exempted in the freshman year.

Re: The Beanie Issue

To the Editor:

Regarding the two letters written about beanies, I wish to state that any time the writer of the first letter wants a sympathetic ear he or she is entirely welcome to talk with me. I remember wearing the beanie. I wore it for three days and then threw it in my wastebasket where I felt it belonged. I attended classes, joined clubs in which I was interested, and met people on my corridor, in the classes, and in the clubs. I met both freshmen and upperclassmen. I did all this without benefit of the beanie. I was extremely shy, and it was much easier to speak to people after I stopped wearing it because I did not feel quite so self-conscious.

There is nothing wrong with beanies and bibs and buttons if the person involved likes these "traditions". However, people come to this school to develop as individuals. I can't see forcing a freshman (by social pressure, etc.) to button or to do anything in the name of "school spirit" if it makes him uncomfortable. As an upperclassman, I am not here to make freshmen uncomfortable. I am here to welcome them, with or without their beanies.

Gladchuck New Director

Intramural Program Enlarges

by HOWIE DAVIS

The autumn intramural program at the University of Massachusetts has undergone a period of reconstruction to meet the demands of the enlarged student body.

CHET GLADCHUCK, formerly a member of the varsity football staff, was promoted last month to the head of the intramural office in the Men's Physical Education Department. He is working diligently to make his program "exciting, interesting and varied."

To promote the interest of the student body he has started two innovations which will begin this fall. The first is a football clinic which was conducted last night by Coach Vic Fusia and his staff. Its success has already guaranteed that it will be an annual event.

During the season the department of intramurals will tabulate statistics in relation to points allowed, points scored, first downs, passing percentages, number of passes received and individual scoring statistics. Mr. Gladchuck believes that these statistics, published regularly with league standings, will supply the participants of a team that is not among the league leaders to perform for the benefit of a player who has an opportunity to capture an individual title.

Towards the end of the season the coaches and players of all teams will vote to choose an All-Star team. The voting will be conducted in the same manner as the major league baseball teams in that the players will not beable to vote for members of their own team.

Roster deadline for dorms and independents is 5:30 p.m. Friday. The competition will begin September 29 for this league. Tomorrow the IFC kicks off the intramnural season. Kappa Sig is the defending champion of the fraternities, while the Wheeler House Trojans, the campus champs, have the majority of last year's members back to defend their titles.

THE KICKOFF tomorrow will find two campus dignitaries performing a unique duty. Warren P. McQuirk, the dean of the School of Physical Education, will hold the ball for President Lederle who will kickoff.

This evening at 7:00 p.m. at the Boyden Physical Education Building in Room 251 there will be a meeting for the athletic chairmen of the dorms and independents. At the same time, in the same building, there will be a meeting for all officials.

The following is a schedule of tomorrow night's games and a breakdown of the fratenity leagues:

PSI vs. TKE	PSK	PSD
PSK vs. TEP	QTV	PMD

score came with just 50 seconds left in the half.

THE SECOND HALF was more of the same, Mass. holding on grudgingly. Maine was stalled twice and also Mass stymied, again had to punt. Maine opened the last few series of downs deep in their own territory, equally as frustrated as the Redmen. The game ended with the Redmen on the Maine 20 as they took over there on downs.

The statistics for the game give the Redmen the edge in virtually every category except passing.

Defense Saves Day

Redmen Thwart Maine, 6-0

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts football team rode a deflected pass and a staunch defense to an unimpressive 6-0 win over the Maine Black Bears. This is not meant to detract anything from the fine performance of Maine, but it is only mentioned as a comment when considering the rugged schedule the Redmen have to play. If the home team makes as many mistakes against Harvard or Buffalo (a 35-0 winner over BU) they certainly will not win.

It was on offense that the Redmen were least impressive. They fumbled four times and had a pass intercepted. In addition, the club had only one sustained drive all afternoon, that being the one that resulted in the touchdown late in the first half.

The Redmen kicked off to Maine, and after the Black Bears got a quick first down, they were stymied and punted to the home club. After QB Jerry Whelchel carried for five, Kenny Palm went for a 17 yard gain, an ankle tackle saving the day for the Bears. Here the drive ended with Milt Morin punting.

John Austin punted and Palm fumbled at midfield, Maine recovering. DeVarney passed his way down to the Redmen 20 before Morin dumped him but good at the 32. The Redmen ran three plays as the quarter ended and kicked.

Phil DeRose knocked down a couple passes to kill any Maine ambitions and Austin punted. DeRose tried to catch the ball on the run, but was hit immediately and fumbled. Maine moved to the 12 before being shut off. Mass ran three plays and punted. Mike Haley got the ball at his own 42 and ran to the Redmen 39. This time, Bob Burke, John Hudson and Bernie Dallas lowered the boom on DeVarney. Austin saved the team from backing up any more by punting.

MASSACHUSETTS took the ball at the 16 and finally got started. Bob Ellis was stopped for no gain, but came back and picked up 13 yards on the next play. Whelchel then hit Bob Meers for a 20 yard gain. Whelchel hit Meers for four more on an out of bounds play. Ross bucked through the center of the line for a first down. Whelchel hit Meers for five more to get the ball on the Maine 38.

Jerry then went for the big bomb as he made an arm fake for a short pass then tried to hit Meers on the stop and go pattern. The pass was a little underthrown and Maine's Brent Keene went high in the air to deflect the ball. Meers was waiting right behind him, grabbed the ball and scored from the five with a defender hanging on him. Whelchel's extra point was blocked and that was all of the scoring in the game. Mass. completed four passes on the drive, and completed but one other the rest of the day. The

Harriers Meet Crimson

The cross country team has been undergoing stiff workouts since last Monday in preparation for their opening meet against Harvard on Sept. 26. Graduation and bad luck have hit the team hard and, as a result, it will be a building year for Coach Footrick's harriers.

Co-Captains and seniors Bob Ramsey and Tom Panke also have their problems. Ramsey is still bothered by bad knees which kept him out of the entire track season last year. Panke is tied up with a difficult pre-med schedule and is unable to train as often as he would like.

The burden of carrying the team is therefore left to three sophomores who were outstanding on last year's freshman team. Steve St. Clair was first man on the Frosh cross country team last year, and was also outstanding on the track team in the distance events. Terry Carpenter was sidelined for most of the cross country season last year with a broken foot, but he bounced back in the track season to go undefeated in the 2-mile for the frosh. Mike Sheeley was an outstanding miler last year for the freshman team.

Others who will be vying for a berth on the team will be Bob Larson, a junior back from last year's team; Bill Thoms, a sophomore who ran well with last year's frosh; Tony Manfredi, a sophomore who was ineligible last year because he was a transfer student; Charlie "Flash" Mitchell, Jim Parker, John Anderson, and Damon Gaffney, all sophomores.

R.S.O. Official At Bus Terminal Hearing

by BILL FIRST

Armand H. DeGrenier, RSO Business Manager, testified on behalf of Peter Pan Bus Lines at a hearing at the State House Tuesday.

The Department of Public Utilities (DPU) heard objections to Peter Pan's application for a bus terminal in Amherst from Western Massachusetts bus lines. The DPU will announce its decision at a future date, as to whether the application is accepted or not.

Western Mass. bus lines complained that if Peter Pan had a terminal in Amherst, it would lose thousands of dollars in University of Massachusetts charters and face bankruptcy.

Mr. DeGrenier's argument was that the University needs an Amherst bus terminal because of the money the student organizations woud save on service.

During the day long hearings on Beacon Hill, it was brought out that the primary savings to the students in having a local terminal would be the money saved on "deadhead mileage." Presently, when a student group wishes to charter a bus, it comes from Northampton or Springfield. This means that the charterer pays a flat rate mileage for the trip to Amherst when the bus is empty. Deadhead mileage generally runs over 55¢ a mile, states Mr. DeGrenier.

One point made decisively clear by Mr. DeGrenier was that he was attending the hearings in support of an application for a local terminal, in behalf of Registered Student Organizations, and not for Peter Pan Bus Lines.

His emphasis on this point referred to his known friendship with Edward Buck, manager of the Peter Pan Travel Agency, in Amherst, and former RSO business manager. He said that he would support an application from any bus line for an Amherst terminal. All student organizations are potential users of charter service, and, he was, therefore, speaking only for the students, whom it is his job to represent.

Provost Tippo Asks For Relentless Upgrading

PROVOST TIPPO

by DAVE HARVEY

In his first appearance before the University community as its new Provost, Dr. Oswald Tippo yesterday stressed the need for greater efforts on the part of all concerned if the University is to continue to grow and improve at its present rate.

Speaking at the opening convocation of the 1964-65 academic year, Dr. Tippo stressed high quality students, a great faculty, and an excellent curriculum as the necessary components of an outstanding University.

He said, "We must recognize that an evolving University demands a relentless upgrading of standards of performance on the part of students, faculty and business and administrative personnel."

To promote this upgrading, Dr. Tippo outlined a program which the University administration hopes to follow through the next few years to provide a continuation of the high quality education that has become associated with UMass in the past.

Recalling the campus as it was when he left it over thirty years ago, the new Provost said that "tremendous progress has been made," "and that in the next 10 to 20 years "even greater developments" can be expected.

Of the three necessary elements for a great University, Dr. Tippo said that the University has already achieved the first in the fact that the academic profile of the student body compares favorably with many of the better state universities.

In speaking of the faculty, Dr. Tippo called for a proper intellectual at mosphere and intelligent leadership. To provide this intellectual stimulation, he said, the University hopes to embark on many new programs, including a stepped up graduate program in many fields and a lowering of the student-instructor ratio from 15-1 to 13-1.

Praising the merit system as a means of fair distribution of salary increases, Dr. Tippo called for not only a general yearly increase in faculty pay to keep pace with other state schools, but also periodic additional increases to insure advancement of the UMass pay scale as compared to the national average.

"In education, as in other endeavors," he said, "you usually get what you pay for."

To achieve a proper view of the curriculum, Dr. Tippo suggested formation of a faculty committee to provide a "sweeping study" to determine if it will

Distinguished Teacher

Varley Award Recipient

Dr. H. Leland Varley, professor of English, was awarded the third annual "Distinguished Teacher of the Year" award at the all-university convocation opening the 1964-65 academic year at the University of Massachusetts yesterday.

Prof. Varley, a long-time faculty member, was chosen for the award by his colleagues. The presentation was made by Pres. John W. Lederle, who presided over the convocation.

A graduate of Wesleyan University in 1934, Prof. Varley also received his M.A. there. He went on to the University of Wisconsin where he earned his Ph.D. Before joining the UMass faculty in 1938, Prof. Varley taught at the University of Wisconsin, Wesleyan University and Amherst College.

Last year Prof. Varley served as director of the honors program at UMass. Earlier this year Pres. Lederle named him "Master" of the new experimental residence plan that is being conducted in the Orchard Hill dormitory complex.

The award for distinguished teaching was made for the first time two years ago at the convocation opening the University's Centennial Year. The special tribute to good teaching at UMass was made possible by a husband-wife team of physicians from California.

Dr. Clifford B. Cherry and the late Dr. Kathryn T. Cherry established the award as a special contribution to the University's Centennial celebration. The Cherrys' only tie with U-Mass was through a friend, Miss Victoria Schuck, a member of the UMass Board of Trustees and a professor at Mount Holyoke College.

Although Mrs. Cherry died more than a year ago in a tragic automobile accident, Dr. Clifford Cherry has continued the award.

The Cherrys, both active in education on the West Coast,

Students Favor Speech

by Alan Rice

The first major address Thursday by new Provost Oswald Tippo received a favorable reaction from the majority of students polled by the Collegian.

The straightforwardness of the speech, indicating where the provost stands on major decisions confronting the University in the next five years was the key factor tht impressed the student listeners.

Several students attended the convocation with the expectation of hearing what they generally termed "the usual line you

Chief Justice Admits Board's Image Unclear

The Chief Justice of the Men's Judiciary Board admitted Wednesday that the image of the Board is "not a clear image."

Senior Leonard K. Charest, who became chief justice last spring, said that most students are uninformed about the Board and that he will encourage during his tenure a wider awareness of the nature and functions of the Board.

The Men's Judiciary hears cases of misdemeanor which occur on the campus and appeals from the Area Judiciaries whose jurisdiction includes the men's dormitories.

Penalties range from warnings to recommendations for expulsion. Judgments may be appealed and may never be increased by administrative officials.

The chief justice emphasized that the Judiciary is "not a court of law and we are not seven robed men, aloof from the students' problems."

He said "as students ourselves we can often best appreciate a student's situation and we try to help him on a personal, individual basis."

The Men's Judiciary consists of three seniors, three juniors and one sophomore, all chosen by interview. According to Charest, the three vacancies created each spring are filled from a field of about thirty applicants.

Pan-Hel Opens Activities

Judy Zenis, president of Panhellenic Council, today announced the major Panhellenic activities for this semester.

The annual public Panhellenic dramatization competition will be October 18 in Bartlett Auditorium. Declamations will be presented by one girl from each sorority on a competitive basis.

Sorority Round Robins for freshmen will be October 31 and November 1, from 1-6 p.m. Miss Zenis explained, "This gives freshmen an opportunity to see the actual physical structure of the houses on a casual basis." Panhellenic representatives will take the freshmen from house to house, each group beginning at the Student Union. Round Robins precede formal rush which will be from February 3 to February 11.

Miss Zenis also announced that a Panhellenic sponsored convocation for freshmen will be November 22 to "orientate freshmen to a Panhellenic viewpoint of sororities." A film, "Sorority Rush," from the University of Wisconsin, will be shown and a senior will speak on "What Sorority Life Means to Me." There will also be singing by a Panhellenic chorus.

Panhellenic will be taking part in the campus blood drive. They will also join with I.F.C. in helping to set up the U. N. Carnival October 30. Proceeds from the carnival will go to a general U.N. fund.

U. T. Presents Twelve Films

The department of speech at the University will present a series of distinguished films this year as part of its University Theatre program.

The first offering will be D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms," a "silent movie," to be shown in Bartlett Auditorium on Tuesday, Sept. 29.

Under the supervision of Richard Stromgren, a member of the speech department, the film study series will include 10 outstanding films.

Classics of the silent screen will be shown from September through December. Included will be "The Treasure of Arne" and "The Phantom Chariot," Oct. 13; "The Last Laugh," Nov. 3; "Potemkin," Nov. 17, and "The Passion of Joan of Arc," Dec. 1.

Documentary and experimental forms will be studied from February through April. Featured will be Flaherty's "Man of Aran," Feb. 1 6; "A Child's Christmas in Wales," "Goya" and "Moby Dick," March 9; "The Great Adventure," March 16; films by Shirley Clarke and others on April 16 and George Orwell's "Animal Farm," April 27.

All showings will be in Bartlett Auditorium on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. Season tickets are available as part of the University Theatre general season, or may be purchased separately. No individual tickets will be sold at the door.

Harvard Dean Speaks To UMass Pre-Med Club

Dr. J. Howard Oaks, Dean of the Harvard Schol of Dental Medicine spoke to the University's Pre-Med Club Wednesday evening concerning admission to medical and dental schools. In his informal address, Dr. Oaks suggested that a new trend in the number of qualified applicants to Professional schools could be seen. Following the Second World War, the number of exceptional students interested in medicine decreased. In recent years, this course has reversed. In the past four years alone, he added, the number of such applicants has doubled.

When asked about University graduates presently at Harvard Medical or Dental Schools, he said that there were none that he could recall, but emphasized that he could not remember any applications.

DR. OAKS, the only man to hold a position on the admissions board of a dental and medical school simultaneously, was a 1951 Summa Cum Laude graduate of Wesleyan University and later graduated from the Harvard School of Dental Medicine. He is presently the youngest dean of an American dental school.

Dr. Oaks offered important advise to future physicians and dentists concerning a significant quality applicant should have "Regardless of what you do, do it well".

Student Aid Needed For Mental Hospital

It's a large, state-run institution, in many respects like ours. It's on a beautiful track of land with many buildings, and many facilities. It's purpose, like our own University's, is to educate people. Here the similarity ends. The Northampton State Hospital's main function is not to help earn colege degrees, but to help people live with themselves. Those attending have no four year course toward graduation. They may "graduate" in 30 days, 30 years, . . . or never.

All the occupants of the Hospital who have problems, mental retardation, or senility, are the unfortunate rejects of society. They are friends and acquaintences whose tenure is hushed up. Also, they are desperately lonely human beings. The majority of the these patients remain confined, on the hospital grounds year round. Too many leave been abandoned by their families. They lose contact with the outer world and the reality that goes with it. When this occurs, these patients lose their determination to recover and get out. They have become resigned to living the remainder of their lives within the grounds of the hospital in an almost vegetable existence.

This should not happen, but a limited staff trying to cope with 4,000 patients can only result in inadequate treatments. Many of these patients can be helped. Volunteer workers from the four colleges help Northampton State Hospital.

On Wednesday, Oct. 7, there will be a special Orientation Night at the Northampton State Hospital. Rides will leave from the S.U. lobby at 5 p.m. Sandwiches and coffee will be served, fololwed by a short tour and a meeting to learn about the various activities offered. Any interested students may sign up o the Northampton Volunteers Sign-Up Sheet, across from the telephone booths in the S.U.

hear," but they were surprised at the definite steps being taken for expansion of the graduate school and University-wide library facilities.

A sophomore commented that while he was not overly enthusiastic about the entire address, he was impressed when Provost Tippo "laid it on the line about what he expected of the faculty." A program of increased faculty salaries and easier work schedules to improve the quality of the education which students receive at the University, and the duty of faculty members to strive continually for improvement in their own courses, were stressed by the provost.

A special point of the address —that a liberal university education is less emphasized than the more technical fields in most institutions—seemed to be borne out by the fact that only one student mentioned that phase of the speech.

However, most of the dozen students polled expressed optimism for the future years based on the ideas and plans of the provost. Nearly all those in attendance seemed to enjoy the address, and Provost Tippo displayed a ready wit in telling of some of the experiences he had during his long academic career before coming to the University.

Army ROTC To Enter Year As Voluntary

The Reserve Officers Training Program at the University is entering its second year under the voluntary program. This year there are about 450 cadets in the program, including 230 freshmen.

The cadet brigade is made up of students from every facet of campus life. Upon entering the program, the cadet can choose to participate in the rugged Special Forces training or on the drill team, the Grenadiers. Even the girls can get in the act by signing up for the Precisionettes, a ROTC sponsored drill team.

This year the brigade is under the command of Cadet Colonel David Blodgett. Programs scheduled for this year include both a Fall and Spring Review, the Military Ball, and participation in various celebrations in the area. Last year units of the brigade marched in the St. Patrick's day parade in Holyoke and the entire brigade marched in a parade in Amherst commemorating Armed Forces Day.

Any student still interested in joining the brigade can do so by reporting to the office in Dickinson Hall.

Editorial Policy

As stated on our nameplate, The Collegian is "A Free and Responsible Press".

Our primary position is that of the voice of the student body, and as such, it is our duty not only to report news of campus interest but also to allow students to express their personal convictions by editorializing on our editorial page.

Collegian policy holds that signed or bylined editorials or letters to the editor are statements of PERSONAL ideology and the the Collegian does not necessarily agree with, or uphold these opinions.

Unsigned editorials state Collegian positions on issues and must be approved by at least five editors before going into print unsigned. They are reserved for subjects which we consider timely and important and are applied in what we consider to be useful and constructive manner.

Support or criticism of any idea pertinent to the University may be made by us or by anyone willing to stand behind his beliefs, providing that such polemics are in good taste and free from libel and slander.

The Collegian has always exemplified the spirit of free campus journalism and shall continue to do so for the good of the students and the University.

LOCKED OUT

Yesterday, before the Opening Convocation, the Hatch, bookstore, lodge, and games area were closed to the student body. The apparent intent of this move was to force students to attend the convocation.

The administration's desire to see a large audience at the convocation is quite justifiable. However, the right of the administration to close necessary student facilities in order to achieve this end is questionable.

In the first place, attendance at a student convocation should be strictly on a voluntary basis. If a student wishes to attend, he is to be praised for his innitiative. If a student doesn't wish to attend, that is his perogative, just as it is his perogative to attend the University or not.

Secondly, many students, especially commuters with 12:20 classes were deprived of their lunch because they had no place to buy or eat food. In addition, students desiring to buy books or supplies for afternoon classes were met by closed doors.

In short, it should be realized that yesterday's closing of the Hatch, bookstore, Lodge, and games area deprived the student body of its customary privileges.

In his address yesterday, Provost Tippo stated that the University should develop a good academic image. It is my opinion that "a good university image" includes the availability of necessary student facilities.

Accentuate the Positive

Of the many charges which have been levelled against those fraternities and sororities located on North Pleasant Street (popularly known as Fraternity Row), none has been as unfair to the residents of said houses as that of Provost Tippo who, in a speech delivered yesterday to members of the faculty and student body, alluded to it as "Tobacco Road".

Besides being rather disheartening to the residents of North Pleasant Street, who have worked very hard to improve their houses, this remark carries with it connotations which just aren't deserved.

If you were here last year I'm sure you can appreciate the difference in the appearance of the houses. I can point to new lawns, new fences and new paint jobs that have been added this year; most of them since the semester began; this is in addition to many interior improvements which are, I might add, much more important to those who live within.

These houses are plagued with problems similar to those facing the University, not the least among which is parking and money. In addition to this, a few houses desirous of building new ones cannot do so because of restrictive zoning laws etc.

I can only hope that the residents of North Pleasant will continue their efforts to improve the sights as they have been doing so admirably, and that the student body and Administration personnel will appreciate these efforts.

Resentment

Dear Editor,

We have a question that we wish to present to the "minds" behind the Orchard Hill Complex. We are paying an extra $50 each semester . . . for what?

Could it be for the privilege and luxury of living in the plush dorms of Orchard Complex? No! The answer is simple. Not everyone can have windows without drapes, buildings without doors, elevator shafts without elevators and showers without curtains.

As the answer is simple, so is the cure. Refund our $50 and we'll buy our own shower curtains.

2 of the Emmie Dicks '68

Courage, Fellows

It's a shame boys aren't allowed to tour the halls of the women's dorms on Friday and Saturday evenings. They'd probably be shocked at the number of young, attractive, interesting girls who are sitting listlessly in their rooms, wishing there were something else to do on a week-end night besides study.

The fact of the matter is that most guys don't realize that if a girl isn't asked out during the week, she faces the grim reality of four stark walls. As girls, they have the handicap of taking the passive role in date-making. They cannot barge into a conversation at the Hatch, nor can they call Brett, Thatcher, Gorman, or anyplace and ask for some guy they hardly know. They can't even toss in a whistle of approval at some good-looking hunk of man who passes their way. Such a position is hardly advantageous, and is oftimes downright frustrating.

It's about time you guys, especially underclassmen, got a few things straight. First of all, just because one or two girls are sitting alone in the Hatch doesn't mean that they are waiting for somebody in particular, and thus should be avoided. Furthermore, when a girl is basking in the sun, alone, beside the Duck Pond, reading something or other, she is rarely so engrossed that some stimulating conversation from a nice fellow who plunks down beside. You don't have to jump her, but friendliness and personality won't do any harm. Finally, just because a girl is attractive, doesn't mean she's 'booked up' three months in advance. Lord knows how many good lookers have spent lonely evenings because most guys figured they were probably going steady, or at least their time was already taken.

You don't have to be an athlete, or a fraternity brother, or a senior, or even an extrovert who bubbles with personality from the word 'go', to make a hit with some gal. All you have to do is be friendly, kind, considerate, and most of all, be yourself. Don't let your fear of being refused keep you from great times, and don't let one or two strike-outs turn you sour. Happiness may be just around the corner if you'll only take that first step. So let's see some real U.M. spirit, guys, and maybe this weekend won't be so lonely for some goodlooking co-eds.

Signed,
A Feminist

STUDENT SENATE FARCICAL OR EFFICIENT

Editor's Note:
(The following is by Jonathan Fife, former President of the Student Senate. The Collegian will be printing these articles to bring to the students the ideas, experiences and viewpoints that Fife has gained through participation in major student activities.)

QUESTION: The Student Senate—Farcical or Effective.

By Jonathan Fife

It is my idea to try to bring to the Student Body both little known facts and much asked questions concerning the University and the Students. This will be done in two parts: through this article and through a program on WMUA called INTERACTION. This program, presented Sunday evenings at 7 P.M., will be a panel discussion between Administration officials and students who are involved directly with campus problems.

With the school year begins a new year for the Student Senate. Elections will be held, ballots will be counted, some will win and some will lose. What has all this to do with being at the University? Does the Student Senate serve a function as a governing body or is it just an overgrown debating team with factions and counter-factions hitting out at each other.

The University Bulletin states that "The Student Senate . . . has vested in it all legislative functions of student government and has the primary goal of promoting the welfare of the entire student body . . . levies student taxes and appropriates money for many student activities and services . . . (and) in coordination with the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women . . has the responsibility of establishing the rules guiding the activities of the student at the University."

Last year, two of the most controversial bills presented before the Senate were a bill to put to an end the prayer that starts the meetings and a bill to hopefully abolish activities that were considered to be "conflicts of interests"—what ever that was to mean. To me, this had all the ear marks of a "Micky Mouse organization. Their duties as defined by the University Bulletin are hardly Mickey Mouse." What are we to believe—that which appears in the Bulletin or the news that appears in the campus newspaper?

That which makes the Senate an organization worth having on the Campus is not necessarily what is readily apparent. What appears here is only those actions that are unusual or make good copy. The work that is done behind the scene—the work that is done in committees—this routine business that gets very little attention from those who are not directly concerned with it, has made an effective and honest legislative body. How many realize that the Senate has the power to tax each and every undergraduate student—quite a few I would guess; but how many realize that the total budget runs well over $150,000.00 and of that $39,000.00 goes to the Index and $34,000.00 goes to the Fine Arts Council. How many know that all Student organizations on Campus must first be chartered by the Senate before they can become official activities of the University? How many know that the President of the Senate is also President of the Student Government Association and as a result is the President of the Student Body and yet he is elected by just the members of the Senate? How many realize that each Spring the Senate meets with the Deans offices and decide on the non-academic rules and regulations fo rthe next year: that the Senate can influence the time of various curfews, the library hours and if they wished—the type of dress that the girls wear on campus?

And speaking of new rules that could effect the Student Body—like a dress rule—what power has the Student Body to protect themselves against such rules and to see that their government is operating as it should? The answer is a dull one—but one that is very true. Only by being sure about the qualifications of the person(s) you vote for and by keeping informed about what they are doing after the election can youn be sure that your Student government has not faltered. With Election Day next Thursday it is hard to get informed but this iswhat you must do. It only takes one or two bad, vocal senators to make the whole Student Government Association look bad. Bad before the student body, before the Administration, and before the whole state.

The Student Senate has the power to become one of the most effective Collegiate governing bodies in the Country. Without the concern of the Student Body at election time rolls around, chances are that it will, as in the past, fail to meet its objectives.

(This Sunday at 7 P.M., on WMUA, Dean of Students William Field and Senate President George Michael will answer questions.).

J IS FOR JAZZ
NEW RECORDINGS
By Rez

VERVE: Cal Tjader backed by a big band and strings comes forth with "Warm Wave". Soft, swinging jazz is featured with selections like "People", "Where or When", "I'm Old Fasihoned", and six other standards. The album, arranged and conducted by Claus Ogerman is beautiful and one to add to your collection.

Wynton Kelly, Paul Chambers, Jimmy Cobb, Kenny Burnell, and Candido are featured on "It's All Right". The album gives each artist equal time with varied material. The best cut of these originals is "Kelly Roll".

Gil Evans, one of the better jazz pianists presents a study of contemporary music in "The Individualism of Gil Evans". This album is very deep probing. Mark it for those who enjoy "chamber" music.

VOCALWISE: Lorez Alexandria is a new jazz singer deserving recognition. Her latest album (Impulse) "Lorez Alexandria the Great", features Wynton Kelley. Lorez swings fotly through twelve standards to make a fine album.

The "Double Six Of Paris Sing Ray Charles" (Philips) is a jazz novelty. For those of you who've never heard jazz sung in french, lend an ear. The best version done is "Ruby".

Dave Brubeck's latest is "Jazz Impressions of Japan" (Columbia). Featuring the famous four of Desmond, Wright, Morello and Brubeck this album quite similar in form to "Jazz Impressions of Eurasia". These Brubeck originals portray a typical day in Japan.

US Students On Way Out

This fall U.S. colleges had record breaking enrollments but some 20,000 American students were on their way out—to universities in 60 nations. A bulgino 14 per cent annual rate growth (twice that of U.S. colleges) finds our ever increasing wandering scholars leaving their cigarette butts in cities such as Baghdad, Paris and Berlin.

Study abroad is far from the latest thing. Wealthy Southern planters in colonial times, ignoring these upstart New England colleges, sent their sons over the dangerous Atlantic to European universities.

Today our roving scholars aren't necessarily found in the Social Register. Mass education, cheaper travel, scholarships and generally lower living costs overseas have helped change that.

European education systems use rigorous examination to decide what types and levels of schools the students may attend. US students are up against the "Crean," of the country. The net result is that a mere 4 to 7 per cent - of all 18 to 21 year old Europeans attend a university. The corresponding age group finds 24.7 per cent of Americans.

Overseas students find little "spoon feeding". "Survey" courses summarizing broad subjects (i.e. zool. 1, psey. 1, math 1) are all but unknown. European professors lecture in fine detail only on special aspects of their tpoic saying "knowledge is not taught but searched for". The students must round out their own information through independent research.

The European student selects courses to prepare him for oral and written examinations he must pass in order to get his degree. There is no homework, no quizzes, question periods, midterm or even in some cases, end terms.

Information for students interested in studying abroad is available in the Collegian Office or see your counselor.

be necessary to adjust the ratio of liberal arts to professionally oriented courses here. While acknowledging that there are many programs devoted to the sciences which provide money for graduate fellowships, the Provost said, "We must not allow our whole program to be disturbed by the availability of funds in certain disciplines."

Asking that the University not neglect the fine arts, the humanities and social sciences, Dr. Tippo outlined a proposal for a $100,000 program to provide 40 graduate fellowships and additional funds administered by the Provost to improve generally the University's academic state. To sum up the need for the new programs, Dr. Tippo declared, "We shall want to give some attention to balance in the University program."

Essential to the improvements sought, Dr. Tippo said, is a corresponding increase in the capacities of the physical plant.

To illustrate the need for improved facilities, the Provost said that the shortage of office space for faculty members will become crucial when many new positions are opened next fall to take care of expanded enrollment and a decrease in the student to instructor ratio.

In the planning stage, he said, are such improvements as UMass-Boston, to be ready next fall, ao fine arts building, an administration building and additions to Bartlett Hall and the library.

Especially important to the future of the University is expansion of the library, said Tippo. Administration plans call for a million volumes in an expanded building by 1970 and the fiscal 1967 budget request is to ask $10,500,000 for the new wing.

Dr. Tippo reminded the audience that funds for increased programs will be limited, and that it will be necessary to curtail programs or less academic value to provide funds for more pressing needs. In the main, Dr. Tippo said, the burden of decision will rest with the Provost.

UMass Senior Local Hi Neighbor Girl

Carol Ann Russell, who was Miss Springfield in the 1961 Miss America Pageant, was selected this summer to be the Hi Neighbor Girl for the Narragansett Brewing Company.

Carol Ann, 21 year old brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Russell, of Springfield, competed with 25 other girls at auditions held at WHYN Studios. She was unanimously chosen by a panel of six judges.

A graduate of Technical High School, Springfield 1960, Carol Ann is a senior here, where she is majoring in the Teatre. She attended the Frasier Modeling School and has done extensive modeling work. She has worked in summer theatre productions; as an art director at Camp Seco; and is now teaching ballet.

During her tenure, Carol Ann was seen in parades, at civic affairs, sports events, and picnics.

UMass Harriers Go To Harvard For Final Dual Meet of Season

by RUSSELL MURPHY

Tomorrow the Redmen harriers will meet Harvard at Franklin Park in Boston in their first dual meet of the season.

UNDER COACH BILL FOOTRICK UMass has been turning out consistently good cross country teams. This will be the first season in recent years, however, that the prospects for the team are shadowy.

Unlike last year when the team was paced by such an outstanding freshman as Bill "Digger" Brouillet, there is really no powerhouse on this year's team. But the boys have been working hard and showing great promise.

Time trials for the Harvard meet, run on a new course this Wednesday, were impressive, the first five men running times of from 26:39 to 29:00. Also heartening was the fact that three of these five, Steve St. Clair, Terry Carpenter, and Mike Sheely, are only sophomores.

ALSO IN THE TOP FIVE are seniors and co-captains Bob Ramsay and Tom Panke. Ramsay is suffering from knee trouble and Panke has a tough premed schedule, but both boys should form the hard - running nucleus of this sophomore-dominated team.

Finishing up the line-up for the meet will be two promising juniors, Bob Larson and Jimsie Collins, and sophomores Jim Parker, Tony Manfredi, Charlie Mitchell, and John Andrews. Along with sophomores Bill Thoms, a fine runner currently hindered by an injury, and Damian "The Mattapan Kid" Gaffney, these boys are all potential for an ever-improving team.

Coach Footrick, who has compiled a 55-23 record for UMass in the past decade and has taken home three Yankee Conference titles and a New England championship, is approaching this season cautiously optimistic.

WIN OR LOSE this Saturday, the boys will have the satisfaction of knowing that they ran their best against one of the finest teams in this area.

REDMEN ...

ries. Both Ken Palm and Leo Biron have rushed for 25 yards. The leading (and only) pass receiver is Bob Meers with five receptions for 72 yards. All of these were from Jerry Whelchel who has completed 5 of 10 for the year. When one considers that both he and John Schroeder had a few dropped, it would seem that this part of the offense is on the upswing. Senior tackle Bob Burke got in on 14 tackles to lead all others in that category.

Although Coach Fusia was not happy with all facets of the opening and threatened wholesale changes of the first unit, it appears that there will not be any changes. That would mean there would be Milt Morin and Meers at the ends, Dick Kehoe and Burke will be the tackles, Peter Pietz and Larry Spidle will be the guards and Bernie Dallas will be the center. The backfield will have Whelchel, Palm, Ellis and Mike Ross. The latter was not used too much in the opener, but figures to get the call much more as the season progresses.

Notes from the sports world: Boston College will try to duplicate its upset of Syracuse when it faces Army Saturday . . . What ever happened to the breather? . . . Maine does appear to be quite strong and shouldn't be beaten much more this year . . . Rhode Island opened last weekend by bouncing Northeastern 20-11 . . . A conference dark horse? . . They meet Maine Saturday in a score the Redmen staff will be watching.

MISSISSIPPI was the pre-season pick for number one in the country and went out the first weekend and dismantled one of the best defensive teams in the country, Memphis State, 30-0 . . . Syracuse had been as high as number two but forget it . . . Texas got launched again as did Navy . . .

IN OTHER SPORTS, for those who remember this writer's baseball predictions of Minnesota and San Francisco, now is the time to laugh . . . As an attempted reprieve, these are now tossed to those who care . . . NFL will have Green Bay versus St. Louis in the title game . . . AFL will have San Diego against Buffalo . . . Anyone can do it, just close your eyes and guess . . .

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

In the first outing last Saturday, the Redmen displayed an inept, if not lackadaisical offense. Assuming that the team had attained its potential during the past week, it cannot help but improve its forward motion. Only the vaunted defense held its own, containing the Bears to minus thirteen yards on the ground. However, many of these same players including the interior line faltered on offensive plays. They were slow off their marks, not hitting hard, simply not opening up holes for the backfield. The backs in turn, stalled in a sputtering offensive display throughout the game. When on occasion the offensive line did open a gap, the backs either proved too slow or else ran through leaving the football in the backfield. The ends were far from impressive with the exception of Bob Meers, whose determination and second effort provided the margin of victory. Jack Schroeder threw accurately, but his receivers had more glue in their feet than in their fingers. Maine played an aggressive and tenacious game, but certainly was not a team of Harvard's calibre.

This weekend UMass will attempt to redeem herself an underated eleven. The Crimson have only four returning starters from their first unit, while the Redmen have nine. Yet this team which played surprisingly to a 0-0 tie in 1963 is bigger and faster in the 1964 version. Harvard's overall speed plus the rollout ability of quarterback John McClusky will place added pressure not only up at the interior line, but especially on line backers and safety men. Any freak play could spring a Crimson back all the way. All hopes and anxieties are in the offensive unit, which includes a balanced aerial attack as well as a dependable ground game. It will take more than a fluke pass play to overwhelm the boys of Harvard. Many people have a tendency to underestimate the Ivy League. This group does not include Coach Fusia and staff, who well remember the only blotch of last year's campaign. Harvard gained fourteen first downs while holding UMass to four, and kept the Redmen with their backs to the wall. Having their ego exploited by Maine may provide the psychological advantage for the Redmen. They know that every game is a rugged contest and there can be no mental or physical lapses.

The major possibilities will be more rushing and ground attack by Harvard and a heavy aerial attack by the Redmen. McClusky and Bilodeau are unexperienced quarterbacks but known to be agile runners along with the remainder of the backfield. Whelchel should be his old elusive self, feeding the ball to Ken Palm and the UMass breakaway threat, Phil DeRose.

Prediction UMass 14, Harvard 6.

Crimson Speed vs. UMass Defense

Redmen Eleven Ready for Harvard

by JOHN GOODRICH

As far as Coach Vic Fusia is concerned, the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts have reached about one half of their goal for the season, they have a defense. Now if the offense can get moving, the Redmen will really have something.

THIS WEEKEND they travel to the big stadium on the Charles to fight the Crimson of Harvard. The Redmen will be returning to the scene of possibly their most memorable batle of a year ago, the now famous scoreless deadlock. In that one, it was a tremendous scoreless deadlock. tremendous defensive performance for the Redmen. They held the Crimson after they had a first and goal from the three. In fact, the game ended with Harvard inside the UMass 10. While the Redmen held off the Crimson, they never really got a good shot at scoring.

The Redmen hope to change all of that this week. There is nothing anyone on the staff or any of the players would like better than to hand the Crimson a firm trouncing. This year, however, the Harvard men will be just as rugged as ever. They seem to have a problem similar to the one Maine had, although the latter didn't show it. There is a solid first team and enough of a nucleus for a good second unit.

ONE THING the Redmen can expect is a lot of end plays and sweeps. This is due to the fact that Harvard has an exceptionally fast backfield. The quarterback is John McCluskey, a very speedy man, but an unknown commodity as a passer. It appears doubtful that he could be of the same caliber as Dick DeVarney. The rest of the backfield is just as fast. Wally Grant, Pat Conway, and Dave Poe are all of the rapid variety.

With these operatives moving behind a veteran forward wall, the Crimson should not be lacking offensive ability. The line will have Ken Boyda and Frank Ulcicka at the ends, Neal Curtin and Joe Jurek at tackles, John Hoffman and Charley Reichel, and center and captain John O'Brien.

MASSACHUSETTS is in good shape for the game. End Roger DiMinico is out for a few games with an injured ankle, but with that exception, everyone is ready to go.

The first week's statistics have Bob Ellis as the leading ground gainer with 55 yards in 9 car-

Fraternities Kickoff Intramural Football

by HOWIE DAVIS

Chet Gladchuck the head of the intramural department forced hurricane Gladys out to sea to enable the fraternities to kickoff intramural football competition Wednesday night.

A large crowd was drawn to the intramural field at 6:15 to see President Lederle kick the first ball with Dean McGurk of the Physical Education Department holding. President Lederle showed good form, and gave the impression of being an expert placekicker.

Wednesday night's games were marked by offensive splurges by Kappa Sig and Lambda Chi and tight defensive play by TEP and Theta Chi. LCA had little trouble in setting back a gallant ATG team 31-0. LCA's quarterback, Donahue only completed four passes but they were all scoring strikes. KS, last year's fraternities champions, romped over PMD 33-0. This game also showed an outstanding quarterback in Crane, who completed 12 of his 20 atempts while throwing 4 T.D. passes.

TEP showed a "Redmen" defense in holding a tough PSK team to a safety in their 6-2 victory. The men from TEP took possession of the ball with a minute and twenty seconds remaining in the game and ran out the clock.

IN THE CLOSEST GAME of the night TC edged SPE 7-6 in a severely played contest. The win may have been reversed if it had not been for a juggled pass, caught out of the end zone, on the behalf of SPE.

OTHER GAMES saw TKE whitewashing PSD 20-0 and AEPi hanging on for a 12-7 victory over ASP. BKP, QTV and ZN drew byes Wednesday night.

Mr. Gladchuck hopes the interest displayed by the fraternities will carry over into the dorms and independents when they start play next week.

The following are intramural statistics to date:

League A		League B
Tep	1-0	KS	1-0
TC	1-0	LCA	1-0
QTV	0-0	TKE	1-0
BKP	0-0	AEP	1-0
ZN	0-0	ATG	0-1
PSK	0-1	ASP	0-1

Depth Main Problem

Redmen Booters Look To Sophs

by MORRIS SHUBOW

If injuries remain few and far between the University of Massachusetts soccer team could come up with a fine season. The main problems according to Coach Larry Briggs is a lack of depth and inexperience. Also since the first four games are played against very strong teams, the first two away, the team will have to develop quickly.

The losses of former All-American fullback Dick Repeta, All - New England inside Dick Leete, Dick Phillips and others leave Coach Briggs with only six returning lettermen. On the bright side players from last year's good Freshmen team are ready to move up

RAY YANDO, though only a junior has been elected Captain and will man one of the fullback slots. Ray was an All-New England selection last year. The other fullback will probably be Mike Russo, Buzz Whitman, or Manny Leito but Al Alexander, Roach Durocher, and Vic Zumbruski are also fighting for the job.

Larry Martin, last year's Freshman goalie will probably start but Ted Tanner who is playing the position for the first time could see action. Pat Dougherty, Peter Conlon, Don Johnson, Charlie Monnier, Ron Merrill, Loren Tarr, Hutt, and John Bubriski are all working for the three halfback berths.

Wing should be a strong point on the team with transfer Craig Dunlop who was a Junior College All-American last year in North Carolina on one side and Soph Gary Gibbons on the other. Both have looked impressive in practice. Dave Tucker is also listed at wing.

AB ATANABA, another Soph, has an inside position nailed down with the other still to be decided among Tony Palatino, Paul Bergan, and Bill Burgess. And at the important center-forward position it will be either Kev Lyons, Dick Konieczni, or Ed Blanchard.

The team journeys to New London, Conn. Saturday to meet Coast Guard Academy in their opening game. The Cadets finished up strong last year. The Redmen lost to Coast Guard 2-1 last season but hope to avenge that defeat this week-end. The varsity's first home game is Wednesday, October 7 against Trinity.

UM Gets $100,000

BOSTON—Gov. Peabody has designated the University as the site for a $100,000 Water Resources Research Institute under federal legislation enacted this year.

The formal selection of the University was made in a letter to Interior Secretary Stewart Udall. The chief executive said that the University is "eminently qualified to undertake a program in water resources research."

He pointed out the president of the University has already prepared a proposal for a Water Resources Research Center and that the University is prepared to begin the program immediately.

The New England Council had earlier reported as under consideration a proposal for the region's six states, combining their grants ($600,000) for a single center. This plan has apparently not developed.

Senate to Explain Aims

The Student Senate, in accordance with a long-standing tradition of acting as the promoter of student interests and welfare on campus, is beginning the new academic year by launching tonight a program designed to acquaint the UMass student with his Student Government Association and its potential for acting in his behalf.

According to Donald Boyd, Senate public relations committee chairman, the goal of this program will be to give each under-graduate a greater sense of awareness of how the nearly $170,000 of student tax money is spent. In addition, it is hoped that this greater familiarization with student government will promote constructive criticism which will in turn lead to improvement in the manner in which student government is administered.

The first phase of the program will consist of a series of Tuesday night radio broadcasts with the cooperation of WMUA, the student - operated FM station. The scope of this series, the first of which will be at 7:30 tonight, will include the activities of the Senate's nine standing committees, the Senate's financial power and the future of such an organization at the university with a projected enrollment of 20,000. There will also be frequent discussion of proposed legislation

The second phase of the program will be carried out through the frequent live broadcasts of Senate meetings. According to Chairman Boyd, former Senate President Jon Fife will be narrating these broadcasts, injecting his comments on the tide of debate as well as the legislative record of individual Senators. The purpose of this will be to make Senate meetings both informative and more personalized.

Vote Thurs. For Senators

Plans are being completed for the annual fall Senate elections Thursday. Ballots are being printed. According to Kenneth Feinberg, Elections Committee Chairman, the most heavily contested seats are in heavy freshmen constituencies.

Polling hours have been set at 8 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. in the Student Union lobby for At-Large, Commuter, Fraternities and Sororities. Residence hall voting will be in the residence areas from 6 to 9 p.m.

Results of the voting will be made available by the Elections Committee several hours after the polls have closed.

The Four Freshmen who performed Sunday before a small but enthusiastic audience in the Curry Hicks Auditorium. See review on page 5.

3100 Spaces — 4000 Cars

by DON BOYD
First in a Series

Probably the most frequently heard complaint on campus this semester from visitors and students as well as from faculty and staff, is that there is simply not enough parking space.

No matter what time of day, no matter what day of the week, parking space is truly at a premium. And according to the director of campus security, Col. John Marchant, things will get worse before they get better.

He estimates that 4,000 vehicles have been registered with the police and have received permits to park in designated lots at the University. Yet a realistic estimate of the available number of spaces would be in the neighborhood of 3,100. Of course, staggered class schedules prevent all 4,000 motorists from seeking parking space at the same time. But conferences, visitors and vehicles illegally operated on campus compound what might be a difficult problem at best. With snow fast approaching, the outlook is even bleaker.

IT SEEMS that with every construction of a new building, actual or potential parking space is lost. The erection of the new Dining Commons and the addition to the Engineering Building are cases in point.

Campus police have taken several steps in a seemingly futile attempt to relieve the campus of the increasing congestion—which is almost sure to worsen under a projected enrollment by 1970 of a ponderous 20,000.

The ever-popular illegal parking ticket—5,000 were issued last academic year—will become even more in evidence this year. The towing of vehicles from towaway zones, for which the violator must pay the charge, will also be stepped up. Last year alone nearly 100 vehicle owners suffered this fate.

SECTION 32A, Chapter 648, of the Acts of 1962, provides that "... all fines and penalties recovered for violation of rules and regulations ... shall be forwarded ... to be deposited in the scholarship trust fund of the university for scholarship purposes." This, however, does not lessen the sting for individu als who seem to make a habit of accumulating tickets.

In addition to these measures, the minimum age requirement has been raised to 25, except that students in the following categories will be authorized to possess and operate a vehicle in the Amherst area: bona fide commuter, disabled, extenuating circumstances, married, graduate student.

In short, not the least of the growing pains of this university is a critical shortage of parking space. For the future, Col. Marchant envisions a "perimeter drive" at the present physical bounds of the campus. Parking lots in this area would be for faculty and staff. Student parking would be in a mammoth area adjacent to the new football stadium.

A "shuttle bus" service, similar to those currently operating on the Michigan State and University of Kansas campuses, would take students to and from classes.

"Within the decade," said Col. Marchant, "the University of Massachusetts may become a 'bicycle campus' in word as well as deed."

Gala A-fair For Weekend

A two-day "Science in Agriculture" fair—blending tent city exhibits, square dancing, live stock and a loggers jamboree—is scheduled at UMass Saturday and Sunday.

Sponsored by Alpha Zeta, the College of Agriculture's honorary fraternity, the fair is designed to show the public the wide range of subjects and activities available to agriculture majors at UMass. The fair is specially geared to the interests of high school students who are thinking about careers they may wish to pursue in college. However, the variety and profusion of exhibits and displays will be of interest to the general public as well.

Areas to be presented visually include entomology, floriculture, horticulture, turf management, agronomy, animal science and husbandry, economics, food distribution, forestry, wood technology, wood products, poultry science, parks administration, wildlife conservation, arboriculture, landscape architecture and landscape operations.

The exhibits, to be held in a "tent city" at the Student Union, will be open at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and close at dusk Sunday.

Agriculture activities will be highlighted by a Loggers' Jamboree from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m Saturday. Crack teams from 10 northeastern colleges and universities will compete in this annual event. Also included in the jamboree, sponsored by the Forestry Club, will be tree felling, sawing, chopping and splitting contests.

Among other traditional events will be cattle showing and fitting, a Morgan horse demonstration by the UMass Equestrian Club and a showing of represen-

Aides For Deans

by DEBBIE KAIMAN

Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences has announced today appointment of three professors as assistant deans: Leonta Horrigan, English, Harry Schumer, psychology, and J. Saveried, speech.

They will be working half-time as deans while retaining their work as professors.

The assistant deans will be working with students in areas including academic troubles, changes of major, grades and transfers. They will interview students and work on a more individual basis than has been possible until now.

Dean Hunsberger said that the assistants will act as intermediaries between the dean's office and the individual departments "in an attempt to strengthen and tighten relations between the two". He added: "We do not want the student to feel that he is just an IBM number."

Each assistant will work with men; Dean Horrigan, sophomore class: Dean Saveried, freshmen and Dean Schumer, juniors. Dean Hunsberger added that they hope to have one more assistant dean for next year's freshmen. Each dean will remain with his class through its years at the university.

Dean Horrigan stated that along with this new program, "We hope to be able to recognize student's outstanding academic achievement in the awarding of fine books."

Dean Hunsberger will introduce the new assistants at the College of Arts and Sciences convocation Thursday in the Cage. The deans will meet separately with their classes later.

Student Tutors Needed

The Northern Educational Service has invited UMass students to participate in its tutoring service given to high-potential students of culturally deprived groups.

NES is a voluntary, non-profit organization dedicated to providing a new chance for junior high school and high school students whose ability and motivation are being insufficiently challenged and refined.

Mr. Michael Behnke will be here to discuss the program with all interested students this Thursday at 8 p.m. The meeting will be held in Council Chambers B.

Help will be given in all fields on the high school level, especially in English, math and French.

All students who are willing to give up just a couple of hours once a week to serve the cause of civil rights in a practical way are urged to attend. If anyone is unable to attend the meeting or desires any further information, please call Susan Webber at 401 Lewis.

ATTENTION SENIORS!
Dean Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences, has asked that the seniors in arts and sciences do not go to the convocation for arts and science students but instead to the placement convocation which will be held at the same time—11:15 on October 1. Senior women should go to the Student Union ballroom and senior men should go to Bowker.

APO Convocation Held

by Pat Petow

The Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held its second annual Foreign Students Convocation Wednesday evening, September 23rd in the Middlesex - Nantucket Rooms of the Student Union. Greeting the students and speakers was President Martin Rosenberg of APO, who in his introductory welcome cited the national men's service fraternity's affiliation with the ideals and goals of the Boy Scouts.

Dean of Students William Field spoke briefly to the students stressing the University's purpose as a public land grant school to serve the needs of the people. Reviewing its role in a "proud tradition of public service," he outlined investigation of new knowledge, instruction at the undergraduate level, and specialized preparation in professional fields as three immediate responsibilities.

After Dean Field, Mrs. Evelyn Russell, the newly-appointed foreign student coordinator, (whose office is Machmer E 14) summarized the mutual requirements of her efforts and of the students as undertakings in: coordination, communication, cooperation, contact, and concern. Dean of Women Helen Curtis addressed the students on the value of friendships both with American students and among themselves. The need to seek acquaintanceships was strongly emphasized by Mr. Jack Welles, the director of housing. Mr. Welles informed the assembly that plans were being made to repeat the tour of Sturbridge Village for foreign students as was given last year by the Amherst Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Russell announced an invitation by Faith Church, Old First Church, and the World Affairs Council of the Connecticut Valley for an international weekend program in Springfield on October 17. Students interested in spending a night with an American family and touring Springfield College and the city of Springfield are requested to contact Mrs. Russell.

At the conclusion of the formal convocation, after naming his country, each student introduced himself, and the meeting adjourned to the Berkshire Room for refreshments.

French Films Presented

A series of French films will be sponsored again this fall and winter by the French Corridor at the University.

The classic movies with English subtitles will be shown on Wednesday evenings at 7:45 in Bartlett Auditorium, and will run for two hours. The programs are open to the public as well as to UMass students.

Included in the series will be "The Testament of Orpheus," Oct. 7; "Forbidden Games," Oct. 14; "Zazie," Nov. 4; "Rules of the Game," Nov. 18; "That Naughty Girl," Dec. 2; "The Puritan," Dec. 16; a film to be announced later, Jan. 6; and "The Wild Cat," Jan. 13.

Tickets for the series are available by subscription only, and may be purchased by mail order from the French House, R.S.O., Student Union. Tickets may also be obtained at the Student Union until Sept. 26 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4 to 5 p.m. daily. In addition, tickets will be sold at the door before each showing at subscription rates.

Water Show For Visitors

Friday, October 2, wives of Massachusetts Selectmen will be given a demonstration of Naiad skills and routines at the WoPE pool from 11:30 to 12 noon. While the selectmen are working at the nearby Schine Inn their wives will be visiting our campus for the entire day.

According to Greek mythology naiads were nymphs who lived in the water and gave life to it. The Naiads who inhabit the WoPE pool certainly give life to that body of water as any of those who saw last year's performance of "The City" can very well testify. An even better performance is expected of the Naiads this year, when they present their annual program late in March.

Refund Issue Decided

To the editor,

I would like to thank Dean Field for the letter I received from him regarding my comment in Tuesday's Collegian on "heatless studying." In my letter, I advocated a room refund for all Orchard Hill residents. While sympathetic to my proposal, Dean Field explained in detail why such a plan was impossible:

"Residence halls are constructed by funds raised by the sale of bonds by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority, an agency created by the state to accomplish this purpose. The Building Authority has no money of its own other than the rent revenue collected from the occupants of buildings which it constructs. At the time that any building is begun the total cost of this construction is matched very carefully to the rent revenue in order that the two may be in proper balance. The fact that the Orchard Hill complex was delayed by a succession of difficulties is one which the Building Authority had very little control over. Their obligation to meet their bond payments is still there and the revenues from rent received are committed to this purpose . . . The response we can best make to your problem is to move ahead as rapidly as possible to complete these residence halls with all the additional and special equipment which has already been purchased, in order that you may have the best possible living experience through the year."

I am sure this will answer the questions of all students interested in a refund. Although the idea is one I would like to see executed, I now realize that under the present system of building construction, it is quite impossible.

Sincerely,
Vicki Brydon '67

Free Enterprise System

If one desires to observe the dynamics of free enterprise and the rights of the individual, let him gaze at the current business war which is dividing the University into two incompatible factions, and threatens to engulf the entire community in civil war. It involves, on the one hand, the monopoly head, philanthropic leader as well as shrewd businessman employing hundreds of loyal laborers—Joe, the Pizza Man. Joe, the original founder of the portable restaurant has originated many new, delectable dishes, such as the meatball submarine sandwich with, get this, four meatballs. Joe came up the hard way, starting with an ice cream wagon, switching to a popcorn stand, then with bank capital invested in his new plan, buying his famous bus, a 1932 Mack, with very little bark left. Today, Joe runs a profitable business, a business which is now threatened by, as Joe says, "that young upstart".

The case in point is "that young upstart" Bob, the Grinder Man. Bob is a specialist. He feels, as economical experts do, that today's society is becoming specialized, so he will flow with the tide. Bob is coming up the hard way; he has a little truck, a mentally deficient cook, and must remain in back of Joe's bus. But Bob is a determined businessman. He feels that if one wants a grinder (not a submarine—that, feels Bob, is the inferior name of Joe's sandwich) one will come to Bob, a specialist. If one wants french fries, Bob will try to sell him a cold cut grinder. If one wants a hamburg, Bob will try to sell him ham and cheese grinder. Service with a smile. The simple question tion remains -- will the famous service of Joe's Pizza Bus outlast a ham and cheese grinder. Economic experts are observing carefully.

Lonely Weekend Solution

To the Editor,

I was so impressed by the Collegian's statement of its editorial policy that I decided to reply to the article signed "A Feminist".

I doubt very much that there are "many young attractive and interesting girls on campus who are sitting listlessly in their rooms, wishing there were something else to do on a weekend night besides study". I do not doubt, however, that there are many young and attractive self-interested girls on campus with nothing but the usual to do on weekends.

Think it over, girls; do only the beautiful members of your sex have enjoyable weekends? No, of course not. Those girls who show interest in a boy, and who can make him feel interesting and, by so doing, give him a little more self-confidence are just the ones who have a full date-book. This is one of those so called feminine wiles; but, how many times is it put into use? Stop complaining, lassie; and try using this charm. Don't get me wrong, I'm far from anti-girl; but I do believe that a little encouragement on a girl's part can go a long way to solving that lonely weekend problem. This can of course be carried to an extreme and I'm certainly not advocating this idea. So, girls, if you want a little more of the good times in your life, remember, getting a date is not a totally one-sided affair. Keep those eyes flashing and those lips smiling and keep on knocking on those doors.

Facts Out Of Context Misleading

To the Editor:

Since the majority of our education here at the U. of M. is derived from books, we must therefore read critically and evaluate the validity and relevance of the material we encounter. Therefore, in documented work we place a good deal of faith in footnoted references. However, the danger is that facts out of context are subject to manipulation and may be contorted and interwoven into a cleverly contrived document which actually misrepresents these facts. The result is a factually substantiated work that is grossly untrue and is capable of profoundly influencing some readers' opinions.

At the Student Activities Night, held this past Monday night, there was a book of the caliber mentioned above offered by the Young Republican group on campus. None Dare Call It Treason (Stormer, Liberty Bell Press) is a collection of well annotated facts and quotations pulled from context and grossly misrepresented to support a rather paranoic view of the omnipresence of the Communist conspiracy in American life.

As I do not want to be accused of making baseless charges or of resorting to the same alarmist tactics employed in the book, let me demonstrate by example the clever, half truth method which the author employs. In the chapter entitled "Subverting Our Religious Heritage" Mr. Stormer makes the following statement:

"In 1960 a controversy developed over an official U.S. Air Force Reserve training manual which warned Air Force personel that Communists, their dupes and sympathizers had infiltrated into churches. Church groups protested vehemently and Congress investigated. Richard Arens, Staff Director of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, testified during the hearings as to the evidence of Communist activity in the religious field".

He then continues to document Mr. Aren's testimony to the committee which identified certain leaders of the National Council of Churches with "communist front" organizations. From this Mr. Stormer surmises: "The National Council of Chuhches, its subordinate organizations and the leaders of many of its affiliated denominations and their publications consistently parallel or follow the Communist Party line as exposed by J. Edgar Hoover." This in effect labels the majority of American Protestantism as a "communist front" bent on the subversion of America.

The facts cited by Mr. Stormer cannot be argued with. There was an Air Force manual (Air Reserve Center Training Manual Student Text N. R. 45-0050, Increment 5, Volume 7) which made such a statement and Mr. Arens did say that the National Council of Churches was infiltrated with communists as well as their dupes and sympathizers. It would seem that he has a well documented and very pregnant point.

What Mr. Stormer does not say, though, is that this manual was recalled by the then Secretary of the Air Force Dudley C. Sharp and any support of its contentions denied by him and the Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates in the following statement made in a letter from Mr. Gates to a Mr. Wine, an official of the National Council of Churches:

"I understand you are talking with the Honorable Dudley Sharp, Secretary of the Air Force on this matter and that he has indicated to you the action that is being taken. Needless to say, the manuals have been recalled.

"I am very glad you came direct to us and can only express may very deep regret over the entire incident. I assure you that the unfortunate contents of the manual in no way reflect the attitude of the Air Force or the Department of Defense toward the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States."

This is but one instance in the book where half truth and clever manipulation of valid fact out of context might influence the reader's understanding of the communist conspiracy and lead him to some incorrect opinions concerning one of our major social institutions. The intelligent, critical reader would hopefully not accept what this book has to say. However, there are many to which this book is being distributed that will accept it without question.

I question the integrity of the Young Republicans for distributing this book, which is being obtained in quantity by personal admission of one of the group, from Goldwater headquarters in Boston, without having fully considered the implications of the book and acquainting those to whom it is distributed of its rather alarmist position. I also question the integrity of Goldwater headquarters in Boston for distributing the book in quantity in hopes of swaying votes to the right wing as it can hardly be expected that they would take the time and effort from their campaign to distribute it for other than political reasons. Furthermore, if Mr. Goldwater has personally authorized the distribution of these books as part of his national campaign, I would accuse him of using scare tactics to secure votes for his radical right, anti-communist position.

—Forced Issues—

Dear Sirs:

I am writing this letter to comment upon an editorial appearing in your September 18 edition under the heading "Forced Ideas—A Step Backward?"

First of all, I might say that I do not quite get the gist of what the author is trying to convey. Does he (or she, whichever is appropriate) believe that forcing a person by law to observe a practice which is anathema to him constitutes an abuse of legislative authority? In other words, if I happen to enjoy driving my automobile through a residential district at 100 miles per hour, then any law passed to curtail this type of activity ought not be allowed simply because I do not agree with its provisions. Such a shortsighted view of the legislative function is wholly unbecoming of an intelligent college student.

Secondly, I take umbrage at the notion that any legislation designed to aid a disadvantaged group is governmental paternalism, or places such persons prima facie in the role of wards of the state. In a democracy it is always important that channels remain open for the amelioration of situations which are palpably anachronistic, belonging to a bygone age. To be sure, there were many persons who were allegedly aggrieved by the passage of laws regulating wages and hours, controlling the price of certain utilities, and establishing a system of social security payments. This opposition in itself, however, was not enough to stave off regulation when facts and experience demonstrated well enough that some kind of adjustments had to be made. The Civil Rights Act of 1964 undoubtedly falls into the category of vitally-needed legislation. I think it not unreasonable that Negros were tired of being reminded that Nikita Khrushchev and Fidel Castro could travel incognito throughout the South, enjoying any accommodations which they could afford, while they had to be content with putting up at some out-of-the-way hovel.

The fact that there exist persons who do not wish to extend to all Americans the intrinsic rights of citizenship is sad indeed. But to allow this minority (according to polls almost 70% of the American people favored the Civil Rights Act) to make policy for the nation as a whole would be even sadder. After all, no concessions were made to Negros in the way of reducing taxes or being exempt from conscription; why then should we concern ourselves with the feelings of a few die-hard segregationists.

Author Graham also evinces some concern for the so-called "white backlash" towards wish he feels many Americans are moving. Well, in actuality the term white backlash is a perversion of nomenclature. The highly vaunted backlash is not more than the Northern segregationist vote. It is misleading to think that it suddenly sprang into existence as the antithesis of the widespread agitation for equality before the law. The fact is that it was there all along, lying dormant until another John Kasper came calling.

In summing up I want to make it plain that I believe your reporter has as much right as anybody to express his views. Only the next time ask him not to go about it so circuitously. If he wants to exhort his readers to cast their sympathies with Barry Goldwater, why does he have to hide behind a lot of speciously-drawn logic. Why not have the courage to come out and say what he really feels: that the ultimate solution to our race problems lies not in legislative fiat, but "in the hearts of men."

Others may feel differently, but owing to the fact that it took 100 years after the end of slavery to get some meaningful legislation on racial eqality, and actuarial statistics claim that the average life span is about 72 years, I certainly cannot wait for the painstakingly slow process of civilization to catch up with everyone. Here is one cheer not for men's minds, but for their conscionable lawmakers!

UMass Hosts Guests

High school students from all parts of the Commonwealth will visit the University campus beginning this week for the traditional High School Guest Day Program.

Students representing Massachusetts public, parochial and private secondary schools will attend in groups on the last Saturday in September and three Saturdays in October for informational talks by University officials.

The four programs are scheduled as follows:

Sept. 26, Barnstable, Dukes, Plymouth and Worcester counties.

Oct. 3, Middlesex and Bristol counties.

Oct. 17, Berkshire, Essex, Franklin and Norfolk counties.

Oct. 31, Hampshire, Hampden and Suffolk counties.

The purpose of the guest days is to introduce students — particularly seniors—to the campus, facilities, admissions procedures and courses of study. Information on the University of Massachusetts—Boston, projected for Sept., 1965, will also be available. Parents are encouraged to attend the sessions.

Representatives from the colleges, schools and departments will be on hand for consultation at each session.

Staff members from the Office of the Dean of Admissions will explain the requirements for entrance and the procedures used in judging students for admission.

All participants in the Guest Days program are invited to attend athletic activities scheduled for the days on which they will be here. These events include varsity and freshman football, soccer games and cross country contests.

Lecturer Speaks On Greece In Bartlett

Dr. Nancy Lee Beaty, visiting lecturer in English at the University, gave an informal talk on Greece Thursday night at Bartlett Auditorium.

Her lecture, vividly illustrated with colored slides, depicted the landscape and ancient mythological structures of Greece.

According to Dr. Beaty, "Many villages are still isolated in the depths of mountains and communication remains easiest by sea."

Dr. Beaty also used the slides to show the journey taken by Homer in the Odyssey.

When asked about the feelings of the Greeks towards the Turks, she stated that there was an inborn hate between the two nationalities because of past histories. Equating this factor to the Cyprus situation, Dr. Beaty said no peaceful solution can be found to end a hatred that has lasted over 1,000 years.

Dr. Beaty is a graduate of Wellesley and has taught at Yale University and Dickinson College.

NAIAD TRYOUTS

Naiad tryouts will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 30, and Thursday, Oct. 1, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. An optional practice session will be held on Monday, Sept. 28 at 6:00, during which instructions will be given.

Those who try out will be expected to swim the front and back crawl, sidestroke and breast stroke in time to music.

Unlike many synchronized swim clubs at other colleges, Naiads is run exclusively by its members under the guidance of Miss Esther Wallace, the club advisor.

No previous experience is necessary, and it is hoped that many freshmen as well as upperclassmen will try out.

"Next Time, Bring Friends"

by SHERRY SPEAR

Bob Flanigan, the cut - up of the Four Freshmen, bowed the encore with the rest of the group and then raced up to the microphone to quip, "Next time, invite some friends."

For two hours Sunday, the group, Bob, Bill Comstock, Ross Barbour and Ken Albers—entertained a miniature audience with such sounds as "Route 66," "In this Whole Wide World," "Fools Rush In" and their version of modern music, "Baby Won't You Please Come Home (Yeah, Yeah)."

Opening with a few comments on the Harvard game—which seemed to have captured a goodly part of their expected audience—the group casually mentioned their itinerary, which bounced them from New Jersey the previous night to North Carolina the next day. They generously volunteered to let any interested member of the audience of 500 accompany them.

Quipping, acting and looking as if they were really having a good time, they played a potpourri of good sounds. After, Ross commented on what a terrific sound the Cage produced. This also seemed a rather appropriate name for Curry Hicks since a bluejay was winging its way round the rafters during the performance.

Playing to young audiences must be their favorite. Bill said that of their 165 annual appearances more than 120 are on college campi. Though far changed from the four college freshmen they were in 1950, when the group was founded, they have lasted through the meteoric rise to fame of Twitty, Elvis and now the Beatles.

They don't rely on merely straight songs. Bob sang a version of "Mother, I'd Rather Do It Myself," borrowed from a certain infamous aspirin commercial and scandalized Olive Oil, Bardahl and Mad Magazine. Bill, on guitar, played and wrote "Act III (of a love affair)." The constant interchange of instruments, (the four of them can play a total of seven instruments) is fun to watch but the best is when one plays the bass with one hand and a trumpet with the other.

Ross performed his version of jazz for children in a voice he calls "LeRoy." "Just something I picked up in childhood and kept," he explained. It can best be compared to the voice of Betty Boop with a trumpet back-up by Ken Albers.

Sunday the UMass campus learned why the Four Freshmen have stayed and stayed on the musical scene. As one adult admirer put it: "I don't have any of your albums, but I mean it, you're real good."

Remember—next time, bring a friend.

Opening Game Victory

Redmen Over Coast Guard, 2-1

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Redmen soccer team opened the season in fine form Saturday topping Coast Guard Academy 2-1 at New London, Conn. With a starting lineup consisting of six sophomores in their first varsity game the team's performance is all the more gratifying.

Soph Gary Gibbons of UMass score the first goal of the game in the first period on a 20 yard kick from his wing position. But the Cadets' Hoppe came back to tie the game in the second period. In this same period Redmen Sophomore goalie Lary Martin reeceived a rib injury and Ed Tanner replaced him. Tanner who up until this season had never played the position performed capably in holding the Cadets scoreless. While Martin was out of the game halfback Pete Conlon saved a couple of sure goals when the inexperienced Tanner was caught out of position.

At halftime the score was all tied up 1-1. In the third period Junior Bill Burgess playing his first year of varsity soccer scored what proved to be the winning goal for the Redmen. There was a wild scramble in front of the Coast Guard goal and Burgess opportunistically booted the ball into the net for the decisive goal. The Redmen outshot the Cadets 18 to 15 but the game could have gone either way.

Coach Larry Briggs who was very pleased with the victory felt his defense looked very good but the offense was not as good as he had hoped it would be. Briggs also thought the team's spirit was good and that Capt. Ray Yando did a find job in leading the squad. The team received the normal amount of bumps and bruises but none of the injuries were serious. This victory gives the Redmen a 5-4-1 edge over the Cadets in total games played.

Saturday the Redmen travel to Williamstown, Mass. to play Wiliams College. The Ephmen figure to be one of the three toughest teams the Redmen play this year. Last year Williams won 2-0 and over the years the Redmen have lost 18 out of the 21 games played. UMass has its work cut out in this game but should not be counted out. This team has some fine players and could surprise a lot of people.

On Wednesday, Oct. 7 the Redmen play their first home game versus Trinity.

one at the nine. Palm carried for 3 before Whelchel faked a beautiful line buck and rolled around left end to score unmolested. He then hit Morin for a two point conversion and a tied game.

During this segment of the game Whelchel hit 11 of 15 passes and rushed for 90 yards. Only some late losses as he tried to pass in the fourth quarter hurt both these statisics.

Harvard got the ball and behind 42 yards worth of Poe's rushing, scored, except that McCluskey dropped the ball before he crossed the line, and Mass recovered. Two plays almost cost Mass a safety, so Terry Swanson punted out to the 35. The Crimson drove right back with Poe gaining 12, then going 13 for the score. The PAT was wide.

UMass never got a real good drive after that and with a 4th and 7 at their own 40, Fusia had the club punt, with less than 3 minutes to go. Harvard chewed up some time then punted. Whelchel tried again, but a pass to Morin was bobbled and Jim Driscoll took it away to finish the game.

Whelchel finished with 12 of 20 passes for 126 yards and 68 yards rushing. This amounts to 194 of UM's 300 total yards.

NOTICE

The intra-mural dormitory and independent touch football season will open Tuesday, Sept. 29.

Last year 14 teams competed in the dorm league. This year there will be 30 teams in the dorm league and 10 independent teams.

Non-Credit COURSES IN RELIGION

The United Christian Foundation, under the direction of the Resident Theologian, is offering the following courses in the Fall Semester:

RELIGION AND CONTEMPORARY FICTION A study of motifs in contemporary fiction. The subjects to be studied and the books illuminating them are: Man—The Balcony, by Jean Genet; Morality — Catch-22, by Joseph Heller; Community—Lord of the Flies, by William Golding; Society — One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Next, by Ken Kesey; Human Relations—Another Country, by James Baldwin; the Future — Walden Two, by B. Crimson Speed Prevails

Harvard Upsets Mass., 20-14

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts suffered a heartbreaking defeat to Harvard before over 20,000 at Harvard Stadium on Saturday. With the loss, the Redmen saw their ten game winning streak broken and their vaunted defense torn apart by a ground attack that netted the Crimson 281 yards. The final margin was 20-14 as the deciding score came after the Redmen had tied it up.

The key to the ball game was the speed of the Harvard backfield. All of the starters can turn the 100 in under 10.0. The club used this speed to sweep the ends on quarterback option plays and quick openers throughout the game.

The ball game started peaceful enough with the teams exchanging punts. Harvard got the ball on their own 37 and moved out from there. With the entire backfield of John McCluskey, Walley Grant, Dave Poe, and Pat Conway getting into the act, the Crimson chewed off yardage at a five yard clip. Conway scored from the one as the 63 yard drive took 15 plays. When that score came, there were 3 minutes and 20 seconds left in the quarter. Just two minutes earlier, the Redmen had moved into second on the all-time NCAA list for longest time not allowing a touchdown. They passed Duke at the 599 minute mark before they fell at the 601 minute and 15 second mark. Tennessee holds the all time record, over 900 minutes.

Massachusetts came back well and started to move behind Jerry Whelchel and Bob Ellis. The club was stopped, however, by the defensive play of Gene Skowronski and Jerry Mechling, two outstanding defenders all afternoon. UMass punted as the quarter ended and Harvard got possession on their own 13. Carl Yastrzemski's cousin, Stan, gained three before McCluskey took off around left end on a keeper and sprinted 82 yards for the second TD. He outran all defenders and Dave Kelly's try at the 10 went for naught.

The Redmen came back fighting and dominated the middle section of the game. The team rallied behind Jerry Whelchel who did about all one could ask of him. He started by running six plays to his backfield mates of Ellis. Mike Ross and Ken Palm. Then he opened up himself. He hit Bruno Debiak for 12, ran for five, and then for 21 more. Next he ran for 12 but a penalty cancelled that. He hit Ellis on a screen pass for 13 but still another penalty wiped out the gain. Now it was first and 40 on the UM 35.

Jerry hit Leo Biron for 3, Bob Meers for 14 and Milt Morin for 16. He followed by hitting Meers for 13 more to the Crimson 19. He was dropped for a one yard loss, but hit DeRose on the next play for 12. The drive ended there as DeRose fumbled on the eight yard line.

Massachusetts came out fighting in the second half and moved for paydirt. Palm gained 4 and Ellis 3. Whelchel hit Meers for 11, Ross gained 3 before Whelchel hit Moran for 12. After missing one, he dropped to pass, but took off up the middle in a 38 yard jaunt to the Harvard 4. Four plays later he scored from one yard out. The PAT was wide, but Mass was on the board. Harvard took the kick and ran four of their plays in the quarter.

Mass got it back on their 33, and Whelchel had the men on the move again. He ran for 3, and hit Morin for 13, before Ellis got 9. Jerry got five, Ross got 2, then took a screen pass for 13 more. Mass was on the 17. Palm gained 3 then saw a pass go incomplete before Meers got

Hunsberger cites need for management of growth

by DAVE HARACZ

Seats still set in the cage for Wednesday evening's performance of the Chicago Symphony yesterday held less than 200 of the enrollment of over 5,000 in the College of Arts and Sciences, as Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger described the convocation as an opportunity for students "to learn more about their college."

In a speech reminiscent of those recently delivered by President Lederle and Provost Tippo, Hunsberger emphasized the rapid growth of both the University and the college, but warned that if this growth is mismanaged or not provided with sufficient funds, "mediocrity or worse will surely result."

Citing "Hunsberger's First Law," the dean said that a rapid increase in the quantity of students is a necessary though not sufficient condition for an increase in the quality of students. Wih the increase in applicants over the past few years, he said, University admission policies will naturally become more selective, and a corresponding increase in the quality of the student body will result.

In defense of the administration's handling of the question of graduate-undergraduate emphasis, Hunsberger said that it will be necessary to improve the state universities' output of higher degrees over the coming years to provide instructors for the rapidly-growing institutions of higher learning. To provide the needed teachers, he said, both graduate and undergraduate programs will have to be increased, but will have to be "mutually beneficient."

Calling the argument over emphasis an "extremely circular one," Hunsberger cited increased emphasis on strengthening the undergraduate as well as the graduate program here. The result of last year's conference with the Danforth Foundation, he said, has been the formation of the residential college system now in operation at Orchard Hill and the addition of three assistant deans to handle academic counseling, thus freeing Dean Hunsberger and Associate Dean Wagner for more investigation of curriculum and new programs.

Turning to the old charge of "Publish or Perish," Dean Hunsberger suggested that a more apt slogan might be "Publish or Suffocate," since "publication is teaching with a larger class," and the research, scholarly and creative work required of faculty members is designed to attract ambitious teachers rather than provide a barrier.

In closing, Hunsberger hinted at a "secret" development in the College of Arts and Sciences for next fall and outlined administration plans to provide a co-ordinator of nonwestern studies and the possibility of establishing an exchange program between UMass and a predominately Negro university.

After Dean Hunsberger's speech, Associate Dean Robert Wagner introduced eight of the students in the college who have achieved cumulative averages of 3.8 or higher and announced that the assistant deans in charge of each class will hold meetings of their respective classes at a later date to explain more fully their plans for academic counseling.

SWAP Gets Needed Punch

by PETER HENDRICKSON

The seventh annual SWAP conference, a student and faculty workshop on activities problems, will be held this weekend at the Oak 'n Spruce in Lee, Massachusetts.

Chairman Mike Smith said that the purpose of SWAP is to reveal and alleviate the problems that face the many activities in a growing University.

Smith pointed out that this "off campus and off-the-record exchange of views to try and discover where we are going" has resulted in many constructive innovations.

The first workshop will examine the problems and activities of residence groups, dormitories and the Greeks. Workshop II will deal with communications, the University Image, extracurricula in a growing University and the role of academic departments in extracurricula.

The executive committee noted that the relaxed atmosphere and person-to-person discussions transcend partisan loyalty to organizations. The welfare and excellence of the entire University becomes the prime interest of the conference, Smith said.

The committee's main criticism of past conferences is that an insufficient follow-up on ideas has lessened the potential of SWAP. This year committees will be formed to carry out the recommendations of the discussion groups.

An evaluation of past proposals that have become reality on campus such as classes to be held in dorm complexes, will be published this year. It is hoped that this will concretely demonstrate the value of SWAP.

Speeches will be delivered by Edward Buck, past business manager of RSO; Dr. William Venman, assistant to the provost, and Louis Lyons, trustee of the university.

Virtuoso Montoya Performs

Carlos Montoya, one of the world's foremost flamenco guitar virtuosi, will give a recital at John M. Greene hall, Smith College, Northampton, Friday, October 9.

CARLOS MONTOYA

Montoya, who has revolutionized the flamenco music world by one of the most extensive repertoires of any living guitarist, is one of the handful of masters of the instrument who is able to devote an entire evening's program to the flamenco genre. He is the first guitarist ever to have worked without a singer or dancer, a departure that had flamenco circles humming when the idea was first promulgated. Prior to his departure from the norm, flamenco guitarists generally possessed a rather limited repertoire and one which dictated the presence of other performers to round out an evening's recital.

Like the true performer he is Montoya creates as he goes along. The numbers he will play consist of all his own arrangements and original compositions, based on Spanish Gypsy tradition.

A box office at John M. Greene Hall will be open prior to the concert.

Priest Talks About Birth Control Pill

Noted Catholic sociologist Msgr. George A. Kelly will be the first in a series of speakers to address the Newman Club this year.

Msgr. Kelly will explore the topic of over-population and the birth control pill at the first general meeting of the club next Thursday, Oct. 6, at 8 p.m. at the Newman center.

Msgr. Kelly is director of the New York Archdiocese's Family Life Bureau, a lecturer at St. Joseph's Seminary and Catholic University, and the author of such recent books as Birth Control and Catholics, Catholic Family Handbook and Overpopulation — A Catholic View.

All members and their friends are invited to attend. Membership cards will be available at the meeting.

First C. of Ag. Fair Planned

by ILANA MOTGLEA

A cow with a stomach wall of glass will be one of the many exhibits designed to show off the new face of agriculture this week-end.

Bossy is an ordinary looking creature except for her glass mid-section, which permits viewing of the digestive processes and allows her owner to take samples of secretions by opening her fistulated "door."

A country fair, sponsored by the College of Agriculture of the University will feature representative exhibits from 14 of its associated clubs.

The agricultural week-end on campus is being planned and executed by the students in an effort to replace the Horticultural Show, an annual event which drew as many as 20,000 visitors. The Hort Show was discontinued last year because it was felt that its increased size placed too great a burden of responsibility on the faculty involved.

Official sponsor of the fair is Alpha Zeta, the national agricultural fraternity, but says AZ's chancellor Joseph Keohane '65, "We could never have done a thing without Stoso" (the leadership society of the two-year Stockbridge School).

The young men have planned the fair with the hope of updating the image of agriculture, not only for students and friends of the university but particularly for high school seniors who are of a technical bent. The farmers' numbers are decreasing, but technology in agriculture is a wide-open field.

For students who are coming here for high school day, the fair will feature a wide variety of scientific know-how. Livestock exhibits are scheduled but a wide berth will be given to scientific displays. The latter will include a pesticide study by the Entomology Club, modern design in Landscape Architecture, applications of soil science and many others.

"Born Yesterday" Cast Set

The cast for the University Theatre's first play of the season has been selected.

Starring in Garson Kanin's "Born Yesterday," are Charlotte Werlin as Billie Dawn, Ken Bordner as Harry Brock, Les Titcomb in the role of Paul Verrall and Tom Kerrigan as Ed Devery.

Playing Senator Hedges is Ken Glenn while Mrs. Hedges is portrayed by Paula Norton.

Chuck Interland appears as Eddie Brock and Laura Bishop takes the part of Helen. Phil Bedaw, Judy James, Dave Rosewell, George Dimock and Jim Stockman also appear.

Directed by Harry Mahnken, "Born Yesterday" will open the dramatic season Oct. 22, 23 and 24 at Bartlett Auditorium. Student admission to the comedy is one dollar. General admission this year is $1.50.

Ticket coupon books for all five plays and all 10 films on the University Theatre's schedule are available to students for $4 and to all others for $5. The books are available at the speech Department Office.

French Song Recital At Amherst

Elizabeth Spiro, mezzo-soprano, will give a recital of French Art Songs at Amherst College October 9. The recital is scheduled for the Alumni House at 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. Spiro's program, sponsored by the Music and French Departments at Amherst College, includes works by Gabriel Faure and Claude Debussy. She will also sing the song cycle, "Banalities" by Francis Poulenc, and a cycle, "Chansons Madecasses," by Maurice Ravel for flute, cello, voice and piano.

Mrs. Spiro, regular soloist at the South Amherst Congregational church, has sung programs of popular music for a number of groups in the Northampton-Amherst area, including the Lions Club and the Smith Alumni association. She is the wife of Herbert J. Spiro, associate professor of political science at Amherst College.

Extra Work Burdens Judiciary

Failure of the Senate Men's Affairs Committee to "get around" to selecting Area Judiciary members last spring has resulted in an extra workload for the Men's Judiciary, according to Chief Justice Leonard Charest.

Two of three cases heard Monday involved dormitory misdemeanors, which ordinarily would be under jurisdiction of the Area Judiciaries. Nine students were recommended Monday for one semester of disciplinary probation.

Charest said Area Judiciary will not be hearing cases for three weeks when the Men's Judiciary Bard will handle the work.

Applications for Area Judiciary positions are being accepted through October 10.

ATTENTION

Revelers will surprise a member of the class of 1967 with a red and white jacket in the Hatch on Tuesday at 11:15 a.m. Sue Neet will tap the alternate, her successor, in the traditional manner. Everyone is urged to be in the Hatch to share in the excitement.

Come to Fair! See New Face of Agriculture

by LEW LUCHANS

Presented this year for the first time, the Science in Agriculture Fair seeks to combine the old and the new in the field of agricultural sciences.

Exhibits, to be presented by most of the 22 clubs in the College of Agriculture, will be set up in the rear of the S.U. and Farley Clubhouse. Grinnell arena will be the scene of the Morgan horse and livestock demonstrations. Other demonstrations include the 4-H Club exhibition, dog obedience trials and an animal science show.

Of major interest will be the logging jamboree which will pit the Universities of Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Middlebury, Colby, Dartmouth and West Virginia colleges, Penn. State, the State College of Forestry at Syracuse and the University of Massachusetts against each other. The jamboree will include tree felling, sawing, splitting, scoot loading, pulp throwing, packboard racing and pulp throwing—a frontier form of javelin throwing which requires the contestant to throw a certain size log in the javelin throwing manner.

An exhibit which is sure to arouse a lot of interest is the fistulated cow. Through the side of this cow students will be able to watch the digestive processes of the cow.

The University Equestrian club will demonstrate Morgan horses. The University has one of the best stables of Morgan horses in the area.

Saturday evening the Heymakers will sponsor a square dance. Ralph Sweet of Putnamville, Conn., a well-known square dance caller and owner of his own square dance barn, and his band of fiddlers, banjo players and guitarist will call the dance. There will be a slight charge for this event.

Dr. H. M. Sachar To Address Hillel Foundation

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation will hold a Deli Supper Sunday night, Oct. 4, at 5:30 in the S. U. Ballroom. Dr. Howard M. Sachar, noted educator and a member of the Near Eastern and Judaic Studies Department at Brandeis University will speak on The Lessons of Modern Jewish History.

For the past seven years, Dr. Sachar has been director of University faculty members, the Brandeis University's Jacob Hiatt Institute in Israel. Under the direct supervision of Brandeis Institute offers Jewish Students in the United States a chance to study in Israel for one semester with full academic credit. For all those interested in further information on the Institute program, Dr. Sachar will hold informal interviews Oct. 4 from 4:30 to 5:30 in the Colonial Lounge of the S. U.

Admission to the Deli Supper —which will feature delicatessen meats, potato salad, and beverages—will be 25 cents for members; $1 for non-members.

C. of Ag. . . .

Along with its impressive modernity, there will still be fun in the tradition of county fairs.

For the sports-minded, a Logging Jamboree on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. will pit UM's and nine other logging teams in a junior Olympics of forestry.

Saturday at 8 p.m. the Student Union will rock to the sounds of an old-fashioned hoedown with Ralph Sweet calling. Admission will be 75c.

A number of state dignitaries, including Gov. Peabody and Attorney General Brooke, have promised to attend Saturday.

The fair will wind up Sunday with animal science showings and dog obedience trials.

Med. School Materializes

by MAUREEN GAMACHE

The University of Massachusetts Medical School, created by an act of the state legislature in July, 1962, is slowly and methodically becoming a reality.

Its dean, Dr. Lamar Soutter, and the University board of trustees are now searching for a location.

Many sites throughout the state have been viewed and a decision is expected within a few weeks. Boston, Springfield, Worcester and Amherst have been mentioned as possible sites but many other cities are also being considered.

The acreage and the hospital facilities that would be available to the school are the major concerns of the trustees.

Dr. Soutter was dean at Boston University School of Medicine until 1961 when he left to become the Veterans' Administrations chief of surgery for the Boston area.

After a year of looking, a special committee for naming a dean last December chose Dr. Soutter.

Dr. Soutter has been quoted as saying he expects the first class to include about 20 students. The classes will eventually number about 100 each. Enrollment, he added, should not exceed this because too large classes would destroy the doctor-student relationship.

The dean also stressed the need for more direct contact with patients and fewer hours of formal classes for the students.

P.C.C. Lecturer

The Protestant Christian Council will present a lecture by Mr. Thomas Frazier this Sunday evening entitled "The Contemporary Novel and Religion." The lecture will be held in Bartlett auditorium at 7:30 p.m. with a coffee hour following in Bartlett Faculty Lounge.

Mr. Frazier is eminently qualified to discuss this topic. He is a Ph.D. candidate in religion and society from the joint program of Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary in New York City. Last year Mr. Frazier lectured in a modern novel course given by the UM English department, and he is currently conducting a non-credit religion course in the modern novel.

The University of Massachusetts' Protestant Christian Council is an interdenominational council which has succeeded the Christian Association and is comprised of the five denominational groups connected with the major Protestant parishes in Amherst which have active ministries serving the campus as a whole. It is the aim of the P.C.C. to coordinate and advise the programs of these denominational groups. In addition it will provide increased opportunity for inviting exceptional personalities to the campus.

This semester the P.C.C. has sponsored a very provocative lecture by Mr. Joseph Mathews of the Chicago Ecumenical Institute. It is hoped that the university community will take the opportunity to hear these discussions on questions of immediate importance occurring throughout the school year.

Broken Blossoms

by SEYMOUR RUDIN

The University Theatre Film Study Series opened auspiciously on Tuesday, Sept. 29, with D. W. Griffith's 1919 classic, Broken Blossoms. Film buffs in the audience could relish again the often unintentional comedy in the purple prose of the titles, the wholly intentional beauty in the lighting and camera work, and the unique, fragile loveliness of the young Lillian Gish. Some of them again confirmed one of their secret convictions: that the pantomimic art of the silent film, of which Griffith and Chaplin were the American masters, could, at its best, create visions and evoke atmospheres that have never been recaptured since the advent of sound films in the late 1920's. And one of them, wondering whether Broken Blossoms, with its heavy sentimentality, its crude message of racial "tolerance", its one-dimensional characters, could be meaningfully alive for today's young people, decided optimistically that its filmic values—the exquisite succession of images and moods created by Griffith's pacing, composition, and editing—not only were worth historical study, but had enduring artistic meaning and relevance.

The remaining films in this semester's series, comprising major works of the silent era, promise comparable joys both for nostalgic oldsters and for those young people to whom "film" means the latest Bergman, Antonioni, Resnais, or Hitchcock—and possibly even for those to whom it means Elizabeth Taylor in Cleopatra or Sean Flynn in Son of Captain Blood. Still to come are a Swedish double bill, Stiller's The Treasure of Arne and Sjostrom's The Phantom Chariot, in which one may see the ancestry of Bergman's lighting, the "summer" as well as the "winter" variety, and Murnau's German classic, The Last Laugh, with its still remarkable use of camera movement and its eloquent pantomime by the actor Emil Jannings. And two of the most extraordinary works in the history of the art will follow: Eisenstein's Potemkin, whose "Odessa Steps" sequence remains unrivalled for its virtuoso editing and the cumulative impact of its vision of man's inhumanity to man, and Dreyer's The Passion of Joan of Arc, with its monumentally powerful closeups and the grandeur of its performance by the French actress Falconetti. Beyond these, a group of sound films, including several major documentaries, is promised for next semester.

It is heartening to see films being treated at the University as an art form worth studying. One wishes the series well and looks forward to expanded opportunities for film study in future years.

Chicago Symphony

by LANGDON F. LOMBARD

The Concert Association presented the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night, Sept. 30 at the Cage. Even with 800 seats in the balcony and 1500 seats set up on the dirt floor, many (including the University's president) were forced into setting up their own chairs.

If elements of the evening's program were to be praised, they were scanty indeed. Except for a slight loss of control in the finale of the last section, the "Mother Goose Suite" by Ravel was perfect. The effects, where called for, were properly soft, wattery, and delicate. But why not: a French conductor can perform music by a fellow country-man with ease.

Another praise for the Ravel would be directed to the audience: they learned not to clap between movements as they had so outrageously done in the Brahms.

What the audience did not hear, they must have thought they had. A dearth of string attack in the Schumann Manfred Overture and the Brahms Third Symphony was inexcusable. When the basses and celli are supposed to cry out "in some wild, impetuous struggle for human freedom" and do not, then do not applaud: sit on your hands as you should.

Further, when there is no call in the original score by Brahms for the changes in the tempi Martinon introduced, nor the now- archaic luft pauses used so freely in the final Allegro, do not begin to think you are hearing a true Germanic Brahms, a proper Brahms: you are hearing the German master Frenchified. We should not comment on the failure to observe the repeat in the first movement: only a memorizer of scores would have caught that. The lack of feeling in the Chorale section of the concluding movement should also be without remark.

All of which can bring us only to the Bartok Suite from "The Miraculous Mandarin", a piece which was able to conduct itself for the better part and should have been left to do so in the parts tampered with by the conductor. The loud parts came through (after all, those are pretty hard to quash). Jean Martinon showed plain lack of feeling when unable to adapt to the tonal contrasts of beauty and the consuming savage rhythms in the concluding waltz sequence of the suite.

That the audience did sense something was grossly out of proportion in the encore (Farandole from Bizet's L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2) is possible. That they received their customly asked-for encore regardless of the evening's artistic achievements is definite. That the University needs a concert hall is a certainty. Perhaps the Chicago Symphony will come back then with someone else with a broader view for a conductor.

Congratulations

May I use a small space in our very interesting student paper to congratulate the student body of the University for the very good audience it provided for Opening Convocation—good not only in numbers but good in terms of attentiveness and courtesy. My congratulations also to the Faculty which provided one of our longest Processionals for an Opening Convocation and to the University Band for its excellent music, and a special word of congratulation to the students of the honor societies who although approached very late in the year still turned out a very large proportion of their numbers to provide a very fitting and fine looking honor guard for the Processional.

As usual we owe a word of thanks to the student service organizations who answer so many calls to provide ushers and who do it so well and so courteously. To the above I must add a word of apology to the many students who could standing room only but who still remained inside or outside the assembly area throughout the entire Convocation. Our only excuse is the difficulty of anticipating the size of the audience.

Albert W. Purvis, Chairman
Committee on Convocations and Commencement

Facts, Please!

To the Editor:

Upon reading Mr. Feinberg's "Free Enterprise System" I see some woefully obvious lack of fact. Bob the Grinder Man is hardly a 'young upstart' and, if Mr. Feinberg had been here prior to 1963, he would know that Bob has been selling grinders since 1950. Bob is more concerned with getting married students through school, than achieving a profit. All net proceeds go to the married students. Bob's bus has always been operated under the supervision of students, for the benefit of students, and with the cooperation of students and administrative personnel. Verification of facts please!

More Consideration

To the Editor:

There are many people who feel that they must have personal momentos of every place they go. This consists of stealing various articles from street signs to light bulbs. But some people carry this a little too far when they start stealing books out of the little cloak room, or when they steal an entire sweat suit out of a carelessly locked gym basket.

For a little taken they might never use, they seriously hurt other people. Whoever these vandals might be, they should realize that every person up here doesn't have a mint at home and can't afford to give money away. An entire sweat suit costs a little under $20. There are very few people who can afford to hand out this kind of money for someone else's fun.

For those of you who might be reading this, yes I am bitter, but I think I have good reason to be. I received the surprise of my life when I found my gym locker cleaned out, including a pair of my own sneakers. It may be an old story, but that doesn't make it any easier to bear. Have the young adults of today decended to lowly animals—animals who steal from one another; creatures that can't be trusted? What are we all doing at the University? We could learn tricks like that better in the gutters of the slums. At least there people can rationalize stealing by saying that they don't have any money, or that they need clothing.

"Hopeful for Humanity"

Watch That Applause

To the Editor:

Although a rural institution, the university has endeavored to achieve a reputation as a culturally sophisticated school.

However, after Wednesday night's display of ignorance, one wonders if this is merely a superficial veneer.

Not only did a large part of the audience applaud between movements of the Brahms' Symphony, but continued to do so even after an obvious attempt on the part of Mr. Martinon to quell the response.

Please, in the future, do not applaud between movements of a symphony, suite, concerto or any musical composition written in movements.

LOCKERS

To the Editor:

The lockers outside the University store are specifically there for students who are planning to browse in the store or possibly in the Hatch. They have a specific time limit of an hour and the person who uses them suffers no cost, since the dime he puts in is automatically returned. THERE ARE LOCKERS TO BE RENTED FOR A DAY OR A SEMESTER OUTSIDE THE LODGE for a slight fee. Yet some students have developed a little racket of their own. They put a dime in the free lockers outside the store and keep the key all day or, for that matter, all semester probably regardless of whether or not they're using it. In other words, they claim the use of that locker as a personal privilege. This must be stopped.

Irritated Student

TASTEE TOWER

To the Editor:

Why is it that the residents of Orchard Hill are not allowed to order food and drink from the Tastee Tower, since the new complex is not equipped with vending machines? Why should we be forced to go to another dorm or to the Student Union?

Last Sunday night, for example, when the Tastee Tower truck delivered an order, the driver was informed by an officer of the law that deliveries to the new dorm were prohibited.

What will happen to us here? One cannot live by Commons' food alone.

Fly-tying Class To Be Given Tuesday Evenings.

A course in fly-tying for persons with no previous experience will be taught at the S.U. by Dr. R. Bruce Hoadley, asst. professor of forestry and wildlife mgt., under sponsorship of the S.U. Activities Program.

This course will consist of seven weekly sessions to be held on Tuesday evenings from Oct. 6 through November 24. Each session will last from 7:00 to 9:30 p.m.

Included in the course will be the basic principles and techniques in tying flies commonly used for trout and other fresh water fish. At each session, a lecture covering materials and methods will be followed by step-by-step instructions in tying patterns representing each of the basic types of flies.

This is purely for enjoyment and is expected to be very interesting.

Anyone interested should contact Mary Alden in the S.U Program Office before Tuesday Oct. 6.

Since the class will be limited to six people, it would be advisable to sign up early. All equipment will be furnished with only a minimal cost for the feathers, hooks, and thread.

UM Precisionettes First Appearance At Buffalo Game

The University of Massachusetts Precisionettes Drill Team makes its 1964 debut at Buffalo this weekend. This will mark the second year that group will be an independent organization working with the Army ROTC detachment on campus.

This year there will be many opportunities for the campus to see the girls perform their drill routines. The group has used some of its funds to purchase new navy blue and gold uniforms. They have also been working diligently on new routines to be performed this year. The group hopes to participate in the half-time ceremonies of several home football games as well as the one at URI.

The unit will march in parades in Amherst and in the Western Massachusetts area.

The group is led by Anita Hendalian, class of '65. The drill master is Paul Anderson, a cadet captain. He is assisted by Richard Malloy and Louis Porrazzo. The faculty advisor is Capt. Bruce Nilsson.

The Precisionettes plan to recruit early this month to add to their present number of 31. Their new uniforms and independence, combined with abundant enthusiasm, should make this their best season to date.

VIOLINIST NEEDED for the Operetta Guild's fall production of Pajama Game. Please contact Music Director Paul Bartsch, 700 Webster House, or leave a message on the Old Chapel bulletin board.

Folksingers In Concert

On Sunday, Oct. 4 the Arts and Music Committee will present the second in a series of Music Hours, featuring the folksongs of Lois Levanthal and Nancy Reid.

Lois and Nancy, who are two of the finest up-and-coming folksingers on Campus, will present a program including popular favorites, blues, and Negro spirituals. Although this is their first appearance of the year, the girls have appeared in several concerts and hoots in the past, and will be among those featured in the approaching Soph-Frosh Picnic.

The concert will be held in the S.U. Cape Cod Lounge at 3:00. Admission is free.

Caesura Sponsers Coffee Hour

Students and faculty will have an opportunity to discuss current literary trends this Sunday with Mr. Richard Kim.

Mr. Kim, author of the fast selling novel, THE MARTYRED, will be guest speaker at a coffee hour sponsored by the University's literary magazine, CAESURA.

Many of the English Faculty, and other established writers will be present at this informal gathering: 7:30, in the Governor's Lounge of the Student Union.

CAESURA's editorial board has also announced a new program for students submitting material for publication. A preliminary deadline will be announced at the coffee hour that will allow time for return of material for possible revision before the final deadline.

Other innivations in current writing and in the literary magazine are expected to be reviewed at this first CAESURA event of the year.

Mary Lyons Spanish Corridor

A Dictionary and An Idea

Thirteen girls moved into a coridor in Mary Lyons the same time everyone else did. They looked the same except for a big sign on the wall reminding them that "Aqui se habla espanol". A new experiment in living, less pioneering that than the new dorms but almost adventurous. Everyone had agreed to speak only spanish.

Dictionario became the magic word. Everyone needed one. How to say "There's a real hunk sitting next to me in stat class." Sneaky methods were devised to save time like "Can I say it in English if I speak real fast?"

In less than aa week the walls of every room were covered with lists of everyday words like curtains, dresser and idioms like 'What's new?". The hallway is decorated with postcards and photographs from South American countries. News articles are posted everyday with the news. Special meetings are called to discuss the plans with our Counselor Lorna Sass. Next semester the Spanish corridor will be sponsoring a series of Spanish movies. We hope to hold teas, tertullas and invite everyone who is interested in speaking Spanish, a special table is being set up in the Dining Commons. There is more to the corridor than speaking Spanish—there is the culture of Spain and other Spanish-speaking countires. Under the direction of our advisor, Robert Brown, the girls are planning to attend the concert of guitarist Carlos Montoya at Smith College.

This January there will be a few spaces opened by graduating seniors. If anyone is interested, please leave a note at the Spanish department in Bartlett Hall.

UMies on TV

Ginny Sheinhouse

The possible use of closed circuit TV instruction at the University later this year has been announced by Richard D. Harper, assistant professor of speech.

According to Prof. Harper, the studio off the Bartlett auditorium is the point of origination for the closed circuit TV. Two camera chains and one film chain are located in the studio.

The RF (radio-frequency) distribution system from the studio works two ways:

1. The signals (audio and video) are fed into a rear screen TV projector with a 6' by 8' screen on which the picture is shot in the auditorium.

2. Simultaneously, the signals are sent by coaxial cable, a wire that will carry six signals at the same time to seven of Bartlett's classrooms.

625 students will be able to be instructed at one time by the same instructor. Plans are being made to televise lectures to be held next April.

Prof. Harper directs the crew who are students presently taking courses in TV production.

PROFESSOR HARPER

Prof. Harper is advisor to the Dean of arts and science. He has been executive-producer director for WOI TV, a commerical educational station in Ames, Iowa, owned and operated by Iowa State University.

Intramural Roundup

by HOWIE DAVIS

Monday night's IFC football competition featured a high-scoring Kappa Sig team putting on a 53 point splurge to defeat ATG, 53-0. Sharply contrasted to this offensive might was a tensely faught 2-0 battle in which TC nosed out PSK.

Pete Bernard of TKE broke into the receiving column by catching 10 passes from quarterback Brown as they defeated LCA by a score of 32-6. Brown completed 24 of 30 passes Monday night and his number one receiver, Caisse, caught 14 of them.

Other games saw QTV shading SPE 16-12; TEP winning an offensive battle with BKP 33-20; AEPi dominating over PSD 35-12; and PMD capitalizing on three extra points to beat ASP 21-18.

The dormitories kicked-off their schedule Tuesday night and it saw the first forfeit of the season with the Broncos on top of the Hawks 6-0. At the present there are twelve teams tied for first place including the Wheeler House Trojans, last year's campus champions.

Wednesday night saw the men from TEP taking over sole possession of first place in League A when they shutout TC 21-0. ASP won their first game with a 33-0 route of a gallant ATG team. AEPi was handed their first loss when they were nosed by TKE 13-7. PMD did not allow out by TKE 13-7. PMD did not allow PSD across their goal line in their 26-0 conquest. KS continued their highscoring methods as they eliminated LCA 44-12. Other games saw BKP over ZN 26-12 and PSK over QTV 13-6.

If KS maintains their display of power there is no telling how many individual crowns they could capture. Their quarterback Crane, has completed 49 of 70 passes and thrown 13 TD's. Neary has caught 18 passes second in the league to Caisse of TKE has received 20. The Kappa Sigs show two men behind Ciasse

Booters, Harriers Face Rivals

The University of Massachusetts varsity soccer and cross country teams will face traditional rivals away from home Saturday. The Redmen soccer team will attempt to snare its second win of the season by traveling to Willliams College, while the cross country men will be involved in a tri-meet with Maine and Northeastern in Boston.

Coach Larry Briggs opened with an impressive 2-1 win over Coast Guard. Briggs was pleased with the team's overall hustle and defensive play. Soph goalie Larry Martin (S. Dartmouth) was injured late in the first half and senior Ed Taner (W. Newton) turned in a strong goal-tending performance over the final two periods. Tanner has had no previous goalie experience. Martin missed most of the week's practices with a bruised rib.

Redmen Defense Revitalizes For Buffalo

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts football team, smarting from its first loss in ten decisions, travels to Buffalo, New York, to face the Bulls of the State University of New York at Buffalo. This game will provide little solace for the Redmen, and least of all an outlet for their anger. Buffalo is every bit as rugged as Harvard was.

The team coached by Dick Offenhamer, features 18 lettermen from a 5-3-1 team of a year ago. The two biggest losses from that club were outstanding quarterback John Stofa and tackle Gerry Philbin, now a starter with the New York Jets. The team still has a big mobile line before an improving backfield. The team opened by smothering Boston University, 35-0. Last weekend they too had an Ivy League opponent in the Big red of Cornell. The underdogs from Ithaca held the Bulls to a 9-9 tie, and, in fact, missed numerous oportunities to beat the independents.

Offenhamer seems to have found the quarterback to fill Stofa's shoes in Don Gilbert. Dennis Przykuta is a speedy fullback and good blocker, Dick Condino is a converted wingback who can move out in the backfield, while Dick Vittorini and Tom Oatmeyer will play the wingback slot.

The line features center-linebacker Joe Holly who the Buffalo publicity bureau is boosting for all-star honors. The guards are veterans Greenard Poles and Jim McNally. The tackles are still more veterans in Lee Ratamess and Dom Piestrak. The ends are outstanding senior Gerry Pawloski and Dave Nichols. There is more talent waiting to move in at the first opportunity.

The Redmen would like to show well against one of the top independent teams in the East. The club will probably throw the ball quite a bit this week in an effort to get the edge. This is not to say that the club will by-pass the rushing in the least, but if the going against the Bull line gets tough, then Jerry Whelchel's arm will certainly come into play.

The statistics after the first two games show Whelchel as the leading scorer with 12 points, leading passer with 17 of 30 for a .566%, and the second leading rusher with 82 yards in 22 carries. Bob Ellis is carrying the leading rusher role with 95 yards in 18 carries. Ken Palm is a distant third with 54 yards.

The leading receiver is the superb end, Bob Meers. Last year he pulled in 19 passers. Already this year he has 10 receptions for 130 yards. Milt Morin hauled in four against Harvard to move into second place with 50 yards. John Schroeder and Morin had split the punting chores, but against Harvard Terry Swanson took over the task and booted for a 43.5 average.

However, the two most interesting statistics show the Redmen losing the ball five of the seven times they have fumbled. The opponents have lost but one of their six bobbles. The University also has managed to compile some 122 yards worth of penalties while the opponents have accumulated 40.

The Redmen will probably go with the same team they used in the last two outings. Bernie Dallas will be the center, Larry Spidle and Peter Pietz at the guards, Bob Burke and Dick Kehoe, will be the tackles, while Meers and Morin will hold down the end spots. Whelchel will be at quarterback, Palm and Ellis at the halfs and Mike Ross as fullback.

Aggie Fair A Success

This year's first Science in Agriculture Fair was considered a resounding success. Despite the overcast day and the forecast of mid-day showers, 15 thousand people viewed the myriad exhibits and functions of the two day Fair.

The fistulated cow presented herself very well to the public, and did not balk as people looked into her first stomach and viewed the mysteries of digestion.

The most popular attraction of the Fair was The Sky Worker. The Sky Worker on the Student Union lawn took visitors up into the air for a superb view of the campus and Fair.

Visitors commented on the garden exhibit by the Land Operations Club which featured miniature trees, shrubbery, and a running brook. The hole in one miniature golf exhibit by Turf Management attracted many of the sports minded in the crowd.

Always interested in the oriental and the exotic, the visitors were fascinated by the Entomology department's exhibit of Dr. Smith's collection of moths and butterflies from around the world.

The Floriculture Club drew visitors to its exhibit of floral arrangements for the home, hospital and wedding. Beautiful corsages decorated the front of the exhibit. The 4-H Club Dog Show attracted many dog lovers.

Although it had been rumored that many state dignitaries were to visit the Fair, the only one to make an appearance was the Comm. of Agriculture.

Most important, the show presented well the changing role of agriculture today. It helped to clear up misconceptions about the "Aggie College" and showed it to be a dynamic and integral part of the modern college campus.

Seventh SWAP Weekend Held; Trustee Louis Lyons Speaks

October 2nd, and 3rd, saw representatives of most major campus organizations meeting informally with members of the faculty and administration at the Oak 'n Spruce Inn in South Lee. This SWAP conference was the seventh in an annual series of off campus, weekend get-to-gethers.

Discussion is centered on student activities and related problems and has proved very profitable in the past.

Last weekend's meeting continued in the tradition of stimulating conversation, profitable workshops, interesting speeches and enjoyable recreation.

SWAP's first official function was an after dinner speech on Fri. night by Mr. Edward Buck, former RSO Business Manager. He covered a broad spectrum of campus interests, from dormitory democracy to the need for training programs in all university activities.

On Sat. morning, participants broke into three groups to discuss issues of interest in the areas of Greek life, and men's and women's dormitories. Lunch was topped off by a speech by to the Provost of the University. Dr. William Venman, assistant His topics centered on what he considered to be the qualifications of a college graduate in the field of extra-curriculas.

Saturday afternoon was spent in seminars dealing with communications, University Image, extra-curricula in a growing university and the role of academic departments in extra-curricula.

The speech by Mr. Louis Lyons, popular news commentator and University alumnus and trustee, shone through as the high point of Sat. evening's banquet. Mr. Lyons primarily discussed the role of responsibility, both in government and in University activities. In response to a letter regarding National Newspaper Week, which he received from Collegian Editor in Chief, Scott Freedland, he cited the point that every paper has a publisher who stands responsible for what is printed. The University, there-

Advisor To Special Students

Evelyn H. Russell has been named Special Student Advisor in the Office of Counseling and Guidance at the University.

She is the first person to hold this position on a full-time basis. It was formerly a part-time responsibility of members of the Counseling and Guidance Office.

In her new position, Mrs. Russell will not only assist approximately 225 foreign students here, but will also take part in planning the summer counseling program for new undergraduates. As a member of the staff of the Counseling and Guidance Office, she will assist faculty members in their capacity as student advisors. In addition, she will be available for consultation with individual students who have special problems. These services are open to all UMass students.

Students from the continents of Africa, Asia and Europe, representing nine different countries, have lived in her home. Her interest in international students began when her family "adopted" a Japanese boy through the Moral Adoption Program.

A graduate of Mount Holyoke College, Mrs. Russell received an M.A. degree from the University of Massachusetts.

Fulbright Scholarships

Only 10 days remain in which to apply for Fulbright - Hayes fellowships for the 1965-66 academic year. More than 900 graduate grants to 53 countries are available through the U.S. Department of State's educational exchange program.

Application forms and information for students currently enrolled at the Univ. of Mass. may be obtained from the campus Fulbright Advisor, Dr. W. B. Nutting, Morrill 328 or individual department heads. The deadline for filing applications through the Fulbright Advisor on this campus is Oct. 15, 1964.

Students who wish to apply for an award for study or research, or for teaching assistantships, must have: U.S. citizenship, at least a bachelor's degree by the beginning date of the grant, language proficiency commensurate with the proposed project, and good health.

Selections will be made on the basis of academic and/or professional record, the feasibility of the applicant's proposed study plan, and personal qualifications. Preference is given to candidates who have not previously lived or studied abroad and who are under the age of 35.

Three types of grants are available under the Fulbright-Hayes Act: U. S. Government Full Grants, Joint U.S. - Other Government Grants, and U. S. Government Travel-Only Grants.

Each Full Grant provides round - trip transportation, tuition, maintenance, and health and accident insurance for one academic year of study or research.

For Travel - Only Grants, the United States provides a supplementary travel stipend for a maintenance and tuition scholarship awarded by a university, private donor or foreign government.

Eta Kappa Nu Film Series

This year, the Delta Eta Chapter of Eta Kappa Nu, National Electrical Engineering Honor Society, is this year presenting an outstanding series of films dealing with the basic physical sciences.

These films, many of them prepared under the auspices of the MIT Physical Sciences Study Committee, are unusually lucid, and present substantive demonstrations of fundamental laws and principles.

The films are especially recommended for lower-division students. Juniors and seniors will find them enjoyable and insight-provoking as well.

Among the titles to be offered during the first semester are: Crystals, Approaching the Speed of Sound, Mirror in the Sky, and Periodic Forces.

Showings are in Gunness Laboratory, Room 10, at 11:15 each Tuesday morning.

Prof.-Author To Address Pre-law Club

Guest speaker at the first meeting of the Pre-Law Association to be held at 6:30 in the Middlesex room SU, will be H. Richard Hartzler, Associate Professor in the department of general business and finance and the newly appointed advisor to the Association. His topic will be "Pre-Legal Education".

Prof. Hartzler received his law degree (J.D.) from the University of Indiana in 1955 and has taught business law at the University of West Virginia. In addition, he has written numerous articles in professional and legal manuscripts for a leading publishing concern.

Radcliffe Changes Admissions; Early Decisions Suspended

Cambridge, Mass. (I.P.)—Radcliffe College will withdraw from the early decision plan of admissions for a two-year trial period, according to an announcement by Dean of Admissions Margaret W. Simpson. The withdrawal will affect freshmen entering in September 1965 and 1966.

Under the Seven Sisters Schools' early decision plan, especially qualified students apply to a single college by October 1 of their senior year. They are notified of their acceptance, rejection or deferral Decehber 1, rather than in April.

President Mary I. Bunting and other members of the Armissions Committee have been considering suspending the program for the past several years, but the proposal finally was reviewed by the Admissions Committee on Policy. The major reason for suspending the plan, according to Mrs. Lynwood Bryant, director of Admissions, is that the number of highly qualified applicants for the limited number of places is so large that the majority must be reconsidered at the regular time of admission in the spring.

This places an extra burden on the Admissions Committee, Mrs. Bryant said, which must reprocess the applicants. Furthermore, since only about one-third of an incoming class is accepted under the early decision plan, she said that the program had done little to reduce multiple applications.

Besides placing an extra burden on students who were deferred, the early decision plan also made it difficult for the Admissions Committee to get a balanced picture of all the applicants, Mrs. Bryant continued. She said also that the plan created problems for secondary school counselors who were not sure which students should be advised to apply to Radcliffe under the program.

Wesleyan Changes Major

Middletown, Conn. (I.P.)—Revisions in the requirement for English majors at Wesleyan University have been approved. The revised program will be put into effect this fall.

The new program will require one course in Shakespeare's Principal Plays, and one of the following three courses: Chaucer, Milton or The American Renaissance. In addition, one course from each of the following categories must be taken: Forms, Themes and Genres; Contextual and Historical Approaches, and the Theory and Practice of Criticism.

Other courses, from a group of electives offered each year, may be taken for credit but are not required. All the courses mentioned are one semester courses. A senoor thesis, which may count as one or two courses at the discretion of the department, may also be required.

"What prompted the revisions of the major is a certain degree of dissatisfaction with a purely chronological scheme of requirements," commented Ihab Hassan, professor of English and chairman of the department. "The English department feels that a pattern of requirements, somewhat similar to the critical categories of the current freshman course, reflects in a more realistic way the concerns of the discipline of literature."

Wesleyan also announced that members of the College of Letters will no longer take their comprehensive exams at the conclusion of the junor year. The exams hereafter will be administered shortly before Christmas of the senior year.

The aim of the revision is to bring College policy more in line with changes in the university while maintaining the unique features of the College, declared a spokesman for the College. He cited the change in policy concerning honors and distinctions as a factor in the changing of the exam schedule.

Previously, students applied for honors and distinction. The faculty then either accepted or rejected the applications. Now the faculty proposes outstanding students for honors and distinction. Under the former system most members of the College of Letters applied for honors. Most of the senior year was spent in writing the thesis.

The new system will offer more work and faculty guidance in writing the thesis in the senior year. Only those seniors who have been recommended will be considered for honors.

Another major factor in the decision was the limited amount of time members of the College of Leters had in which to prepare for the examination. The sophomore year is spent largely in intensive language study and in Europe.

Under the old system, the whole of European tradition had to be covered in one year with the tutors. The new schedule will allow more time for preparation. It will also permit enlargement of the College reading list.

Juniata To Extend Dean's List

Huntington, Pa. (I.P.)—Juniata College has arranged to "extend the range of recognition for academic achievement" without detracting from the prestige of its Dean's List of Distinguished Student.

The faculty has approved a proposal from its Academic Policy Committee which will provide for a Dean's First Honors List and a Dean's Second Honors List. Those on the first list will need to attain the same average as presently required for the Dean's List (3.75 or better) while those on the second would have averages between 3.40 and 3.74.

Action was taken after the committee described the policy of citing students for academic achievement as "conservative." The request for the Academic Policy Committee to consider a second honors list was presented originally by the Student Senate's chairman of educational affairs after last fall's pre-opening student leadership conference.

Recognition at Juniata has been accomplished through its Honor Society, commencement honors, and the Dean's List of Distinguished Students. However, the Dean's List has included only about 25-35 students, or less than four per cent of the enrollment. The committee agreed with student opinion that a second list would be "a reasonable target for some who could not quite reach the top level."

SOMETHING OLD

by John and Marty

In the first issue of Aggie Life (known today as the Massachusetts Collegian), the editor wrote what he considered to be the present achievements and future goals of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. While at the time the M.A.C. was only twenty-eight years old, the article still has pertinence for our University, which is now 101 years old. We suggest that in reading the following excerpt you insert "U. Mass." for "M.A.C." (And while John doesn't, I suggest that you add

SOMETHING NFW

"women" and "she" everytime you read "men" and "he."). The editor begins with a discussion of the place of Aggie colleges in the nation today (i. e., 1890):

"From small and imperfect beginnings these Agricultural Colleges have risen to their high state of efficiency. Public sentiment has gradually awakened to the need of just such colleges for the education of our young men, and the appropriations for their support have been constantly growing more generous . . . Although agricultural education may have seemed at times to stand still, it has nevertheless . . . started forward again with renewed energy.

"M.A.C. has been singularly fortunate in securing the best instructors, and has been favored from the start with an almost unbroken succession of men eminently fitted for the duties which they have been called upon to discharge. Add to this a series of generous Legislatures, and we have the conditions best united (for) progress." (We wonder if Mr. Walsh has read this.)

The editor goes on to state that ". . . new conveniences for study and experiment have been furnished" and that ". . . on every hand there are evidences that the spirit of progress has been actively at work." But to end on a note of optimism, the Aggie Life editor leaves us with a warm glow of pride when he states, "With a good Faculty; generous support from the public; and a good class of students, it would indeed be strange if we did not succeed."

Amherst Community Opera "The Devil's Marksman"

On Friday, October 16 and Saturday, October 17 at 8:15 P.M. in Amherst Regional High School, the curtain will go up on what may prove to be the most exciting work ever produced by Amherst Community Opera: von Weber's "Der Freischuetz" ("The Devil's Marksman").

Although the overture is heard frequently, the plot is relatively unfamiliar. Based on an old folktale, reaching back to the twilight of the race, it deals with the simple life of huntsmen and villagers, the woods and the chase, over which preside mysterious powers, and where supernatural things may go on in the woods and the glens.

In such communities, so dependent on hunting, perfect marksmanship is an enviable possession. If not come by naturally, it might be possible to obtain it with the help of the Black Huntsman, Samiel, the Evil One himself. A forest ranger, in the proper place and with the correct incantations, may summon Samiel and cast in his name seven bullets of infallible accuracy, six of which will hit whatever he wills. Samiel always retains control of the seventh. The bullets are called Freikugeln ("free" bullets) and the man who uses them a Freischuetz. The price is his immortal soul, delivered at the end of three years, unless he can find another huntsman to take his place, in turn supplied with the magic bullets.

In the 1964 AMCOP version, conducted by Edwin London, Samiel will be played by William E. Kennick of Amherst, with the following singers: Agathe, Dorothy Ornest of Amherst; Annchen, Roberta Cowell of Cummington; Max, William LaFond of Springfield; Caspar, George King of Springfield; Cuno, Leon Barron of Amherst; Prince Ottokar, David Hartwell of Amherst; the Hermit, Roger Dods of Southampton; Killian, Robert Berglund of Amherst. The chorus will be sung by people from Amherst and surrounding communities augmented by singers from the Smith College Glee Club and the Amherst College Glee Club, both of whose directors have been assisting in preparing them. The figure "seven" shattered by a bullet, which will shortly be seen on fliers and posters, was drawn by Ellen Johnson of North Amherst.

Tickets will go on sale Monday, Sept. 28:: by mail from AMCOP, Amherst; in person in the lobby of Jones Library auditorium daily except Sunday from 3-5 P.M., and by telephone at the same hours.

KNOW YOUR UNIVERSITY — THE FLYING REDMEN

The University of Massachusetts championship drill team, the Flying Redmen resumed practice this week after the summer vacation. The Redmen, under the command of AFROTC Cadet Major Carlton Stidson are widely known throughout the Nation for their distinctive brand of drill. Over thirty AFROTC cadets presently comprise the team.

Organized in 1953, the Redmen immediately jumped into first place in the New England and New York State area. The team has held the title of New England Champions ever since. The only exception was in 1959 when they placed second by only 0.5 of a point.

Last year the Flying Redmen gained regional and national recognition for their performances in the Area A-1 Regional Championships held in New York, the Annual Cherry Blossom Festival held in Washington, D.C., and the Pershing Rifle Regimental Invitational Competition held in Boston.

The Area A-1 Regional Competition saw the Redmen successfully defend their New England Championship for the fifth year in a row. They have won this competition twelve out of the thirteen years it has been held.

In placing so high in regional and national competitions the Flying Redmen have earned the distinction of being the finest drill team in the history of the University. With almost the entire first team returning to action the Redmen are certain to hold onto this honor.

Free Student Media?

As our administration busies itself expanding its image-building program, it is beginning to be painfully obvious that student publications—especially the Collegian — are likely to become victims of a very paternal form of control.

In fact, if what is rumored comes true, we, along with Yahoo, Caesura, Index and the student handbook, as well as WMUA, will be "supervised" by a board of largely-administration-appointed, well-meaning, conscientious, devoted, and sincere people whose sole stated purpose will be to make sure that we are all one big happy image.

Some think that such a maneuver (and it has happened to other publications in places such as Colorado) will mean that your campus newspaper will be censored. This is not true. The fact of the matter is that your newspaper, under the conditions described, will simply cease to exist AS A NEWSPAPER.

It is worth pointing out that the most obvious driving force behind this move to control us comes from the Office of University Relations. This title is a euphemism for "Publicity Office," and publicity means projecting only the "good" side of something to achieve a specific end.

A newspaper, by definition, doesn't project an image. It only reflects what is happening. If reality means 50% good and 50% bad, this it reports. No more, no less, A so-called newspaper which becomes an arm of the publicity bureau ceases to be a newspaper and becomes, instead, a promotional handout.

If the Collegian should fall under administration control, we should make sure that two things are brought to pass:

1. To signify the change from newspaper to handout, our name should be changed.

2. All students now working on the Collegian should be put on the UMass payroll, charged to the account of the Office of University Relations.

We may, unless we are very fortunate and perserver-ing, lose our newspaper, but we should make certain that student funds and student efforts don't support something that no longer belongs to us.

University Image

Currently, the no. 1 word at the University is "image." In all phases of campus life the students and faculty are urged to present a better image of the University. There is a strong endeavor to produce a public picture of UMass as a thriving university intent upon scholastic and athletic excellence.

To a large extent, such an impressive image of the University has already been achieved. Last fall the undefeated Redmen football team with its superb defense not only won the Yankee Conference, but gained national prominence in the form of two bowl bids. In the academic field success was just as sweet. Defeating all five opponents, the college bowl team netted the University $10,500 in scholarship funds, plus nationwide publicity. There is a strong indication that in the coming two semesters UMass will repeat its outstanding endeavors of last year.

Concern with a better University image is beneficial so long as it coincides with the cultural advancement of the student body. However, there is a strong element of danger in too much stress on public image. The possibility exists that the services of the University might begin to cater more to public image than to the needs of the students and faculty. Over-emphasis on public image could bring such detrimental practices as control of student publications to prevent any unfavorable news from leaking out to the public. A second consequence of pre-occupation with public image could come in the form of stricter disciplinary measures so as to make examples of offenders without investigating thoroughly the circumstances involved. Perhaps, the worst consequence that could ensue would be an overall stress on conformity without any regard for personal initiative or expression.

In short, a better image of the University doesn't merely entail keeping blemishes from the public's eye. Rather, it is hoped that the concern for a better University image will be guided by careful judgment so as to correct any discrepancies and advance both students and faculty to a new level of individual achievement.

NEW SOLUTION

To the editor,

We have been informed that the completion of the Orchard Hill Complex was delayed by a series of strikes and other unforeseen circumstances.

I would like to call to the attention of Dean Field, Mr. Wells, and the foreman of the J. M. Walsh Construction company, and any others who may have had anything to do with the construction of these dorms, that the Civil Engineering Department held a conference this past weekend. The theme of their conference was THE CRITICAL PATH METHOD. This method enables contractors to meet completion dates even if work must be stopped due to strikes or other unforeseen circumstances.

Let us hope that these men will look into this method, so that next fall those students who will be moving into the new dorms on the southwest corner of campus won't have to live in the tents which are currently being set up behind the Student Union.

RETALIATION

Dear Editor Sir:

In reply to comments made in a previous article concerning the night-time activities of male Orchard Hill residents, we would like to make a few retaliatory remarks.

The binocular use is not confined solely to the male gender. Traces of telescopic vision have also been seen protruding from the south side of Emily Dickenson House in the Orchards. But this is not all! How can a male student help but be attracted to this dormitory where the occupants thereof constantly bombard the male members of Webster House with flashes of lights, shrieks, calls, and signs?

Thus we appeal for the reconsideration of charges which were posted in this previous article.

Thank you,

Webster House-North Side

Act Your Age

To the Editor:

Is there any democracy left on this campus? I have lived in Grayson Dorm for three weeks, and tonight I was subjected to an animalistic manhandling as I tried to exercise my inherent constitutional right, that of participating in an open and free election. Candidates grabbed at my shirt, waved cards and banners in my face, and shoved me as I attempted to reach the voting area. Everyone asked me for whom I was voting, and when I announced that I was voting for a write-in candidate, Rangel, his opponents yelled (between shoves), that write - ins were strictly disallowed. They claimed that Rangel was a fictitious protest candidate not worthy of my vote, and that he waged a shady and dishonorable campaign.

My only question is, Who waged a shady and dishonorable campaign? Electioneering right outside the voting area by these "exemplary students" who are to become our leaders does not impress me as honorable. Come on Grayson, come on UMass, let's act our ages! Let's show that we are trying to become capable and responsible adults!

Student Freedom

The peremptory closing of Student Union facilities two weeks ago brings into focus an issue of deep importance, not only to the student body, but to all who would envision Provost Tippo's "Great University". The issue is one of administrative assumption of the students' role, and the curtailment of their freedom. It is not enough that the public necessity and convenience were subordinated to the expediencies of a well attended Convocation, but to add insult to injury, this happened and was permitted to happen, in the student owned and, supposedly, student governed Union. This is not an isolated abuse of this student facility.

Increasingly, Union space and facilities have been pre-empted by the administrative function, or denied to student activities in favor of more profitable off-campus groups. The University Store, while having a supposed service function, has ceased to purchase used student texts, preferring to team up with an outside commercial interest, with a resulting depression of prices paid to students for their books. Nor need we destrict our view to Student Union facilities. In Student Activities, a well placed individual has advocated policy changes and "implementation of procedures to ensure increased control over student activities."

These observations are not intended to antagonize the Administration — not any more this than were some of Provost Tippo's observations intended to antagonize faculty or fraternities. Rather, we wish to suggest that were our student leaders to set aside the various rivalries and jealousies that so characterized last year's Senate, were they to set these aside and exercise determined, mature and responsible leadership, perhaps student government might become a truly meaningful expression. We believe that the Administration will cooperate with and support such responsible leadership.

We have a right and a responsibility to demand that those who seek to represent us make their positions clear and public, that they stand on a platform of principle and program, rather than one of personality. In view of our residential system of representation, it is not impractical to suggest that our candidates publish, on the bulletin boards of their proposed constituencies (a typewriter and a couple of carbons will serve admirably), intelligent and responsible statements of their positions on the problems which confront us, and their intentions for seeking to meet them. As additional food for thought, we might suggest the disproportionate (25%) increase in the price of Sunday luncheon in the Dining Halls.

Our responsibility will not end with the ballot box; it will begin there. We must require that our elected representatives keep faith with their campaign promises and their constituencies. Should they cease to exercise the mature determination for which we have elected them, we must excercise our constitutional responsibility to recall them from office and replace them with others who will serve with integrity and honor. Nor should it be inferred that we have not had such in the past. Such distinguished Senators as Judy Crooker, Maureen Flanagan, Don Haynes, Ross Jones and Bill Landis come readily to mind. It will be through such as these that we preserve and extend the student freedom that is so vital to the growth of a truly Great University.

Yan-Con Title To Continue

A championship in football will continue in the Yankee Conference this year despite earlier reports to the contrary, a statement by the presidents of the six New England state universities revealed. Massachusetts is favored to retain its title.

The presidents first met in June at the annual meeting in Amherst and continued to consult over the summer months regarding the problems of financial aid to athletes. They reported that they have not yet reached agreement on all aspects of the program and will discuss it further at the next meeting.

The statement, which was released by Dr. Francis H. Horn, president of the University of Rhode Island, follows:

"The Presidents of the six New England State Universities constituting the Yankee Conference have continued to consult over the summer regarding the problems of financial aid to athletes which were discussed at length at their meeting on June 26 at the University of Massachusetts.

"They are deeply concerned about finding a formula for limiting the amount of financial aid available to athletes that will be acceptable to all six universities with their diversity as to enrollment, tuition rates, and emphasis on different sports in Yankee Conference competition. The Presidents considered the matter most recently at a special meeting, but have not yet reached agreement on all aspects of the problem. The subject will again be a major item on the agenda for their next meeting.

"In the meantime, no change will be made in either the provisions for Conference participation in all sports or in the present handling of financial aid, by which any limitations on a university are self-imposed. Consequently, Conference competition in football will continue during the current season as in the past, contrary to reports which appeared in the press following the meeting in June.

Soccer Team Downed By Williams, 2-1

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts soccer team journeyed to Williamstown Saturday to contest the Williams College Ephmen. The Redmen came away on the bottom end of a 2-1 score, but played a fine game. Soph Larry Martin, who could be the best UMass goalie in many a year, played another good game.

Williams' Wilson opened the scoring in the first period. However, Kevin Lyons, center-forward for the Redmen, took a pass on the right and the two-year lettermen booted his shot past the Williams goalie for the tieing goal.

In the third period Williams got the winning score on a shot by center-forward Upton, who played very well for the Ephmen. The Redmen put the pressure on in the last ten minutes of the game but were unable to score again. The final score read Williams 2, UMass 1.

The Ephmen outplaying the Redmen in mid-field had 22 shots with UMass making 16. Coach Larry Briggs felt Capt. Ray Yando played one of his best games, and that halfback Don Johnson looked very good. UMass is now 1-1 for the season.

Wednesday afternoon the Redmen play their first home game against Trinity College. The Bantams from Hartford, Conn. won last year 5-3. The game will be played on the lower athletic field at 3:00. Saturday the Redmen meet UConn in a big Yankee Conference game. This home game will start at 10:30.

by kicking off out of the reach of Phil DeRose who caught up with it in time to be dropped on the Redman 8. Mass was forced to punt from this situation and Buffalo got the ball back around midfield. Gilbert carried to the 21 and a play later hit Jim Dunn on a 19 yard scoring strike with Ocsodal converting.

UMass now trailed for the first time in the game, but only for four plays. On that fourth play, a first and ten at the Mass 43, Whelchel faded to pass and hit Milt Morin close to the Buffalo 45. It seemed like a short gainer until Milt got up a head of steam. He ran over two defenders as well as one of his own men, cut back across the field, outran several more Bulls and dragged the last two into the endzone. Whelchel again converted and the Redmen led 24-20 with still about six minutes left in the third quarter.

Then things really got hot for the visitors. Buffalo took off again, but an interception by Morin killed the threat at the Mass 41. Mass drove right back as Whelchel hit Morin for 12 and then rolled out to the left on a 27 yard kickup. Ross fumbled, however, and the Bulls recovered. Mass held and Edwards punted to the Redman six. After gaining a first down, the club was forced to kick into a brisk wind. That and a wobbly kick off the toe of Jack Schroeder combined for a 3 yard loss. Gilbert engineered the move with the aid of his keeper play only to fumble on the 8 into the hands of Ken Palm.

Mass. couldn't move so Schroeder took a deliberate safety to get kicking room. With the score 24-22 Morin kicked out of danger only to have the Bulls breathing down After a few short gainers, Gilbert hit Morin at the 23. On the the Redmen's neck immediately. next play Dennis Przykuta fumbled and Dave Kelly was there with the elusive pigskin.

Mass set out to kill the last minute on the clock. A delay of game penalty set them back five, but Whelchel picked up 9 on the next play. This caused some concern because of a penalty on the play. Did they want it to be first and 23 or second and six? They chose the later in hopes they could hold the Redmen which they did, but they never got the ball as time ran out before the ball was punted. Thus ended one unusual contest for the Redmen.

Gilbert ran for 112 yards and threw for an equal number, and this was supposed to be the weak spot on the team. Whelchel 126 yards passing and 25 running in another good game. Palm led UMass rushers with 80 yards in 11 carries. Meers had three receptions and Morin two as both continued their fine work. Gerry Pawloski pulled in five for the Bulls.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

Playing heads up, intelligent football, Massachusetts staved off a last minute rally and edged Buffalo, 24-22. The Redmen put themselves back on the winning trail by capitalizing on Buffalo's mistakes, while displaying a well balanced ground and aerial attack. Once again it was the versatile Jerry Whelchel whose passing, running, kicking, and faking kept the defense frustrated, while the remainder of the backfield made themselves a respectable threat. Ken Palm proved that UMass does have a back who can carry a football more than three or four yards without fumbling, while Mike Ross displayed the function for which the fullback position was created. All this was done versus a big, rugged 220 pound line, which had allowed only nine points in two previous games.

Completely monopolizing the first half, the Redmen appeared to be on their way to an easy victory. Not only was the offensive unit decimating the enemy line, but the defensive unit, riddled the previous week against Harvard, appeared revitalized. Buffalo sustained a drive which carried to the Mass two yard line. Suddenly the refensive line stiffened, and in three plays the "Bulls" were back on the 3 yard line. Suddenly the defensive line sweep just managed to hit paydirt. This last play saw Bernie Dallas shaken up and incapacitated for the remainder of the game.

Bernie's agility and spirit were sorely missed in the second half. Buffalo's offense suddenly caught fire, and led by quarterback Don Gilbert swept to a 20-17 lead. However, Whelchel and company were not discouraged, and managed to put the Redmen back in front to stay. John Schroeder's unique play giving Buffalo the two point safety, in order to prevent a potential touchdown, was the greatest innovation to hit UMass since the forward pass.

It is quite evident that the defensive unit is not the inpenetrable brick wall of last year's undefeated squad. This in itself has put a great deal of pressure on the offensive team, which for the most part has performed admirably. Who would have imagined "big Milty" running like a "Jim Brown?" Yet the 245 lb. end refused to be brought down by less than three men. At the same time Bob Meers, having suffered a death in the family earlier in the week, played the game in a fine style of which his father would have been more than proud.

Next week the Redmen take on the Huskies of UConn, a team less than successful in their previous outings, but not to be taken lightly.

Redmen Offense Upends Buffalo, 24-22

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts scored a 24 - 22 triumph over the State University of New York at Buffalo in as exciting a ballgame as anyone would want to see. The game matched a pair of high flying offenses that moved up and down the field at will.

The stars would have to be the respective quarterbacks, Jerry Whelchel and Don Gilbert. The former had two TD passes but the latter was equally as impressive as the former as he accounted for all but 72 yards of the total offffense the Bulls produced.

After the Redmen ran a series of plays and punted, the Bulls were off and running. The drive came to a halt at the Redman 35 when Bob Meers picked off a pass and returned it to the Buffalo 44. With Ross gaining 12 yards the club moved inside the 20 but there the drive stalled and Milt Morin tried a 37 yard field goal that just missed.

UMass then got a break as Bob Edwards fumbled a snap from center on a punt and tried to pass. Unfortunately his intended receiver was a guard. This cost him a penalty plus the loss of a down and the Redmen had the ball on the Buffalo 14. Ken Palm carried the ball to the 2 and two plays later Ross crashed over for the score. Whelchel added the extra point and it was 7-0.

Buffalo went through the motions and punted to Mass. Palm swept around left end at his own 44 and was knocked out of bounds at the Bulls' 8. Three plays netted 3 yards and Jerry Whelchel booted a field goal of 22 yards and all was fine in the small but noisy UMass section.

The joy was short lived, however, as the Bulls took the kickoff and moved straight down field for a touchdown under the leadership of Gilbert. The QB actually made the big gainer himself by picking up 13 yards from the 15 to the 2. Edwards carried the ball over for the score, and Joe Ocsodal, who kicks them with the side of his foot soccer style, made the extra point, and it was 10-7.

Bob Ellis eludes Buffalo All-American Candidate Joe Holley (52), and goes for the first down.

Mass took the kickoff and came right back with a score as Whelchel completed three passes, two to Meers, the last one going for the score. It was a 22 yard toss that Meers took inside the five and carried over. Whelchel, having a good day with the toe, booted the conversion and Mass. was on top by a seemingly safer 17-7 margin.

That completed the scoring and playing in the first half except for a Gilbert to Pawloski 19 yard gainer.

The Bulls were definitely upset at this margin and came out in the second half ready to beat the world, or at least the Redmen. With the aid of two kickoffs that went out of bounds, Buffalo gained good field position. Gilbert got started by hitting Pawloski with a 17 yard pass and a play later carried for 16 himself. After another short gainer he moved to the five on the same fake line buck that set up the first score. Edwards scored on the same type of sweep play, only this time to the left. Oscsodal had the extra point blocked by Don Hagberg.

He got his revenge, however,

Homecoming

Parade Rt. Approved

The Amherst Board of Selectmen voted yesterday morning to approve an Adelphian request concerning homecoming weekend.

After reading a letter sent by the Adelphian Chairman of the weekend, Don Boyd, the board voted unanimousiy to approve the route of the Friday evening homecoming parade.

In his letter to the board, Boyd thanked the selectmen and other town officials for their aid in the past and assured the board that the Adel-Adelphian-run parade would be an orderly and exciting one.

The parade route will be essentially the same as last year's. Starting on the University campus, it will move down North Pleasant Street to the center of town, turn left onto Main St., down Main to Triangle, then onto Triangle back onto North Pleasant St. and the campus.

Town Manager Allen Torey was instructed by the board to work out the details of the parage with chairman Boyd. In addition to Adelphia, other campus organizations most notably Alpha Chi Omega, the men's service fraternity, are preparing for the festivities.

Other preparations are being made as the weekend of Oct. 23-25 rapidly approaches. A full list of the campus beauties nominated for Homecoming queen will be released shortly, as will other information regarding the weekend.

Chairman Boyd has urged students to participate in as many of the weekend's activities as possible, includig building floats and attending the Friday night rally.

Union Board Has Final Say

Hamburgers and convocations are no longer necessarily mutually exclusive items of a students diet.

Acting in response to student complaints concerning the closing of the Hatch and other Student Union facilities during the University's Opening Convocation the Student Union Governing Board voted at its Monday evening meeting to review any requests that would again close the Union's facilities for such events.

While not excluding the possibility of future closings, the board, composed of eight students and five faculty members, agreed that it should have the final word on what closes and when.

The board unanimously supported a resolution offered by its Adelphian representative that "neither the Hatch, nor the lobby counter, nor the University store, nor the barber shop nor the games area be closed during regularly scheduled hours without the approval of the Student Union Governing Board."

It was the first meeting of the year for the committee, which is charged with the responsibility of overseeing the operation of the student owned Student Union. Sheila McRevey was elected by acclamation to an unprecedented second term as chairman of the board.

Sociologist Agrees With Warren Find

by JIM FONDY

Speaking at Noah Webster House Sunday, Dr. Robert Stanfield of the University's sociology department agreed with most of the Warren Commission's Report on President Kennedy's assassination.

Dr. Stanfield, who ironically had cancelled a lecture, "The Violent Traditions of the South", on Nov. 22, 1963, the day of the President's death, centered his talk on the reaction of Americans to crimes of his sort and the steps the country may take for greater president protection.

Commenting on news reporters' actions at Dallas, Dr. Stanfield said they were perhaps "too much involved" and at times got in the way. Agreeing with the Warren Report that wide avenues of communications are necessary, the doctor said some restrictions should be placed on reporters to avoid scenes of confusion as witnessed in the Dallas police station. He suggested pooling cameras and reporters.

Dr. Stanfield suggested that "the flow of information between law enforcement agencies should be treated with a little bit of hesitation."

The Warren report suggested the FBI, Secret Service and local police should cooperate more in exchanging information vital to protecting the President.

UM Novelist—"Hard Work"

by DAVE HARACZ

Guest speaker at Caesura's first coffee hour of the year was Richard Kim, author of the best selling book The Martyred and instructor in the UMass English department.

Describing the process of creative writing as "hard work", Kim said Sunday that luck plays less a part in writing success than some would-be writers might expect.

Although many student are able to master such technical aspects of writing as style and sentence structure, they neglect the fact that good writing is a matter of dedication and "a way of life", he said.

Asking those who would be writers to remember that "the stuff of fiction writing is people", Kim said, "belief in human beings is necessary for good writing." "A writer," he said, "should never take a human being for granted, but should search for a means of revealing the secrets which are present in every human being."

The writer must discard preconceived notions about people and observe the way they actually act in order to portray accurately human beings in fiction," he said. Citing the fact that many of the world's most talented artists have ended their lives in institutions, Kim reminded the audience that in uncovering the truth about other people, the artist runs the risk of discovering the truth about himself with unknown consequences.

RICHARD KIM

Finally, he said, the hardest thing for a writer in this "age of disbelief" is to believe in what he is writing. That it is only through belief in the worth of what is written that the writer can hope to write well, he concluded.

Members of the Caesura editorial board were on hand to explain the details of the new two-deadline system for contribution of manuscripts for use in the magazine.

A preliminary deadline for fall material is Monday, Oct. 19. The editorial board will then edit the material and return it to the contributors for revision before the final deadline of Nov. 2.

Adelphian Meets LBJ

by DAVE HARACZ

Adelphia president Jeffrey Davidow was the UMass representative to the White House Conference of College Leaders held last Saturday, Oct. 3.

Davidow flew to the Capitol to attend the event as one of approximately 250 students from colleges and universities all over the nation who were gathered at the White House to hear addresses by President Johnson, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

In his address to the students, President Johnson announced a new program under which 15 young men and women between 23 and 35 will be named "White House Fellows" for periods of 15 months. Taken from various professions, the fellows are to be assigned to each Cabinet member and to the Vice President, with four serving on the White House staff.

After the speeches and a short reception, a buffet dinner was served. Entertainment was by the Chad Mitchell Trio, comedian Bob Newhart, and the Stan Getz Quartet.

During the evening, Davidow presented the President with an autographed copy of Professor Howard Quint's The Talkative President, the first book published by the new University Press.

Describing the meeting as an ideal opportunity to escape provincialism by meeting with students from all over the nation, Davidow noted that the representatives from the midwestern and western states held much higher opinions of the power of Barry Goldwater as a presidential hopeful than did the representatives from the East and especially New Englanders.

Davidow described his being chosen as less a personal honor than an honor to Adelphia and expressed gratitude to Dean of Students William Field and others who made the trip a successful one.

Assistant To Dean Appointed

Assistant Dean of Men, William H. Burkhardt, Jr., today announced the appointment of G. Barton Ogden as Acting Assistant to the Dean of Men in the Dean of Men's Office.

A native of Great Barrington, Ogden attended UMass from 1958 to 1960. Transferring to Hartwick College in Oneonto, New York, he received his Bachelor of Science Degree in Business. Administration in June of 1962. While at Hartwick, he was active in Delto Sigma Phi Fraternity, the Cardboard Alley Players, the Outing Club, and the Concert Choir.

After graduation from college, Ogden taught junior high school mathematics and science at Kingsley Hall Preparatory School in Great Barrington.

Returning to the University in the summer of 1963, he began work on a Master of Education Degree in the field of guidance under Dr. Ralph Pippert. In February of 1964, he was appointed as an Area Director on the staff of the Dean of Men's Office. He plans to receive his Master's in June, 1965.

Senate Weighs Activities Fates

by TOM KIERNAN

This year, the fate of student activities rests in the hands of the Student Senate. As the official student governing body, the Senate is charged with the responsibility for chartering the more than 200 organizations and clubs which exist on this campus. This burden falls upon the Senate Activities Committee, with present chairman Senator Jim Allen.

The questions which will plague the committee this year shall include the following; faculty vs. student control over the news media of WMUA and the Collegian; whether the University Bands shall remain a student-owned and faculty supervised activity;whether the Campus Chest shall become the official collecting agency for charitable organizations; and whether dormitories should be governed by elected students or appointed counsellors. The opinions formed by this committee on these and other matters will undoubtably play a large part in shaping the policies adopted by the Student Senate and by the R.S.O. committee.

Transfers' Traumas

by FRANCES BUCKHOFF

New faces on the University of Massachusetts campus are not all freshmen's.

More than 300 transfer students enrolled here this fall to take advantage of the size, facilities and even the girl-boy ratio.

WHO APPLIES for transfer to the university?

Admissions Office reports that transfer students accepted by the university must be academically superior to meet increasing competition of many qualified applicants. Girls apply far more frequently than boys, which boosts standards even higher. Dr. Tunis, Dean of Admissions, explains that the university accepts all applicants from Massachusetts' Community Colleges since these two-year schools set a standard which prepares students for transfer to UMass.

But the standards are difficult. From 1,400 transfer applicants this year, the university accepted only 480. Of these, more than 100 did not enter. Transfers are evaluated primarily on their previous college record and, with increasing competition, most transfers were required to have a B average.

ONCE ON CAMPUS, where does the transfer's interests lie?

Dr. Southworth, head of guidance, states that most transfers are admitted at the junior level. His department's primary concern is the evaluation of their college records. The transfer student has the additional social problem of being new to the campus but not a freshman. He is treated like an upperclassman, is expected to be familiar with university culture, yet does not have this knowledge.

Dr. Southworth feels that the transfers need definite assistance during their initial weeks on campus. This need is partially being met by a brief summer counseling period.

He also states that the university is making improvements at assessing the knowledge and skills which the transfer brings. "We now have a general culture test which was given to the last group of transfers admitted", Dr. Southworth said. It is hoped that this will aid in fairer evaluation and more accurate class placement.

HOW DOES the transfer adjust?

Head of Residence at Brooks House, Mrs. Rugg, feels that the adjustment is excellent. The summer orientation period, during which transfers spend a night in a dorm and a day on campus, gives the students a knowledge of campus rules and policies. Mrs. Rugg said that few problems arise and that transfers from smaller colleges find living with such a varied group is a valuable part of the educational experience.

AND WHY do students transfer to the University of Massachusetts?

One of the primary reasons for transfer is the low cost of tuition, room and board. Most transfers are from Massachusetts and the short distance from home is an important consideration. The breadth and depth of university facilities encourages many transfers from small colleges. There are interest groups and classes for any variety of individual concerns.

The campus is also coed—definitely a deciding factor for some, particularly those who attended non-coed schools.

Transfers report little or no difficulty in adjusting. They feel that the UMass campus is friendly and classes are small enough for personal contact. They also offer experience in independence and the academic and social atmosphere of a college.

These academically superior individuals can contribute a great deal to university life if their potential is achieved and recognized in classes and in their departments.

SCULPTOR HONORED — John Townsend of the faculty of the University of Massachusetts was one of several artists honored by The Travelers Insurance Company for his participation in the recent Plaza 7 Arts Festival held in Hartford, Conn. Mr. Townsend was one of 13 sculptors to display his work at a special showing in The Travelers Rotunda. He is shown here with his sculpture entitled "Two Fingures."

Dining Hall Counselors

The office of Student Personnel has announced the appointment of student representatives from each residence who will serve as Dining Counselors. They will act as liaison between students and dining hall staff halls, is making it possible for students to invite faculty guests to accompany them for luncheon or dinner in North or South Commons without charge. See a Dinning Counselor about arrangements.

Mrs. Nutter has taken courses at Boston University, Harvard University, and Willimantic State College, and she has worked with the mentally retarded at Wrentham State School.

Civil Defense Instructor to Speak On Radiation

Dr. Wallace Black, Civil Defense Instructor, and professor of Dairy and Animal Science will speak in the Audio-visual Aids room of the Women's Physical Education building, on Friday, Oct. 9, at 2:30 p.m. His topic, "Radiation Hazards in the Nuclear Age", will cover both military and non-military aspects.

In his work with Civil Defense, Dr. Black trains instructors in the use of Civil Defense Radiological Monitoring Equipment which measure and record amounts of radiation. According to Dr. Black, about 1.7 million such monitors are needed in the United States, while these is need for 20,000 in Massachusetts alone. Presently there are 2500 monitors available in this state.

Monitors are needed not only in case of nuclear attack, but also in case of accidents involving non-military uses of radioactive substances, e.g., the transportation of fissionable material, or in case of accident as in the nuclear reactor at Yankee Atomic electric plant in Rowe, Mass.

Dr. Black's illustrated lecture is open to students of all major fields.

Engineers Choose Queen

by CAROL NEILON

Beverly A. Farrell, a transfer student from Averett Junior College, has been chosen "Miss Engineer" for October by the staff of the Engineering Journal.

Bev stands 5'5", has brown hair and blue eyes, weighs 130 pounds and will be twenty years old this month.

She is a junior elementary education major from Dover.

Averett Junior College is a girls college with an enrollment of 500 in Danville, Va. Bev graduated from there last June with honors.

The Engineering Journal, edited by Daniel Sullivan, is published twice each semester. Miss Engineer is chosen for each issue from pictures submitted by members staff.

Bev is active on campus in the Education Club and on the social committee for Van Meter South.

Montoya To Perform On Friday

The great master of Spanish flamenco, Carlos Montoya will be heard this Friday evening, Oct. 9 at John M. Greene Hall on the Smith College campus. Widely hailed wherever he has appeared, Montoya's concerts usually attract "standing room only" crowds.

This concert, sponsored by Del Padre Music Shops as a benefit for The Springfield Orchestra Association, has been billed as a "one-man show". It will feature Montoya's many original flemence arrangements recorded for RCA Victor.

The concert will begin promptly at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are now available at Del Padre Music Shops in Springfield, Northampton and Holyoke; also in Northampton at The Quill Book Shop; in Amherst at Cunningham's Book Shop and in Springfield at Music in the Round and the Springfield Symphony office, 49 Crescent St., RE 9-4728. There will be a box office open at Greene Hall prior to the concert as well.

Committee On Education Named

Dr. Lederle and Gen. James McCormack, Vice - President of M.I.T., accepted appointments to the Technical Advisory Committee on Education of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

The first major program to be undertaken by the Committee, according to Rev. W. Seavy Joyce, Council President, is to assist the trustees of the University in locating its extension in the Boston area.

The Committee is composed of Council members whose orientation is in the direction of educational development and non-members with experience in this area of community development.

The First Hurrah

An effectual step has been taken in response to student needs. Monday night the Student Union Governing Board unanimously supported a resolution that such student facilities as the Hatch, Lobby counter, University store, etc. can't be closed during regularly scheduled hours without the Board's approval.

Although this action does not rule out the possibility of student facilities being closed in the future, it does rule out unannounced closing of such facilities. Since the Student Union is predominantly run by student funds, it is only just that the students be notified when they are to be deprived of the services they pay for.

Perhaps the most heartening effect of the whole matter is the rapidity with which the Student Union Governing Board took action. After hearing many protests against the September 24 closing of the Student Union for the Opening Convocation, SUG Board members resolved to push for a remedy immediately.

The Student Union Governing Board is to be congratulated for its prompt response to student requests.

Anti Knowledge

Last year, I witnessed a professor present to a group of sophomore students an argument similar to this:

1. There are two methods of proof: inductive and deductive.
2. Inductive reasoning draws conclusions from several known cases.
3. Deductive reasoning makes inferences and arrives at a conclusion from accepted principles.

Inductive

The sun rises in the East on day X.
The sun rises in the East on day X-1.
The sun rises in the East on day X-n.
Conclusion: The sun rises in the East everyday.

Deductive

Statement A. The sun rises in the East everyday.
B. Tomorrow is a day.
C. The sun will rise in the East tomorrow.

The Professor goes on to say that the deductive proof in illustration is only valid if Statement A is valid. Statement A and all Statement A's are arrived at through induction. Since we can never be sure that there is not one factor X that we overlooked and since a conclusion reached through induction is only a statement of the probability that an event will occur, we can never say with certainty that Statement A is true.

His next step is a deucutive proof which by the seven tests for validity, I am sorry to say, is valid. This, however, is a mathematical rather than a philosophical problem.

Proof

B. Inductive reasoning is only a statement of probability.
Statement A. All arguments are based on inductive reasoning.
C. All arguments are only a statement of probability.

From this, he concludes that man can be certain of nothing.

It has been pointed out to me, by Dr. Swanson of the philosophy department, that although this proof is valid, its soundness is questionable. A sound proof is one which is founded on true premises. "All arguments are" not "based on inductive reasoning." Analytic arguments are arguments which we know as true and have not concluded from observation. "2 plus 2 equals 4" is an example of this method.

Secondly, it is a well known philosophical assumption that any philosophy — and I assume that the professor would call this a philosophy: the philosophy of Mills that knowledge is not — which cuts down the grounds upon which it is founded is a contradiction in terms and is, as such, a non - consistent philosophy. The professor's argument has a statement A which by his own standards is worthless and which, as I have shown, is unsound. His argument is established by deduction which, in his own words, is only a statement of probability.

Thirdly, taking the Professor's example, we may assume that — and he took the liberty to state that — the sun may not rise in the East tomorrow. Fortunately, if it doesn't and the Professor makes his point, we shall not be here to witness it.

Fourthly, we, the University, and most professors are here on the assumption that knowledge exists and is knowable. We, as students, support this institution in the hope that through four years of conscientious study with proper guidance we shall learn something of value. Would anyone knowingly spend four thousand dollars to be told that knowledge is worthless since he can never be certain of anything? The concept "university" and the concept of the professor are antagnostic. I question the integrity of any professor who uses his classroom or his position as a professor to expostulate such a doctrine.

RE — HARDY

To the Editor:

Ken Hardy's letter to the Editor in the Sept. 29 issue of the Collegian deserves commendation. Although necessarily very few, his examples of the distortion in John Stormer's book None Dare Call It Treason are very well taken.

This book would be fitting for study as a sample of the propaganda-fear technique which was used successfully by Hitler and Stalin. Check his documentation yourself—it's incredible.

Mr. Erwin D. Canham, editor-in-chief of the "Christian Science Monitor" and past president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, has labeled it as an example of "vigorous political polemics". He went on to say, (commenting also on Mrs. Phyllis Schalafly's A Choice Not An Echo: "It seems to me that they distort and misrepresent history and many American leaders".

The National Committee for Civic Responsibility (a bi-partisan group representing conservatives and liberals) has condemned it as: "deliberate, premeditated, malicious use of falsehood to intimidate or discredit".

Mr. Stormer is a member of the John Birch Society. The book receives its primary circulation through American Opinion (sic.) Library—a part of the John Birch Society organization.

All of the "fringes" have a right to exist, and indeed must exist, if ours is to remain a vital and alert democratic republic. But, let's not lend such an extremist respectability through the recommendation of the Young Republicans. I am certain that none of our candidates for national office would want such backing. We may not have a Hitler now, but Hitler came to power when "solid citizens" gave him respectability by lending their names to his lunatic ideas.

Sincerely yours,
David N. Rich

More Coverage

To the Editor:

I have been pleased, upon reading your paper, to find in each issue a very complete and accurate account of the I.F.C. Intramural Football. But, one thing that does upset me is that you apparently do not realize that the University also has a few dormitories on campus. Even though I am taking a risk of giving you too many new facts at once, I would like to inform you that these dorms also play Intramural Football. In fact they have over thirty teams. Unfortunately from all the publicity the dorms get, you would think that this group does not even exist.

Many of us are interested in the dorms and would appreciate knowing just how our leagues are doing. I hope you will rectify this situation soon, and for once give some recognition to the majority of the university, i.e. the dorms.

Letters To The Editor

No Stickers

To the Editor,

Recently in the Collegian there appeared an article about the parking problem on campus. We realize the problem and see the need for parking tickets. However it appears that some tickets were given to undeserving individuals.

After the necessary red tape of registering our cars, we proceeded to the police station. When we got to the station there was a sign on the door, "No Stickers Put On Today Because Of Rain". At the time it was only cloudy. We were told very pleasantly to return in the morning, but the next morning there were parking tickets attached to our cars. The reason: no stickers! These tickets had been issued at three o'clock in the morning. It seems our campus police were working overtime all night to get the parking tickets attached to the same cars to which they couldn't attach stickers fourteen hours before. Is this fair?

How many others received parking tickets on the same day that they were unable to obtain stickers?

WORD OF THANKS

To the Editor:

During my three years at the University, A. P. O. and G. S. S. service organizations have been extremely productive, and yet many of their efforts have gone unrecognized. On behalf of the student body, I would like to thank A.P.O. and G.S.S. for ushering at the University Convocation and for their help in the recent Senate Election.

Sincerely,
George T. Michael

Silence

To the editor:

1. One does not applaud between the movements of a symphony. (A symphony usually consists of 2-3 movements.)
2. One does not converse with one's friends between the movements of a symphony.
3. One does not play with one's folding chair during the performance.
4. If one finds it difficult to remember these suggestions: watch the conductor. One may applaud and/or comment when the conductor bows.

It is possible that we may avoid a repetition of the embarrassment which occured at the performance of the Chicago Symphony last Wednesday? Is it possible that a future conductor may not find it necessary to wait for superfluous noise to subside before he can continue a performance?

CHEST DRIVE . . .

ganized, will take place the following week, October 26 thru 30.

Says "Doc" and "Carp", the enthusiasm developed by the division captains and workers gives every indication that the drive will easily reach its goal of $29,000.00.

Amherst College solicitations, will be captained by Dr. Gerald P. Brophy of the college staff. University captains are staff members Gerald J. Grady and Dr. William C. Venman. There is at Amherst College a staff member in each department who will collect pledge cards and contributions.

The captains for the business and corporations division are Alex Madenski and H. David Cary, both of the Amherst Savings Bank. The Special Givers campaign will be directed by Robert McCarter, president of the Savings Bank, and H. Hills Skillings, Amherst selectman. Special Givers are those who in years past have pledged more than average amounts.

An illustrated brochure will go to all on the lists along with pledge cards and letters. The brochure carries a special message from Community Chest President, Walter S. Ritchie, and descriptive paragraphs about the nine organizations cooperating.

John W. Lederle will send a letter to his staff members. The business captains plan a follow up visit where needed, and various members of the Community Chest Board will assist in contacting some of the Special Givers.

Black Berets—Army ROTC

Once again this year, one of the most important segments of the Army ROTC program will be the Bay State Special Forces. This unit, with the distinctive beret and jump boots, is a most ambitious group. The men in both the unit on this campus and in the regular Army are dedicated to their task.

The unit here is commanded by Cadet Major Richard Murphy and Cadet Capt. George Marold. These gentlemen have been with the unit since its inception on campus.

The program is not organized with the faint of heart in mind. The training is, in a word, rigorous. At present, some 23 underclassmen are seeking admission.

These volunteers are presently taking the Physical Training qualification test. Those who don't make it will be eliminated at this point. This will be followed by personal interviews with the officers of the unit. For those who meet the qualifications, there will be the black beret. Even then, the training is just beginning. During the year, the unit will be given training in such aspects of guerilla warfare as hand-to-hand combat and use of the bayonet. There will also be courses in life saving and first aid as well as basic maneuvering in a combat situation.

Later in the year, the unit will take a trip to Fort Devens to use some of the facilities there. Orientation firing with the M-1 rifle is on the schedule as well as a trip through the compass course, designed to test proficiency in the use of the compass.

Quite often, the senior cadet with Special Forces training on campus will choose to make the regular Army a career. He may also join an infantry branch to gain ranger training in order to enter the Army Special Force unit. The ultimate aim is that he too car gain the beret, the symbol of distinction.

Wave Officer To Visit Campus

The U.S. Navy is presently offering two programs to young college women who qualify for its Officer Candidate School.

A responsible junior executive position is available through the Navy's College Junior Program or the College Senior and Graduate Program. The training for both programs is conducted at Newport, Rhode Island.

Under the College Junior Program a young woman in her junior year in college may apply for Officer Candidate School (Women) and if selected, the Navy furnishes her with a round-trip ticket to the school for an 8 week period during the summer before her senior year.

In addition, the Navy provides uniforms, meals, living quarters and pays her $170.00. The young woman is an Officer Candidate, not a commissioned officer, and at the end of the eight-week session she returns home in a strictly civilian status to complete the requirement of her degree.

She is morally obligated to accept a commission as an Ensign in the Naval Reserve upon graduation if she is selected and to serve for two years on active duty.
available basis, to any part of the world on military planes.

Under the College Senior and Graduate Program, a college senior or graduate may apply for Officer Candidate School (Women) and if selected is given the same training as college juniors, but in 16 consecutive weeks; eight weeks more as an Ensign. Seniors and graduates may apply for any of three classes per year commencing in July, October, and March.

Job assignments for WAVE officers include executive positions in personnel, administration, public information, intelligence, legal assistance, communications and various technical fields.

There are also opportunities for work in the Supply Corps for those interested in business administration, accounting or bookkeeping, and positions in the Medical Service Corps for dietitians, physical or occupational therapists.

During the first 2 years these jobs are performed at any of the many naval bases and naval air stations throughout the United States. During her second assignment, upon request, an officer is very likely to be placed overseas in Hawaii, Japan, England, Italy, Alaska, Spain or Germany.

Navy Ensigns receive a starting salary of $4491, with the added benefits of free medical, dental and hospital care. There are automatic salary increases at regular intervals and pay raises with each promotion.

In addition, each naval officer receives 30 days vacation with pay each year during which time she may travel free on a space-

There will be a meeting of Students for Civil Rights in the Student Union, Middlesex Room at 6:30 on Wednesday, Oct. 7.

Big Breasts Indicate Low IQ, It Says Here

Houston (UPI) — A Houston doctor believes that flat-chested women are inclined toward high IQs and generally "the bigger the breasts, the lower the IQ."

Writing in The International Journal of Fertility, Dr. Erwin O. Strassmann said: "It is my experience that there is a basic antagonism between the scholastic type of intelligence and the reproductive system in infertile women. If you know one area, you know what to expect in the other."

Dr. Strassmann, of the department of obstetrics and gynecology of the Baylor University College of Medicine in Houston, said most women are of the endo-morph-pyknic type, the "typical females in build as well as temperament." He said this group has short arms and necks, small hands and feet, a tendency to obesity as they grow older, and narrow shoulders.

"The breasts are full and become pendulous with the years. The face is broad around the chin; the forehead is narrow," he said.

He said this type of women generally is not scientifically minded and they "shy away from dogmatic thinking, mathematics, scholastic activities, and politics." But he said they are generally strong on instinct and intuition.

Women in the ectomorph-asthenic group are the exact opposite, Dr. Strassmann said. They are slender with long necks and small heads, an angled profile, small mouth and thin lips.

"There is no fullness anywhere," he said of this group. "Breasts and buttocks are small." He said women of this group are generally introverts, "mentally supersensitive," and touchy.

University Women Announce Plans For Benefit Dances

The University Women have planned two Benefit Dances for the 1964-65 social season—a Faculty Alumni Homecoming Dance and a Faculty Alumni Winter Dance.

The Homecoming Dance will be held in Memorial Hall on Saturday, Oct. 24. Bob Jeffway's Quartet will play music for dancing from 9:00-12:00 p.m.

Proceeds will go to the University Women's service projects with special emphasis on service to foreign students.

Faculty, administrative staff, alumni and their friends are invited to participate in the Homecoming festivities.

Tickets for the dances may be obtained from Mrs. David Storey or Mrs. Harold Gatslick.

Mrs. Jack Delaney and Mrs. Doric Alviani are serving as co-chairmen for the dance. Assisting them are Mrs. Joseph Cebula, Mrs. Harold B. Gatslick, Mrs. Marvin B. Rausch, Mrs. David Storey, and Mrs. Albert L. Wrisley.

Soprano To Sing

Mezzo-soprano Elizabeth Spiro will give a recital of French Songs at Amherst College Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the Alumni House.

Mrs. Spiro will perform works by Gabriel Faure and Claude Debussy, as well as the song cycles, "Banalities" by Fancis Poulenc, and "Chansons Madecasses" by Maurice Ravel for flute, cello, voice and piano.

Good Spirits Thrive on Hill

Orchard Girls Make Best Of Dorm Problems

Hootenannies on a balcony . . . floor meetings late at night . . . and mounds of UMass mud constitute a phase of Orchard Hill living, tagged "complex spirit."

In spite of inconveniences created by the contractor's running behind schedule, the residents are bearing up very well. As one sophomore put it, "We're together in trouble." For a certain closeness and spirit exist there, especially because they are "partners in camping out," as one girl put it.

Cooperation has played a large part in helping things to run smoothly. They conform to the special rules, such as those regarding limited use of electrical appliances, and there have been few complaints.

Dorm D, Emily Dickinson House—the least completed of the four building complex, recently received elevator service. Excitement over each new addition is apparent. All the girls had to try out the elevator when it was first put in service.

Very good attendance has been noted at all meetings and at interdorm practice. Sharing is common. Often one resident will voluntarily undertake a large housekeeping chore for friends. Since there is no intercom system, most girls make an effort to notify personally those who have calls.

A counselor said, "The kids are just great. They really try to make the best of it."

The counselors have been told, "Look at everything with a laugh." They are taking that advice.

Sing Along With The Emmy Dicks

by J. W. '67 and N. B. '67

These are the times that try students' souls. In the course of our University's history the students of UMass have rallied bravely whenever their rights to high standards of living have been threatened. Today a new crisis has arisen. STUDENTS, HEAR US OUT.

(Sung to the tune of "New York Ladies")

Now students listen unto us, we'll tell you of our tale,
Of the things that we discovered when we came to Orchard Hill.

Chorus: Where's the desk "draws" and the drain plugs,
Oh you brand new dorms where are all these things?

As we walked down the halls, colored doors we saw.
But high and low we searched the desk, looking for a "draw".

Study lamps and lounging chairs, yes we have them too.
But when we try to get washed up, oh tell us what to do.

Chorus
The beds they are so awfully nice, we quickly fall asleep.
But when we wake next morning, a problem then we meet.

We go to wash our faces and boy is it a pain,
To fill the sink with H_2O, it goes right down the drain.
Chorus
And when at last we start to work, we very soon give up.
For who keeps clips and rubber bands inside their drinking cup???

In spite of all these minor things, we still like it here.
But when can we use our drinking cups to chung-a-lug some beer???
Chorus

Bunning Deal Pennant Key; Article Asserts SF Mistake

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 — Owner Horace Stoneham, and not manager Alvin Dark, is probably responsible for the San Francisco Giants' failure to beat out the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League pennant this year, according to an article in the current issue of SPORT magazine.

Dark's publicized "inability to handle the Negroes on his ball club" probably had less to do with the Giants' final standing than a pre-season disagreement between the manager and Stoneham on the merits of former American League pitcher Jim Bunning, says the article.

With Detroit Tiger manager Charlie Dressen eager to tamper with Bunning's pitching style after the tall righthander had posted a disappointing 12-13 record for the 1963 season, and with Bunning equally unwilling to change after 15 fairly successful campaigns, it became apparent that he would have to go in a trade.

According to sportswriter Larry Merchant, author of the SPORT article, when it became known that Bunning was available, word spread throughout the National League that Jim still had ability and that a change of scenery probably would make him a big winner again.

Dark believed it, and outfined a deal for the big fastballer, but it was vetoed by Stoneham who called Bunning "washed-up." The Phillies didn't think so and traded outfielder Don Demeter, their leading slugger during 1962 and 1963, along with minor-league hurler Jack Hamilton, to Detroit for Bunning and veteran catcher Gus Triandos.

The results of the deal are history. The Giants, suffering from the pitching "shorts," dropped out of the race. Bunning became the bellwether of the Phillie staff, capturing 16 of his first 20 decisions and hurling a perfect no-hit, no-run game against the New York Mets.

And the aftermath of the Bunning story, according to the SPORT magazine article, will be the Giant story. Owner Horace Stoneham made a mistake and Manager Alvin Dark will be fired.

Big Weekend For Yan-Con Teams

Kingston — The University of Massachusetts Redmen will attempt to take a giant step in their defense of the Yankee Conference championship when they meet the University of Connecticut Huskies at Amherst on Saturday in the feature of three conference games this week.

The Redmen, who eked out a 6-0 decision over the University of Maine's Black Bears two weeks ago, will be making their second conference start. The Huskies, under their new coach, Rick Forzano, will be making their initial start.

In other conference action, the University of Vermont Catamounts will journey to Kingston, R. I., for a clash with the University of New Hampshire Wildcats will be facing Maine at Orono.

UMASS HARRIERS . . .

say that, considering the amazing array of sophomore talent on the team, UMass has some prospects of very good cross country in the near future. The YanCon championship meet, to be run on our course, could conceivably be won by a close-knit UMass team.

This Friday Coach Footrick will take his boys to UConn to meet that school in a dual meet. Last year the Redmen easily swamped UConn in a quadrangular meet at Amherst and prospects for a victory in this meet are better than they have been so far this season.

Olympic Perspectus

What will be the outcome of the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo? Experts say our team, after vigorous try-outs at New York's Randalls Island, is one of the strongest ever. And the outlook is very optimistic among trainers and athletes alike.

The winners in the 17 qualifying events in New York, while clinching trips to Tokyo in October, broke eight meet records and one American record. Among the meet's athletes favored to win gold medals in Japan are: John Pennel with a winning pole vault of 16 ft. 6 in., more than a foot higher than the 1960 Olympic record; broad jumper Ralph Boston, who unofficially bettered the world mark with a jump of 27 ft. 5¼ in.; and the mightiest hammer throw on earth, Harold Connolly, who won an Olympic gold medal in 1956.

As in the past, the events that pose the greatest challenge to Americans are the races over 1,500 meters and the marathon. But with Buddy Edelen on the team, there's always a chance for an upset; he recently won the national A.A.U. marathon championship by more than three miles over his closest contender.

In view of the enormous sums the Soviet Union spends in developing and training athletes—who never seem to lose their amateur status — our Olympic team really has its work cut out for it. The fact that the Soviets take thousands of women off their jobs—as well as men—to train them full time for the Olympics, is one of the reasons why American women athletes in the past haven't fared as well as they might have against Russian competition. But, the fine showing by our girls in the U.S.-Russian track meet in Los Angeles recently, brought a welcome sigh of relief in many quarters.

A long range program to restore the overall U.S. Olympic supremacy and to meet the challenge of the Russians has been underway for the past 10 months and has received the endorsement of President Johnson. Beginning with a survey of facilities, the program includes: Innovations in coaching; new training programs, including the use of isometrics, a method of exerting muscles against immoveable objects; and financing both here and abroad for each of the 27 Olympic sports.

The American team in the '64 Olympics is not only one of the strongest we've ever assembled, it's also one of the best-dressed. Looking ahead to opening day ceremonies in Japan's National Stadium, the girls will parade in one-piece sleeveless dresses of Parade White "Actionwear" stretch twill. "Actionwear", the name given to stretch fabrics made with Chemstrand Acrilan and nylon fizers, is an Olympic favorite for its easy comfort and style. A jacket trimmed in red and white opens at the waist to show the Olympic insignia at the belt.

The men on the team will parade in two-button navy blue blazers of "Actionwear" stretch fabric woven by Burlington Industries. Off-white slacks, shoes and western hats complete the outfit.

Tokyo's Olympic facilities represent a $250 million investment. And roads will cost an additional $420 million before they are completed. Some 35,000 seats have been added to Japan's new National Stadium, giving it a capacity of 85,000 seated and 15,000 standing. Nearby, an Olympic Village has been constructed, including two brand-new sports arenas with radical designs that resemble giant sea shells.

DALLAS SUFFERS . . .

test will be Boston University on October 24.

Notes on Saturday's Football: Yankee Conference football got underway in full force as Vermont topped Maine for the first time in many a year, 14-7, and Rhode Island won a wild one from UNH, 22-8, in a game that featured 7 pass interceptions . . . The other two conference clubs split in independent play, the Redmen winning while UConn was beaten by Rutgers 9-3 . . .

Harvard got its first loss from Bucknell, an old UMass opponent, 24-21 . . . In that one, Bill Lerro. Bucknell quarterback, completed 23 of 32 passes for 278 yards through the porous Harvard pass defense . . . The Crimson will get no rest at all because this week Columbia plays host to them with Archie Roberts most anxious to completely bury the opponent with his well developed aerial attack . . .

Nationally, Texas maintained its top ranking by downing stubborn Army team 17-6 . . . The other big teams took a few lumps along the way . . . Southern Cal who had been number two was taken over by Michigan State, 17-7 . . . Michigan ran up the Jolly Roger as they defeated Navy and the indominable Mr. Staubach, 21-0.

Notre Dame no longer has a Catholic coach but they have a new found powerhouse that ran roughshod over Purdue, 34-15 . . . California had been on the ride but Minnesota put an end to that, 26-20 . . .

Those NFL standings are a little topsy turvy so far, but things should start to level off . . . Baltimore, however, looks much stronger than pre-season indications, as do the Rams long time league door mat . . . The best defense in the league last year, the Bears, have given up 134 points in four games this year . . .

Dallas Suffers Knee Injury; Will Miss At Least Two Games

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts football received a sharp blow this week when their outstanding center and linebacker Bernie Dallas suffered a knee injury that will force him to miss at least a couple of ball games and perhaps put him out of action for the remainder of the season.

Bernie was hurt in the first half of Saturday's game as he attempted to stop Bob Edwards of Buffalo as the latter went for the first UB touchdown. Rather than come up to meet the runner Dallas decided to brace himself and wait for the 205 halfback to get to him. Edward rolled over top of Dallas with Bernie twisting as he fell.

First reports have not got the injury pinned down, but it is either torn cartilage or ligaments. The latter is the more serious of the two and could keep the ace of the defense on the sidelines for the rest of the year.

On the brighter side, Milt Morin earned a first team ECAC weekly berth for his fine play against the Bulls. Few people who saw the game Saturday will easily forget Morin's touchdown run that was the decisive margin in the game.

After three games, the Redmen seem to have developed into a powerful offensive unit with the emphasis on the passing. The defense, however, just isn't what it used to be. Now the loss of Dallas will do little to help the team find its old strength again.

Redmen center Bernie Dallas lost for two games because of knee injury.

The statistics now have Jerry Whelchel as the leading scorer with 18 points and leading passer with 25 completions in 41 attempts. He also maintained his position as second leading rusher. The top rusher is Ken Palm who reached the lofty position by means of his 82 yard total Saturday. Bob Ellis has dropped off to third.

Bob Meers and Morin have accounted for 19 of the 27 pass completions so far this year. Meers ha shauled in 13, far ahead of his pace of a year ago.

The Redmen cannot afford to let up the slightest for this Saturday's game as they face always tough UConn at home Saturday. In past years, this was the traditional homecoming game, but this year the opponent for that con-

UMass Harriers Edged; Prospects Good vs. UConn

The UMass harriers dropped a triangular meet to both Northeastern and Maine last Saturday at Franklin Park in Boston. The final score was 24-40-60.

MAINE, LAST YEAR'S YANCON CHAMPS, and Northeastern with such powerhouses as the miler Dunsky were both teams to be reckoned with. A year ago the Redmen had also lost to the same two teams despite taking first place and fielding an overall better team.

Nevertheless, this year's team put up a better showing than it did in its season's opener the Saturday before against Harvard. In that meet the harriers were shut out 15-48, the first UMass man coming in sixth.

In both meets thus far the team has been paced by Terry Carpenter, a very promising sophomore who may yet turn out to be the answer to Coach Bill Footrick's desire for a strong pace-setter. Terry ran an overall fourth this Saturday in a time of 18:53 over the 3.7 mile course.

In this same category is Steve St. Clair, another fine sophomore harrier who ran a 19:21 second place for UMass to come in eleventh. He was followed by Redmen co-captains and seniors Tom Panke and Bob Ramsay, running fourteenth and eighteenth at times of 19:33 and 19:57. Fifth man for UMass was still another promising sophomore, Mike Sheeley, running the course in 20:06.

Rounding out this Redmen effort were Tony Manfredi, Jim Parker, Bill Thoms, Charlie Mitchell, John Cragin, John Andersen, and Bob Larson. All but one of these boys is a sophomore, and none finished worse than twenty-ninth in a field of thirty-seven runners.

THIS YEAR'S TEAM is definitely hurting from the loss by graduation of the phenomenal Bob "Digger" Brouillet, who placed first in all dual meets last year, and through the ineligibility this fall of junior harrier Bob Molvar.

Yet it is not denying any of the realities of this rugged sport to

Drew Pearson to Lecture as DVP Guest

Drew Pearson, author of the syndicated column "Washington Merry-Go-Round," will lecture on current events, Monday, Oct. 19, at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Pearson's lecture is being sponsored by the student-organized Distinguished Visitors Program. The student group sponsors several on-campus appearances of national and international figures during the academic year.

The Washington reporter, co-author of five books, is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Swarthmore College.

A one-time teacher at the University of Pennsylvania, he has been working in the nation's capital since 1929 when he was attached to the Washington bureau of the Baltimore Sun.

Pearson has built up a solid reputation among his colleagues as a hardworking, fearless reporter.

"Time Magazine" said of him: "His is the kind of journalistic vigilance that keeps small men honest; and forces bigger men to work in an atmosphere of caution that frequently cramps their style."

Pearson himself has remained seemingly impervious to pressure, although during his career he has stepped on many toes and has been involved in many controversies.

After the publication of his second book, "More Merry-Go-Round," moved The Baltimore Sun to fire him, Pearsen went on to become the co-author of three more books: "Nine Old Men," "The American Diplomatic Game," and "USA—Second Class Rower?"

Four-College Rally

Humphrey Addresses 4,500

by Linda Perlstein

Five minutes of applause greeted the Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, Hubert Humphrey, when he arrived yesterday morning on the Smith College Campus.

A crowd of between 4,000 and 5,000 people, mostly students from the Four College area, were on hand to hear Humphrey declared that, "the real issue of this campaign is whether we have leader ship that senses the future and grasps for it, or one that repudiates the present and grasps for the past.

"And anyway," he injected, "if someone is going to talk about history he ought to at least get a passing grade in it." This remark drew a hearty laugh from the crowd.

Humphrey reminded his student audience that "the founders of the Republic considered Americans to be a chosen people because they were a people capable of choice. To them, to be an American was to accept a moral vocation—a life of choice.

"Remember that the opportunities, the choices you fail to appreciate could be your own... seven-eights of you would not have the choice of attending this university, seven-eighths of you could not look forward to the opportunities that are open to university graduates."

Humphrey lashed out at Senator Goldwater several times, accusing him of insulting the United States with his comment that, "the federal government in Washington, D.C. is a greater menace to freedom than Moscow."

Humphrey's appearance was jointly sponsored by the Young Democrats and the Young Citizens for Johnson in the four college area.

Appearing on the platform with Humphrey were Gov. Endicott Peabody, who was introduced by Miss Trudy Rubin, Pres. of Young Democrats of Smith. The Governor introduced Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti, Democratic candidate for Governor. Mrs. Humphrey is accompanying her husband on his campaign swing through New England.

In his opening remarks Humphrey said he was glad to be back in an area of such educational achievement and remarked what a privilege it was to address the University at commencement last Spring.

An escort of girls from the University and Smith provided an honor guard for the Senator as he entered the field from his car to a continuous shout of "We want Humphrey."

In the crowd of students were some sign - waving supporters of Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican Presidential candidate.

Humphrey said when he hears "we want Barry" he wonders whether they mean "strawberries or raspberries." But, he said: "It won't make any difference. They will be out of season after Nov. 3."

Humphrey told college students, "We must never forget the obligation which each privileged person bears to those who are less privilaged — the obligation to use his knowledge and ability in a manner which perfects and humanizes the society of which he is a part."

He challenged his student audience by asking, "Are we prepared to infuse the life of our society with the idea of excellence? Some are willing. But others are not. The whole Goldwater attack is built around the policies of desperation.

"At a time when we have never been stronger, and the Communist world system is coming apart at the seams, the Goldwaterites see us sliding down the slope to defeat.

"At a time when we have reached a breakthrough in the struggle against our ancient curse of race prejudice, they talk of nothing but race riots and street violence.

"At a time when we are reaching forward to eliminate poverty, the despair of old age, disease and poor education, they say we are becoming a nation of slaves.

"At a time when human survival depends upon the exist-

Massive Float Parade Planned For Homecoming

Plans are nearing completion for what is expected to be one of the best Homecoming parades ever staged at the University of Massachusetts.

In an interview with the Collegian, Ralph Lennon, a member of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and the chairman of the float parade, told of the plans being formulated for the Friday evening parade.

According to Lennon at least sixty units will take part, and in addition to the floats the Precisionettes, the Flying Redmen and, of course, the marching band are expected to perform.

Lenfion also disclosed plans to distribute along the route of parade programs indicating the themes and sponsorship of each float.

The five finalists for the Homecoming queen contest will also ride in the parade in an open convertible supplied by a local car dealer.

The parade will begin promptly at seven o'clock on Friday evening, October 23, from staging areas in the center of campus. It will then proceed down North Pleasant St. to the center of town, turn left on Main St., then down Main to Triangle, left on Triangle and back to the Universtiy on North Pleasant.

At the Homecoming rally which will immediately follow the parade the 1965 Homecoming queen will be crowned. At that same rally which will be followed by a rally dance in the SU ballroom, plaques will be presented to the three winners in each of four categories of the Homecoming parade: men's residence halls, women's residence halls, fraternities and sororties.

The plaques are being provided by Adelphia, the senior's men's honorary society of the University. Adelphia under the direction of member Don Boyd, is responsible for the coordination of the parade and the entire weekend.

Scout Post Honors APO

by Dave Haracz

Following a tour of the University campus last Saturday, members of Explorer Post 2, Acton, presented the brothers of Kappa Omicron chapter, Alpha Phi Omega with a plate commemorating their town's role in the Revolutionary War.

The Minuteman Souvenir Plate commemorates the activities of Isaac Davis, an Acton resident, in the early battles of the Revolution and was presented as an expression of gratitude for the help the local chapter of the national service fraternity provided as guides for the Acton explorers in their campus tour.

Frank W. Putnam, adviser of the post, is a 1958 graduate of UMass and while an undergraduate served as president of Kappa Omicron chapter.

UMass to Host Debaters

The University of Massachusetts Forensic Society and Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity will co-sponsor a debate tournament on Saturday, Nov. 7, for over 40 Massachusetts high schools.

The tournament, expected to be the biggest event of the school year for Massachusetts debaters, will be held in various buildings on the UMass campus. Tournament headquarters will be set up in Bartlett Hall, but the actual debating will occur in class rooms at the School of Business Administration Building, Machmer Hall and Bartlett Hall.

After the debating an awards banquet will be held for all participating high schools and their coaches in the SU.

Gerald Goldhaber, chairman of the tournament for the UMass. Forensic Society, has announced that Dean Moyer Hunsberger, Dean of Arts and Sciences, will be the featured speaker at the banquet. The topic of his speech will be announced at a later date.

Chairman Goldhaber stated that the purpose of the tournament is to further the goals of debating by instilling the spirit of forceful public speaking mixed with sound research and fluent thought.

Any students in the University who are interested in debating principles or who would just like to spend a Saturday afternoon helping out or observing the proceedings are urged to contact David Arlen, Chairman for APO, or Phillips Biddle, Debating Club advisor, at the speech department.

Just Goes To Show

Tired of Waiting??

Would you like to drive a new sports car for the rest of this semester with all fuel supplied as an advertisement to the dealer? Just print your name, age and address on a piece of paper and drop it in the "Advertisement Box" outside the Collegian Office at the Student Union by October 12th.

The above ad was placed in the Friday, October 9th edition of the Collegian. Read it again and notice that it does nothing but ask a question. There is no dealer named and no promises are made!!

The results of this ad are quite interesting, though. There were 72 names submitted on a weekend when many people were not on campus. Only 12 girls compared to 60 boys fell for our gimmick. They ranged in age from 17-28.

Only name ,age, and address were requested. Most complied to this but woe to those who submitted a long list on "eligibility of driving a sports car".

The ad was placed in the paper to prove a point—not that people are gullible—but that people do take the time to read and respond to a small ad in an insignificant place in the newspaper.

October 11-17 is National Newspaper Week and advertising which does bring results is one important phase of the newspaper. It is not only a service to the reader but to the company or person placing the ad.

In this age of mass production advertising is the force that stimulates the vast appetite for goods and services. So ads are important, dear readers. Read them, but do read them carefully!

Geneticist Appointed

Dr. Walton C. Galinat, an outstanding plant geneticist, has been named an associate professor in the department of environmental sciences.

Dr. Galinat, who will join the research staff at Waltham, has published or collaborated on about 50 scientific articles covering various aspects of the genetics, morphology, and evolution of corn and its near relatives.

Many of his publications have combined archaeological evidence with laboratory work. In efforts to trace the evolution of corn and corn-type plants through Mexico and the American Southwest, Dr. Galinat has worked with specimens of ancestral corn more than 5000 years old.

In his present research work, Dr. Galinat hopes to uncover some of the implications that past development may have for further advances in corn breeding.

Graduate School Enrollment Rises

UMass now has 27 doctoral programs and 41 departments offering master degrees. The enrollment in the graduate schools is now above the 1800 mark.

How are graduate students accepted? According to Dean Edward C. Moore, acceptance is based on the quality of the student.

Interested students must apply to the department in which they wish to further their studies. The department reviews the applicant's academic transcript and academic recommendations. If the department accepts the applicant, the recommendation is brought before the Graduate Counsel, which makes the final decision.

Some departments have limited enrollments, thus accounting for stiffer competition. It is therefore essential to submit applications a year prior to the time of entering.

Why do graduate students choose the University? One of the primary reasons for selecting the University is the variety of graduate courses offered and the large number of assistantships and fellowships available. The low cost of tuition also influences the choice of many students.

Graduate students report that there is no trouble in adjusting to the academic and social life that the University offers. Since faculty and students are friendly.

Undergraduates interested in continuing their education are welcome to hear Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of Graduate School, speak at 11:15 a.m., Thursday, in the Student Union.

Tickets are now on sale in Room 210 of the Boyden Building for the UMass-Holy Cross football game. Student tickets, in the general admission stands, are $1.50 and reserved seats are $3.50.

Tickets are now on sale in Room 210 of the Boyden Building for Saturday's football game at Rhode Island. Students may purchase tickets at $1.00, while the non-student price is $2.00.

National Newspaper Week—Oct. 11-17

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

July 15, 1964

TO THE NEWSPAPERS OF AMERICA:

National Newspaper Week affords a welcome opportunity to salute America's free press and to applaud its vital and essential function in the daily life of our democratic society.

The right to know is the natural prerogative of every American citizen and forms a continuous thread in the development of our constitutional freedoms. Newspapers have throughout the years contributed significantly to the preservation and propagation of this cherished right. As spokesmen for the ideals which emanate from our rich heritage, they expand our horizons of knowledge and deepen our understanding of both domestic and foreign affairs.

In serving as guardians of these ideals, our newspapers fortify the ties not only between our own citizens, but also between America and the world community.

I know that all Americans join in this tribute to our newspapers and I am confident that our press will sustain and enhance its indispensable role in the life of our Democracy.

Mr. Scott Freedland
Editor-in-Chief
The Massachusetts Collegian
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts

Dear Mr. Freedland:

It is a personal pleasure and an honor to have been asked to join with you and your staff of The Massachusetts Collegian in the pages of your issue devoted to a concept fundamental to our democratic constitutional system of government, the freedom of the press. During National Newspaper Week it is appropriate that newspapers of all types join in a discussion of the freedom which the Constitution's First Amendment guarantees.

Information and discussion are very basic aspects of the representative process, and the newspapers and periodicals of this country are of crucial importance to the legislative activity of our town and city councils, our State legislatures, and the Congress of the United States. Democratic government could not be conducted without a free press, and could not survive either its suppression or its censorship. The press has been justifiably called "the fourth branch of government."

The tradition of constitutional freedom of the press which is part of our heritage as Americans cannot be limited to any particular publications or to those designed to reach particular audiences. A college newspaper such as yours, with its enviable record of over a century of service to its student and faculty readers, must, within the requirements of fair statement, be accorded the rights of freedom of expression that have been constitutionally guaranteed to the press in our beloved country.

There is another reason, aside from constitutional principle, that suggests the usefulness of according the widest possible latitude to expressions of student opinion in college newspapers. It is that only at one stage in life are men absolutely certain of the correctness, the rectitude, the overwhelming logic, the inevitable certitude of the opinions they happen to hold, and that is when they are young. They should be given a chance to express themselves, and then when criticism comes, they should be permitted to defend their opinions. In this process lies the path to truth, as well as the highroad to wisdom, to humility, to respect for the other fellow's point of view, and to not a little distrust of oneself as an oracle. Since this has been the democratic way in which both agreement and the compromise of disagreement have been reached in our political life, perhaps it should be the way that consensus is reached on a campus.

Sincerely yours,

John W McCormack

Editor-in-Chief
The Massachusetts Collegian
Amherst, Massachusetts

Dear Mr. Freedland:

In the observation of National Newspaper Week.

College newspapers edited and published by students are an important part of our national heritage of freedom of the press. Students exercising their freedoms of belief and the right to ask questions build new experiences and give new ideas an opportunity to be heard. They learn too the responsibilities of a free press to publish the news, factually and without bias, while expressing their editorial viewpoints in the proper way. With the instruction and supervision of colleges, writing and publishing skills are developed and brought to fruition so that both the readers and the writers may go on to become contributing citizens in our nation's life.

My congratulations on 104 years of publication. May I hope that you have many more.

Sincerely yours,

Leverett Saltonstall
United States Senator

LS:pl

Dear Mr. Freedland:

Thank you for your recent letter and the opportunity to comment in connection with National Newspaper week.

I am pleased at this time to express my strong beliefs in the freedom of the press. Wherever the freedom of the press has been abridged there has been a breakdown in connection with all freedoms. As one who has been connected with public service for so many years, I am well aware of the need for a strong and free press. The communication of ideas between elected state officials and the public is vital to the continuance of our society, which is the most constructive and progressive in the history of the world.

For this reason I am pleased to observe and support National Newspaper Week.

Sincerely,

Cambridge, Oct. 6

To the Editor:

You suggest I take the occasion of Newspaper Week for a word in observance of a free and responsible press. The press should of course use Newspaper Week and every other week to demonstrate the freedom and responsibility that it professes. In this country nothing inhibits its freedom, unless commercial pressures and restraints of office policy. Responsibility demands a conscientious effort to report truthfully and fairly and to present the news in reasonable perspective, and in its comment to attempt to represent the needs and interests of its community in a generous spirit.

The special responsibility of the college paper, it seems to me, is to be a good neighbor to the other activities of the campus community, to represent the college community, insofar as it can, in voicing campus views, in presenting as adequately as time and space allow the significant affairs, developments, programs, plans and outlook of the university.

I like your method of signed editorials, thus making responsibility specific and visible, and I applaud your keeping the page open to other views. To be a forum for community discussion is one of the valuable functions of a newspaper. I hope all the staff find it an interesting and rewarding experience, and that some will continue in journalism, which needs trained minds, disciplined to responsible performance.

ROTC Advisor Initiated Into Honor Society

The Army ROTC honor society, The Scabbard and Blade, recently initiated its advisor, Col. Albert W. Aykroyd, as an associate member. The society is in its first full year of existence and is made up of 11 members of the senior class. Two members of last year's class were also inducted prior to graduation. The colonel was one of the primary organizers of the unit on campus.

The society was formed during the last year with David Blodgett as the Captain. With the added duties of Cadet Colonel, Blodgett was forced to step aside this year.

An election was held to fill the vacancies and Thomas Kiernan was elected to the position of Captain. The executive officer is 1st Lieutenant Evan Fournaris, the finance officer is 2nd Lieutenant Herbert Mangue, while the secretary is 1st Sergeant William Monigle.

The unit promotes better relationship between the university and the military detachment. This is done through active participation in such events as the campus blood drive. In addition, the society promotes better understanding between the different ROTC classes. This is done through numerous smokers and events where the classes can get together on an informal level.

Currently the unit has a pledge class of four members under the direction of Kenneth Needham. Plans are being made for smokers in the near future for the juniors as well as several other social events.

Umies Back Vt. Senator

By Janice Baker

Approximately twenty non-voting University of Massachusetts students are among the strongest supporters for the election of Democratic State Senator Bernard G. O'Shea to Vermont's only seat in the U. S. House of Representatives. Members of Young Independents, a liberal non-partisan political organization on this campus, will cross the state line each Saturday until the November 3 election to circulate pamphlets in southern Vermont, where O'Shea's support is weakest.

A native of Northampton, Mass., and a gradaute of Deerfield Academy and Yale University, O'Shea now lives in Enosburg, Vt., where he is publisher of four Vermont weekly newspapers and peace secretary of the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers).

The students are supporting O'Shea upon the basis of his platform. O'Shea maintains that the voters must send to Congress representatives, who will "deal with the realities of 1964 and discard the myths held by the incumbent Congress and by Goldwater . . . in order to moderate the social dynamic now working among millions of people at home as well as abroad from further violence and mass destruction."

Any persons interested in participating in Young Independents' first project of this year may leave their names in the organization's box in the R.S.O. office. Rides will be provided for as many participants as possible.

Oscar Lewis Tonight — "The Culture of Poverty"

Oscar Lewis, anthropologist and author of The Children of Sanchez, will discuss "The Culture of Poverty" tonight, at Amherst College. The public is cordially invited to attend this lecture in the Babbott Room at 8:00 p.m.

Dr. Lewis' field work has taken him from the Blackfoot Indians of Canada to Texas farmers, from a Cuban sugar plantation to Spain, and from a village in northern India to Mexico. His intensive work in Mexico in recent years has been the basis of his books, Life in a Mexican Village: Tepoztlan Restudied (1951); Five Families (1959); The Children of Sanchez (1961); and Pedro Martinez, A Mexican Peasant and His Family (1964). Most recently he conducted re-research on the comparison of the culture of poverty of Puerto Rican families in San Juan and their relatives in New York City.

Lewis first introduced the Sanchez family in Five Families, a book already regarded as a classic both by literary and scientific standards. He plans to follow The Children of Sanches, for which he spent five years taping interviews and studying the family's way of life, with further studies of the Sanchez family and its descendants, to whom he has been chronicler, counselor, and sympathetic good friend.

Revelers Begin Spring Production Of Campus Varieties

The Revelers have begun work for a successful spring production of Campus Varieties. They are asking anyone with creative ability, eager to earn cash for his efforts, to sign up for a playwriting competition before October 23. Any interested contestant may sign up at the RSO office, where he will receive full technical details. The scripts themselves need not be completed until the first day of classes, second semester. At that time they will be presented to a board of the faculty who will make the final selection. The winner will then be notified and will receive a cash prize of $25.

Geology Lecture To Be Considered

DR. THOMAS B. NOLAN

Dr. Thomas B. Nolan, director of the U.S. Geological Survey, will open the 1964-65 Four College Geology Lecture Series Wednesday, Oct. 14. He will discuss "Mineral Resources and the Nation's Growth" at 8:00 p.m. in Mead Auditorium, Amherst College.

The U.S. Geological Survey is the largest geological organization in the world and employs many hundreds of geologists, chemists, physicists and biologists at three major centers in the nation: Washington, Denver and Menlo Park, California. Despite his administrative responsibilities as director of this mammoth organization, Dr. Nolan has managed to spend about a month each year in the field, carrying on his own research.

Special Forces Train

Some 45 members of the Bay State Special Forces set out on a 20 mile force march Friday night, Oct. 9. The trek was the first experience for the Special Forces' new members.

The purpose of the march was to give the newcomers a chance to take part in a reconnaissance march—one in which contact with enemy is avoided. There were aggressors which the unit had to avoid stationed at various points along the route.

The March

The march took the cadets from the University to Leverett, Shutesbury, Sunderland, and back to the campus. The march was held on a particularly dark night so that the cadets could see the problems of control confronting a unit commander.

It was conducted over unfamiliar terrain with avoidance of roads one of the keys.

Besides learning the problems of control, the cadets gained a better understanding of discipline. Each carried full field gear and an M-1 rifle.

Conducting the march were Cadet Major Richard Murphy and Cadet Captain George Marold. Also accompanying the unit were Cadet Colonel David Blodgett, and the unit advisor Captain Parker.

Little Redmen Top Army's Defense Holds Plebes, 13-3

The UMass freshman football team made good use of a strong goaline defense in opening its season last Friday at West Point with a 13-3 win over the Army Plebes. Army controlled the ball nearly all the first half, but the Redmen gave up only a field goal in holding off the Plebes until the second half, when the UMass offense could hold on to the ball.

MASSACHUSETTS moved only once in the first two periods, but that drive went for their first score. The Redmen took an Army punt on their own 15 and returned it four yards. However, the first four plays from scrimmage resulted in three first downs, and put Mass in the Cadets' back yard at the six yard stripe. A pass from Greg Landry to Al Becker picked up 31 of the 81 yards, and blasts through the line by Kevin Kopka also picked up long yardage. Things looked black for UMass after three plays at the six went for a total gain of one yard. On fourth down, Landry fired to Becker, who made a diving catch in the end zone for the touchdown.

The UMass attack didn't pick up another first down in the half, as they lost the ball twice on punts, once each on a fumble and interception.

Late in the first period Chuck Remmel fielded Pete Nichols' punt at his own five and returned it to the 30. From there the Cadets moved to the UMass four yard line before they were held. Fullbacks Nick Kurilko and Don Wantuck did most of the ball carrying for Army in the drive that took 15 plays. The initial Army first down came on a UMass holding penalty on a fourth down situation. However, an incompleted pass in the end zone on fourth down finally gave the ball back to the Redmen. They also held for four downs near the goal line with less than a minute to go in the half. That time they threw Remmel for a loss on their own three.

The Redmen controlled the ball for the majority of the second half, but they didn't score again until the game had only a half minute remaining. Landry picked off a pass by Dick Shipley and returned it 25 yards for a touchdown. In all Mass picked up 102 yards rushing and six first downs, but they never could get a sustained drive under way. Nichols was forced to punt four times.

The Cadets were held to only 35 yards in the second half rushing and they picked up 34 yards on five pass completions. The Redmen 40 yard line was the deepest Army penetrated, but Massachusetts couldn't get any closer to the Army end zone than the 29 yard stripe until Landry picked off the touchdown producing interception.

the end for 15 and Ross pick up the remaining yards for the first down. Ellis got 13, DeRose went for four more, and Tom DeCosta got three more. Whelchel then hit Ellis on a pass that carried to the Husky 15. Three plays netted three yards and Whelchel hit on a nice 28 yard field goal. UConn tried to pass, but surprised guard Bob Gogick picked off a pass and for a 15 yard gain on a screen. returned it to the Husky 21. DeRose got four more, before whelchel hit him for a TD only to have it called back on a penalty. Jerry then took a rest and John Schroeder took over. He hit Kelly lead with 11 seconds left.

UConn resorted to the long bomb, but Schroeder intercepted and returned it 40 yards only to hive it wiped out by an interfeernce call. So Schroeder did an encore on the next play as the gun sounded. This theft was in the endzone.

Whelchel hit on 6 of 9 for 95 yards and ran for 25 more. Ross led the UMass rushers with 43 yards, while DeRose had 31. Blackney had 50 and Brown 50 as they combined to carry on 29 plays. The Husky passers had a frustrating 5 for 14 atfernoon while getting three intercepted.

Mass is now tied with Vermont for the top spot in the conference and will meet the Catamounts in three weeks at Burlington.

This game though recorded as a loss for the Redmen, proves that they have real ability and fine potential. The team played a spirited game and deserve a lot of credit.

Tuesday afternoon the varsity takes on W.P.I. in a home game starting at 3:00. The Redmen now 1-3 tied Tech last year 3-3 and hold a 16-4 lead in total games played.

Redmen Roll Over UConn, 30-0; Continue YanCon Winning Streak

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts downed the University of Connecticut, 30-0 before a crowd of 7000. The Redmen put on possibly their best overall performance of the year.

The game found the Redmen recovering the defense that made them the best in New England a year ago. Also Jerry Whelchel had a TD pass, three extra points, and a field goal.

UConn received and picked up a couple of first downs. Mass, however, forced the punt. Starting on their 17 the team scored in eight plays with five first downs in six plays. Mike Ross hit off right tackle for 15 yards, Ken Palm swept left end for 18, Whelchel hit Milt Morin for 16 more, and Bob Ellis crashed for 16. Ross was held for no gain, but Whelchel rolled left for 12. That put the ball on the 6. Whelchel called on Ross twice who moved across for the TD. Whelchel converted for a 7-0 lead.

Again the Huskies couldn't move and punted. This time Whelchel, after a couple of line plays, hit Morin for 10, called Ross on a draw, hit Meers for 11 and then found Ellis on the left for a 30 yard scoring pitch. The conversion was wide, but the Redmen were on top 13-0.

Early in the second quarter, the Redmen got good running but two incomplete passes killed the drive. Then after the Huskies couldn't move, they punted to the UMass 30. Dave Kelly ran for eight. Dick Benoit picked up 9, 5, and 4 yards. Leo Biron then hit for 11, Palm for 2 and Whelchel for 9. On the next play, Whelchel lost the ball and the Huskies recovered. Bob Meers retaliated by hitting QB Ted Aceto for consecutive losses totalling 15 yards.

In the third quarter the Huskies had two good drives and ran 29 plays. The Redmen had the ball for two plays. Yet the Redmen also scored. Morin deflected a pass and Bob Santucci picked it off. The guard went 58 yards for the score with Whelchel converting.

UConn began another drive behind the running of Brown for the rest of the period. The UMass defense hit Brown to kill the threat on the Redman 15.

In the fourth quarter, the UMass size really showed as they moved once again virtually at will. Mike Ross went for ten and Palm followed for 8 more, but a penalty returned the ball to the Redman 20. Then Phil DeRose hit Rose swept left end for the score. The conversion was good for 30-0 the one. Biron lost two before DeBenoit, DeRose, and Biron took a turn each and moved the ball to

UConn Over Booters, 1-0; Winning Goal Disputed

by Morris Shubow

The University of Connecticut was not very successful on the gridiron Saturday, but managed to sneak away with a 1-0 victory against the Remen soccer team. The goal scored by David Owalo came with only four minutes left in the game and caused quite a rhubarb. According to the UMass players the goal should have been disallowed because it seemingly went through the side of the net and therefore should not have counted. The referees disagreed and the Huskies had the victory.

Upon examining the goal net it was discovered that the ball could very easily have slipped under the netting on the side of the goal.

The Huskies who had tied mighy Yale 3-3 Wednesday and held a 7-1 victory over Vermont had much more depth than the Redmen, but the UMass team fought hard all the way, and really gave UConn a fight. The Redmen outshot Conn. 28-26 and had some fine opportunities to score, but John Gobel, UConn's goalie, always was there to make the big play.

On the other side, Redmen goalie Larry Martin came up with some great savés. Martin

1000 Tickets — 3 Days

Police Crack Down

by Don Boyd

The campus police revealed today that they are embarking upon a new and very stringent policy with regard to student parking violators.

From this day forward, all student vehicles found in the improper parking lot or in the wrong part of the lot will be summarily towed away and the violator will not be allowed to reclaim the car until the towing charge is paid.

The area on campus which seems to be the most difficult for all concerned is the South or Commuter lot and the cinder lot south of Memorial Hall. Last week no less than 17 vehicles were towed away in one day.

Chief Blasko lamented, "Something is radically wrong with the student body if the police have to spend so large a portion of their time merely ticketing cars, but the parking space problem has become so very acute that even faculty and staff members are often faced with the spectacle of student vehicles parked illegally in the wrong area of the lot at the improper angle."

In addition to the stepped up towing campaign, the ever-famous citation will be more in evidence. In a typical three day period several weeks ago 1,000 tickets were issued to violators by the police.

Chief Blasko emphasized that the monumental struggle of the police department to stop infractions of the parking rules and regulations was due more to misunderstanding than willful violation."

For instance, few students realize that to park in unutilized non-grassy areas would result in police action. No student, faculty, staff member or visitor may park in any areas other than those designated by their bumper sticker or by the signs delineating the parking area.

Such drastic means are regrettable admitted Chief Blasko, but he strongly stated that the parking rules must be strictly enforced if the University is to cope with its present expansion program and the inevitable lack of space which such a program involves.

Drew Pearson Talk Monday To Cover Current Events

by Janice Baker

Drew Pearson, author of the syndicated column, "Washington Merry-Go-Round", will lecture on current events Monday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

The most sought after, yet the most feared, Washington reporter, Pearson gets stories others can't get and dares to print what others would hush up.

Drew Pearson will lecture on current events Monday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Pearson's lecture is one of a half-dozen sponsored annually in the Distinguished Visitors Program by the student group.

A crusader for good government, Pearson regards the job of a Washington reporter as being that of "watchdog of the people".

Born in Evanston, Ill., Dec. 13, 1897, Pearson is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Swarthmore College.

Co-author of five books and a one-time teacher at the University of Pennsylvania, he has been working in the nation's capitol since 1929, when he was with the Washington bureau of the Baltimore Sun.

Pearson, despite his quiet, almost retiring manner, has been involved in more controversies than probably any reporter active today. One of his books, "More Merry-Go-Round", moved the Baltimore Sun to fire him. Pearson has also co-authored three books: "Nine Old Men", "The American Diplomatic Game" and "U.S.A. — Second Class?"

Fife Reviews Senate Goals

by Jim Foudy

By acclamation last Wednesday, the Student Senate elected its Pro-Tem officers: President, George Michael; Vice-President, Bill Landis; Secretary, Judy Crooker; and Treasurer, Joe Piecuch, to their permanent Senate positions.

President Michael then turned the podium over to past president John Fife for a report in which Fife evaluated last year's Senate and set forth a number of objectives which the senators should work toward.

Evaluating last year's Senate, Fife felt that a lack of long-range planning, and the refusal of a "small focal minority" to follow the executive committee's leadership had been its greatest problems.

Reminding the senators of their responsibilites to the student body, Fife asked that they "look ahead and widen your scope . . . meet the needs of your constituencies."

Fife cited the need for a re-evaluation of certain University organizations and a dormitory constitution in order to give students a greater share in dormitory matters. Fife attacked the idea that dormitories are "just a place to sleep."

Referring to possible control over University publications, past President Fife felt that a re-organiation of the internal structures of the mass communications is needed. He proposed a policy-making board of students, senators and faculty advisors to act as "aides and not guardians" to each organization.

Clancy Bros. In Concert Homecoming

The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, four young men whose brogues have been a big hit with American folk music audiences, will top off Homecoming Weekend with a concert on Sunday, Oct. 25, at 2:30 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Clancys — Patrick, Tom, and Liam — first met Tommy Makem and his tin whistle back in 1953 in Ireland.

Eight years later, together again in New York City, the boys auditioned at the Blue Angel night club.

The audience and the critics raved about the singers' debut, so the three Clancys and Tommy Makem decided to go it as a group. Shortly after that first appearance they sang again at the Blue Angel, then at top clubs in Chicago, Minneapolis, and San Francisco.

Their music has drawn full houses at Town Hall and Carnegie Hall in New York, and they have been before television cameras on the Ed Sullivan show, PM East, PM West, the Tonight show, and a half-dozen other programs.

In addition, the boys record for Columbia Records and their own company, Tradition Records.

Wherever they have gone, the Clancys and Tommy Makem have made their Celtic singing speak the language of their lis-

Guild Readies "P.J. Game"

The Operetta Guild announces that its fall production, the Broadway musical comedy hit, The Pajama Game, will be presented two weekends in Bowker Theatre.

Performances will be given Nov. 13, 14 and 20, 21, at 8:15 p.m. There will be an additional matinee, Saturday, Nov. 21, at 2:00 p.m.

The high-spirited song-and-dance show was written by George Abbott and Richard Bissell. The story is based on Bissell's novel, 7½ Cents. Music and lyrics are by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross. Stage direction and choreography for the campus production is by Wayne Lamb with musical direction by Paul Bartsch.

Jim Duncan (Sid) will be starred as a new superintendent of the "Sleep-Tite Pajama" plant in a mid-western town, whose first song is "A New Town is a Blue Town."

Trying to make a good record by keeping production at a peak, he finds himself distracted by the prettiest of the factory girls, Donna Pratt (Babe), who denies interest on her part with the brassy ballad, "I'm Not at All in Love." When she helps organize a slow-down of the employees, a three-sided conflict between management, labor and love results.

Along with this factory-born and factory-torn romance, The Pajama Game relates the jealousy-ridden love story of the

Declamation to be Held

The Zumbyes of Amherst College will perform at the annual Sorority Declamation Sunday.

The annual Sorority Declamation will be held at Bartlett Auditorium Sunday, the 18th at 3 p.m.

In this competition one girl from each sorority will dramatize an excerpt from a literary work.

Regina Harrison, chairman of competition, announced that the girls participating are: Meredith Haltsead, PBP; Loretta Jennings, LDP; Leslie Lazin, SDT; Donna Logue, KAT; M. Patricia McShane, KKG; Gail Moran, SK; Marilyn Purtis, SSS; and Helen Tefts, IGU.

Each dramatization will last about 10 minutes and will be judged by Miss Doris Abramson, Vincent Brann, and Richard Harper of the speech department.

The Zumbyes of Amherst College will provide entertainment while the judges evaluate the performances and select a winner.

At the close of the Declamation, the Zumbyes will have copies of their latest album available.

The Declamation is sponsored by Pan Hellenic Council to promote sorority spirit, stimulate cultural interest, and provide entertainment for everyone on campus.

Attention Class of '67

All those wishing to work on a Las Vegas night which will occur during winter carnival weekend please meet with Alex Dean and Pat Meehan in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union on Thurs., Oct. 22, at 11:15.

Men's Judiciary To Meet With Dean of Men

Regular meetings between the Men's Judiciary and the Dean of Men have been set up this year.

Easier communication between judiciary and administration has been given on the purpose by Chief Justice of the Judiciary, Leonard Charest. He said that meetings with Acting Dean Burkhardt are not new but this is the first time they have been established on a periodic basis. The meetings occur generally once a week.

Charest announced that in the first few meetings this fall of the Area Judiciaries, a Men's Judiciary member will sit in as a non-voting advisor. This policy was begun last year. The Area Judiciary will begin operation next week.

Soph-Frosh Picnic To Be Held Sat.

The executive board of the sophomore class announces that the annual Soph-Frosh Picnic will be held on Saturday, Oct. 17 at 4:00 p.m.

Entertainment will be provided along with refreshments of hot dogs, beverages and apples. It is free to all members of the classes of '67 and '68 upon presentation of ID cards.

Entertainment will include Dave Gitelson, Lois Leventhal and Nancy Reid, and the Statesmen, presenting a program of folk and popular music.

An added feature of this year's picnic will be the broadcasting of the UMass vs. URI football game over the Student Union loudspeaker system.

The picnic is to be held on the Student Union South Terrace lawn, beginning at 4:00 p.m. and lasting until 6:00 p.m. In case of rain the picnic will be held in the Ballroom.

Commander's Call Sponsored by UMass AFROTC

A Commander's Call will be held at the UMass AFROTC headquarters on Oct. 17. Over 22 colleges and universities have been invited to attend this Area A-1 Commander's Call. These 22 member squadrons of the Arnold Air Society will make policy decisions to affect the entire New England area of Arnold Air Society.

The University of Massachusetts will be the headquarters for the New England Area, known as Area A-1. This Area A-1 will be under the command of Cadet Colonel James C. Fleming, Jr., commander of the New England States for the Arnold Air Society.

At the conclusion of this meeting, a dinner will be served to all the participating schools. Angel Flight, the girl service organization for promotion of Air Forces ideals, has also been invited to participate.

Parade Judges Announced

Judges for the 1964 Float Parade contest, in conjunction with Homecoming Weekend, were announced today.

The names of the panel of judges were released by Donald Boyd of Adelphia, general chairman of the Weekend. and by Ralph Lennon, of Alpha Phi Omega, in general supervision of the Parade.

This year's judges will be a member of the Amherst Board of Selectmen; Dr. Mark Noffsinger, Coordinator of Student Activities at the University; Mrs. Miriam Chrisman, Instructor in the history department.

Also, Doris Abramson, assistant professor of speech; and George S. Michael, President of the Student Government Association.

Indications thus far point toward one of the largest and most enthusiastic parades in the University's history. However, all entrants are reminded that the required safety and fire precautions must be adhered to.

In addition, it has been stressed by the Office of the Town Manager that no float is to "exceed 14 feet in height nor have an overall width greater than 15 feet.

Any entries found in violation of these rules will be disqualified immediately and will not be allowed to participate in the parade.

Poli. Sci. Prof. To Speak

Gerald Grady, Business Manager of the University and Professor in Political Science, will speak and lead a discussion on "Political Issues — 1964" at the Sunday meeting of the Wesley Foundation, Oct. 18 at 7 p.m. in the Wesley Methodist Church

Grady is remembered for his part as moderator of the Ted Kennedy and Edward McCormick debates of two years ago.

He has served in the Maine leglisature and as a staff assistant to Senator Bolling in Washington.

He will deal with the issues in the state of Massachusetts elections particularly, with the Rev. Richard E. Harding, Director of the Wesley Foundation and pastor of Wesley Church, raising them on the national level.

WMUA Airs New Series On Sex Ed.

In the interest of higher education, WMUA announces a special series on sex education, the first to be presented on Sunday, Oct. 18 at 7:00 p.m.

This series will be conducted by four doctors of the University Health Services. They are Dr. Gage, Dr. Janowitz, Dr. Haven and Dr. McBride.

Written questions will be answered over WMUA by these men. Boxes for submitting questions have been provided at the Student Union Lobby Counter and at the Infirmary. Students are urged to ask questions as the continuance and success of the series depends on response.

Psychologist To Speak

Dr. Joseph Havens, psychologist here, will be the guest of the Lutheran Student Congregation Sunday, Oct. 18, 1964.

He will address the group and all other interested on the topic: "The Individual And His Religious Experience."

Dr. Havens is an expert on the subject of religious experience, specifically that of young adults.

He will comment on the use of drugs to induce states of mind which allegedly resemble religious experiences and attempt to clarify different types of authentic religious responses.

The meeting will begin at 6:00 p.m. with supper and will be held in IOOF Hall, 17 Kel logg Ave., Amherst.

Dr. Havens will speak at 6:45 p.m. Rides will be available from Knowlton and Hills at 5:45 p.m. The IOOF Hall is located one half block off N. Pleasant opposite the Post Office.

Queen Contestants For Homecoming Narrowed To 14

Fourteen girls have been chosen as semi-finalists in the annual Homecoming Queen Contest.

Preliminary judging was held Wednesday afternoon and the judges narrowed the group from 44 to 14.

The semifinalists are: Class of 1965 Maaja Sildoja; Class of 1966 Mary Lou Leonard. Elaine Bello, Anne Marie Creeden, Elaine Howe, and Marilyn Long; Class of 1967 Barbara Taska, Diana Alvarez, Janice Ferry, Roxanne Gile, Judy Sturtevant, Barbaara Soule and Claudia Willis; Class of 1968 Catherine Creedon.

The semifinals will be held Sunday evening at 7:30 in Memorial Hall. At this time the five finalists will be selected. The queen and her court will reign over the Homecoming

Hillel to Host Dr. Mayhew

Dr. David Mayhew of the department of government will present an analysis of the roles and attitudes of Jewish citizens in American politics on Sunday, Oct. 18, in the Commonwealth Room, Student Union.

Dr. Mayhew will explore certain prevalent political views which have been associated with America's Jews.

In this crucial campaign year, political scientists such as Dr. Mayhew are examining the influence Jewish voters will have on the outcome of the election.

What are the political chances for Jewish candidates? Does a so-called Jewish vote exist? How are politicians trying to court this vote? How do Jewish attitudes on the local level affect the policies of the local government?

These are some of the aspects of Dr. Mayhew's subject — questions which constantly plague people in politics. Dr. Mayhew's lecture will be preceded by an excitingly tasty bagel breakfast and entertainment by the "Hirsch", a folksinger.

N.E. Newspaper Conf. Held

A new UMass journalism program was outlined for 30 editors, representing about a dozen New England newspapers, was conducted Tuesday in the Hampshire Room of the Student Union. They also discussed the role of newspapermen as professionals.

Arthur B. Musgrave, professor of journalism and English at the University, explained a new two-year program of graduate work in journalism beginning this month. College graduates with at least three months' experience on newspapers have been selected for training as New England Newspaper Fellows on this campus. They are being sponsored in the program by their newspapers.

The first part of the program leads to a certificate awarded by the University and the New England Society of Newspaper Editors. The second, optional for those with the certificate, leads to a master's degree in one of many fields.

To earn a certificate, each Fellow must complete two eight month reading courses, supplemented by writing projects. The first is intended to provide additional background in writing about public affairs and to present journalism as a field of scholarship. The second eight month course will give each Fellow the opportunity to study a specific major, such as English, government or sociology.

The aim of the program is to advance journalism as a profession, to educate the graduates for superior performance and to provide background knowledge used in daily newspaper work. Hence, it combines the academic with the practical. It also offers each Fellow a sense of direction for his interests.

Professor Musgrave asked the editors convened to "build a better professional spirit of the press" by sending applicants. He noted that the general job turnover was very good, with many available positions in newspaper work.

Turning toward the role of journalism in society, he pointed out that "a newspaper has a social function. People need the press for a self-educating process," he remarked.

Professor Musgrave, who earned his doctorate from the University of Minnesota, is a former Neiman Fellow in Journalism at Harvard. Before his teaching career, he held positions on the Baltimore Sun and Houston Post.

State University Imbalance

In its pell-mell rush to provide ever expanding higher educational opportunities, America is in danger of producing a generation of uneducated intellectuals.

This danger is particularly real right now at the University of Massachusetts.

The state university in Amherst has, during the past four years, increased its student enrollment 68 per cent, increased faculty salaries 25 per cent, increased sponsored research projects from $500,000 to $5 million, added over $27 million in new buildings and finally gained membership in Phi Beta Kappa after years of striving for recognition from the nation's most prestigious academic honor society.

Within the next few years the University of Massachusetts will not only continue this rate of growth in Amherst, but will also open a new medical school somewhere and a branch campus in the Greater Boston area.

This is all very fine. But a number of UMass faculty members believe the state university has expanded at the expense of liberal education, the fons et origo of all higher education.

They charge that the student-faculty ratio in freshman-sophomore liberal arts courses has gone far beyond the over-all university ratio of 15-1, that ill-prepared graduate students actually teach many of these basic courses and that as a result few UMass students are receiving an adequate grounding in the liberal arts.

As the dean of Columbia College warned the nation last month, "We are in danger of producing a generation that has spent more years than its predecessors in educational institutions but has not gained the kind of literacy that was once regarded as the mark of an educated man."

In expanding, the University of Massachusetts seems to be emphasizing graduate programs and faculty research while the need is for a larger teaching faculty at the undergraduate level.

The Legislature should take a jaundiced view of UMass President John W. Lederle's forthcoming request for even more graduate fellowships, even more research funds and very little for the improvement of the university's undergraduate liberal arts program.

The time has come to halt the imbalance in the expansion of the University of Massachusetts.

Political Note

Because of the upcoming presidential and gubernatorial elections, the Collegian beginning Monday will print any political discussions which the students of the university might wish to write. We will print as many, both pro and con, as space will allow. These editorials will reflect the views of the authors, and not the policy of the Collegian.

APPRECIATION

October 8, 1964

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge my appreciation, and that of my staff and the employees of the new South Dining Commons, for the spirit of cooperation, understanding and patience which students demonstrated during the "shakedown phase" of that facility.

As with any new building, there were a number of unexpected problems which, when discovered, were corrected as expeditiously as possible. We will continue our vigilence to ensure that students are served efficiently and "tastefully."

Sincerely

More Spirit

To the editor:

After seeing the dismal attempt at a rally Friday night, we are convinced that school spirit has hit an all time low. The team has a 12-1 record, is on its way to the Yankee Conference Championship, and approximately 100 students were interested enough to show their spirit. Granted, it was a long weekend and many went home, but where were all the freshmen and sophomores with Saturday classes? Are juniors and seniors so sophisticated to the point of apathy? A rally takes about one hour including the parade. We are sure not everyone was studying from 7:00 to 8:00 on a Friday night.

Overlooking the lack of student participation for the moment, what is wrong with the band? They couldn't even condescend to march from Brett. Instead, they parade in front of Morrill, without uniforms, and file in late like a funeral march. That is not what we call a school band. The least they could be is cheerful and dressed.

The pep organizations cannot do it alone. We need the co-operation of band and students alike. We hope that the next two rallies show the support which the team and the University need.

Crime and Punishment

There are two matters concerning University Handbook regulations for women which I would like to consider.

First, regarding the matter of Handbook testing for all university women, it is stated in the Handbook that "violations cannot be excused on the grounds of lack of knowledge." This is a generally accepted basis for all of our laws. But the Women's Judiciary Board has gone one step further and declared that ignorance of the law, IN ITSELF, is a crime. The case in point: those who take the exam and fail are punished,notfor having broken any Handbook regulation, but for MERELY NOT KNOWING the contained regulations. Perhaps my ignorance is showing, but I know of no situation where the legal structure of our country declares ignorance of the law, IN ITSELF, to be punishable.

Secondly, assuming the first point to be a crime with a sound basis, I question the punishment handed out for this and other infractions, or supposed infractions, of University regulations. A close friend, upon being informed that she had failed her Handbook exam, was told not only that she had thus forfeited her Friday night signout privilege, but also, that she could receive no callers of any kind and make or receive no phone calls. People in jail are allowed this much! To make a girl stay in her dorm after she has broken a University regulation is one thing; to deny that girl or any individual on this campus, regardless of sex, communication with other people is an entirely different matter.

Authority is granted to the Board of Trustees, the several deans, and the Judiciary Boards on this campus to issue suitable punishment FOR CRIMES COMMITTED, but who is to tell another (assuming others' rights aren't being infringed upon) when, and to whom any person is to speak?

Barry C. Kurth

Is Atlas Shrugging?

The recent concessions made to U.A.W. by Chrysler, Ford, and G.M. is an event to be applauded only by the minds of a vegetating mob. How can anyone who assumes the dignity of a rational being expect a company like Ford to act as an insurance agent for its employees and a financer for its robbers yet survive as a producer. A nearby daily paper, in a column designated for news, calls the decision "proof that labor and management can reach an equally beneficial agreement without outside interference." "Beneficial" the reporter calls an act of self-destruction. A fitting memorial, no doubt, to Henry Ford and others like him, who have made our present standard of living possible.

Can this incident be excused as merely something which will ltad to better living conditions for the working class in the United States? Or have the labor unions gone too far? The theme of Atlas Shrugged suggests an answer:

" 'Mr. Reardon', said Francisco, his voice solemnly calm, 'if you saw Atlas, the giant who holds the world on his shoulders, if you saw that he stood, blood running down his chest, his knees buckling, his arms trembling but still trying to hold the world aloft with the last of his strength, and the greater his effort the heavier the world bore down upon his shoulders—what would you tell him to do?'

" 'I ... don't know. What . . . could he do ?What would you tell him?'

" 'To shrug'."

You may question my interpretatio nof the U.A.W.'s strike; but try to deny the implications of "the Brain Drain" in Britain, where "scientists with newly acquired Ph.D.'s have been leaving the country permanently at a rate of at least 140 a year," or the strike of the Canadian doctors in Saskatchewan and of doctors in Belgium. Justify, if you can, existing laws which limit production and regulate prices, the rapid approach of the railroads to obsolescence, impending legislation which will forbid Ford to produce all of its own parts since "production should be more freely distributed," the recent charges brought against Johnson & Johnson, the U.S.D.A. spy plane, and the candidacy of Big Brother for the presidency of a "free society."

For those of you who are still unable to see the horrors of our present predicament, I have but one last thought. If you don't see that Atlas, holding the world on his back, is beginning to shrug, wait a minute and you might fall off.

"Born Yesterday," first produced in 1946 and later made into an award-winning film, is set in Washington, D.C.

The play evokes its laughs through a variation on the eternal triangle.

A young reporter is hired to tutor a racketeer's mistress in the social niceties. He is too successful, and she joins him in a revolution against the racketeer and his shady dealings with government officials.

Medford junior Charlotte Werlin stars as Billie Dawn, the dumb blonde originally played by Judy Holliday.

Ken Bordner portrays racketeer Harry Brock, and Les Titcomb of Franklin, N.H. will appear as Paul Verrall, the young reporter.

Others in the cast of the University Theatre production include Tom Kerrigan, Caledonia, Minn.; Ken Glen, N. Amherst; Paula Norton, Brookline; Chuck Interland, Milton; Laura Bishop, Pittsfield; Phil Bedaw, Greenfield; Judy James, Dighton; Dave Rosewell, Wakefield; George Dimock, S. Amherst; and Jim Stockman.

Other plays to be produced by the theatre group this season are Dion Boucicault's "Streets of New York," Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," Friedrich Duerrenmatt's "Romulus the Great," and Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie."

Dates for Area Judiciary selections have been announced by John Greenquist, Chairman of the Men's Affairs Committee. The selection committee is composed of six members of men's judiciary and six members of the Student Senate.

Area I selections will be held on Saturday, Oct. 17 at 1:30 in Worcester A and B.

Area II selections will occur on Sunday, Oct. 18 at the same time in Worcester A and B.

Flying Redmen Appear

The University of Massachusetts "Flying Redmen" performed recently in the annual Columbus Day Parade in Springfield.

The drill team has been actively training and preparing for this parade. Called to perform at this time, Cadet Major Carl Stidsen's Area A-1 champions staged an impressive display of the "Marching Spin Manual" and other maneuvers which helped them to gain first place in New England trick drill teams.

The AFROTC's marched in two groups; the veteran members and the new members in the regular Air Force Blue.

Cadet Major Stidsen's area champions will also perform this fall in the University of Massachusetts Homecoming Parade on Oct. 23 and in the Veteran's Day Parade in Northampton on Nov. 11.

Redmen Booters Lose; Prospect Good vs. Rhody

by Morris Shubow

The University of Massachusetts soccer team dropped their fourth in a row Tuesday to Worcester Polytechnic Institute 2-0. The Redmen have now been shut out two games in a row and outscored 13 to 5 in the five games played. Their record stands at 1 win and 4 losses with five games to go. UMass has lost two games by only one goal they had been able to come up with some offensive punch could be 3-2 instead of 1-4.

In Tuesday's game the Engineers did not score until 1:25 of the second period when Dennis McQuillon booted the ball into the strings for what proved to be the winning goal. Gonzalo Trochez scored for W.P.I. at 1:40 of the third to give Tech the victory. W.P.I. is now 3-1-1 for the season, beating A.I.C. and the University of Hartford, losing to M.I.T., and tieing Tufts.

The Redmen who outshot Tech 21-17 have lost to Williams, Trinity, UConn, and W.P.I. after their impressive opening game victory over Coast Guard.

UMass travels to Kingston, R.I. Saturday to meet U.R.I. Last year UMass won 4-0 and the Rams have lost all three of the games played in the series.

The Redmen's next home game is Oct. 29 versus Clark.

CROSS COUNTRY . . .

UMass will face Central Connecticut State this Saturday for the first home meet of the season. State has also lost through graduation one of their finest runners, Jim Keefe. They still have a formidable opponent in the person of Ray Cruthers, but whether or not he will have the team to back his challenge up is a question that will be answered on the hills of this campus tomorrow.

Defense Battle Being Waged

Milt Morin, Bernie Dallas, Jack Schroeder and Don Hagberg are waging a close battle for top defensive honors on the Redmen football team. Last fall Head Coach Vic Fusia instituted the Redmen Club, based on defensive achievements. Letters, spelling the word Redmen, are awarded following a thorough check of the game movies.

There are 12 ways to win letters. They are: intercept a pass; return an interception for a touchdown (two letters); recover a fumble; cause a fumble which UMass recovers; make a tackle inside the opponents' 20 yard line on a kickoff; make a tackle for a safety; tackle an opponent for a loss; tackle an opponent for a 10-yard loss or more (two letters); block a punt, extra point or field goal; return a punt or kickoff for a touchdown (two letters); make three unassisted tackles (3 assists equal one unassisted); and make an extra effort on any defensive play.

The letters are put on the player's helmet each week. Morin has one Redmen plus an REDM; Dallas has one Redmen plus an R; Schroeder and Hagberg have one Redmen. Dallas has been out of action with an injured knee since the second period of the Buffalo game.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

After the encounter with Connecticut, very few fans were not convinced that the Redmen have finally attained their potential. Individual personnel, the major factor of any ball club, has always been attributed to the squad. However, without teamwork and high spirit, no team can expect to excel. Both characteristics were manifested by the team against UConn. Defensively, another Yankee Conference shutout highlighted the record books. But more important was the vigorous line play that opened up holes for the backfield and held their opponents to minimum yardage. Incomparable Jerry Whelchel continued to direct the offense, which literally steam rolled over the visitors from Storrs. The Huskies, who once dominated the Yankee Conference, disgracing UMass more than once on the gridiron, fought a hopeless battle. Outweighed nearly twenty pounds per man, the Huskies played valiant ball in the third quarter, in which UMass never gained control of the ball offensively, but scored on a fine defensive play.

Among the individual efforts, sophomores, the precursors of future Redmen squads, must be highly lauded. Bob Santucci, "the big scooter", has played consistent and aggressive ball all season, although limiting himself to the typical chores of a guard. Saturday, Bob demonstrated his versatility. After "Big Milty" had blocked an attempted pass. Santucci picked off the battered pigskin and scooted 58 yards for the touchdown. The fans jumped to their feet and stood in awe as the big 215 lb. guard flashed by the stands, easily outdistancing his opponents. Another outstanding performer was Dick Benoit, the former Agawam High star. Big number 32, anxiously waiting to play all year, finally got the nod from Coach Fusia. Benoit more than justified his coach's decision. He carried in three successive plays for 9, 5, and 4 yards. Each time grabbed the ball, lunged forward, and refused to be brought down without a second effort. This brand of football is appreciated not only by the team, but also by the fans. There is no reason why Benoit should not be used more in future contests. Although not unusually quick, he has balance, drive, and the most important factor, great desire. With more experience the young sophomore could easily be one of the hardest driving backs to have played for the Redmen in many a year. Bob Gogick, another sophomore with potential, played a fine game.

This week the Redmen visit the Rhodie Rams at Kingston, Rhode Island. Presently ranked number 5 nationally, in the small college division, Massachusetts will attempt to prove to her Yan Con foes that our rating should be at the major college level. Every team will be out to scalp Mass., but this will be an extremely difficult task. Even Harvard, the only victor over UMass. in two years, found her victory to be a Pyrrhic one, since the injuries incurred in that contest, were responsible for the loss to Bucknell. The Redmen, lacking only Bernie Dallas, hope to record another consecutive Yan Con victory.

Girls Have Cultural Program

by Maureen Gamacke

The girls of Eugene Field House have an active program of social and cultural activities.

A program committee headed by Joanne Najemy working with the preceptor, Dr. John Fenton of the government department, has sponsored lectures, debates and panel discussions.

Politics, population research, civil rights and civil disobedience are among subjects discussed in the weekly programs.

The committee has planned a lecture on contemporary art, a panel discussion on interfaith dating and marriage conducted by a minister, a priest and a rabbi and a discussion on career opportunities.

Miss Najemy says the program committee has been organized to work in conjunction with the Faculty Fellows for the dormitory. The aim is to establish a closer student-faculty relationship and to provide varied programs and activities in an informal atmosphere.

Duel Between Tackles

Fusiamen Set Sights On Rhody Ram

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts football team set its sights on the Rhode Island Ram this weekend, as it seeks to help its high position for the upcoming game with Vermont. Both the Catamounts and the Redmen have 2-0 records; each has a conference game prior to their meeting in two weeks that should be for all the chips.

The Redmen, cannot afford to look beyond the diversified attack of the Rams. The home club will use a pro-style attack with Greg Gutter at the controls. He throws a lot of passes, and can be very effective.

The Rams will bring a 2-2 record into the game. They dumped Northeastern, 20-11, and UNH, 22-8, while losing to Maine, 23-15, and Vermont, 16-8.

An interesting duel will be between a pair of outstanding tackles on each side. UMass has their Bob Burke and Dick Kehoe against Mike Murgo and Joe Buesing, All-Conference and All-New England. There will be little weight difference respectively between these tackles.

The Ram line as a unit will be outweighed by the Redmen, but not to the extremes that existed last week. The guards will be Bob Gamble and Joe DeFalco. The center is Gerry Dusanenko.

Gutter will have a good receiver in end Rick Jackson. Dan Dean holds down the other end slot. Jim McMahon plays the flanker slot and is the other favorite target of Gutter. Bill Bryant is the leading rusher from the fullback slot while John Thompson does the speed running in the halfback spot.

The club is potentially one of the more dangerous on the schedule for the Redmen. Despite the fact they had 19 returning lettermen, Gutter, Buesing, and Jackson are the only seniors.

As far as statistics, Whelchel is the leading scorer with 24 points. This does not count the four TD passes he has thrown or the one that was called back against UConn. He has completed 31 of 50 passes for 423 yards and ran for a 140 more.

Ken Palm leads the rushers with 154 yards and a 5.7 average. Bob Ellis is third behind Whelchel. Meers and Morin continue to dominate the receiving statistics with 22 of the 34 completions between them.

Speedy Redmen halfback Phil DeRose fights off would be tackler and is off and running.

IFC CORRECTION

AEPi defeated ATG 32-6 last Wed. night, and now has a 5-1 record. The Intramural Sept. report was incorrect.

HOLY CROSS TICKETS

Tickets are now on sale in Room 210 of the Boyden Building for the UMass-Holy Cross football game. Student tickets, in the general admission stands, are $1.50 and reserved seats are $3.50.

Reserved Seats for B.U. game—Homecoming—are now sold out.

General Admission RUSH SEATS will go on sale the morning of the game at 9:30

First Dual Meet

Harriers Down UConn 23-37

The Redmen harriers won their first dual meet of the season last Friday at Storrs against UConn. The final meet score was 23-37.

Stealing honors once more was Terry Carpenter, the UMass harrier whose continually improving running has marked this sophomore for great things in the next few years. Not only did he take first place in the meet, beating out UConn's Wooten in a final dash to the finish, but he set a new record on the 4.5 mile course, running a time of 23:25,32 seconds better than the old record.

UConn took second and third place, but from there on the meet was UMass' all the way. The Redmen took the next five places in times ranging only from 24:15 to 25:19.

Worthy of special note for their performances Friday are junior Bob Larson, who has been showing tremendous improvement as the season progresses, and sophomore Bill Thoms who has also been moving swiftly up the ranks. These two boys finished an overall sixth and eight respectively.

Once more the UMass effort was sparked by the fine running of senior co-captains Tom Panke and Bob Ramsay. Both harriers, who ran fifth and seventh in this outing have been scoring consistently for UMass this season. And it would be more than unfair not to mention Steve St. Clair, the Redman's second place runner this Friday and another sophomore who bears watching.

The rest of the Redmen ran better than the final score would indicate, since UMass ran twelve men but is allowed to displace with only two men above the first five. Thus, Carl Lopes, Charlie Mitchell, John Andersen, Jim Parker and Robert Craigin all came through in what could have been winning form.

There can be no doubt that Coach Bill Footrick was extremely pleased with the results. Everyone ran his best and was more than equal to the task.

"Born Yesterday" Opens U.T. '64-'65 Season

Cast members look on while Harry Mahnken, at right, director of production of "Born Yesterday," explains a scene. The Garson Kanin comedy will be presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings in Bowker Auditorium.

Professor John Fenton will deliver the first University Theatre lecture of the 1964-65 season.

Presented in connection with the theatre's production of "Born Yesterday," his talk, entitled "The Robber Barons," will be given on Wednesday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. in Bartlett auditorium.

Asked about the choice of a government professor as the one to comment on "Born Yesterday," director Harry Mahnken said, "This play is more than a lightweight comedy. It's a comedy all right, but a comedy with a message. Part of that message is political." He left it up to Mr. Fenton to comment on his title, "The Robber Baron," something he may be asked to do next week on a local radio station.

Professors Mahnken and Fenton will be guests of Augustine Cavallaro on WTTT's program "Conversation." Those who have AM radios may hear this interview at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday, October 20.

The lecture the following evening is free. Tickets to the play are available at the Student Union box office.

by Carol Neilon

Charlotte Werlin promises a remarkable performance as Billie Dawn in Born Yesterday, the University Theater's first fall production.

The role calls for an unusally dumb blond which Charlie (Charlotte) certainly is not.

"I'm the funniest thing in the play," she explains. "This is certainly not type casting. I'm not the Billie Dawn type until I'm on the stage."

This is Charlie's first formal appearance in University Theater. She is a junior theater major who previously performed backstage tasks. Last spring, she was stage manager for the One Act Plays.

What made Charlie decide to try out for this play? She explains: "I love comedy, and this is the first real comedy they've done here. Besides, it was a challenge. It's so unlike me — the sexy, blond Billie Dawn."

The actress said she has done nothing particular to prepare for the part. Just rehearse, and rehearse, and rehearse, and . . .

"'Let me ask you. Are you one of those talkers, or would you be interested in a little action?'", she said, quoting a line from Act I in falsetto with a Brooklyn-Bronx accent.

"I've gotten so used to using that voice that at times I lapse right into it," she said.

"I love the part. It's a fun show, and the guys are great. Tom Kerrigan plays Ed Devery. It's fun to see because he's always played the part of an old man. He's really so good as the drunken lawyer you'd think he's been practicing for years."

The leading lady sounds promising enough, and the play, which runs from Oct. 22 through 24, is a noisy but delightful comedy.

Greeks Sponsor Lecture By Decorated Pilot

Major John W. Keeler of the United States Air Force, Office of Information, will talk on "Our American Heritage" on Tuesday, Oct. 20 at 8:00 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Major Keeler's lecture is being sponsored by both the Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils.

Major Keeler attended the Augusta Military Academy in Virginia and the Virginia Polytenic Institute. He entered the service in 1941 until 1945 and then became editor and publisher of two newspapers covering northeastern Pennsylvania.

He was recalled to duty with the Air Force in 1950 for the Korean War and served as a fighter-bomber pilot with the famous "Black Panther" Squadron flying 166 jet combat missions in the F-80 shooting star against the Communists. He returned to the United States in 1952, the most decorated man in the squadron. His decorations include the Silver Star Medal, Distinquisred Flying Cross with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Air Medal with ten Oak Leaf clusters.

Major John W. Keeler was born in Wyalusing, Pennsylvania since May 1962, he has been assigned to the USAF Academy, Office of Information.

All students and faculty are urged to attend this interesting lecture.

Beardslee In Recital

Soprano Bethany Beardslee, called "unique among singers today" by critic Howard Klein, will give a recital next Wednesday, Oct. 21, at the University of Massachusetts.

The recital scehduled for 8 p.m. will be held in the SU Ballroom.

Trained at the Juilliard School of Music, Miss Beardslee has a repertoire which ranges from the baroque to contemporary music.

In the past 10 years she has been acclaimed for her singing at major music festivals in the U.S. and Canada.

Miss Beardslee, who records for Columbia and Epic, has also sung with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, participated with the Budapest String Quartet at the Library of Congress, and has been a member of the New York Pro Musica. In addition, she has been the featured performer at Fromm Foundation concerts and has made several cross-country recital tours.

Her recital at UMass is the second in a series of eight musical events sponsored by the University's Concert Association this year.

Tickets for Miss Beardslee's recital will be available at the door.

HOMECOMING

Adelphia To Choose Queen

Activity is nearing a high crescendo in the preparation for Homecoming Weekend.

Individual dormitories, fraternities and sororities are in the process of constructing floats while other student groups are making last minute arrangements for the traditional weekend.

In one of the more pleasant of assigned tasks, members of Adelphia, the senior men's honorary society, met with the twelve remaining finalists in the Homecoming Queen contest last night in Memorial Hall. The field of twelve was narrowed down to five after last night's coffee hour. The five finalists' names will be announced this afternoon.

In addition to viewing the queens, Adelphia which is responsible for the general organization of the weekend, has been planning for the Friday night rally and dance.

At the rally which will immediately follow the parade on the back lawn of the Student Union will see the crowning of the queen, the awarding of twelve plaques to the winning floats and performances by the cheerleaders and the band.

Working in close cooperation with Adelphia is Alpha Phi Omega, the University's men's service organization. This group is primarily responsible for the organization and conduct of the parade. Under Chairman Ralph Lennon, APO, has set about to make this Homecoming parade into what promises to be the best ever.

The Galdeans will be the performing band at the dance which will follow the rally in the S.U. ballroom.

Quakers Host Mr. Mayer

The Mount Toby Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends (Quakers), who have recently opened their new meeting house in Leverett, is sponsoring its first meeting on campus in the Colonial Lounge of the S.U. at 6:30 on Wednesday, Oct. 21.

Mr. Milton Mayer, the Visiting Lecturer for 1964 in the Department of English, will speak on "Religious Experience and Social Action". The purpose of the talk is to stimulate discussion on the whole area of individual religious belief and search and the wider world of social action.

Mayer has taught at the University of Chicago, the Great Books Foundation, William Penn College, Frankfurt University, and the Commenius Theological Faculty in Prague.

His two books are "They Thought They Were Free", a record of interviews on why Germans felt free as Nazis, c.1957 and "What Can a Man Do", 1964.

It is hoped that this will be the first meeting of a College Friends' Group. All are welcome to attend.

Roister Doisters Need Plays

Roister Doisters, the campus dramatic organization, has announced that it is seeking suggestions for a program of one-act plays to be presented in February.

"The plays" said RD President Tom Kerrigan, "will be our contribution to the UMass theater season."

At the first RD meeting on Tuesday, the Executive Board asked that all members and prospective members of the organization submit their favorite one-act plays to be considered for production later this year. Suggestions may be left in the Roister Doister box in the RSO office.

"We are also seeking a director", Kerrigan said, "and when the plays and the director are chosen, we will have readings, choose casts and crews, and get the shows under way."

Member's of Roister Doisters are also hoping that their theatrical activties will earn them membership in the National Collegiate Players, and made plans to investigate the requirements of that organization.

Army ROTC Is Growing By Raising Pay and Tradition

As has been seen by those fans at the last two football games, there is a new tradition in the making. The Society of the Scabbard and Blade has set to use a cannon to blast a round each time the Redmen score.

The gun is mounted on the chariot of Beta Kappa Phi and manned by a three man crew. Evan Fournaris is the crew leader with Herbert Mongue his assistant. William Monigle is the trigger man.

Many of the large schools in the midwest and south have such a device to signal a score and new UMass has joined the ranks. It can be a big boost to the Redmen especially at an away game, where there are few home fans.

The Precisionettes drill team were the only ones to brave the rain and perform at Saturday's game at Rhode Island. The UMass band never got off the buses except for the drummers who work with the drill team. The URI band never showed up.

Despite the fact the unit got a little wet, its efforts were well appreciated by the fans at the game and made the trip far more beneficial than merely riding to Rhode Island.

The cadets in the Army ROTC are most happy about the recent bill that passed Congress giving them not only a pay raise for the advanced course cadets, but also providing an extensive scholarship program for them.

Coming up on November 3 will be the annual Fall Review for the Army ROTC. At this time the awards for the first half of the year will be presented.

In addition, the first cadet of the month award will be given out.

"Poverty" Theme Of N. E. Student Christian Movement

Poverty in America is the theme for the annual fall conference of the Student Christian Movment in New England. The conference will be this weekend October 23 - 25 at Springfield, Mass.

The purpose of the conference will be to explore the course and effect of proverty and to deal with the various kinds of people who are affected most by the dynamics of poverty. The students will have the opportunity to live in a "pocket of poverty" in Springfield and participate in the conference with people who live in ghetto areas.

Ben B. Seligman, director of the Department of Education and Ressarch, Retail Clerks International Ass'n., will give the opening lecture entitled, "The Extent and Culture of Poverty — The Overview," on Friday evening.

The chaplain's office announces that the cost for the weekend is $13.00. Scholarships up to $8.00 are available.

$4,920 DAILY

Dining Commons South

A gigantic operation takes place three times a day at the new Dining Commons South.

No less than 2400 students eat each meal there at a total cost of $4,920 per day. According to Mr. Blanchard, manager, the Commons opens for the day at 5 a.m.

The main problem that had to be solved as the Commons South opened in September was the enormous waiting line. As a result, students found themselves waiting as much as an hour or even more to eat.

With the doubling of the original two lines, and more efficient food serving, this problem has been overcome. Yet, even now one can find a long line at certain times of the day. As explained by Mr. Blanchard, "We cannot control the speed at which the students arrive."

Another problem for about a week and a half in September was that the food elevator didn't work. This meant that all food had to be carried. For example, each milk container weighs about 60 pounds and a tremendous number of continers are used daily.

A third problem that is always present is a charge that the food isn't very good. In defending the Commons food, Mr. Blanchard made a very justifiable distinction between "disliking poorly prepared food" and "disliking the type of food". For example, there is quite a difference between having a hot dog served raw and just not happening to like hot dogs.

Mr. Blanchard explained that it is traditional to complain about institutional food.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS

Campus Group Steps Up Campaigning

by Ilana Matyka

Pre-election activities are increasing in intensity as Nov. 3 draws near.

One of the groups most actively concerned with state, local and national campaigning is the Young Democrats Club at the University. The club's president, Dave Podbros, hopes for an all-out effort by young Democrats during these last three weeks.

At the local level, Hampshire County register of deeds candidate Robert Czelusniak and Representative Allen McGuane of Greenfield have requested help from the student organization. Their grass roots campaigning will call for lots of legwork because here the volunteers are especially useful in distributing campaign literature.

Each candidate for state-wide office has a separate core of volunteers at the University. Tentative plans have been made for a rally shortly before Nov. 3, when it is hoped Lt. Gov. Bellotti will attend. He has asked the state office of the Young Democrats to aid him in his campaign for the governorship.

President Johnson's supporters are planning a Johnson Week encompassing Homecoming Weekend. Efforts are being made to get the "Johnson Bandwagon" (a professional campaign group) here for one day. An organization of Johnson girls is campaigning enthusiastically for the President's election.

Other activities planned by the Young Democrats include a symposium in which faculty members and grad students will be invited to participate. Suggestions have been made for a panel discussion and debate with members of the Young Republicans Club.

The University Young Democrats Club hopes to demonstrate that through their efforts young people can be an effective political force.

Second In a Series

"Night Life" Recommended For Normal College Tension

by Peter Hendrickson

Ed. Note: Part 2 of a series on University Health.

Who stares back when you look into a mirror?

Is it some fiend with sunken eyes that resemble a Boston road-map? Do his hands tremble as he puts VO-5 on the tooth brush? Does he live in a single and still snarl at his roommate?

Could this be you? Do you feel like an alarm clock with 10 seconds to go? Three exams this week and you're still not sure where the class meets?—RELAX—Bear in mind these cracks.

1. NEVER BE AFRAID TO PLAY. Some educators advocate playing children's games as a way for adults to relax. Do you remember the fun with checkers, monopoly, craps, roulette, five-card stud and even that old favorite—1 . . 2 . . 3 . . promiscuity?

2. BE EARLY. Set your watch ahead, tell your friends what time it will be in five minutes. Imagine the satisfaction of being early for an 8:00. I dreamed that I strolled to class in my . . .

3. LOOK FORWARD TO FUN. Are you completely fagged after a gruelling day, too pooped to pop to the pub? Reports show that those who have an evening activity to look forward to feel less tired than those who envison another evening of yawns.

4. PLAN A TRIP. Weekends don't necessarily mean solitary confinement in the dorm. Bicycle to a nearby hot spot. Hike through the autumn woods to a secluded glen. Think of the perverts anxious to help the enterprising hitch-hiker.

5. FLOAT TENSIONS AWAY. Ah, the ecstacy of a sorching shower, muting your vibrant rendition of the "Marseilles." Then quickly turning on the cold, tingle through an up-tempo encore.

6. DINE OUT. Have you sampled the fine cuisine at the "Copper Kettle?" Watch the notices for the gala opening of the Southwest Dining Plaza.

Alpha Theta Hosts G. S. S. Area Conference

Alpha Theta chapter of Gamma Sigma Sigma was the host of a regional conference held here at UMass the week-end of October 10th.

Representatives from Boston University, New York City College and UConn attended the conference. Sheila Armstrong, former president of Gamma Sig at UMass, attended as the national representative.

For two days the girls met and discussed national and local problems they had in common as a service organization. One of the highlights of the weekend was a speech on service, delivered by Dr. Stanfield of the sociology department at the banquet.

SOUTH . . .

From his own experience in the service and at other institutions, Mr. Blanchard concludes that, "generally, the preparation of the Dining Commons food is better."

Finally, Mr. Blanchard stated, "Most people don't know a good food standard in the first place. All they know is that they like what they have been fed at home."

The Commons only uses fresh, natural food, the manager reported. It uses no powdered eggs, no dehydrated eggs, no potato flakes and no powdered milk. Hillside Dairy of Greenfield is under contract to supply the Commons with fresh milk. Fruit and produce are procured locally.

About 99 percent of the food for the Commons is obtained through the state purchasing office. The qualifying company which bids lowest gets the contract.

Another aspect of the Commons concerns the possibility of opening a snack bar. In 1950, Dining Commons North had a snack bar. When the Student Union was constructed in 1956, this snack bar was discontinued. As students and fee-paying parents may realize, the cost of each boarding student's meals has gone up this year. One reason given by authorities was the reopening of a snack bar at Dining Commons North—which has not developed. As it now stands, states Mr. Blanchard, "plans are being made."

Student Political Thought

Hatter or Hare?

....."Cheshire Puss," she began, rather timidly, as she did not at all know whether it would like the names however, it only grinned a little wider. "Come, it's pleased so far," thought Alice, and she went on, "Would you tell me, please, which way I ought to walk from here?" . . . .

"In that direction," the Cat said, waving its right paw round, "lives a Hatter and in that direction, "waving the other paw, "lives a March Hare. Visit either you like: They're both mad."

—Lewis Caroll, Alice in Wonderland.

Next month many voters will face a predicament similar to that of Alice in Wonderland. Although both Johnson and Goldwater have their strong supporters, there are thousands, and maybe even millions of Americans who favor neither candidate. Many of these people will vote for Johnson, not because they think he is the right man for the presidency, but because they fear Goldwater and his nuclear policy. Other people will vote for Goldwater not because they are pro-Goldwater, but because they disapprove of Johnson's history of political dealings.

In either case, the question will be not who is the right man for the job, but who will be the lesser of the two evils? What is worse, many Americans are so vehemently opposed to both candidates, that they will not vote at all.

Discontent with the 1964 campaign can be attributed to the vicious tactics employed by both sides. Political commercials using little girls for emotional effects have been sponsored by the Democratic National Committee to portray Senator Goldwater as a trigger happy madman who will lead the United States to a nuclear holocaust. Goldwater retaliated by condemning the Johnson Administration as "soft on Communism."

The vice-presidential candidates have gotten into the act with as much enthusiasm as their presidential counterparts. On his campaign tour Hubert Humphrey accused Goldwater of corrupted conservatism and nihilism. Bill Miller was in the thick of the fight also, jabbing away at the opposition even harder than Humphrey. In Austin, Texas he waved an old deed for 20 parcels of land owned by Johnson which had a restrictive clause against Negroes. Miller went on further to label the Administration's war on poverty as a "cruel hoax to buy votes," and to insist that President Johnson has hushed up the Bobby Baker Case in order to have a better chance in the election.

In short, the presidential campaign has degenerated from a discussion of important issues to a contest of hostilities. The trick centers around the ability to fire accusations at the opposition so that it will have to defend itself. Such a practice has greatly cheapened the positions of both candidates in the eyes of the public. What is worse, it has led to political apathy and disgust which might result in a poor voter turnout come November. The recent Jenkins affair is certain to make the situation even worse.

Yet, one factor should be kept in mind. Although the presidential choice in this campaign appears sterile, it is, nevertheless, a choice—a liberty which millions of people in Communist enslaved countries do not have. Let us protect this liberty of choice by an impressive voter turnout next month.

Johnson Image

It's about time we Smart Collegiates, Urbanites, New England Uncorruptables and the like, stop reflecting the propaganda-made image of President Johnson as a principleless "politician." It's about time we spewed all the anti-Johnson nonsense that we swallowed in the 1960 Democratic nomination race. Let us look at and talk about realities for once, instead of spouting out the misformed generalities that we see in the trick-mirror of our ignorance.

It is sickening and tiring to hear the exaggerated innuendos about the crooked politics in which President Johnson is supposed to have indulged. How many really know the facts, the details of Lyondon Johnson's career? We absorb the filth of the cheap news media and think we are "in the know." How many have gone to a library and traced this career in accurate sources? We have let our hobgoblin minds distort the record of the man. Furthermore, we don't like the general state of morals in the political game—and we condemn those who play it (forgetting that somebody must if we are to have any government at all) instead of blaming ourselves for perpetuating a corruption-inducing practice based on the contest between superficialities rather than ideas. If there are any immoral undertones, they are reflections of ourselves and not our political leaders.

Another image that we hold of President Johnson concerns the ideological element in his motivation. It is often said, for example, that the strong, liberal record that the President has established so far, exists only because L.B.J. wants to stay in office—that he is really a "Conservative Democrat." What, may I ask, is the proof of this? "Oh," says the ignorant dolt, he voted against the civil rights bills during Eisenhower's administration. Is there anyone myopic enough to think that a Senator from the South could have voted for such a bill and hoped to remain in office where he would be able to work for other programs in the interest of human welfare? This is especially true in the case of Johnson who once won an election by only 87 votes. If we want an accurate picture of the sincerity of Lyndon Johnson's purpose, we should not lose sight of the fact that he was the most effective Democratic Senate majority leader in thirty years. We should note that he was first elected as a New Dealer during Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration; We should note Johnson's obvious attachment to that Great Liberal—the way he constantly refers to him, idolizes him and emulates him. And we should take an objective, not tear-eyed, look at Johnson's remarkable presidential record. Who can believe that the progress achieved in the last year could have been accomplished by someone who was not absolutely sincere and devoted? I am referring to bills like the Civil Rights Law as well as the War-On-Poverty, the Appalachia and dozens of other bills that received less publicity. Of course, it is true that the tragedy of last November gave some momentum to the passage drive, but it is just as obvious that President Johnson is a man of Faust as well as Jefferson: HE ACTS, HE DOES THINGS. And lastly, let us remember that President Lyndon B. Johnson is the man who says we give foreign aid "because we love people"; He is the man who speaks of "fulfillment of the Spirit" as the ideal of society, the goal to be striven for by government.

Lyndon Johnson is not a "politician" and a conservative-liberal. He is a Political Artist and a true Liberal in the tradition of human welfare.

Out of Step

Perhaps the greatest fault with Goldwater's philosophy rests in the fact that it is alien to twentieth century values upon the limits of government, and it is just this concern of governmental limits, that makes the Johnson-Humphrey ticket so appealing. The senator from Arizona is disturbed by "the strong arm of central rule," and has called for the curtailing of dominant federal government. According to Goldwater, man can indeed succeed on his own merits, and the Federal government, rather then helping the individual, is destroying, "his basic freedoms."

Now this theory is fine for 17th century England and France, but one wonders today why Goldwater should have such needless fears. The Utopia of sure success for the individual who tries, is no longer a plausible theory. (Indeed, was there ever such a theory modified to such an extent by the senator?) On the contrary, since 1932 the positive potentialities of government, long theorized by the early philosopher, have become obviously apparent to both intellectuals and the people alike.

No longer can one flay out at the federal government sticking its nose in welfare for the people, aid to state schools, or help for the stricken farmer. No longer does Goldwater attack social security, but his views on federal aid and farm assistance remain woefully evident. Goldwater is not in touch with the times, and for this reason, in 1964 he is not in touch with the voter.

PRACTICAL JOKES

To the Editor:

Last Thursday evening, while one of the residents of Hills North was taking a shower, someone exploded a cherry bomb in or near the shower stall.

The immediate results were probably as anticipated by the one who threw the bomb: There was a loud noise, and one frightened young man emerged in much confusion. The ultimate results were not anticipated (I hope): The victim had an immediate and total loss of effective hearing. Fortunately, he did not suffer a ruptured ear drum. Recovery will be slow, however, and during recovery he will have considerable difficulty with distracting noises. Attending classes and studying will be difficult and inefficient. Some permanent loss of hearing may result.

My concern in bringing this to your attention is not to apprehend or make a goat of the prankster; this I leave to you. What I do wish to draw to your attention, and to the attention of them that all members of their group act in a manner which reall students, is that this thoughtless and senseless act was a crude and cowardly means of attracting attention. It was not funny. It was not imaginative or original. It was not the type of practical joke which even the victim can respect as being clever. Its complications could have been anticipated, had any thought been given to the possibilities. (I have no suspicion that this was done with any malicious intent—it was simply thoughtless.)

I call upon the men of Hills North to establish in their residence hall a climate which does not condone this type of activity. The mutual concern of all of spects the rights of each will be the most effectual means of control. It is far better than seeking outside disciplinary control.

Furthermore, I challenge then, in their lighter moments, to gain satisfaction from pranks which reflect originality on their part but which do not jeopardize from welfare or destroy the property of others. It can be done!

Folk Music Entertains UMies

By Frances Buckhoff

Although folk music may be a means of expression for some self-appointed "cause" seekers in an urban coffeehouse, for the UMass student it is purely a means of entertainment.

Folk music is a trend. When the Beatles were "in", the Hatch shook with "I wanna hold your ha-a-a-a-nd." Now we have Sunday afternoon concerts in the Student Union with performances by students. It is a popular trend and a very profitable one as well for the many individuals and groups who spotted it early and started making albums with folk standards such as "Stewball" and "Liza Jane."

Ask the average University student who his favorite folk singers are and he's likely to tell you that he likes the Christy Minstrels better than the Kingston Trio. There will be talk of Joan Baez and Bob Dylan, but it will center more around their private lives than their music.

When Bobby Dylan gave a concert at the University last spring, the student body flocked to hear the notorious advocate of civil rights and "ban the bomb." Many came back disappointed: 'It sure wasn't what I expected!"

Most UMass. students have never heard the names of Leadbelly, Blind Lemon or Woody Guthrie. They have instead accepted a commercial brand of music which capitalizes on a musical tradition older than this nation.

A few of these folk fans go all out and attempt to identify with a cause and with the "pure" folk singers by wearing scuffed Wellingtons, old jeans, long hair or beards to achieve that "ethnic" look.

The campus these days is taking on a very coffee house character. Those who sit in the back of the Hatch with old suede jackets and green bags are seldom the folk music fans that people brand them. They may be art or English majors, very proclassical in musical taste or they may truly be musicians.

However, the musicians play for the sake of the music alone and more often can be found playing rock 'n roll guitar and jazz or classical piano.

Folk music basically tells a story — usually anti-segregation, anti-war, pro-brotherhood, pro-working class or pro-mothers—and who can argue with motherhood. College students feel a sense of identity by advocating end to war or deploring the shooting of Medgar Evers by singing about them.

Even when it is being extremely profound or moralistic, folk music has as much popular appeal as "She was just seventeen. You know what I mean."

cepted by Ellis and the game ended with UMass back in possession at the Rhody 15.

Whelchel hit on 8 of 11 passes of the short variety all in the first half. He also ran for 76 yards, but gave the scorer back 35 of them as Dean dropped him for a number of losses. Ellis had 59 yards in 13 carries and Ross had 51 in 16 carries. Palm was up there too with 41 in nine carries. Meers pulled in four passes. But the workhorse of the game was Bryant. He carried 26 times, 17 in the first half, for a total of 106 yards, to keep himself among the top rushers in the conference.

UMass now stands at 4-1 on the year, 3-10 in the conference while Rhody stands at 2-3, 1-3 in the conference with the biggest margin of loss only eight points.

J IS FOR JAZZ

Argo and Blue Notes Jazz

By Rez

Many good albums have been received. Here are a few:

From BLUE NOTE, now in its 25th year, arrived six albums.

THE MOST EXCITING ONE is Dexter Gordon's "A Swinging Affair" featuring Dexter, Sonny Clark, Butch Warren and Billy Higgins. The album swings from beginning to end. "Soy Califa" is the best cut. Downbeat recently named Dex "new star of the year."

The 25th anniversary album from BLUE NOTE features a collection of better works from Miles to Horace Silver. For one who has interest in JAZZ and would like to learn "Who's Who"—the album is perfect.

Andrew Hill, Bobby Hutchinson, Richard Davis and Elvin Jones combine for "Judgment." The album is good, but especially tends to drag noticably in spots. The many different timings used.

WHAT CAN BE SAID of Wayne Shorter's latest work is that the pacing and timing are perfect. Backed by Lee Morgan, McCoy Tyner, Reginald Workman and Elvin Jones "Night Dreamer" is well worth a listen. The album features all Shorter originals. The title tune shows well the fact that Wayne Shorter is one to be not easily forgotten.

Eric Dolphy, Freddie Hubbard, Richard Davis and Anthony Williams are grouped for "Out to Lunch." All Dolphy originals are presented. The album is deep, but good. What is lacking here is that the other artists are not given ample time to perform.

"Breaking Point" brings together Freddie Hubbard, James Spaulding, Ronnie Mathews Eddie Khan and Joe Chambers. This work is very good for the simple fact that all the artists are young. Their work shows innovation; the results are fine. The best cut is "Blue Frenzy," an original by Hubbard. This album should be added to your collection.

From Chicago arrived three very good works from ARGO.

James Moody's latest is "Comin' on Strong," featuring Moody, Kenny Barron, George Eskridge, Chris White and Rudy Collins. It's a free swinger, one of his best works. The best cut is "Fly me to the Moon." Moody is a product of the Bop Era, but the album does not show it. Not since "Last train from Overbrook" have I heard Moody sound better.

Ramsey Lewis recorded live is a rare treat. This album was made at Washington's Bohemian Caverns. Backed by Eldee Young and Red Holt, Lewis glides through "West Side Story," "People," "In Other Words," "The Shelter of Your Arms" and "Something you Got." This work is excellent, one of the best albums of the year—enough said.

ALBUM OF THE WEEK: "Summer Dawn" by Sahib Shihab with Ake Persson, Francy Boland, Jimmy Woode and Kenny Clarke. The album was recorded in Germany in 1963 and is an expression of soft, subtle quiet jazz. The music follows beautiful lines and the structure is excellent. "Waltz for Seth" is the best cut."

BOOK REVIEW

The World of the Addict

At the end of Naked Lunch, a phantasmagoric view of the inner workings of a mind attuned to addictive drugs, author William Burroughs states: "I am a recording instrument . . . I do not presume to impose 'story' 'plot' 'continuity . . . " Indeed he does exactly this. The loose novel takes the reader through a multitude of episodes dealing with the world of the addict.

Perhaps this book could be categorized as sensationalism and shelved with other literary exposes of any and all of society's "vices". Yet Naked Lunch finds redemption in its blatant and at times disgusting denouncement of American and international life at both its modal and polar character.

From a moral perspective Burroughs writes on several topics of pertinacy for now and the future. The description of the addict, the cures, the myriad of drugs and the scathing portrayal of both the "pusher" and the bureaucratic organizations devoted to "junk" enhances the reader's knowledge of the insidiousness of drugs. In dealing with Capital Punishment he conveys a scene relating the gallows with sexual aberrations. Implicity, the obscenities he finds within such acts point to his disgust with execution.

The book is difficult reading and at times is at a symbolic level rarely found in novels today. However the total impact of the disgust and hopelessness of addiction and the invidious acuity of his perception of American and world-wide realities emerge with clarity from the mind of a junkie.

Weather Kept Score Down

Redmen Outlast Rhody

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts continued its path to a second consecutive Yankee Conference Crown as it downed Rhode Island in the wind and rain before 1500 soggy fans. The score was 7-0 and came on a drive after the second half kickoff that saw Phil DeRose make the only score.

Neither team penetrated the others 20 yard line in the opening half. Massachusetts got a fine start as Ken Palm returned the opening kickoff to the Rhody 42 only to see it go for naught as Mike Ross was caught clipping.

Massachusetts didn't let that stop them as they set off on a drive that seemed to be sure to end in a TD. Jerry Whelchel hit Bob Meers on three passes during the drive, and the entire backfield took a turn at getting some yardage. A score was not to be made, however, as the drive bogged down at the URI 25 when the wet pikskin got away from Whelchel on a rollout. It was a ten yard loss. A play later Dan Dean cruised past a pass blocked and nailed Whelchel for another ten yard loss.

Rhode Island then put their fullback, Bill Bryant to work. They called his number six times in a row and he picked up 33 yards only to see his team removed from scoring range by a holding penalty. UMass forced the punt by URI, returned the favor, and then received another one. This time Palm tucked the pigskin under his arm and twisted and turned until he was nailed at the Rhody 39, a fine 44 yard effort.

Whelchel then had Meers in the clear at the five, but the pass was short and Meers was caught rather obviously pushing off. That took the old sting right out of the UM effort and soon they had to punt again.

Bryant once again carried six times, this time for 25 yards before a fumble was forced at the UM 31. The Redmen then proceeded to move down field, until the URI defense called a halt to the activities at the Rhody 28. Phil DeRose carried twice and caught a pass, but each time was nailed in his tracks.

URI was forced to play without Greg Gutter and when he didn't show, the Rams couldn't throw. Paul Briccocola handled the task of quarterbacking ably, but couldn't complete a pass. This loss put a real crimp in the Ram attack. Mass. did a good job of shutting off the running in the rest of the half and it remained a scoreless tie.

The second half was completely dominated by the Redmen. Rhody never got out of their own territory, but had the visitors as frequent guests in the same area. The ball started to move with Bob Ellis on the carrying chores as soon as the first play was run from scrimmage.

Ellis picked up one and Ross did the same. Then Ellis exploded off a reverse for the first down on a 10 yard gain. Ross picked up four, Palm swept left end for 14, Wehelchel carried to the 21 for 13 more, Ross powered for five, and Ellis hit for five more. Rhody dug in to hold Ross for two yards, but Ellis ran the reverse for an eight yard gain to the one. Whelchel carried for the first down before before DeRose hit the left tackle slot for the TD. Whelchel's kick was good and that was it.

Mass continued to threaten after finally holding Mr. Bryant in check, after he carried for two more first downs. Ellis picked up 13 to the 35 of Rhody before three plays lost 7 yards. Morin then tried a field goal from the 49 on what was a fine defensive play as the ball reached the endzone and came out to the 20, elliminating the runback. URI couldn't get going so they punted early in the last quarter. Or rather they tried to. The observant UMass staff caught the fact the Rhody kicker, Pete Gallagher, was standing only 10 yards deep rather than the normal 13. So the rush was put on, the punt blocked. UMass got the ball on the Ram 49.

With DeRose doing the bulk of the work, the team drove to the 14 before the Rams' defense stiffened. Morin tried a field goal from the 28 which went wide.

The lack of a passer hurt again as the Rams were shut off and forced to punt. This time it was only partially blocked, as it got to the 50. There were only five minutes left as the Redmen moved goalward again. This time the big gainer was a 23 yard run by Whelchel. The drive came to a halt inside the Rhody five as the home team pounced on the elusive pigskin.

A desperation pass was inter-

Snap 4 Game Losing Streak

Booters Down Rams 3-0

By Morris Shubow

The University of Massachusetts soccer team broke a four game losing streak shutting out the University of Rhode Island 3-0. The game Saturday at Kingston, R.I. was played under terrible conditions and the Redmen proved to be the better mudders dominating play most of the game.

Gary Gibbons opened the scoring for the Redmen in the first period getting his 4th goal of the year on a penalty kick. Then in the second Craig Dunlop scored his first goal of the season giving the Redmen a 2-0 margin at halftime.

In the last period senior Dick Konieczny, substituting at center-forward for Kevin Lyons, scored the final goal making the final score Redmen 3, Rams 0.

The Redmen with this shutout improve their record to two wins and four losses. Goalie Larry Martin of UMass was called upon to make only 10 saves while the Redmen had more than twice that number of shots on the Ram goal.

In four years the Redmen have beaten the Rams every year. Last year UMass also shut out the Rams 4-0.

Next Saturday UMass travels to Medford, Mass. to take on Tufts University. Last year the Jumbos surprised the Redmen 1-0. In the games over the years UMass holds a big edge with 16 wins and 3 losses.

The Redmen play their last home game October 29 versus Clark.

Bethany Beardslee Concert Features Mozart, Schubert

Miss Bethany Beardslee will appear in concert this evening at 8:00 in the Student Union Ballroom. The soprano will present a program including works by Mozart, Schubert, and Schoenberg.

Miss Beardslee's stature is unparalleled in the recital, chamber, and oratorio works. While a student at Julliard, she began to perform many styles of music—from Baroque to contemporary—and for the past ten years has gained critical acclaim for her singing at major festivals in the United States and Europe.

She will be accompanied by Robert Helps, pianist, assisted by George Jones, clarinet, who have also been recorded with Miss Beardslee by Epic and Columbia.

Tickets for the recital will be available at the door; students will be admitted by ID.

60 Floats Begin Homecoming

The more than 5000 UMass alumni expected to return to campus for homecoming this week end, Oct. 23-25, will find a full lineup of events waiting for them.

In the weekend's main attraction, Coach Vic Fusia's defending Yankee Conference champion Redmen will take on the Boston University Terriers at 1:30 p.m. Saturday on Alumni Field.

The week end proper will kick off Friday night with the traditional float parade and rally, scheduled for 6:30. A rally dance will follow at 7:45 in the Student Union.

This year's parade, with about 60 floats, the Precisionettes, marching band, and Flying Redmen also taking part, will start from the center of campus, move along North Pleasant St. to the center of Amherst, then return via Main St., Triangle St., and North Pleasant.

The 1964 Homecoming Queen will be crowned at the Friday-night rally dance.

The Queen, who will reign over the remainder of the week end, and her court will be introduced to spectators at half-time of the Redmen-Terrier football game.

Saturday at 10 a.m. UMass Associate Alumni will hold their annual meeting and elections in the auditorium of Memorial Hall.

The west bank of College Pond will be the scene of this year's tailgate picnic, scheduled for 11 a.m. on Saturday. About 2000 alumni are expected.

Following the B.U. game, refreshments will be served in Memorial Hall.

Two dances will be held Saturday evening—the Homecoming Dance at 8 in the Student Union ballroom and a faculty-alumni dance at 8:30 in Memorial Hall.

The folk-singing Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem will top off the 1964 homecoming week end Sunday at 2:30 p.m. with a concert in the Curry Hicks Cage.

Drew Pearson

"The Week That Was" Discussed

by Janice Baker

No subject was too controversial for discussion, when Drew Pearson, noted Washington journalist, spoke last night before an audience which filled the Student Union ballroom almost to capacity. Pearson spoke quite candidly about "the week that was"—last week, during which the world experienced four dynamic events: the Jenkins moral case, Mr. Khrushchev's sudden dismissal, England's Labor Party victory and the explosion of Red China's first "A" bomb.

"Mr. Khrushchev had no idea that this was pending," remarked Pearson and proceeded to analyze the reasons for the premier's sudden exit from the Kremlin. Mr. K., considered "soft on capitalism", had failed to achieve a reconciliation with Red China, because of its forceful Communistic approach. Mr. Khrushchev had to face the failure of his farm program, as well as opposition from the world's largest standing army, the Red Army. This opposition was a result of his policy of reduction of conventional weapons. In addition, he had neglected to deal effectively with the question of the independence of the satellite nations.

Pearson presented a realistic picture of the premier having presonally interviewed him a number of times. In a 1963 interview, Pearson was informed of the Russian plan for limited unilateral disarmament designed to increase the amount of money available for purchase of consumer goods.

Drew Pearson, well-known news columist, shown as he commented on "the week that was" in the S.U. Ballroom on Monday night.

Pearson discussed President Johnson and the problems which he faced one week after assuming office. Among them was the question of the sale of wheat to Russia.

As a conclusion to what was almost a fire-side chat, the remarkable journalist ventured a few predictions for the future. Concerning the result of the upcoming national election, Pearson believes that "Johnson will win and win handsomely, although the Jenkins case could change some votes." He maintains that the new Kremlin policy shall not differ very radically from the old. Both new rulers, he feels, are relatively moderate men. However, Pearson foresees an increase in the influence of the Red Army, and, therefore, possibly more Russian intervention in the liberation wars of Laos and Viet Nam.

He predicts a continuance of peaceful co-existence in the form of keen competition economically, socially and politically between Russia, now experiencing the beginning of democarcy, and the United States.

Americans, Pearson advocates, must remain alert, dedicated and aware of the facts to be able to face and solve our problems. "No group can contribute more to it (this responsibility) than colleges."

A question and answer period followed the conclusion of Mr. Pearson's lecture.

Homecoming Finalists Chosen

Three juniors, one sophomore, and one freshman have been chosen to be finalists in the Annual Homecoming Queen Contest. Juniors Anne Marie Creeden, Elaine Howe, Mary Lou Leonard, sophomore Judy Sturtevant and freshman Catherine Creedon were selected Sunday from 14 semi-finalists.

Anne Marie Creeden is 19 years old and 5'4. She is a Math major from Lawrence and was nominated by Johnson Dormitory. Elaine Howe is 19 and 5'6. She is an Elementary Education major and a member of Chi Omega Sorority. Elaine is from Lynn and was nominated by Adelphia.

Mary Lou Leonard is 20 and 5'4. She is majoring in Physical Education and is from Milton. Mary Lou was nominated by her sorority, Sigma Sigma Sigma. Judy Sturtevant is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and was nominated by Kappa Sigma fraternity. Catherine Creeden is 18 and 5'6. She is majoring in Elementary Education. Catherine is from Brockton and was nominated by Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

One of the girls will be crowned Queen of Homecoming Weekend, Friday at the rally following the float parade. The queen and her court will be presented to the Homecoming Game crowd at halftime ceremonies.

Judges at the semi-finals were John Orr, UMass basketball coach; Bob Healy and Wade Houk, Adelphians; Bernard Bussel, Math Department; Evan Johnston, Executive Director of Associate Alumni; and Dick Bresciani, Assistant Sports Information Director.

New Commons Opening Soon

South Commons, the new 1.4 million dollar dining facility, will be opened formally at ceremonies on Sunday, Oct. 25, at 12:30 p.m.

Gerald J. Grady, UMass business manager, will preside at the ceremonies. William N. Davis, director of dining halls, plant, and residences at Brown University, will be the main speaker.

Other speakers will include President John W. Lederle; George L. Pumphret, Trustee and Chairman of the Building Authority; and Dr. William F. Field, Dean of Students. Right Reverend Monsignor David J. Power, Chaplain to Catholic Students, will give the Invocation. A reception will be held at 11:30 a.m., prior to the formal ceremonies.

The new Commons, built by the UMass Building Authority and to be paid for on a self-liquidating basis, was designed by Hugh Stubbins and Associates of Cambridge. Its most striking

S.U. Improves Food Services

by Tom Gagnon

Under the competent supervision of Food Services director John Colvins, the Student Union offers a comprehensive catering service available to students, faculty and outside conference groups.

This program, ranging from catered coffee breaks to reasonably priced multi-course dinners, forms an integral part of the Union's food service department.

Centering around six functional dining rooms, accommodations are available for groups numbering up to 110. However, accommodations for 800 can be arranged through use of the Commonwealth Room and the main ballroom.

Mr. Colvins, who received his B.S. in hotel and resort management from the University of Vermont, has gained experience ranging from industrial cafeteria management in Bennington, Vt., to commercial restaurant management at the original Treadway Inn in Williamstown.

AFROTC Program Expands

Lt./Col. Roy D. Simmons, Professor of Air Science, on Tuesday, October 13, during the regularly scheduled Mass Drill, outlined the proposed Officer's Education Program bill now before the President of the United States. This bill will "revamp the AFROTC program as we now know it."

The present $27.00 subsistance fee allowed to Advanced Cadets would be increased to between $40.00 and $50.00 per month if the bill is signed. The University would then be able to continue its present program with the additional retainer fee for the student.

Another program, completely different from the present one, is quite possible. Grants or scholarships may be awarded to high school seniors in accordance with a highly competitive examination given by the Air Force. Scholarships of $1100 and upwards would be given for each year of the four years in college.

Still another plan would be limited to juniors and seniors in college. The final decision as to which program would be implemented rests with the administration.

In addition to the outlining of the new OEP, Lt./Col. Simmons was delighted to announce that the 370th Cadet Wing AFROTC is now being sponsored by the 961st Airborn Early Warning and Control Squadron of Otis AFB, Falmouth, Mass. The project officer at Otis for this sponsorship program is Captain Edwin D. Lewellyn and his University counterpart is Captain Robert Gailey.

In addition to visits to Otis and planned dining-ins at both UMass. and Otis, a tentative agreement has been formulated to supply transportation by the 961st, which flies the RC121, for Cadet field trips to the following bases. Goose Bay AFB, Laborador; Ramsey AFB; Kindley AFB; Tyndall AFB, Florida; Wright - Patterson AFB, Ohio; McGuire Field, New Jersey; Stewart AFB, New York; and Otis AFB. Two flights a month out of Westover AFB for approximately twelve cadets on a two-hour local flight has also been tentatively scheduled. The UMass Drill Team and Glee Club have also been scheduled for performances at Otis.

The meeting continued with an announcement that Lt./Col. Simmons is now able to nominate one student per year to the Air Force Academy. The student must, however, have completed one full year of college or university work. The designated cadet would then be eligible to enter the Academy as a freshman with credits received at the former school transferable. The Academy also offers a Master's program.

The program concluded with the presentation of awards to Distinguished Air Force Cadets. The recipients are eligible for the Distinguished Military Graduate Award which will, in turn, make them eligible for a regular commission in the Air Force.

Greeks To Sponsor U.N. Carnival

The Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council are jointly sponsoring a United Nations Carnival to be held on Oct. 30, 1964. All proceeds from this event will be donated to the United Nations Fund.

Fraternities and Sororities as pairs will construct booths by the side of the pond.

These booths will feature fun and excitement and fees will be slight and pleasures great.

The Greeks will operate such games as dart throwing, pie heaving, and flying beanbags. So warm up your pitching arm and make plans to have an entertaining evening on Oct. 30 for the benefit of the U.N. Fund.

Lesson No. 1 in Practical Economics
for diamond-minded students

Most of the reason for the retail price of a diamond is the fact that this is the customary procedure: jewelers buy from wholesalers. They pay high rentals for their stores. They own fancy fixtures. They have higher priced help than most other retailers. They pay a lot for insurance. They have an inventory-obsolescence problem. They spend a lot for advertising, accounting and other business expenses. They need and deserve a high mark-up. They couldn't exist without it.

But take us. We buy where the wholesaler buys. That can save up to 1/3 to begin with. No inventory. We sell from a catalogue of natural color photos. No overhead because we have no fancy store. No capital investment. No obsolescence. No insurance. Nothing but top quality at bottom prices. See for yourself.

I have a normal sex drive and do not possess any sexual aberrations. Depending on the date become extremely frustrated. and the situation, I very often Girls will no longer go out with me because I just sit there and foam at the mouth. How do I explain to them that I am normal and want them just as much as they want me?

I. PAVLOV

Dear Mr. Pavlov: Read Freud!

Dear Schmedrick: Last night, as my girl and I sat by the campus pond, we were suddenly aroused by some strange sounds occurring nearby. As we sat there debating whether to leave or not, the sounds got worse. Should I have investigated the sounds first, or just have left?

EMBARRASSED

Dear Embarrassed: Could those sounds possibly have been coming from the south side of the pond at about 9:30 last night? It's a good thing you decided not to investigate?

Problems? Write to SCHMEDRICK, care of the Collegian.

How daring are you?

Some daring excursions are planned for the fall by the University Outing Club. Franconia Notch will be the site of a rock-climbing expedition. Flat water canoeing in the Adirondacks will challenge neophytes and calloused pros. Trails in the Amherst area will be explored by foot and on skis. Winter activities of mountaineering and skiing are planned later in the season.

The trips are geared to beginning hikers, climbers, and outdoorswomen. The club will provide all necessary equipment.

"May I borrow your notes?"

Welcome To Yahooland

Hello, hello, a Yahooish greeting to you all. You know, a lot of people don't know what 'Yahoo means Well, if you were to examine your copy of Gullivers Travels which is in your complete home library, (haf!) you would find a character called a yahoo, a character who sit in the trees and defecates (a polite word for an Anglo-Saxonism they ask us not to use) upon those below. Does it become clear to you now, the allegory of satire and parody, defecating on those below?

Instead of trees, Yahoo sits up here in the Student Union to grind out gentle chides of those who deserve them, namely, everybody. Satire is the mirror of mankind and each time someone looks into this mirror, they see themselves, as humorous, as they really are.

The college humor magazine was, perhaps, the first exponent of modern satire and remains the only outlet for the young to chastize their elders and themselves, for later on, there is little chance. In this respect, then, anyone has a chance to let off a little steam while they still can and the Yahoo is open to anyone.

This year, there will be four issues of our magazine and one can read or write of boundless things, from Barry to beer; but remember one thing before you sit down. You'll be looking at yourself.

Rub a dub dub it's time to scrub. WMUA is getting ready for the OPEN HOUSE on Homecoming Weekend. Get on your pogo stick (you don't need to register that) and hop right down. Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon to 10 p.m., UMies past and present are welcome to WMUA in the Engineering Building. Support your campus station.

SPEAR HEARS: Have you heard the words "masturbation," "hymen" and "virginity" lately? Sunday night on WMUA four University doctors, Gage, Janowitz, McBride and Haven, held an open discussion on sex and the college campus. This program will be heard every other week. They will answer the questions your roommate won't. Write any questions and bring them to the box in the infirmary or the Student Union Lobby counter. This is not a joke nor an attempt to impress certain views on students. Questions such as "Why is sex so prominent?", "Is it a campus or cultural problem?" and "A girl asks: What is expected of me on the first date?" Curious or querious?

Do you think of opera as something parents attend to impress their friends? How about trying "Aniara," a modern opera about a spaceship hit by meteors and going off course in the year 2038 AD? Something a little different for you by Karl-Birger Blomdahl on "Musicale" this Sunday at 8 with host Joe Ross.

Whose Student Union?

Editor's Note:
(The following is by Jonathan Fife, former President of the Student Senate. The Collegian will be printing these articles to bring to the students the ideas, experience, and viewpoints that Fife has gained through participation in major student activities.)

QUESTION: Is the Student Union for the Students?

The Student Union was opened on February 1, 1957, and since that time has been running along the same organizational structure with the policy making body being the Student Union Board of Governors. This body is made up of eight students, two faculty, one alumni, and three Student Union Staff members. It is here that the major policies of the Student Union are made, it is here that priorities of building usage are decided, and it is here that the prices of basic products and services are set. But my question is how much say does the Governing Board really have? In the past it has looked to many that the Director, then Mr. William Scott, was the sole decision making person. Is this possible? Can a building that is being paid for by the students through a direct tax be in complete control of the Administration? How much influence does the student, the average student who is not in any position of organizational power, have in the operation of the Union?

The Governing Board is the policy making body of the Union. From the Board these policies go to the Director of the Union who is responsible to the board and to the President of the University for the implementation of these policies.

As the Director is responsible for the day to day operations of the Union—how often does he let things go by that would make his job harder than if he was to inforce them? This is a question, and I do not intend that this question should be taken as an accusation towards the Director, but nevertheless, the question is an important one to ponder.

In the past we have seen policies established, only to seemingly be ignored. In the past D.V.P. Programs have been held in the W.P.E. Building when only a small club was using the Ballroom. Did the director refuse the request by DV.P. only because it was easier to run a square dance (a Union sponsored program), than it was to set up the room for one thousand students to hear a distinguished speaker, or was his decision based upon a policy set by the Governing Board? If the latter is true the Governing Board was at fault—if the former, the Director was at fault.

The two facilities used the most by the students in the Union are the Bookstore and the Hatch. Every semester the students become more and more aware that the prices of books are high and the size of the Hatch is too small. Who is responsible for each? Under what policy is the Bookstore run—greater profits for the Union or just that the cost of books are high? Why has not the Hatch been enlarged? Is it in order to see how many people can be cramed into one spot or because it is impossible to build a bigger Hatch?

If you are finding a lot of questions here, and very little answers, you are right. I do have a lot of questions and not very many answers. I do know that the total income of the Union has grown from $371,910.43 in 1961 to $503,083.81 in 1964. I do know that the Union spent $35,000.00 to rfurbish four rooms in the Union A planning committet to build a new addition to the present Union had been formed two years ago and yet nothing concrete has come out about a new Union or a small addition to the present Union. But I do not know the answers behind these facts.—Dhy is there no addition, where exactly was the $35,000.00 spent, what does the increased income mean to the students?

Having questions and very little answers bothers me, and I want answers. I know of no other place to go but to the people in charge. This Sunday night, at 7:00 p.m. I intend to find some of these answers. On WMUA Dr. Noffsinger, Director of the Student Union; Shilea McCrevey, Chairman of The Student Union Governing Board; and Joe Bradly, Adelphian and past member of SUG Board will appear on Interaction to discuse these questions and more like them—from 7:30 to 8:00 p.m. phone calls from the students will be taken. It is here that we should find an answer to the question—"The Student Union — for the students, by the students, or for the students by the administration?"

by Jonathan Fife

Why Penalize Success?

To the Editor:

The editorial "Is Atlas Shrugging?" points out a basic weakeness in our society. We make people who should be our heroes into villians. We penalize success. An example of this is the way exceptional students are treated in some schools. Instead of pushing him the schools pull him down to the level of the less bright students. This level in turn tends to be pulled down to the level of the least bright students in the class. Also quite often the bright student is looked down at.

Society is trying to get people down to a great common mass. In our society today, we have no place for the non-conformist, the exceptional, or the intellectual. This even goes into the area of sports. Today we hear from some quarters people saying that sports should be done away with in high school because the team that loses might feel hurt or the student who wasn't good enough to make the team might have his development stunted. Rather than trying to make a failure into a success, we try to pull down the successful person.

Responsibility

To the Editor:

In the course of the fall semester, I have had occasion to call or visit a number of administrative and service offices of the University. I must say I am shocked and appalled at the slack, careless, and downright rude attitudes exhibited by a number of persons who should know better.

Admittedly a large university must expect growing pains and a certain degree of confusion. We all know that problems exist. Everyone should be aware of the need for tolerance and forbearance. Certainly the faculty and students hold a large share of responsibility for making the best of a situation.

This letter, however, is precipitated by inexcusable breaches of good taste, good manners, and good sense on the part of some of our service personnel. Instances are legion, but a case in point is the administrative secretary in South College who excused her indifference and rudeness to my perfectly civil question by saying, "I thought you were a student."

This morning I registered an automobile with the campus police, and as I waited in line, I witnessed repeated outbursts from the officer in charge, most of which were unwarranted and utterly unnecessary. Innocent pleasantries or, at worst, inane comments were countered with a display of arrogance and abuse that has no place in civilized society, let alone in an academic community. The situation was not mitigated by the fact that when my turn came, I, as a faculty member, received a kind of grudging deference.

I submit that it should make no difference whether the individual is a visitor, a student, or a member of the faculty. Common courtesy is the least that can be expected of an individual who holds a responsible position in the college community.

I do not care to hear that the individual finds his job boring, or dull, or subject to ingratitude—the job is his choice, not mine.

I resent expletives directed at me or at members of the student body. I resent callous and indifferent behavior on the part of people whose function is service. I would remind these people that if the students were not here, neither I nor they would be needed at the University of Massachusetts.

MISQUOTE

To the Editor:

How often I have heard the argument that college newspapers should be more independent. After reading the Born Yesterday article in the Monday, October 19th Collegian doubts have replaced my faith in the quality and responsibility of the Collegian's reporters. "A Free and Responsible Press" is your motto. Does this mean "Free and Responsible to Misquote"?

I was amazed to see the extent to which the statements had been misconstrued and misquoted. There is a great difference between "It's the funniest play", and "I'm the funniest thing in the play." This is only one example of the inaccuracy of the feature.

If the writer had not been sure of what was said, she should not have relied on her own interpretation and faulty memory.

One Not Mad

I cannot accept Mr. Pawluk's statement that "the presidential choice in this campaign appears to be sterile,". To the contrary, we have a man with principles and constructive programs. This fact sets Senator Goldwater apart from his opposition.

Also, in the last few weeks, we have heard the constant charge that Barry Goldwater's stand on nuclear weapons is insane. But when we look at the facts, we see that his policy is the same as former Presidents' Eisenhower and Kennedy. Are their policies considered insane?

Senator Goldwater is justified in branding the present administration as being "Soft on Communism". In a time when communist ideology is bent on "burying us", how should we deal with them? Should we give them wheat thereby supporting the fallacious Marxist agriculture, should we aid Indonesian and Egyptian forces so they can suppress anti-communist movements in Malaysia, Israel, and Yemen, should we send shiploads of drugs to Cuba and supplies to Poland, should we withdraw money from anti-communists in Laos, should we sit idly by and allow the Berlin wall to be built, should we allow communists to sit 90 miles off our shore in Cuba, should we watch the communists break 50 out of the last 53 treaties they have signed, should we sit by and watch communist armed might grow while our military strength declines and, should we sit by while Communism has spread from Russia in 1945 to encompass 14 major countries in 1964? This is a very big question mark, but the answer should be obvious in all free people's minds. Senator Goldwater has stated that "Communism is the only great threat to peace". We should take a firm stand on the Communist threat. We should not help them in their depressions or crop failures unless we get great concessions in turn. We should not aid in the spread of communism under the guise of appeasement and co-existance. We must make them abandon their aim of world domination.

FALSE AD

To the Editor:

We are two of the people who are "tired of walking" and answered your "ad" in the October 9 edition. We answered it in the spirit that it was unbelievable, but who wants to pass up such an opportunity?

In your article you claimed that the object of your gimmick was to show "that people do take the time to read and respond to a small ad in an insignificant place in the newspaper" and that the results did show this. If you assume that 5000 people read that Friday's Collegian (a safe assumption since that is perhaps a little more than half the people on campus) then 72 people out of 5000 is only 1.44%. That is not a significant per cent to warrant your claim. Actually you proved nothing.

And for those of us who did fall for your gimmick perhaps we are gullible enough to trust in the legitimacy of an ad placed in a document called a newspaper. Though it was not an ad as such, it was so slanted as to appear so—and for those of us fed up with a 20 minute walk to the Ed Building 3 days a week, a car is a dream come true.

WMUA Holds Open House

WMUA will present its annual Homecoming Weekend open house Saturday and Sunday to give students a chance for a firsthand look at workings of their station and to give the alumni, including many former station members, an opportunity to see the changes made since their undergraduate days.

A special feature of open house will be distribution of copies of the WMUA history written last spring by the station publicity department. It contains details of the station's founding in 1949, its operations in its first home, the South College Tower and the move to the Engineering Building, and carries right up to the end of last season. Alumni will find this an especially interesting work because it mentions students they knew. Present UMass students also are likely to enjoy the story of what the station was like in the years before they came to the university.

The open house will run from noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. featuring tours of the broadcasting facilities and explanations of the way the station is run. Although WMUA is only a 10-watt non-commercial operation, it is typical of all except the largest city stations in its make-up and facilities.

Barry Wants Fraternities

by Robert C. Stevens
(C P S)

WASHINGTON — About nine million Americans have turned 21 since the 1960 election, and both parties are drooling like hungry wolves as they attempt to win the hearts and minds of those innocent lambs.

The Republicans, for instance, have singled out particular interest groups for special attention. One leaflet prepared by Youth for Goldwater-Miller was sent to every fraternity and sorority president in the country.

In brown block letters, the first page bears the legend, "The Fraternity System Has A Friend In Barry Goldwater."

Next to this message is a picture showing the candidate and his 22-year-old son Mike, as they admire a beer mug. Between them, hanging on the wall, is a portrait of a blonde girl, about six years old. Since Barry is a Sigma Chi from the University of Arizona (as we are told on the back of the leaflet) one can assume the angel on the wall is the "sweetheart" of song and story.

The leaflet then quotes from a letter the Senator evidently once penned to Mike: "A man must select his own associates. In fact, that right is expressed in the First Ammendment of the Constitution . . . A fraernity is a wonderful institution . . . It is the reiteration of basic philosophy in the rites of all fraternities that I think makes them important," the Senator wrote.

Inside, the leaflet contains excerpts from an address the Senator delivered before the National Interfraternity Conference on November 25, 1960.

Making allowances for the endemic extravagances of political oratory, the speech is a corker. "Now, I maintain," the Senator said, "that fraternities must survive; they are probably the greatest bastion we have here for our future, the great bastion we have where we can develop leaders to take care of the protection of the Republic and our way of life . . ."

The leaflet concludes with the plea, "The Goldwater - Miller Ticket Needs The Help of Greeks Everywhere."

Concert Band Auditions Continue Rehearsal Nov. 14

Auditions for membership in the 1964 Concert Band will be held this week and next, it has been announced by John A. Jenkins, conductor of the University Bands. Due to the unusually large number of applicants, it is to continue auditions and to postpone next week's rehearsal until Nov. 14.

The Band performs many of the major works composed for symphony bands. Last year the Band achieved recognition throughout the campus for its performances at the Fine Arts Festival and annual Twilight Concerts. In a command performance last summer, the Concert Band represented the University on Massachusetts Day at the World's Fair.

Because of the numerous invitations which it has received to perform throughout Massachusetts, the well-known Concert Band has already outlined its mid-winter tour.

IGU Takes Sorority Dec.

The Intersorority dramatization competition sponsored by Pan Hellenic Council drew a crowd of about 400 filling Bartlett Auditorium Sunday afternoon.

Four awards were presented by Reggie Harrison, chairmen of the competition, at the close of the program. The criteria for judging were: quality of interpretation, 40 points; choice of selection, 20 points; visual attributes, 20 points; auditory attributes, 20 points. The judges were unable to break a tie for third place: therefore Donna Logue of Kappa Alpha Theta who did a presentation of Concerning the Infanticide of Marie Ferrar by Berthol Brecht, and Meredith Halstead of Pi Beta Phi who did a presentation of The Waltz by Dorothy Parker, were both awarded third prizes. Loretta Jennings of Lambda Delta Phi who portrayed the character development of Lizzy in Richard Nash's The Rainmaker received the second award. Everyone awaited anxiously the announcement of the first award winner. This prize went to Helen Tefs of Iota Gamma Upsilon for an excellent portrayal of Estelle from Jean-Paul Sartre's No Exit.

Entertainment during intermission was provided by the Pan-Hellenic Chorus who did a fine job of singing the house songs of all the sororities. The Zumbyes of Amherst College entertained the audience while the judges were making their final decisions. Their performance added a light touch to the program and drew resounding laughs and applause.

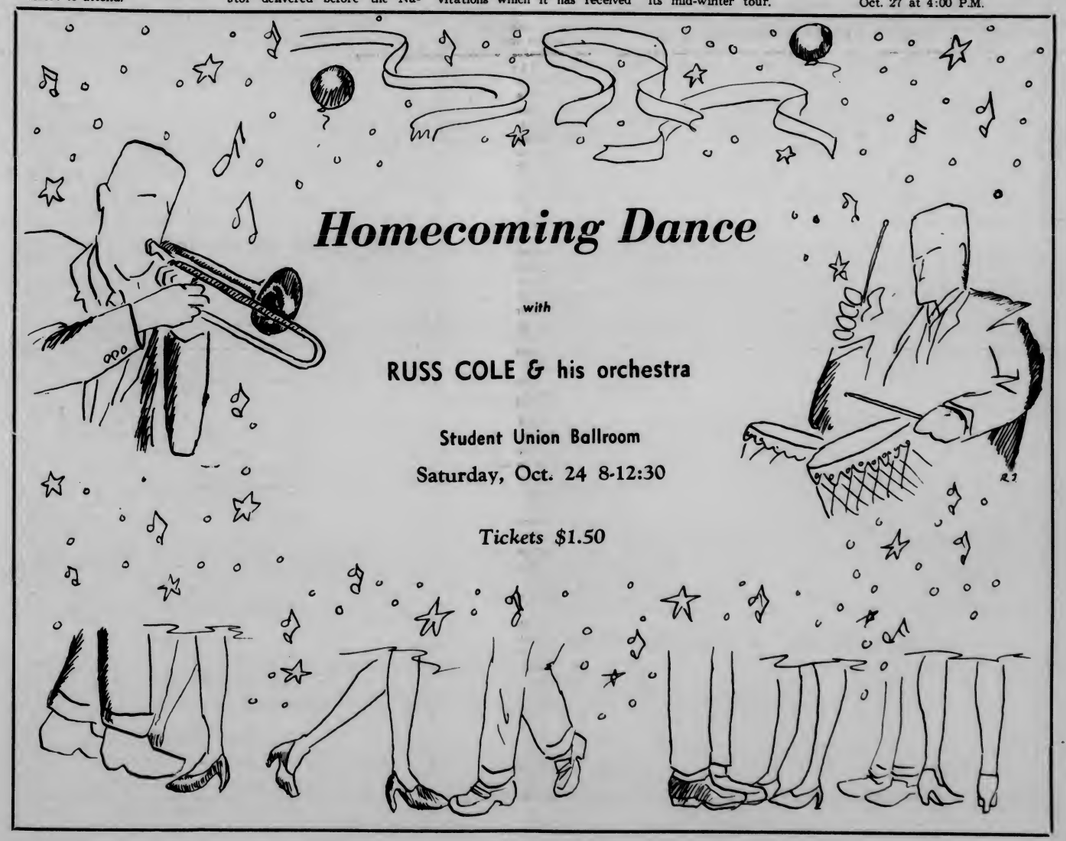
READING CLINIC

The Reading Clinic of the School of Education in connection with the Counseling and Guidance Office will be offering a course in Reading Skills Improvement to begin Nov. 2 and end Dec. 2. It will meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:45 - 8:15 P.M. Each participating student will be required to purchase Increasing Reading Efficiency at the cost of $3.50. Registration is being held at the Counseling and Guidance Office, Room E12, Machmer Hall and will close on Tuesday, Oct. 27 at 4:00 P.M.



Smith and Borden To Attend Science Symposium

Junior chemical engineering majors Sandy Borden and Janet Kay Smith will attend a symposium on American Women in Science and Engineering at MIT Friday and Saturday. Dean of Women, Helen Curtis and Miss Edith Antunes, women's placement officer, will also attend.

Lectures, panel discussions and informal group talks will acquaint delegates with vocational opportunities and information concerning women as engineers and scientists.

After the delegates return, they will report on the symposium to all women students interested in engineering and the sciences and make plans for organizing a student chapter of the Society of Women Engineers.

WMUA, the University's student-operated FM radio station, will hold an open house over the week end, from noon to 10 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Dormitories and the new South Commons will also be open to visitors before and after the game on Saturday. Of particular interest to alumni will be the new seven-story Orchard Hill dormitories named for Amherst authors Emily Dickinson, David Grayson, Noah Webster and Eugene Field. The formal opening of the new South Commons will be held Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

Mr. Colvins stressed the continual striving for improvement in the program. Recent innovations include refurnishing the Dukes and Suffolk Rooms, addition of organ music for dinner parties and improvements in decor such as wrought iron candlesticks and matching pastel table linen.

Comparatively new to the program is the "walk-in" service available to students and faculty Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the main ballroom. Coffee and doughnuts are offered in the morning and luncheons of soup and assorted sandwiches in the afternoon. This program was instituted, according to Mr. Colvins, in an attempt to relieve overloaded conditions in the Hatch.

Future plans for the program include walk-in waitress service which will make possible accommodations for groups as small as four. A planned addition to the Union building will contain facilities for the catering program, enabling it to provide increased service to the university community.

Debaters Defeat Former Nat'l. Champs

The UMass Forensic Society attended its first debate tournament of the year at Middlebury College last Friday and Saturday.

The team finished in a tie for second place with Dartmouth national champions of 1963, whom they defeated in the tournament. Princeton finished first. Among the University's five victories in the nine school tournament were triumphs over Princeton, Dartmouth, and the University of Vermont who placed third at the national championships last spring.

While the four debaters were at Middlebury, the remaining members cooperated with the speech department to sponsor the fourth annual clinic for high school students. Coaches and students from fifty-one schools heard lectures on nuclear weapons, the high school debate topic. They also studied debate theory at last Saturday's clinic.

The next scheduled tournament for the varsity is at Amherst College on Nov. 6 and 7. Any University students who would like to see the team in action are welcome to attend.

For information see the team's advisor, Mr. Biddle, in room 309 Bartlett.

true when the ends were split and halfback Bobby Ellis was unable to prevent Dean from crashing through.

NEITHER TEAM offered much offensively in the first half, with the ball being continually exchanged between the twenty yard lines. The second half witnessed a sudden offensive surge by the Redmen which could only account for one touchdown by Phil DeRose. Throughout the game Rhode Island called upon Bill Bryant, the junior fullback, who constantly crashed through the U-Mass defensive line. In total he accounted for 106 yards in 26 carries. Ellis, Ross and Palm carried for respectable yardage, but continually failed to come up with the big play. Fumbles were a constant nemesis, and ruined the last UMass drive which ended on the Rhode Island 4 yard line.

TO A NATIONWIDE AUDIENCE, as well as the Massachusetts recrale, this low score in itself was a defeat. The national rating has justifiably slipped, and the Yankee Conference is by no means "wrapped up." While the University was fighting for a last ditch victory, the Vermont Wildcats continued on their winning trial by grinding out over 500 total yards versus New Hampshire. Should the Redmen lose their psychological advantage, their physical prowess might go for nil. A well balanced team shouldn't be impeded by weather conditions, especially with a huge 220 lb. line, a definite advantage on a muddy field. Also, a good team makes a minimum of mistakes, including missed blocks and fumbles, the bane of this year's team.

The "Monday morning quarterback" advises Coach Fusia to activate Manager Gene Burgin, the possessor of the best pair of hands on the Redmen staff. Show them how Gino!

Attention Wrestlers

Wrestling practice began last Thursday. Coach Douglas was somewhat disappointed at the small turnout of new talent. Jesse Brogan, George Darling, Boris Chevone and all the rest of last year's varsity team are back, along with most of last year's freshmen. This could be a very good year for the UMass Matmen and the whole team is looking forward to this year's New England Tournament, which will be held on our campus.

ANYONE who is interested in wrestling on the varsity or freshmen teams should contact Coach John Douglas at his office or in the wrestling room, both in Boyden. Practice is tentatively scheduled for 4:45 every day. Men without previous wrestling experience are welcome. All it takes is the will to win and the ability to learn.

All those interested in trying out for the freshman basketball team should attend the first tryout Monday, Oct. 26, at 6:30 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage. Tryouts will run during the entire week at the same time. For further information see Coach Jack Leaman in Room 13 of Curry Hicks Cage.

Approximately 800 general admission tickets for Saturday's homecoming contest with Boston University will be put on sale at 9:30 Saturday morning. The tickets will be sold on a first come, first served basis. It is possible that those who arrive late with these tickets will be forced to stand.

Little Redmen Roll Over Terriers, 18-0

by Rick Curwin

The University Freshman football team won its second game Saturday by shutting out Boston University 18-0. Halfback Mike Kleblin scored all the points with first, third and fourth period touchdowns.

The Redmen had a strong passing attack despite the heavy rain that came down all afternoon. Quarterbacks Greg Landry and Gerry Rivell combined for seven completions in twelve attempts. Kleblin's first touchdown came on a 42 yard pass from Rivell and his third score was on a ten yard swing pass from Landry.

Massachusetts received the opening kickoff and punted on third down when they were in poor field position. BU fumbled the punt and Mass took over at the Terriers 42. Rivell went the distance in one play with his pass to Keblin. Boston University had a good scoring opportuiity shortly afterward when their quick kick went out on the UMass two yard line. Mass immediately punted but the ball was partially blocked and the Terriers regained possession on the Mass 36, but were unable to score and never got much closer the rest of the way.

The second score came on the series of downs following the second half kickoff. A pass from Rivell to Joe DiVincenzo and an 18 yard romp by Bill Compton set up the touchdown. Keblin carrying it in from the three. The final TD of the afternoon was set up when DiVincenzo blocked a quick kick, giving Mass the ball deep in Terrier territory. Landry was hit at the line of scrimmage and flipped the ball out to Keblin on about the ten yard line. Keblin went the rest of the way in. The try for the conversion failod, as did those on the other two tries.

The punting by Pete Nichols of the Redmen was one of their stronger features. The halfback from North Hadley booted some long kicks that got UMass out of trouble more than once. Another man who shined was fullback Bob Klimka with a good day carrying the ball.

The next game will be a week from Thursday at Alumni field against the Holy Cross frosh. Dartmouth beat the Crusaders 9-0 this past weekend. The Redmen are now 2-0 after winning last week 13-3 at West Point against the Plebes.

Bob Gibson Series Hero

Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals has become the ninth pitcher in ten years to capture the annual Sport Magazine Corvette Award as the outstanding player in the 1964 World Series.

Gibson, who won two Series games, including the seventh and deciding contest, 7-5, from the beleaguered New York Yankees, struck out 31 men in his three appearances to break Sandy Koufax's mark of 23, set in two games last season when the Los Angeles Dodger lefthander was named winner of Sport Magazine's Corvette Award.

Gibson will receive a 1965 convertible, marking the tenth anniversary of the Sport Magazine Corvette Award, at a luncheon.

The muscular righthander lost his first starting assignment in the second game of the Series, 8-3, giving up four runs in eight innings, while posting nine strikeouts. In his second start in the fifth game, Gibson evened the Series at two games apiece by not allowing an earned run in a 5-2, 10-inning victory in which he recorded 13 strikeouts. His heroic effort in the finale, pitching with only two days' rest, brought the Cardinals the World Championship and Gibson the win, the award, and the Series strikeout mark.

Past Sport Magazine Corvette winners have been Johnny Podres, Brooklyn Dodgers, 1955; Don Larsen, New York Yankees, 1956; Lew Burdette, Milwaukee Braves, 1957; Bob Turley, New York Yankees, 1958; Larry Sherry, Los Angels Dodgers, 1959; Bobby Richardson, New York Yankees, 1960; Whitey Ford, New York Yankees, 1961, and Ralph Terry, New York Yankees, 1962.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

On a cold, overcast afternoon in Kingston, Rhode Island, the University of Massachusetts battled the Rhode Island Rams in an unexpected Yankee Conference thriller. More than one fan was surprised to hear the score at halftime, which was 0-0. The visiting powerhouse had gone to Rhode Island with two Yan Con victories under its belt, including a 30-0 thrashing of Connecticut the previous week. Sports enthusiasts at the University were so confident of another smashing victory that as much as 28 points were cursorily offered by the local oddsmakers. Judging by previous statistics the Redmen should have won by a more substantial margin, but at the end of the game, they were forced to settle for a meagre one touchdown victory. This could hardly be considered impressive for a team which supposedly had fulfilled its preseason ratings by downing Buffalo and UConn.

IMPORTANT FACTORS which must be promulgated were the weather and the unexpected determination of the Rhode Island squad. A steady downpour had soaked the turf, making the footing precarious. Plays involving end runs, quick twists and turns, later plays, etc., went for naught. Whelchel managed to complete eight of eleven passes, but all told these accounted for a measly 42 yards. There was little opportunity to heave the pigskin any long distance. Not only was the ball difficult to grip, but receivers, having to contend with the chewed up gridiron were not able to go deep. Of course, inclement weather conditions could hardly be fully attributed as the Redmen's major difficulty. Rhodie's defensive line played a strong and aggressive game. The Rams' right end, Dan Dean, was in the Redmen backfield on numerous occasions, causing Whelchel and the other members of the backfield heartache. This was especially

Float Parade Begins Homecoming Slate

A full and varied weekend is planned for the more than five thousand alumni who will join with students and friends of the University in celebrating the traditional homecoming weekend.

The homecoming float parade down North Pleasant Street and through town will kick off the weekend's festivities and will be followed closely by a bonfire-lit rally and a twist dance in the Student Union ballroom.

The rally will see the crowning of the homecoming queen and the awarding of twelve plaques to the winning floats.

The alumni will have a busy day on Saturday starting with their general elections to be held in the auditorium of Memorial Hall at ten o'clock in the morning. A tailgate picnic by the college pond, a reception after the football game and a dance in the evening will round out the activities for the returning alumns.

While the alumni are cavorting in Mem Hall the Student Union will sponsor a dance in the S.U. ballroom for students on Saturday evening.

The Homecoming Concert will feature the Irish folk-singing quartet, the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem at 2:30 Sunday afternoon in the Curry Hicks Cage.

Harvard Law Dean Discusses Admissions

Dean John T. Wilson of Harvard Law School on Wednesday in the Nantucket Room, summarized his afternoon of informal talk with a half-hour discussion followed by another question period.

Dean Wilson's first point was that many students entering Harvard Law did not know whether or not they wanted to be lawyers. For this reason, all categories of college minors are accepted. However, most graduates of Harvard Law do become financially successful practicing lawyers.

Lawyers involve themselves in an infinite variety of tasks and specializations, the Dean stated. In response to several previous questions, he also said that the field of international law is a small but growing one in which the emphasis is not upon the settlement of disputes between nations, but upon the business problems of larger corporations involved in international dealings. Most firms of this nature are quite large, and are located in big cities.

The Dean then moved specifically to Harvard Law. Perhaps his most significant remark on the topic of admissions was that no quota system is established: Thus any and all qualified candidates from the University will be accepted. In fact, of 37 applicants in the last five years, 7 have been accepted; this amounts to a very respectable percentage. Dean Wilson did state, however, that a good bit of pre-selection does occur before individuals decide to apply at Harvard, thus the 37 were probably all highly qualified individuals. Speaking on criteria of admission, Dean Wilson stated that college grades and Law Board scores are significantly the most important factors. The emphasis, moreover, is on the candidate's first three year's grades as an indication of his ability to consistently work hard. The median law board score is 650, which is about ninety-fifth percentile.

Harvard Law is competitive,

Senate Announces Budget

by JIM FOUDY

Appropriating a budget of $169,970.90 for the 1964-65 fiscal year, the Student Senate considered ten motions in a two and a half hour session Wednesday.

Citing the goal of $12,000 for the proposed John F. Kennedy Room in the new library addition, the Senate appropriated $555. This money will cover the cost of mailing letters to the parents of all undergraduates soliciting donations for the memorial.

Senator Bombadier, in his first piece of legislation, secured the passage of a bill recommending that one level of the Goodell library remain open Saturday evenings; the Senate Services Committee reported that a book depository will be installed outside the library in the near future.

A motion by Senator Donovan questioning the "present policy . . . of fallout shelters on campus" was tabled pending further information regarding the University's policy in event of a nuclear attack.

Mt. Holyoke Rally

Goldwater, Miller Children Speak

A crowd of over 1500 greeted Libby Miller and Mike Goldwater, Tuesday evening at Mt. Holyoke College Amphitheater. The rally featuring the young campaigners was sponsored by the Mt. Holyoke Young Republicans in conjunction with the Republican National Committee. Groups representing Smith and Amherst Colleges as well as a large contingent from UMass attended.

The President of the Mt. Holyoke Young Republicans, Carol Tallman, introduced Miss Miller first. Speaking in a style refreshing in contrast to the banter of the heated stretch campaigns, Libby spoke on the ideals that all Americans have "long held dear", namely individualism and self reliance. She explained her role in the present campaign as that of a youth thrust into the mill of campaign activity. Libby, said her studies at the Newton College of the Sacred Heart were suffering but she believes she can make them up after the election. Libby viewed the complex system of government in her own way, and was interrupted several times by applause from the large crowd. Libby smiled warmly and accepted the ovations for her father.

Following Miss Miller, a set of twins from Mt. Holyoke delivered prepared speeches on the basic issues of the campaign and also on the foundations of the Republican Party. These speeches were accepted in the form of applause by the crowd on hand. crowd on hand.

Finally Mike Goldwater was introduced by Miss Tallman. Mike was received by a wild ovation and chants of "WE WANT BARRY" and shouts of "BARRY, BARRY". The young man, 24 years of age, strikingly resembled his father, not only in appearance, but also in his manner of speaking.

Mike spoke on the issues of the campaign. He used various techniques that his father employs to capture audiences urging all college students to take an active part in politics. He said "If you feel politics is dirty, it is your obligation to clean it up". He added this cannot be done by letting someone carry the torch. Each of us must be willing to sacrifice of ourselves for what is right and true. He urged no matter what ones allegiences to party are, our duty is to work for good government and vote for the person of our choice. But make our choice on the man and the issues, not on "irrational" decisions. Using his father's style he cut into the Democrats and President Johnson in particular

Society of Friends

Social Action Must Last

"Is there any sanction for social action other than religion in its revealed sense?"

Visiting Professor of English Milton Mayer asked this question at a lecture given to the Society of Friends in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union Wednesday. The topic of his lecture was, "Religious Experience and Social Action."

His answer to the question was that there certainly seem to be other sanctions. Historically, Darwin proposed the view that there is a natural sense of right and wrong is man, said Mayer. In contemporary issues the primary call to social action, Mayer feels, is the advantage to be obtained through justice rather than justice itself.

He further expressed the view that the durability of social action is the true measure of its cial action with relation to modurability of effectiveness of social effectiveness. Mayer related this tivation in the Quaker's monthly meeting for business. Religious fervor is so prevelat in these meetings that no decision can be made until all members are "easy" in their minds about the decision, he explained. Although this method borders on anarchy, Mayer said, it has been fantastically successful in the realm of social action.

Mayer concluded with the idea that religious experience may contribute something to the mode of social action in the employment of good as a means of overcoming evil. This mode of non-violence, he declared, is the only weapon that an unarmed sibility of increasing the imporwith arms. Mayer sees the posman can carry against those tance of religious experience in social action as it becomes less possible to use violence in a modern world.

WMUA Airs Senate Report

Tuesday night, Oct. 20, the "Senate Report" was heard on WMUA Senator Ross Jones, former treasurer of the Student Senate, chairman of the Finance Committee, and presently a member of the Elections Committee, was guest. The interview consisted of a series of questions regarding the Student Senate, its various personalities and conflicts.

Senator Jones was asked who were the most productive members he had seen in his past two years in the Senate. In his opinion Donald Cournoyer, Senate President 1962-63, Betsy Robicheau, Senate Vice-President 1962-63, and Joan Labuzoski, Senate Vice-President, then President 1963-64 were outstanding leaders.

Asked his opinion of last year's Senate, Senator Jones felt that the personality conflicts, and the lack of high quality leadership, as in previous years, rendered the Senate less effective than it could have been. He felt that the Senate picked up when Joan Labuzoski took over the Presidency.

Also discussed were some of last year's major issues. They were: the converters or "Carrier Current Transmitters," transferring WMUA to AM reception, and problems with the Forensic Society. The walk-out of two senators last year was discussed in regard to Robert's Rules of Order. Senator Jones felt that Robert's Rules of Order helped to "conduct a meeting expediantly," and that they contained three protections: 1. enable the majority to proceed with business, 2. assure rights of minority to be heard, and 3. assure the rights of an individual.

Senator Jones gave an opinion on a future bill, intended to do away with the senator - at - large seats. He expressed disbelief in the function of a senator-at-large.

Senator Jones ended the program by stating that he believed student government on campus to be "unbelievably outstanding."

New Justices Chosen For Area Judic.

The names of the undergraduates selected for Area Judiciary were made available today. For Area II, the new justices are: John Aldrich, 68; Arnold Kaplan, 65; Robert Reira, 65; Barry Sutherland, 65; Stuart Zola, 65; and Robert Latremoirille, 65. Don Warren, 65 will be the Chief Justice for Area II for the second year.

For Area 1, selected were Alfred Cenedella, 67; Daniel Mark, 65; John Kriegil, 66; and Ron Spinney, 65. Dick Sobel, 65, continues as Chief Justice. Two places remain to be filled on Area I, and applications are being accepted through Oct. 29.

The nine new justices were chosen from 35 applicants by the selection committee made up of six senators and six members of the Men's Judiciary.

Men's Chief Justice, Leonard Charest, who sat on the selection committee, said that the Area Judiciaries will begin hearing cases immediately. Charest also said that the two Area Chief Justices, who have already met with the Heads-of-Residences, will also meet with "each counselor in every dormitory, and will confer frequently with their respective Area Directors.

Students To Govern ACU

by Ethel Kaplan

The University of Massachusetts has made its mark at the l6th annual Region 1 Conference of the International Association of College Unions at the University of Bridgeport.

This was a monumental conference in the region's history. UMass delegation stood up last weekend to the 32-member colleges and universities in proposing a motion that Region 1 organize into two groups: one, a steering committee to guide future planning of conferences, and two, a regional board established to exchange ideas and programs throughout the year between member schools.

Before this conference, Region 1 had no formal organization and the UMass delegation saw the necessity of organization because of the growth of student unions. Previously it was felt that the administration should run the region. It is, however, the students' obligation to unite and govern the region because student unions are run for and by the students and not the administration.

Next year the University will host the 17th annual conference with a series of new and interesting workshops and varied entertainment for the delegates.

Dean Field moderated a staff session concerning "The Problems of Changing Student Attitudes". John Reynolds moderated a student workshop concerned with the functions of the Student Board, and Shiela McReevy was a panelist on another student workshop session.

Other delegates to the conconference were Dr. Noffsinger, Miss Mary Alden, Mr. Dennis Lilly, Shiela Saltman, Sally Howe, Paula Joyce and Ethel Kaplan.

NON-CREDIT COURSE

with the rib of "the Baker's dozen; you get 13 but you kick back 2". He also said "There are a few jokes around in this campaign—namely my father's opponents."

After the rally, Mike and Libby were the guests at a dinner given by the Mt. Holyoke group. Also included were the leaders of the Young Republican Clubs from the Four College area. Representing UMass was Fred Cenedella, President of the U-Mass Young Republicans. The leaders got to talk with both Libby and Mike on the running of the campaign. Mike stated that "the trend in the colleges, even in the East, was toward his father and he was gratified to see so much support in Western Massachusetts." Libby said she had never visited UMass and expressed a desire to do so.

Following the dinner, Libby and Mike received a large crowd in South Rockerfeller Hall at Mt. Holyoke. They met and talked with members of the youth groups in the area. After the reception, the two young campaigners left amidst a well wishing throng for television appearances and a reception in Longmeadow.

Play Deemed "Sex Fantasy"

by Pat Petow

Prof. John H. Fenton of the Department of Government Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, in Bartlett auditorium gave his lecture, "The Robber Barons," on "Born Yesterday" being produced by the University Theater. He allowed that the comedy "should be enjoyed for its own sake" and defined it as an "intellectual sex-fantasy."

Fenton, in relation to the Garson Kanin play, examined the U. S. economic role as master over Latin America as underdog where with no competition there has developed a stagnant society.

IN RAPID STYLE, Fenton countered the Far Right's assumption of the dominant mood of the American people on the Cold War fear, fury, and frustration with intended gratefulness for its benefits. Some of these benefits as a result of competition with the U.S.S.R. are: amelioration of the Negro's lot, labor compensation and security, standards of living, fostering of education and increased liberties. But there are two shadows: the threat of war or a Soviet triumph. Fenton asserted the need for an understanding of the resultant benefits. In our history, there is the faulty conception of the American myth, that economic policies come from the ballot box. Fenton held that growth has been achieved by a concentration of power by business identified with the nation's interests.

In this connection, he compared the success of the American Jews supported by their community and the failure, until recently, of the Negroes' unsupported by their community.

He stated that presidential candidate Barry Goldwater would retreat into the past by widening the gulf between business and the community by appealing for profit only, unaccompanied by love of country; and that this would destroy our fragile form.

Homecoming

Unlike the past dances, this year there is no special theme for the Homecoming Dance. This enables the Homecoming Dance, considered by many students to be the highlight of the weekend, to keep in the tradition of the weekend.

The dance will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 8-12 on Saturday, Oct. 24, 1964. This year the music will be furnished by Russ Cole and his fourteen piece orchestra. Tradition, however, will be broken in that this is the first year that the Homecoming Queen and her court will appear during intermission.

For those who have not purchased their tickets by 5:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct., 23, and still wish to attend the dance, tickets will be on sale at the door till 9:30 p.m. The dress for this occasion is semi-formal.

Religious Council Prepares Campus Blood Drive Week

A meeting was held yesterday at 11:15 in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union for recruiters of the Campus Blood Drive. Every year, as its largest service project to the University community, the Campus Religious Council sponsors the largest blood drive in Hampshire county. Well over half of the total blood used from the Cooley Dickinson hospital bank in Northampton is collected on the UMass campus. Last year the Campus Blood Drive collected over 700 pints of whole blood in its three day schedule.

This year the committee organized by the Campus Religious Council will be assisted by the University Women, whose chairlady is Mrs. Harold Watts. Mrs. Watts is particularly well qualified and interested in serving in this capacity as she is a registered nurse. Also assisting the council will be the two service organizations, APO and GSS. Notices will appear on the activities of those working on the drive in next week's Collegian.

SOLICITATION FOR DONORS will be going on all next week and the blood will be given on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 16, 17 and 18.

SING-ALONG

Freshman girls are invited to attend a sing-along presented by Ed Ryan '68, to be held Wednesday night at 7 p.m. It will be held in the middle of the Orchard complex.

Student Political Thought

Power and Fear

Power. It comes in many forms and is rejected in many others. Today, we see political power. One candidate accuses another of running for office solely for political power. So is the case of former Attorney-General Robert Kennedy versus Senator Kenneth Keating.

The "carpetbagger" issue, though still not as yet mentioned specifically in the speeches of either candidates, has emerged in various and sundry forms ranging from "roving commentaries" to the "Hilariously, funny" cartoons depicting the late President's brother in a G-string while he pole vaults from Massachusetts to Washington using New York as a fulcrum for his lever. It seems that this year's political cartoonists have outdone themselves in being trite.

Actually the "carpetbagger" issue is, at best, an empty one. It gives Kenneth Keating material for his impulsive spurts of humor, but that is all. A U.S. Senator from New York, while being elected only by the people of New York, still represents the people of the United States. Needless to say, RFK has represented the United States for three years now. Oh yes, there always is the "I can do more for New York" line, but if anyone thinks objectively, he must admit that it does not take a life long residency in New York to know the ins and outs of the state which are necessary to operate as a senator in the United States Senate. And if this necessary knowledge or feeling, as it were, can only be gained by living in New York, Robert Kennedy has gained it, already having been born and having spent much of his life in the state.

The whole irony of a public pointing finger which indicates Robert Kennedy as one who "grasps for naked power" comes clear when one recalls the 1962 election at which time "Teddy" Kennedy, Massachusetts' darling diety, ran for U.S. Senate. At that time there were no trembling voices, no pointing fingers, and no declarations that Edward Moore Kennedy was "using" Massachusetts for his own political aspirations. Yet "Teddy" is the second greatest political manipulator going (leaving, of course, first place open for Lyndon and his fairy wand.) The fact that Teddy's aspirations were not blasted by the columnists causes one to doubt the validity of their accusations against Robert Kennedy. Bobby is, in fact, very reminiscent of his brother John, who as his Congress illustrated, was not a "wheeler dealer."

Robert Kennedy, moreover, has a public record of opposing "naked power." This public record culminates in Kennedys recent conviction of Jimmy Hoffa. Hoffa represents the most extreme example of political power presently existing. It goes without saying that Robert Kennedy exposed and hopefully disposed the country of such a menace.

No, it is not unusual that the "public" is afraid of Robert Kennedy—not unusual, that is, when one discovers that this "public" just well might be the wary minds of Robert Wagner, Kenneth Keating, Jacob Javits, and Nelson Rockefeller. Their "fear" is not so much a fear of Kennedy's gaining power as it is of Kennedy's taking their power already existing power. It is then pure hypocrisy to hear (or in the case of Wagner, to feel) their tremblings and whisperings of fear. "The only thing to fear is fear itself." Hopefully the people of New York will realize this and think twice on November 3.

Why I Support Goldwater

I believe that the precept that all men are created equal should be qualified. All men are not created equal physically, emotionally, mentally, spiritually, or economically. Men have one aspect in common—they are men. By this I mean that man has a basic essence which distinguishes him from and defines him as better than any other form of life—consciousness of his own existence and identity. Man's existence is his ego. His consciousness of it is reason. From these two axioms, comes all other knowledge. That which is not consistent with it is false.

Men then have this fact in common—existence and consciousness; neither is possible without the other. Men are by nature, equal only in this one aspect; and by means of this commonness, each man is conscious of his own identity as separate and different from that of any other man.

Government is an institution of, and for men. An institution which deals with men must accept and provide for man's differences. A government which pays men not to produce, which controls man's thoughts and the distribution of ideas, which transfers the responsibility for one man's development to others, which dictates morality, which denies one man's freedom for the unearned privileges of another, which violates man's right of possession and private property, which distributes unearned goods to an unproductive mob, is not consistent with this axiom. Furthermore, although such a government may temporarily postpone immediate problems, it is, in the long run, self-destructive by nature.

I believe that man's purpose is his own dignity, his own morality, his own means of existence, and that preserving his own ego, he subsequently preserves that of his neighbor. A man who respects his own freedom will not violate that of another.

I endorse the candidacy of Senator Goldwater not only because I agree with his position, rather I agree with his stand because it is based on similar principles.

Carol Neilon

Medicare

The recent observation by the New York City Health Commission that "poverty is the third leading cause of death" in New York City scores the need for strong governmental action in this field. Pressure must be brought to bear upon the Congress to release this bill early in the next session of Congress.

Unfortunately, even passage of Medicare will only go a short way towards alleviating the problem of having health care directly related to wealth. What is needed is a National Health Service to provide the best possible care for every man, woman, and child in this country. It should be regarded as a national disgrace that in this the United States, health care is still run on the antiquated, nineteenth century basis of cash and carry while Great Britain, the Scandanavian nations and many other countries throughout the world have long ago secured health care for all their citizens through socialized medicine.

Student Union Control Usurped?

Do the students really have control of the Student Union?

This subject will be presented by WMUA on Sunday evening, Oct. 25, from 7 - 8. Dr. Noffsinger, co-ordinator of Student Activities, Joe Bradley, former member of the Student Union Governing (SUG) Board and Sheila McRevey, Chairman of SUG Board are the members of the panel who will discuss this topic. This is brought to the campus community as part of the Interaction series on WMUA, 91.1 F.M.

Letters to the Editor About The Johnson Image

To the Editor:

Mr. Aliferis speaks of the Johnson image (propaganda-made) as that of a principleless politician without reflecting on the facts upon which this propaganda rests. Lyndon Johnson has said, "I am also a liberal, a conservative, a Texan, a taxpayer, a rancher, a business man, a consumer, a parent, and a voter, . . . and I am all of these things in no fixed order." That he is all of these I do not doubt, but I ask, how can a politician be both liberal and conservative, especially a politician who considers himself (and I quote Mr. Johnson) "more liberal than Eleanor Roosevelt.'" This sounds closer to expediency than to principle.

Mr. Aliferis defends Lyndon Johnson's voting record against Civil Rights as a necessary measure for re-election in Texas. Yet in February, 1960, during his pre-primary campaign for presidential nomination, Lyndon Johnson said, "I am not, and never have been an advocate of Civil Rights. I don't think I ever will be." President Johnson's voting record is consistent with the preceding statement. He voted against Civil Rights measures in 1937, 1940, 1942, 1943, 1945, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1956, 1957, 1960, virtually every Civil Rights measure that appeared before him in Congress. These bills against which he voted were such as 1) an anti-lynching bill, 2) an anti-poll tax bill, 3) an anti-segregation amendment to a federal aid to education bill, and many other Civil Rights actions. I assume that a man of principle who is this consistent for so long a time, does so on principle. Does he also on principle do an about face and push a Civil Rights bill through Congress? Is this principle or political expediency?

Also Mr. Aliferis refers to Mr. Johnson's 87 vote margin of victory in the 1948 Democratic Texas Primary. From whence came those 87 votes. They came from voters who did not exist, for the numbers of voters who cast ballots in the three districts that gave Johnson his "victory" were more than the number of voters registered in the districts. Or were they ghost riders in the Texas sky?

Lyndon B. Johnson, man of principle? man of devotion to cause? man of integrity? It is the new Johnson image that defies the facts, not the old.

Re: Is Atlas Shrugging?

To the Editor:

Yes, Anti-Christ is shrugging, and the need for him to stand straight is an illusion in the minds of Nietzschean Neurotics e.g. Ayn Rand, the Author of Atlas Shrugged and Senator Goldwater. Apparently, Miss Neilon wishes to demonstrate again her relationship to philosophy, the relationship of superstition to science. This reply will not discuss the economic wisdom of the new contract-agreements between the U.A.W. and the auto industry, (or any of the other particulars she mentioned.) To criticize them is to exhibit an elementary ignorance of economics.

For one to "applaud" those developments it is only necessary to remove the psychological barriers to simple understanding that are the determinants of the conservative attitude. However, I will comment on the substance of what Miss Neilon and Ayn Rand, advocate.

Political and economic philosophies are ultimately expressions of a more basic idea, an idea delineating the proper relationship of one individual to another. Ayn Rand believes that "self-sacrifice is immoral"—that any act which diminishes the position of the "doer" is an essential evil. And furthermore, that the "only moral act is the act of self-interest"—the act which heightens, or at least secures, the position of the individual. The politico-economic philosophy that Miss Neilon and "John Galt" espouse (in two words, uninhibited capitalism) is, as you will agree, based on this concept. Even if Miss Neilon can't feel the beauty of Truth in the "morality of Altruism", can't she at least see the practical consequences of laissez-faire, a society in which every person's existence is an individual struggle? Can anyone actually believe that in the 20th century the individual is self-sufficient? Can't Miss Neilon realize that what she urges is an anarchy which would destroy the production complexes that she wishes to preserve? Doesn't she realize that her system makes conflict the basis of all human relationships—that it rejects the blessings and practical wonders that are derived from human cooperation? And most important of all, doesn't she realize that by burying man in the tomb of economic insecurity, she is eliminating the only chance for him to be truly free—the chance to live according to the dictates of the human spirit?

Yes we, might "fall off" this world, as Miss Neilon suggests, but only if that shrugged Atlas—a presidential candidacy of a would-be "Superman"—attempts to take back the world as it is being adjusted on the shoulders of a new, a moral, an inevitable, an eternal Atlas.

Folk Music on the Rise in Amherst

Whoever predicted that folk music, like "other fads" in the United States, would pass like the Hoola Hoop, has been proven wrong time and again. Indeed, folk music and folk lure have increased in their popularity logarithmically, in recent months.

This July, Newport, Rhode Island, had more people packed within its walls, attending the folk festival, than ever before in its history. That the folk festival should draw a larger crowd than the jazz festival is significant enough to no longer classify folk music as a passing fad.

In spite of comments to the affect that those who sit on the window side of the Hatch are all classical music "bugs," or that they try to look grubby to achieve an "ethnic" effect, it is a fact that marked enthusiasm for folk music in its pure form has definitely spread from Boston to the western part of this state, Amherst in paricular.

THE SALADIN TEA HOUSE, recently reopened folk haven, provides good folk music by top artists in the field as well as talented amateurs from the Amherst community. Last Sunday evening an "open hoot" was held featuring many performers from UMass, among them Drea Zigarmi, Ron Reynolds, Dave Bouvais and Danni Ostrow. Presently appearing is Mike Seeger of the reknowned Seeger family. Mike is equally adept at playing fiddle, guitar, banjo, and auto harp.

Tomorrow night Bob Dylan will have a concert at Symphony Hall in Boston. Elsewhere in the Hub will be "Spider" John Koener at The Loft. Mississippi John Hurt will be at the Unicorn. Club 47 in Harvard Square will feature Mitch Greenhill and Ray Pong.

W M U A, the student voice of the University (91.1 FM), has also added to the rise in folk music in the Amherst area. A year ago, there was no radio show on WMUA which included folk music, now there are three. One is completely devoted to ethnic folk music in its purest form. Tuesday night at 11:00 p.m., Don Stewart plays an hour of records by request. Men of the earlier folk styles of this country and the more recent topical songs can be heard on the ethnic show, Thursday night. Norm Slutsky brings you pop folk hits of the day on his Saturday night show, Standing Room Only.

If your radio is strong enough to pick up Boston, tonight Bob Lurtsema, on Folk City USA, will have Keith and Rooney performing live at 11:15 (1330 AM, 102.5 FM). Keith and Rooney are a Bluegrass group from Boston, who sing for fun in their spare time. Bluegrass is the music of the Southern Appalachia white tradition.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the "Hearty and Heish" Tom Makem and Clancy Brothers will explode on the stage at the Curry Hicks Auditorium. This is one of the most dynamic folk acts in this area today. The boys sing anything from harsh Irish patriot songs to tender love ballads of the green island.

New Record Releases:

Tom Paxton/Ramblin' Boy — Elektra

Tom, a denizen of Greenwich Village, writes and sings topical songs and love songs. Although little known, he is considered one of the top topical song writers of the day and is responsible for "Daily News," "What Did You Learn in School Today?", "I Can't Help But Wonder Where I'm Bound" and "Ramblin' Boy." All appear on this Elektra release.

Roosevelt Charles — Vanguard

Charles has spent most of his life in various prisons of the South, and has lived the role he sings. Most of the cuts on the album were made from his prison cell. He sings obscure Negro blues and religious chants, as well as prison work songs.

Engagements

Priscilla Tracy, Van Meter North, to Robert Miller, Westfield State.

Joan Levine, Green Mountain College, to Jack Singer, Grayson House, '65.

Erica Coburn, Anthony House, Tufts University, to David B. Hanson, 236 Brett House.

Toby Kaplan, '65, to Elliott Bird, AEP, MIT, '63.

difficult and extremely fast moving. It is quite large with 1675 students in attendance. The method of instruction is Socratic, that is, questions and answers. Thus, any student at any time might be called upon to state his opinions and support himself under fire. Harvard Law is not the place for the timid, the shy or the sensitive. Instruction is geared to the fastest student in the class, implying that all others are always desperately trying to keep up. Once accepted, any student needing financial aid will be loaned or granted all that he reasonably needs.

Thus any University student with Dean's list grades and Law Board scores above 650 might find it to his advantage to apply at Harvard.

Harriers Overwhelm Central Conn.; Slip To Defeat vs. Rhode Island

by Russel Murphy

This past week amounted to what more or less could be called the height of the cross-country season as far as dual meets were concerned, for the Redmen harriers faced two tough opponents within the course of four days.

Saturday the Redmen played host to Central Connecticut State for the first home meet of the year and the first to be run on the new 4.35 mile course. They came as close as possible to walking away with the meet without actually doing so, missing only first place for a complete shutout. The final score was 20-40.

CCS' Ray Cruthers proved to be the opponent he was thought to be, taking first place at what tentatively amounts to a record time of 23:09. In view of the fact that the Yankee Conference championship will be held on this course Oct. 31, however, such a record will not stand long.

In what is becoming standard procedure this season, sophomore Terry Carpenter once more led the Redmen effort, finishing first for UMass in a time of 23:27. He was followed by Bob Ramsay, Steve St. Clair, Mike Sheeley and Tom Panke, all finishing in times of 24:36 or under.

Tuesday the Redmen ventured down to Kingston, R. I., to meet that school in a contest which wound up as anything but an overwhelming victory. Rhode Island, taking second, third and fourth place, won with a score of 24-31 on a course that was rain-soaked, muddy and slippery. The fact that UMass' third man finished only twelve seconds behind URI'S second man is a good indication of how close the meet really was.

Terry Carpenter came through once more in the fine form that is coming to be expected of him, winning the meet with a time of 20:22. Carpenter, who has won meets against two YanCon opponents and ran well against a third, could possibly win a first or second place for UMass in the upcoming championship meet.

The next six places for U-Mass. were taken up by Bob Ramsay, Steve St. Clair, Mike Sheeley, Tom Panke, Charlie Mitchell and Bob Larson. As things look now most of these six along with Terry will represent the Redmen in the conference meet.

As pointed out, this meet will be run on the UMass course Oct. 31.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

There is probably not a more thrilling series of events on a college campus than Homecoming Weekend. Alumni from all over the state and from distant regions of the nation will gather together to view the campus that they refer to as their "alma-mater." Some will discuss the sentimental nostalgia of yesteryear, others the academic growth and future prospects of the University. But the feature event among all spectacles will be the football game versus the Boston University Terriers.

For the past two years the alumni have read of the football machine being developed by Coach Fusia and staff. After last year's undefeated season the prospectus for the '64 season was met with enthusiasm. Possibly the spectrum was over optimistic. But, alas, came the defeat at the hand of the Harvard Crimson. Nothing could have agitated the UMass graduate more than to be humbled at the Stadium, especially in view of preseason forecasts and wagers. The Redmen may not have defeated Harvard, but they did play good exciting football. Since that ominous occasion, the Redmen have defeated Buffalo (an upset), Connecticut and Rhode Island. The ironic factor is that the team was rated higher nationally following its stadium defeat than after its victory over Rhode Island. The difference might be explained in the calibre of football. The alumni will accept a hard fought, respectable loss better than a humble victory. Saturday afternoon Alumni Field will be packed to capacity to see the Redmen vindicate themselves against a very unpretentious B.U. squad. The Terriers have had two weeks in preparation for this contest and would gloat over an upset victory. In order to redeem themselves, and restore their previously held rating, the Redmen must not only win, but must decimate their opponents.

From a technical aspect, Don Hagberg, chosen ECAC for his play against Rhode Island, has been moved up to the first string. Dick Benoit, whose only appearance was an impressive one against UConn, should see a good deal of action. Whether or not these strategic moves will affect the outcome is yet to be seen, but the local oddsmaker has given the Redmen 14½ points. The sports staff is not quite as audacious. Prognosis: the odds on favorite is Ann Creedon. If this doesn't please the alumni, nothing will.

Redmen Meet Terriers in Homecoming Clash

by John Goodrich

This weekend, the University of Massachusetts football team will entertain the Terriers from Boston University in the annual Homecoming game. This marks a change in rivals for the contest. In the past the Redmen have always faced either UConn or URI for this contest.

DON HAGBERG, an ECAC choice, has moved into the starting lineup at tackle.

This will be a real tough contest for the Redmen who must contest with a team that had last weekend off while the Redmen were engaged in a tight struggle at URI.

MASSACHUSETTS will once again have to contest with speed in the opponents backfield. Dave La Roche, the starting quarterback for the Terriers, is noted for his fine breakaway speed, so much that Coach Warren Schmakel has considered making him a halfback and using soph Bob Kobus at QB. This might be the week that he decides to experiment.

There will be only three seniors in the BU starting lineup. They are guards Ed Meixler and Brad Leavitt, along with halfback John Mulvaney. The rest of the lineup will be ends Bob Nichols and Roger Duarte, tackles Larry Dyer and Bob Sellers, center Dick Stawitzky, halfback Bill O'Flynn and Bill Murphy.

THE REDMEN AND TERRIERS have only one common opponent, and that was Buffalo. The first game of the year the Bulls rapped BU, 35-0, in as poor a performance as they have put on all year. They have been improving since then and are all ready to spring a good size upset at the expense of the Redmen. UMass downed Buffalo 24-22 later in the year and what was probably their finest offensive display of the year. It also ranked as the most exciting game of the year, a real treat to watch.

As far as team statistics go, Jerry Whelchel needs only 95 yards worth of total offense to pass all time record holder Noel Reebenacker and his 2847 mark set in the early 50s. He is also closing in on the pass completion and passing yardage marks. Whelchel has hit on 39 of 61 passes for 465 yards and has run for 181 more.

Ken Palm holds the lead in rushing with 195 yards, punt returns with a 13.6 average, and kickoff returns with an 18.2 average. Bob Ellis is second in rushing with 187 yards while Mike Ross is up there with 142 yards.

TERRY SWANSON has done a commendable punting job as he has a 38.6 average. Milt Morin seems to have regained the kickoff form of a year ago as he is salling them deep into the endzone.

TERRY SWANSON is an outstanding punter for the Redmen with a 38.6 average.

There will be one change in the starting lineup for the Redmen. Don Hagberg, ECAC choice at tackle for his performance in the URI game, has moved into the starting role. The rest of the lineup will be Milt Morin and Bob Meers at the ends, Bob Burke at tackle, Larry Spidle and Peter Pietz at the guards, and Charlie Scialdone at center. Backing up Whelchel will be Palm, Ellis and Ross.

The game will as usual be a virtual sellout, a real 13,909 crowd. There are only 800 general admission seats left. The UMass club will have to be very careful not to get caught looking ahead to the big battle at Burlington next weekend.

INTRAMURAL

CROSS - COUNTRY

Kappa Sig Downs AE Pi 28-19; Wins IFC League B Title

by Howie Davis

The intramural office has announced that the cross country meet will start tomorrow at 11:00 in front of the Student Union. One of the largest group of men, totaling thirty, will be competing in this endurance race.

Plymouth dormitory has won their league's lacrosse championship and will meet the winner of the IFC league for the campus championship.

With the football season rapidly closing, Kappa Sig has clinched the championship in League B. They finished the season with a 7-0 record after their defeat of AEPi Wednesday night by a score of 29-19. The 19 points scored by the Pi team were the most given up by the KS defense all season.

In League A TEP, with a 5-1 record, could possibly wind up in a tie with QTV. For this to occur, QTV must beat ZN in their game Monday night. In case there is a tie, there will be a playoff between TEP and QTV; the winner will meet KS for the IFC championship.

The dormitories will culminate their season next week. Unless there is a major upset the Gorma Elms, the Chadbourne Maroons and the Baker Bruins will be the champions of Leagues A, B, and C respectively. The dorm champs will be determined by a three team playoff with the team holding the best record drawing a first round bye.

UNLESS there is a major scoring spree Monday night, Paul Caisse of TKE will be scoring leader on campus with 86 points in 7 games, an average of 12.2 points per game.

Complaint of Abuse Results from Towing

Graduate Student May File Suit For Alleged Use of Foul Language

By Terry Stock
News Editor

At least one of the 12 to 15 cars towed away last Tuesday by Anderson's Garage may result in a law suit.

Naseer H. Aruri, a graduate teaching assistant in the government department, told the Collegian that he planned to consult a lawyer about the alleged foul language used by Chief Blasko and the towing service operator to him last week.

ACCORDING TO ARURI, he had parked his auto, a Peugeot sedan, on a cinder area behind South College. When he went to get the car, the tow truck from Anderson's Garage had just lifted it off the ground.

"The truck had not moved yet," he said.

"I asked the mechanic to unhook the car and give it to me."

THE MECHANIC told Aruri that he would not unhook the car unless the towing fee, $6, was paid on the spot.

"I did not have the money on me," said Aruri, "so I asked him to wait a few minutes while I talked to the police and tried to settle the business."

THE MECHANIC IGNORED the plea, climbed into the truck, and drove off through a puddle spattering Aruri with mud, the teaching assistant continued.

Aruri walked to the police station where he was told to talk to Chief Blasco. He walked around for 20 minutes and finally located the Chief ticketing cars behind the Union.

"He wouldn't listen to me at first," said Aruri, "but when I insisted, he reluctantly consented to tell me why my car had been towed."

ACCORDING TO BLASKO, the car had been taken because it was parked on a grass area.

"When I tried to explain to him that I had been unable to tell I was parked on grass because it was covered with cinders and leaves, the Chief answered, 'What's the matter with you! Can't you tell black from red!'," Aruri stated.

Aruri answered that he doubted that the government department would have hired him to write a doctoral disertation or to teach in the department if he were that stupid.

"THEN WE EXCHANGED some unpleasant remarks," he said.

When the teaching assistant went to pick up his car, he tried to explain to the mechanic that the bumper was broken and that he had been afraid the car would be damaged. It was for this reason that he had not wanted the car to be towed.

According to Aruri, a man who said "I am the boss," told him, "pay me the money and get out of here you S.O.B. This is my property, and if you don't leave I'll call the police."

THREE OTHER EMPLOYEES stood next to him, as if "preparing for battle," said Aruri.

Student pays Andy Anderson towing charges for a car that has not been towed while Chief Blasko looks on.

"I went with the intention of paying," he said, "but I wanted to know why the matter couldn't have been settled without the car being towed."

Aruri also noted that he had spoken to Col. John Marchant, head of Campus Security,

"I told Marchant that I felt the punishment, a $6 towing fee, was disproportionate to the crime of parking on the grass. He agreed with me," Aruri said.

Several complaints have also been made that although students and faculty members arrived before their cars were towed, they were required to pay the $6 towing charge rather than the price of a parking ticket.

Peabody Helps Dedicate New Commons

By Dan Glosband
Managing Editor

Until yesterday, students from the hill area were partaking of their board in "The Copper Kettle." Today they are eating in the South Commons.

Gerald Grady, Business Manager of the University, presided at the dedication of the new dining facility.

Following a reception and banquet, Governor Endicott Peabody opened a series of speeches. He cited the adequacy of University facilities, in light of the fact that his son was entertained playing pool with a State Trooper in the Faculty Club.

The Governor noted the quality of the University as A-1 in all areas, not merely academics. He said, "Massachusetts was called on for a President and now JFK's new frontiers are being forged at the University.

He expressed hope that "We will continue our quality so that Massachusetts will become the Athens of America and the World."

President Lederle congratulated the UMass Building Authority (UMBA) on the readiness of such a necessary building. As the President said, "Armies march on their stomachs and so do students."

George L. Pamphret, a Trustee and Chairman of the UMBA continued in the congratulatory role. He heralded the Building Authority and his architects for designing the building.

Grady said, "In statements from the University archives, we learned that in 1910 The Collegian condemned the early commons for using bad butter and dirty milk. Prior to that, students were able to order whatever portion of the meal they desired. Food costs declined after the condemnation.

In 1906 the commons had a professional head waiter. 1918 found the menu too bland."

Dean Field continued the program by citing the poorness of early Harvard dining rooms. One of the more discussed dishes was "Hasty Pudding with goat's dung."

Bill Wilkinson, representing the Student Body, complimented the school on the improved atmosphere in the new building. "Topics of conversation have changed from girls and football to philosophy and religion," he said.

The featured speaker was William Davis. He noted the need for a team effort. Davis is director of food operation at Brown University.

U.N. Week To Feature Harvard Prof.

Louis B. Sohn, Bemis Professor of International Law at Harvard Law School, will give the United Nations Week lecture at the University on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 8 p.m., in the Student Union ballroom.

The Harvard scholar's lecture is being sponsored by the distinguished Visitors Program at UMass and is open to the public without charge. The title of his talk has not yet been announced.

Prof. Sohn took part in the San Francisco Conference of 1945 that established the United Nations. He later served as a legal officer in the U.N. Secretariat.

Prof. Sohn is the editor of "Cases on World Law" and "Cases on United Nations Law." He is co-author with Grenville Clark of "World Peace Through World Law."

U.T. Announces Tryouts

Tryouts for the next University Theatre production will be held Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 26 and 27, between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Room 125 of Bartlett.

The play, The Streets of New York, will make use of many and varied talents. Tryouts are open to all University students.

Cosmo Catalano, a member of the speech department staff, will direct Dion Boucicault's The Streets of New York. It is a 19th century play that will be performed here as if by a touring company of the period.

The Streets of New York is a famous melodrama that has had many revivals, including a successful one off-Broadway this past year. The University Theatre will present it Dec. 10, 11, and 12 at Bowker auditorium.

In addition to actors, specialty types are required for the entr'actes: singers, dancers, musicians, and comics. Students who wish to read the script before tryouts may pick one up at the director's office, Bartlett 387.

ANNUAL FALL FASHION SHOW

The Student Union will present its annual fall fashion show on Oct. 27 at 7:30 p.m.

The ballroom will host eleven university girls. They are: Sandra Cunningham, Brenda McEvoy, Carol Bradford, Jeanne Carlson, Debbie Harvey, Claudia Hammond, Ruth Rubin, Karen Sullivan, Joyce Selansky, Susan Yokel and Judy Carr.

The event will be moderated by Miss Carol Ann Russel who has done considerable modeling and narrating in professional shows for such stores as Steiger's of Springfield.

During the intermission, entertainment will be provided by Nancy Reid and Lois Leventhal.

Among the stores contributing to the show are Ann August's, Alberts, Margaret Nelson, College Town, and Bergers.

Austrian Scholar to Speak

Dr. Erik Ritter von Kuehnelt-Leddihn will speak on "Interfaith Relations in Europe" at the Newman Center on Sunday, Nov. 1, at 8 p.m.

His lecture is being sponsored by the Government Department of the University. The United Christian Foundation (Protestant) and the Newman club (Roman Catholic).

Dr. Erik Ritter von Kuehnelt-Leddihn, Austrian Roman Catholic political scientist, theologian, journalist and novelist, is one of those "general men" rarely found in an age of specialization. His breadth of learning is suggested by his fluency in English, French, German, Russian, Hungarian and Japanese.

A resident, with his wife and three children of a remote village in his native Tyrol, in Austria, he interrupts his study and writing for periodic trips all over the world. In the past ten years he has visited some twenty-five countries outside the United States and Europe. He himself is the translator of his many books published in foreign languages, including English.

He was born in 1909, the son of a scientist and began writing at the age of sixteen, first for the London Spectator and then as special correspondent in Russia for a Hungarian newspaper. Originally schooled in civil and canon law in Vienna, he took his doctor's degree at the University of Budapest in political science.

He has served as visiting professor and guest lecturer at many American colleges and universities—among them Fordham University, where he taught Japanese. His articles have appeared in the leading Catholic, secular and scholarly publications in America, Europe and Asia.

Dr. von Kuehnelt-Leddihn regards himself as a radical, in opposition to all mass-movement forms of government, whether they be fascist, Communist or democratic. He says that his concern is "to strengthen the great Western tradition of human freedom, now under attack from so many directions."

Longer Hours Predicted For Infirmary

In reponse to the University's policy to maintain essential services during the noon hour, the infirmary is open continuously from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays (8 a.m. to noon on Saturdays).

This prolonged period of outpatient hours has been arranged so that student health needs can be met with as little interference as possible with academic obligations, according to Dr. Robert Gage, director of University health services.

"These outpatient hours are generally longer than those at other comparable institutions. Many fine colleges and universities do not open their outpatient department until 9 a.m. and many more close from 11:30 a.m. until 1, 1:30 or 2 p.m. Very few schools have the infirmary open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., without interruption," he said.

Remaining open at noon does present the University health services with somewhat of a problem, however, since we still must provide lunch time for the staff. As a result, there are fewer physicians, nurses and other workers on duty during the

High Average Freshmen Women Honored at Tea

Members of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman woman's honor society, recently honored neophytes with an initiation ceremony and tea.

Six girls from the class of 1967 attained the 3.5 cumulative average needed to gain membership. They are Claire Amiot, Joan Golub, Elizabeth Lachman, Doris Minasian, Eileen Plotkin and Priscilla Sandquist.

Old and new members gathered with honorary guests at an informal tea following the ceremony. Present were Dean Helen Curtis, Dean William Field, Provost and Mrs. Oswald Tippo, Dr. and Mrs. H. Leland Varley, Director of Honors Programs, Dr. Hans Christian Duus, Chairman of Honors Council, Dr. Grace Rollason, department of zoology, and Mrs. King, School of Nursing.

Will Practice Make Perfect In Writing?

THE DEPARTMENT OF English will study the proposition that "practice makes perfect" during the coming year under a research grant from the U.S. Office of Education.

Dr. Melvin H. Wolf and Dr. H. Leland Varley will direct a $17,076 research project designed to obtain information that will help to improve composition courses on every scholastic level.

Three earlier studies in the field have shown that practice in writing does not necessarily improve the quality of student compositions. Yet, many recent reforms in high school and college composition courses are based on the premise that more practice makes better writers.

In their study, Drs. Wolf and Varley will attempt to collect more data on the question.

They will also try to provide some detailed answers to the questions of how much practice should be given, what kind, and when it should be given.

STUDENTS IN SEVERAL SECTIONS of the freshman composition course at UMass this year will be given either more or fewer writing assignments than are given students in a control group. The same teachers will direct the experimental and control sections.

According to the directors of the project, additional knowledge about the relationship between writing practice and writing proficiency is essential to the improvement of writing courses. "The current study," they have indicated, "is designed to provide such additional knowledge."

DRS. WOLF AND VARLEY designed the project with the help of Dr. Howard O. Brogan, head of the UMass English department, and Dr. Arthur R. Williams, the department's director of freshman composition.

The project will run until August 31, 1965.

Russian Pianist to Perform

One of the Soviet Union's top pianists will be heard in Springfield Tuesday evening, October 27th as soloist with The Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Lev Oborin, will be heard in a performance of the Third Piano Concerto by Sergei Prokofieff in his Springfield concert.

Mr. Oborin, who is known in this country esentially as the sonata partner of David Oistrakh in a number of recordings, made his American debut last season in a series of very successful orchestral appearances and solo recitals. His performance with The New York Philharmonic was termed "elegant" by Manhattan music critics. This second American trans-continental tour was arranged due to the great response Mr. Oborin received last season throughout the country. Oborin is an esteemed member of the Soviet performing group and combines his concert career with that of teaching master classes. Noted Soviet composers such as Prokofieff, Khatchaturian and Miaskovsky have dedicated piano concertos to Mr. Oborin.

The October 27th Springfield Symphony concert conducted by Robert Staffanson will be an all-Russian program and in addition to the Prokofieff Piano Concerto will include performances of the Symphony No. 2 by Rachmaninoff, Overture to Russian and Ludmilla by Glinka and the Capriccio Italien by Tschaikovsky.

UMies in Peru

U of Huamanga - 11,000 Feet Up

I stood in the middle of a town where everyone was hungry, where seventy percent of the babies born, died, where the people were being exploited by the rich and were almost helpless to fight back, where the man on the street had to chew cocoa leaves to make it through each day. My introduction to Ayacucho, Peru, 11,000 feet in the beautiful but cruel Andes Mountains.

Peter Goodman and I represented UMass for two months this summer on a workcamp project in Ayacucho. We traveled with a group of twenty New England college students and worked with forty Peruvian students at the University of Huamanga. Up at six a.m. to move rocks, paint bricks and build mud walls until noon but a great way to meet and talk with the Peruvian students.

I found their attitudes quite different than ours. With tremendous social conscience, they take education very seriously and with tremendous eagerness they grasp everything they can, not only from books, but from the world and people they come into contact with. Of course, all they need do is walk down the street to be reminded of how desperately their starving friends need the guidance of educated and concerned persons.

There are three million quechua-speaking Indians in Peru, about forty-five percent of its population. They are either small farmers, workers on the large latifundia or migrant laborers. Social mobility is an almost unused word in Peru. Education is a problem since they understand no Spanish. This is being alleviated around the Ayacueho area since fluent Quechua ability is a pre-requisite for graduation from the University of Huanamga. At last count ninety percent of the Indians weren't even aware of what a straight line is.

Communism is a matter of great controversy among the U. students. To my knowledge, the majority of students there did lean in that direction. Many misunderstood the purpose of the Peace Corps volunteers to a great extent, claiming that they were nothing more than government agents to spread U.S. propaganda. In some cases, however, the volunteers were rather ineffective in Peru. Only person-to-person contact can help these people and one must be willing to get his hands dirty for that!

But, what struck me most was the warmth and acceptance with which they treated us. Politics became secondary in favor of face-to-face friendships. They never tired of teaching us songs and dances of their regions and sharing with us whatever belonged to them. It was very striking how very hard they work and yet how well and easily they can have a great time.

Did gyre and gimbol in the wabe,
All mimsy were the beaure-groves
And the momeraths outgrabe.

Beware the Redman my son,
The jaws that bite, the claws that catch.
Beware the Whelchel-bird
And shun the frumious Bob Meers' snatch.

He took his vorpel ball in hand
Long time the maxome foe he sought.
Then rested he by the goalpost tree
And stood awhile in thought.

And while in uffish thought he stood
The Fusiamen, with eyes of flame,
Came whiffling through the tulgy turf
And burbled as they came.

One two! One two! and through and through
The vorpel team went snicker snack.
They left it dead and with its head
They came gallumphing back.

And hath thou slain the Terriers?
Come to my arms, my beamish team.
Oh frabjous day, callough, callay

Job Opportunities To Be Discussed

Mr. Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Aid, will be speaking on the topic of "Employment Opportunities for Economics Majors" on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Student Union.

This address, sponsored by the University Economics Association, will be directed towards the underclassmen as well as the seniors.

Morrissey plans to speak in specific terms in an effort to make the students more aware of the demands made upon them by employers.

Among the topics to be discussed will be types of jobs available, starting salaries, fields open to majors in economics and related courses, and the preparations desired by employers.

The talk will be followed by a question and answer period. Refreshments will be served.

Student Political Thought

Empire of Leporid

In the year 1966 anno Domini by the old reckoning, or Year One of the House of Per-tn-ent by the present, the commoner B-Gld-buni is said to have achieved Enlightenment and founded the Empire of Leporid. The subsequent history of the Empire has been fully documented by the successive Ministers of History, but little has been said concerning the conditions of the times that resulted in the Creation. This silence has been due chiefly to the scholarly caution exercised by the Ministers of History, who, having at best fragmentary knowledge of the times, have been reluctant to theorize for fear of accidentally bringing dishonor on the benevolent House of Per-tn-ent. Recently, however, this author has come into possession of additional information in the form of a scrap from a 1964 anno Domini publication, the New York Times, evidently a very primitive ancestor of our daily News Periodical. Primitive as it may be, however, the information which it contains indicates that there was a nuclear war in anno Domini 1965. An examination of the factors underlying this war suggests the hitherto unknown origin of the Exalted One, B-Gld-buni.

It seems that in anno Domini 1964 there was a species of animal known as "man" dominant on our planet. Our race seems to have been largely ignored, if not unknown in parts of the world. (At any rate we have no records of these times, as mentioned before. It may well be, however, that the records were destroyed, along with "man", in the nuclear devastation.) It is further evident from the New York Times article that "man" had a form of government known as "democracy," or "government of the people, by the people, and for the people." The clause "by the people" is further explained to mean that the people at large actually held elections to choose, from their midst, the officials who ran the government until the next periodic election. Naturally, this quaint practice was rather innefficient, as is shown by the "election year of 1964, in which the people elected a "President", the highest official in the system of government. The man elected proved to be rather unqualified for the position: he described his foreign policy as "conservative" while in practice it was reactionary to an extreme; and he had no conception of the tremendous power of atomic energy, thus authorizing the use of the "ultimate weapon," as it was then called, in an indiscriminant manner. Inevitably, a second major group of people (who incidentally had a sensible system of government called, ironically enough, "social democracy") were angered by this reckless policy and eventually took active issue with it. The result was nuclear war.

This same New York Times article also contains a good deal of speculation regarding the possible biological consequences of a "nuclear holocaust." The following comment by one of the "leading biological scientists of the day" is of particular interest.

Undoubtedly man will perish in the event of a nuclear war, if not immediately by the effects of explosion and intense heat, then soon after by the effects of radiation, which will cause mutation, sterility, and death. However, some of the lower forms of life, the rabbit in particular, have shown an extremely high tolerance of such radiation . . . eventually these species may evolve to the point of becoming the dominant life-form on the planet . . .

May we dare to speculate as to what these "rabbits" looked like, since we, the glorious Leporid, are now the "dominant species"? Perhaps they too moved in a delicate bobbing manner . . . and had long, beautiful ears? If this indeed is true, that the "rabbits" resembled us, the glorious Leporid, then Who, or What, was our Glorious B-Gld-buni? Perhaps he was a mere . . . "biological freak" (the term used by "man" to designate the offspring of "rabbits" that had been "subjected to massive radiation dosage" in experiments)? If this may be fearfully suggested, then what basis is there for Our Most Benevolent Ruler's latest decree, that "henceforth B-Gld-buni shall be worshipped as the Enlightened One"? Further research on this point is badly needed . . . .

—The Imperial Records, Vol. XXVII, pp. 900-903 Compiler's note:

The following portion of the Imperial Records, Vol. XVIII, pp. 50, may also be of interest in connection with the above extract.

Concerning The Most Abject Traitor, Beagle

In the Year One Hundred of our Glorious House of Per-tn-ent, a certain Most Abject Minister of History was so impertinent as to clearly state that our Most Enlightened One, B-Gld-buni, was indeed not truly Enlightened but instead was a "biological freak" (perish the thought!). This same Minister was also so bold as to question the authority of Our Most Supreme Ruler. Needless to say, Our Most Supreme Ruler has had said Minister of History skinned alive and his pelt used as a rug in the Imperial Burrow.

Man of Principle

I would like to comment on Fred Cenedella's letter which appeared in the Oct. 21st issue of the "Collegian". Indeed, in this election we do have a man with principles and constructive programs. That man is Senator Barry Goldwater.

As for Senator Goldwater's stand on nuclear weapons, not only is his stand the same as President Eisenhower and Kennedy, but it is also the same policy now exercised by President Johnson. In the Bay of Tonkin, the field commander did, by previous order from the President, exactly what Senator Goldwater now advocates and for which he is labeled a "warmonger".

This country must take a firm stand against communism. Have we not learned the hazards of appeasement? Hitler was appeased in order to keep him happy. The communist definition of "peaceful co-existence" is not "peaceful co-operation" but rather "the absence of total nuclear war". The basic goal of communism is world conquest, whether it be Trotsky's international revolution or Khrushchev's quiet subversion and infiltration. Our soft policies toward the communists are only making their goal that much easier to attain.

We need a president who will stand up for our rights and yell as loud as the bully yells. That man is Barry Goldwater.

Letters to the Editor

Eternal Vigilance

To the Editor:
Dear Sir:

I was sorry to see Mr. Herbert Steeper's letter in the Wednesday (Oct. 21) issue of the Collegian, because it confirms my fears that the treatment students all too often experience at the hands of the administration and service personnel is not confined to students alone. To see that it has spread to our faculty is a sorry thing indeed.

It would seem to me to be quite a worthwhile endeavor indeed to take time to question the true nature of the administration's role on this, or any other, campus. If I may be allowed to use some of my own departmental deities for models; taking the view of Locke, the administration should exist to aid and assist the students and faculty in accomplishing those things which individually they're unable to do for themselves. Implicit in this sort of a relationship, as Locke saw it, was a partnership and a mutual accountability. It doesn't seem to me, however, that this is the condition on our campus. Affairs seem now to have deteriorated to the point where our administration is playing the role of Hobbes' absolute and quite unaccountable tyrant.

Our administration has become a closed ecological system, beholden only unto itself, operating, and ruling the assembled students and faculty in the manner which best suits its own purposes. It should have no other purpose than to serve those to whom it is responsible, but this is no longer the case, I regret to say. One two-part example may serve to show you what it is that I'm driving at. Take the case of the closing of the essential Union facilities during convocations: I can't recall that we have ever received an explanation for this action. Who ordered it, and why? Was this in the best interests of the students? Or was it rather some sort of arbitrary administration action? Those few who attended Dean Hunsberger's convocation on October 1st heard a rather frightening thing said, only partly in jest: commenting on the small turnout, the Dean quipped that ". . . perhaps we could have closed the Union again". He smiled as he said it, but when you stop to think that what he said could quite easily have been done, you (should) begin to wonder. The allied problem of the vanishing power of the Union's Governing Board is further confirmation. Jonathan Fife did an excellent job in bringing this to light in an adjacent column in that same Wednesday issue.

I won't go on with further examples—you could probably think of many that would serve equally well, I'm certain. This is a problem which must be continually before us; to relax awhile and wait for the next big move from our administration may then make it too late to act. That oft-turned phrase, eternal vigilance . . . , still applies. Our constant criticisms may not effect any sweeping reforms in the immediate future, but are we any the poorer for having made the effort? I think not.

Richard W. Story.

Tree Damage

To the Editor,

Last week an unknown number of individuals, probably male, probably of the University, broke numerous trees in the Women's Quadrangle. These trees were planted for the express purpose of beautifying the Quad itself and the University campus as a whole.

Not only did these individuals scar the campus but they caused many hundred dollars worth of damage. This has been verified by the Maintenance Dept.

I'm sure that ripping trees down is a laudable sport entailing considerable risk to life and limb. Also apparent is the wealth of intrepidy (both mental and physical) inherent in such an endeavor Anyone who is complacent enough to condone actions such as these and is spiritless enough not to be incensed at the same is, to use a phrase, full of . . . prunes.

Let's see if there isn't some way to curb some of these instances of immaturity and wanton vandalism evident on this campus.

Massachusetts Homecoming 1964

Clancy Brothers Reviewed

By Dave Gitelson and Dick Doherty

A BIT OF IRELAND made the campus scene Sunday afternoon. The Clancey Brothers and Tommy Makem highlighted Homecoming with their concert of Irish melodies. We both (and the Blarney half claims to be unbiased) believe that this concert was the best yet.

A full house greeted the group who appeared under the sponsorship of Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity. A.P.O. announced that the proceeds from this concert will be donated to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Reading Room Fund.

It was easy to see that everyone had a great time but no one seemed to be having more fun than the boys themselves. Their fun loving attitude quickly permeated the Cage. With a typical Irish gleam in their eyes, the Brothers and Tommy sang some old favorites like "Johnson's Motor Car" and "The Patriot Game." We were also delighted to hear some new Irish "ditties." The youngest of the three Clanceys, Liam, told us that many of these songs were gathered during their last journey to Ireland at an annual folk festival and by singing with friends at parties and in local pubs. This trip last summar also is responsible for a new album which will be out in January.

Irish songs, new and old, rebel songs, drinking songs—all were found at the concert. From their many albums we suggest "Clancey Brothers and Tommy Makem at Carnegie Hall," "Hearty and Hellish," and "The Boys Won't leave the Girls Alone." For music and fun these boys know the secret. Their albums provide fine music but most of the fun is in watching.

For any of you who missed this exciting group, they are scheduled to appear at Symphony Hall in Boston on October 30th.

REVIEW

Born Yesterday

Laura Bishop as Billie, the ex-chorus girl without a thought in her peroxided head, under the Fygmalion influence of Paul Varrall (Les Titcomb) realized there is a world outside their 235 dollar a day suite in Washington. She can not devine why the Senator's wife, Mrs. Hedges, would pretend to have read a book she hadn't or why Harry, with whom she had been happily unmarried for eight years, should suddenly appear selfish, uncouth and undesirable. What does she do to him? She exposes him.

Ken Borndner, as Harry Brock, the man who thinks "everyone has a price", yells and bulls his way to a summit. From the moment he screams his first entrance and takes his shoes off, the picture is complete. You know what will happen but you can ease back and enjoy the numerous sex jokes, the credible set, the well chosen costumes and the superb acting.

Tom Kerrigan, the Harvard lawyer and ex-Ass't. Attorney Gen. of the U.S., was too fond of money and booze to refuse his boss the necessary "smoothing out details". He completed the triumverant of actors to add another success to the UT repetoire.

How many people live without thinking for "at least the past five years" and get all upset when the pieces of the puzzle are finally put together and they must identify the picture. Congratulate the University Theatre for their first and successful production of Garson Kanin's "Born Yesterday" this Homecoming Weekend in Bowker Auditorium.

Ski Team Candidates Meet Thursday; Eight Positions Open For Racers

By Tom Pittendreigh

Candidates for this year's varsity and junior varsity ski teams will hold a meeting with Coach William MacConnell in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union on Thurs., Oct. 29, at 7:00 p.m. At this meeting the rules concerning eligibility of candidates for both varsity and junior varsity teams will be reviewed and training requirements will be discussed.

Last year the University of Massachusetts Ski Team, which competes in the Osborn Division of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference, compiled a record of 53 wins and 24 losses in 8 meets with 11 colleges. Guided by Coach MacConnell and led by team captain Tom Clark the ski team took an overall fourth in the N.E.I.S.C. competition.

Returning this year from last season's squad are Co-Captains Tom Clark '65 and Dick Woods '65 along with varsity members Pete Plasteridge '66 and Tom Pittendreigh '67. All four returnees were capable performers in last year's competition. Co-Captains Clark and Woods both earned their U.S.E.A.S.A. "B" racing classifications for outstanding performance in eight inter-collegiate events last year.

There is a total of eight positions open for both freshmen and upper class college racers which will be filled after an intensive conditioning program beginning November 7.

Booters Up-End Tufts; Outshoot Jumbos 2-1

By Morris Shubow

The UMass soccer team journeyed to Medford, Mass. to take on the Tufts University Jumbos. The Redmen, dominating the game almost completely, came away with their second shutout victory in a row, 2-0. The team's record is now 3 wins and 4 losses, which is already an improvement over last year when the Redmen won only 2 games.

Gary Gibbons, who is proving to be quite an offensive star for the Redmen, got the first goal on a corner kick. Gibbons, who has consistently come up with accurate corner kicks, now has five goals for the season to lead the team in scoring.

The other goal was scored in the fourth period by Aba Ayanaba on a cross kick from outside the penalty area. The Redmen outshot the Jumbos by 2-1, and though goalie Larry Martin was not forced to make a lot of saves he was always there when needed.

Coach Larry Briggs felt that center-halfback Mike Russo played a fine game as did Capt. Ray Yando and Peter Conlon. He also gave credit to senior Tony Palatino who played his best game in his three years of varsity soccer. Center-forward Palatino's ball control was excellent, according to Coach Briggs.

The Redmen with three games left on the schedule play their last home game Thursday at 3:00 on the lower athletic field versus Clark. Last year the varsity lost to Clark, 1-0; but the Redmen have won 16 of the games played in the series.

Next Saturday the Redmen visit Vermont to play the Catamounts for the first time. Their final game is November 4 against traditional foe Amherst.

Whelchel Breaks Record

Redmen Scalp Boston University, 28-7

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts put on an impressive display of sound football to score a solid 28-7 triumph over Boston University before a Homecoming crowd of 10,800 fans at Alumni Field.

It was Jerry Whelchel who turned loose with an outstanding performance that netted him 226 yards in total offense. This easily pushed him over the all time mark of 2847 by Noel Reebenacker. Whelchel now has 2981 yards total offense in his career. Whelchel accumulated 16 points with two touchdowns, a 16 yard run and an 85 yard run, as well as kicking four extra points.

There were only two problems that detracted from the victory, one unimportant. The score by BU was the first by a visiting team since UNH booted a field goal in 1962. The streak had run 389 minutes. The other was more of a problem throughout. UMass accumulated a total of 140 yards on penalties. Most of these were offside and holding, and can probably be attributed to a desire by the club to play rugged, hard-hitting football.

The game got off to a flying start as the fired up Redmen kicked off. Boston University was also not about to let this game get away from them. This type of attitude leads to a hard hitting game and that is just what this was.

BU moved right down the field behind the running of Dave LaRoche before the defense stopped them at the UM 36. A punt was downed on the one yard line. UM had to get it out of trouble. The team then punted. Bob Ellis pounced on a BU fumble at the 31 after Bob Gogick did his part in driving the ball from the arms of John Mulvaney.

UMass then got the aid of a pass interference call for a first down. Mike Ross, who was also outstanding in the game, hitting for 4 before Whelchel hit Bob Meers on a 13 yard gain. The other big plays in the drive were a rollout by Whelchel for 13, a buck by Ross for 7, and the 16 yard run by Whelchel around right end for the score. His point after was true and it was 7-0.

Mass then held BU and forced a punt, but early in the second quarter, LaRoche swept right end for the score after BU had received a Whelchel fumble at the 16. Jim Fischer hit the extra point after the six yard scoring play and it was all even.

UMass then displayed even more strong defense, again forcing a BU fumble with Gogick recovering, this time at the BU 31. Whelchel hit Morin for a 13 yard gain to the 17, hit the left end slot for a gain of five, fed Bob Ellis who weaved for four more, then carried to the one on a seven yard gain, before Mike Ross got the TD. Whelchel hit the PAT and it was 14-7.

Morin kicked off and Phil DeRose made an open field tackle, to stop a possible long run. The teams then traded punts before BU took over on their own 36. Dave Kelly then intercepted a Bob Kobus pass to put the Redmen in business again. Ellis gained four, and a pass was incomplete before Whelchel hit Morin nicely at the five, and the big end carried the ball in unmolested. Whelchel kept in form by converting the extra point and the halftime score was 21-7.

In the third quarter, La Roche was injured on the second play, and the sophomore Kobus was called on to carry out the QB duties which he did well. He had two real good threats in the second half.

On the first of these, BU took the ball on its own 19. Mixing the plays nicely, Kobus moved the team to the ten of UMass with a first down. Jimmy Banks gained five and three before a hard tackle caused a BU fumble by Bill Murphy, but they recovered. On the fourth and two Kobus rolled to the left side into the waiting arms of John Schroeder and the right side of the defensive line.

BU came right back the next time they got the ball as they moved to the 15. This time the fourth down play saw Kobus trying to hit Steve Albrecht, but a well timed tackle by Ellis and Schroeder separated the receiver from the ball at the goal line.

Ross then gained 4 for the Redmen and DeRose got a nice 11 yard run only to see it wiped out an a holding call. Whelchel then rolled toward right end, but cut off tackle and with the aid of a springing block by Ellis went 85 yard for a TD. Only two Terriers had a shot at Whelchel, one was sidestepped and the other failed to knock Jerry off balance as he carried over. He hit the PAT again and the final margin was settled.

The 226 yard total by Whelchel was the majority of the work as the Redmen rolled up 365 yards of offense. Ross had 80 yards rushing in his best game of the year. These performances probably place Whelchel and Ross one and two in the rushing statistics. DeRose had three receptions to lead in that dept. Murphy led BU with 68 yards rushing and Kobus hit 10 of 18 passes. Terry Swanson had a beautiful coffin corner kick that went 39 yards out of bounds at the BU one.

Parking Campaign To Continue

By Don Boyd

THE CAMPUS POLICE DEPARTMENT has no intention of letting up on its campaign against campus parking violators.

This, at least, was the tone of an interview yesterday with the main participants in what has recently become a raging controversy over the towing of student and faculty vehicles.

COLONEL JOHN MARCHANT, head of Campus Security, and Chief Blasko both wished that, "All individuals who possess parking stickers would read the rules and regulations before indulging in unwarranted criticism of police tactics."

Excerpts from these rules indicate that all vehicles will be towed from the premises if they are "in any parking area, stall or space designated for Visitor parking."

The same result will ensue if the car is parked "on land, except a designated parking lot, . . . such as walks, lawns and open fields."

That "grass areas" are often indistinguishable because of leaves, cinders, or lack of grass is not mentioned.

"ANDY" ANDERSON, whose Anderson's Texaco Station won the contract for towing University vehicles, expressed strong dissatisfaction with the student response to his activities.

"The only other alternative," he said, "is to give the job to someone else who will charge more, for we are acting within the law."

HE FELT that University students were unusually hostile and unfair compared to his experience with residents of Amherst and the surrounding areas.

Marchant summarized his feelings by saying, "I only hope every Collegian reader noticed in Monday's picture that Anderson's towing service operates 24 hours a day."

A student mentioned in Monday's article that he wishes to file suit against Anderson for alleged foul language Section four of article five of the rules and regulations states that the contractor shall be liable to the owner for any damage arising out of negligence caused to a vehicle in the course of removal and storage.

No liability shall attach to the officers or employees of the University of Massachusetts for such damage.

Blasko contended that the student in question had a prior record of parking violations and that the car had, in fact, already been towed some distance. He explained that not only was the towing charge extremely low, but that it had been determined by competitive bidding.

Operetta Guild

"Pajama Game" To Open Nov. 13

The Operetta Guild will open its Eighteenth Musical Theatre Season on Friday, Nov. 13, with its production of The Pajama Game, one of Broadway's most successful comedy hits.

Performances will be repeated Nov. 14, 20, and 21 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. In addition, there will be a matinee, Saturday, Nov. 21, at 2:00 p.m.

BASED ON Bissell's novel, 7½ Cents, the show was written by George Abbott and Richard Bissell. Music and lyrics are by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross.

The Pajama Game is one of the modern musical comedies that have stemmed from the new style first established by Rodgers and Hammerstein with Oklahoma, Carousel, and South Pacific. The songs are integrated into the story and play an active part in carrying it forward.

Sid (Jim Duncan), the pajama factory superintendent whose love life is complicated by a labor dispute, sings "A New Town Is a Blue Town" early in the show. Lonely and without friends, he falls in love with Babe (Donna Pratt), who denies any romance between her and her boss in the rousing "I'm Not at All in Love."

The jubilant "Once a Year Day" is sung by the employees at their annual factory picnic. In witty "Think of the Time I Save," Hines (Dick Morril), the factory time-study man, shows how valuable seconds can be saved in all operations from shaving to drinking coffee in the morning.

UMass 4-H Upset With Chug-a-Lug

In an interview last Wed., Dr. Merle Howes, Director of University 4-H, disclosed his disappointment of the obvious popularity of "Chug-a-Lug," the recent recording which connects the 4-H and F.F.A. (Future Farmers of America) with moonshining.

Dr. Howes was informed of the song's existence by one of the local 4-H county agents. He immediately contacted the National Agency in Washington, D. C., which recommended that no formal action in connection with the song should be taken by the state organization.

He did say, however, that he has had reports from conscientious local leaders who have made efforts to discontinue the broadcasting of "Chug-a-Lug", and who seem to be succeeding in their efforts. The radio stations contacted by these persons have been very cooperative in going along with the demands of the 4-H.

Dr. Howes would like to have it known that although no formal action has been taken by the state agency, this does not indicate an endorsement of the recording.

The agency feels that the cost in both time and money for a full scale banning program would be too great for the highly tentative results. They have adopted the attitude that the best policy is to allow the song to run its short-lived popularity and find the same fate as other songs of the past.

Sorority Float Burned Twice Believed Arson

Alpha Chi Omega sorority's partially completed float for Friday night's Homecoming parade was burned last Thursday and Friday nights in what appeared to be acts of arson. The float was attached to an automobile.

One of the sorority sisters commented, "Homecoming weekend is for the Alumni. They come back to see the campus and reminisce about their college experiences

"It is funny, but none seemed to remember any float being set on fire. It was certainly a poor way to show the Alumni how UMass is becoming a better institution of higher learning."

She continued, "Juvenile delinquents are usually thought of as hanging around street corners in big cities, not on college campuses. But the outburst of malicious fun displayed here during homecoming weekend disproves this theory. Has the sense of humor on this campus suddenly become warped, or did someone mistake the time of the big bonfire?"

The theme of the float was "Whale 'Em". The girls rallied to rebuild the boat and completed it in time for the parade.

Frosh Primaries Today

Elections Committee chairman Ken Feinberg has announced that primary elections for freshman class officers will be held tomorrow, October 29th, in the Student Union lobby from 8:30 A.M. to 5:45 P.M. At this time final elections for senator-at-large, class of 1968, will also be held.

The following campaign procedures must be adhered to:

1) Candidates shall in no way defame the University,
2) No campaigning in sight of the polls,
3) NO SIGNS MAY BE PLACED ON UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS,
4) No campaign matter is to be attached on trees,
5) Candidates are held responsible for removal of campaign matter following the elections,
6) Conviction by the General Court shall result in automatic disqualification.

Further information can be found by consulting the Election Rules Act of 1961, revised in 1963. Copies are available in the Senate Office in the Student Union.

Harvard Prof. To Lecture U.N. Week

Louis B. Sohn, well-known expert in international law, will give the United Nations Week lecture at UMass Wed., Oct. 28, at 3 p.m., in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

The Harvard Scholar's lecture is being sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program and is open to the public without charge.

2-Week-Deadline Announced By Caesura

A new deadline system of the Caesura is allowing the magazine staff to work with writers to improve their material, according to editor Maida Hurwitz.

"The preliminary deadline two weeks before the final deadline enables the staff to analyze the work and suggest revisions to the author so that an improved piece of literature can be re-submitted to the magazine," said Miss Hurwitz.

Preliminary deadline for the first 1964-65 issue was Oct. 19 and the final deadline will be Nov. 2.

A board of graduate and undergraduate students selects material for the literary magazine from work submitted by the student body. Eleven members are on the editorial board responsible for selecting prose and poetry and two members from the art board. New board members are chosen each spring by incumbent members.

The Caesura, known simply as the Literary Magazine until two years ago, is run entirely by students and is the campus medium for creative writing. Editor Hurwitz said, "The Caesura organization also serves as a center of campus literary activity, including the sponsoring of coffee hours and poetry readings."

The apparent stress on poetry in recent issues, according to Miss Hurwitz, simply reflects the great amount of poetry being written. "It is not unusual," she said, "for more than two hundred poems to be submitted for any one issue."

Miss Hurwitz said that the Caesura welcomes book reviews, plays, essays or any kind of creative writing or art. The editor announced that the second issue will include a special "Four-College exchange" section, which will feature material from Smith, Mount Holyoke and Amherst colleges. The Caesura in turn will send samples of University writing to the literary magazines of these colleges.

Naiads To Represent UMass

Four students from UMass will leave for Wellesley College Oct. 30 to attend the annual weekend meeting of the Association of Synchronized Swimming for College Women.

Representing the Department of Physical Education for Women and NAIADS are Henriette Coopee, Joan Holleman, Judith Wolcott and Nancy Wood. Prof. Esther M. Wallace is joining the group as adviser to NAIADS.

During the two day conference, University students will serve on the Association's advisory council and lead two discussion groups on phases of production work for this form of aquatics. In addition to these responsibilities, Miss Joan Holleman will do a solo composition which she presented in March, '64, for the NAIAD performance.

The Association of Synchronized Swimming for College Women (ASSCW), now ten years old, has 35 member schools in the east and midwest. The first meeting of the association was held at Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., and since then has traveled as far south as Maryland, and as far west as Michigan. The University of Massachusetts was hostess school in 1959. The purpose of the organization is to "enable its members to gain a more comprehensive understanding of the art of synchronized swimming by sharing ideas and information which will further its growth and development."

IFC, Pan-Hel to Sponsor UM Carni

A United Nations Carnival will be held this Friday night at the Campus Pond. The Carnival is sponsored by the Interfraternity and the Panhellenic Councils.

Each year the Greeks conduct this event to raise money for the United Nations fund. All proceeds will be donated to the fund.

Fraternities and Sororities will join in the construction of Carnival booths. The booths will have games in which the entire campus community is welcome to participate.

Why not stop by the pond this Friday evening?

Univ. Co-ed Designs Suit; Takes Prize

Pamela Shaw, a Freshman in Van Meter Hall, majoring in Home Economics, recently became the New England Winner of the Singer Sewing Young Stylemaker Contest. The contest allows girls to make an entry for themselves and to model this entry when required.

Pamela chose to make a two piece French suit in tweed wool. Upon completion, it went into the Boston Area competition, and being judged for Fashion Rightness, general appearance, and construction, placed first among the entries.

Continuing on in competition, Pamela's suit was entered into the second phase of the contest—the New England judging. Pamela placed first again. Having won the title of Miss New England Singer Sewing Young Stylemaker, Pamela is awaiting the outcome of the National finals in New York, where her suit is at the present time.

Rotary Gives Scholarship

by DICK MALOY

The Amherst Rotary Club announced the availability of a Rotary Foundation Fellowship for International Understanding for graduate study abroad during the academic year 1966-67.

Single male college students whose homes are in the Amherst area, who will have received the Bachelor's degree by June 1966, and who will be between 20 and 28 years old at that date are eligible to apply. College graduates meeting these same qualifications may also apply.

The award pays round-trip transportation from Amherst to the city where he will study; full tuition and fees; essential books and study materials; room, board, and incidental living costs; and modest educational travel expenses within the country of study.

An applicant should have high academic standing; be able to read, write, and speak the language of the country in which he intends to study; an interest in international affairs; a personality which will enable him to be an "ambassador of good will"; and an ability to speak in public.

Amherst students, in college in the local area or elsewhere, may obtain further information from Horace M. Jones, 13 Harlow Drive, Amherst; William F. Field, Dean of Students at the University of Massachusetts; or Dean William L. Swartzbaugh at Amherst College.

Applications must be completed by March 15, 1965.

Army ROTC Team Prepares New Drill For Boston Meet

The Army ROTC trick drill team, the Grenadiers, is preparing a new drill routine to use in their first competition Dec. 6 at the US Army Association's Drill Meet in Boston.

The team consists of 18 men (almost half of them freshmen) under the command of Cadet Captain Roy Pinto. The Executive Officer is Cadet First Lieutenant Lou Porrazzo. These officers have been with the Grenadiers since their inception two years ago.

Aside from their marching skills, the Grenadiers sometimes serve the University as escorts for visiting dignitaries.

Captain Richard Parker, faculty advisor to the Grenadiers, emphasizes that not only is the team trained in precision handling of their weapons, but they are also trained in expert rifle marksmanship.

AFROTC TOURS

Two floors below the main level and slightly to the left and center of the Potomac River entrance of the Pentagon is Headquarters, USAF Command Post. On Monday, 19 October, thirteen senior cadets of the 370th AFROTC Cadet Wing, University of Massachusetts, joined with 100 other cadets from AFROTC detachments from the eastern seabord in touring this and other areas of the Pentagon, seat of the nation's military might.

After viewing the exhibits and paintings lining the corridors, the cadets visited the offices of the Secretary of the Air Force and of Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Chief of Staff, USAF. A few cadets even managed a personal tour of the Naval Chief of Staff's office by his secretary. Before touring and hearing a special briefing of the USAF Hq. Command Post, the cadets were welcomed by Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert and Lt. Gen. Wm. Stone, Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel.

Before his introduction of Secretary Zuckert, Gen. Stone explained the Officer's Education Program (OEP), signed by President Johnson last Wednesday. Gen. Stone explained that the Air Force had hoped for an exclusive two year scholarship program, but that "by the time all had had their crack at it its complexion has changed somewhat." He went on to say that OEP will consist of two integrated programs: (1) the regular four year program we now have, but with cadets now receiving a retainer fee of $50 per month, plus tuition and fees; and (2) a straight two year scholarship program (Junior and Senior years), with a Summer Training Unit (STU) period between the Sophomore and Junior years. Present AFROTC Advanced Cadets will receive a raise in

Half Man-Half Wolf

Hermann Hesse is a remarkably astute, prolific and versatile author who has remained relatively unknown in the United States. This is difficult to understand and after reading Steppenwolf or another of his books titled "Siddhartha, it becomes unexplainable. Steppenwolf is in essence a timeless novel for there will always be men such as Harry Haller who are part man and part Steppenwolf (literal translation; wolf of the steppes). But we should remember the inscription appearing several times in the novel: "not for everybody."

Harry Haller plans his suicide on his fiftieth birthday. He has existed on the periphery of the middle-class world for many years and can see no solution to his problems. The wolf within him derides the world of the average man, tearing apart the best and the worst around him. It is the contentment of the bourgeoisie, the mental stagnation with which the masses enjoy "the music of the immortals" that Harry holds in detest. He, above all, sees the finest, he alone knows the beauty of art and music.

This dilemma leads him to Hermine who wakens him slightly. Ultimately he finds the "Magic Theater." Once within the darkened passageways he finds innumerable doors extending to him an understanding of self and life. Harry Haller finds that no one is part man and part destructive wolf but instead is hundreds of selves and by rearrangement of these, hundreds more. He finds that the immortals, Goethe, Plato, Mozart, Schubert, all laugh the laughter of gods when they see the derangement of their masterworks by the middle-class and they laugh at him.

Harry is told that the music of the immortals is distorted by the radios of the masses but that he too must learn to laugh at these distortions. The spirit of greatness is still there and if he alone can find it then laugh,

HAVE A HEADACHE — WHICH IS YOURS?

By Peter Hendrickson

"Everytime I cough, it feels like the back of my head is being blown off."

Headaches are symptoms of disturbance. These disturbances occur within the skull, the systems of the body, the personality (that illusive entity) and our high-pressure deadline environment.

Headaches may be classified into two general categories:

MIGRAINE headaches are more severe than others. They may make it impossible for the sufferer to function. The physician may prescribe drugs to alleviate the pain and side effects such as nausea and vomiting.

TENSION headaches, by far the most common, should be treated by a physician, if recurrent or extremely acute. These recurrent bits of maddening pain are most successfully treated by a single doctor. His close understanding of your condition is the key to relief.

Speculation about the cause of tension headaches usually revolves about the following complaints:

SINUS — A king-sized head feeling as if it has been packed with last year's cotton crop is indicative of acute sinusitis. A mere faucet nose, of the dripping type, is probably a scapegoat for another more devious cause.

EYESTRAIN—Overtaxing of the eyes must be more than a discomfort to actually foster a demon head.

OVEREATING — Gluttonous habits are a strain on the wallet and stomach, but they are not usually a cause of headache.

OVERDRINKING — Alcohol in the blood causes vasodilation recognized by sanquine complexion, bloodshot eyes and tightly pinched nerves in the cranial region.

It is most likely that late hours, excitement over the dubious social situation or loss of restraint is responsible for the throbbing reminder of last night's laughter.

STALE AIR . . . SMOKING—Increased CO_2 in the blood will dilate the vessels. Again it is more likely that it is the individual's response to the situation that has caused him to take in the CO_2 CO is another story entirely.

PHYSICAL FATIGUE—Most often this is a factor in the let-down phase. Purely amazing, it is, what eight hours of sleep will do for the afflicted, once or twice a week.

There are some common outs for those afflicted with tension headaches. Coffee and tea, old-wives' remedies, have soothed millions. Fresh air—the exhilarating variety that is swept down the valley from the restless, virgin woods of Leverett and Shutesbury—may sweep the ache away. Mild exercise and a temporary change in the environment may banish the pangs of a bitter night with the books. Aspirin, of course, is widely recognized for its relief-giving properties. However, an overdose will not increase the relief but will compound the misery with undesirable side effects.

This is the new group. They are five UMass students forming a rock 'n roll group but they have no name. Would you like to name your own band? Any ideas will be taken at the Collegian office until 4 p.m. Thursday.

UMies at U. of New Mexico

The University of Massachusetts and the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque have 10 participants this year in an exchange program begun in 1961.

The program is designed to attack the problem of provincialism among elementary school teachers. Six UMass students, including the first male participant, are at UNM while four coeds from UNM are at Amherst. The students from Massachusetts at UNM are Maureen Fitzgerald, Lorraine Niemyski, Joseph Mansfield, Margaret Heap, Carol Purrington, and Natalie Roulston.

Student Political Thought

- To Save The Party -

Massachusetts Democrats and non-Goldwater Republicans across the country face a similar problem. The latter must choose between voting for President Johnson, many of whose policies they dislike as much as Goldwater's, or voting for the Senator, thereby strengthening his hold on the party machinery (the more votes a politician gets, the more authority he has), and making it even harder for the moderates to recapture the party by 1968.

The dilemna of our state's Democrats also concerns party control. They must decide whether to vote for the opposition candidate whose record accurately reflects the political lethargy of the Republican tradition, or to vote for their own party's candidate whose recently revealed political character (he has no true record) contradicts the principles of the Democratic Party—principles which in his present (post-stab-in-the-back primary) campaign, he feigns to believe; This would give him victory, and with it, near supremacy in the party—it would virtually abandon the party to the underworld.

This choice is, as the cliche goes, a matter of the lesser of two evils—specifically, a short or long term one. On the one hand Democrats must tolerate two years of nebulous effort and the aggravation of state problems by inaction, on the other they must lose indefinitely a large portion of party control to a demagogue who will provide the bread and games (contracts and bookies) to maintain the corruption that is the source of his power.

In a last analysis (if I may take two figures from Animal Farm, and put them in a different political context) this statewide election is like a choice between Pigs; one who represents the party of pork, the fattened, well-off social elements, and the other who is a political creature to be taken literally.

-Young Independents-

How can we maintain peace, and civic freedom, and eliminate the island of poverty floating amidst the ocean of prosperity? These are questions which should concern every student upon this campus, for the future of this country depends upon us. Only through the solution of these problems will man be able to sustain himself.

In relation to thse problems, Young Independents has issued its first policy statement, which is posted throughout the campus in dormitories and in several buildings. The statement deals with a few of the major and most pressing issues of the day: the atomic revolution, automation, and civil liberties.

Young Independents is a student organization for promoting liberal political thought and working towards a better world. It tries to achieve its objectives through the sponsorship of lectures, panels, and discussions and by taking direct political action such as demonstrations, leaflets, and petitions.

Janice Baker

-DIRTY POLITICS-

The presidential campaign has become the filthiest and most deplorable that has ever been held. Both parties have succumbed to edicting trash and scandalous repurcussions to supplant their wavering policies.

Both parties have attacked their opposing presidential candidate inequitably because of their associations (more often than not a remote association) with some organizations or persons. To leave the generalities and to be more explicit, first look at the Republican Party.

The party has been split because of a radical leader whose philosophy and idealogy is distinctly different. To make amends for this split, the party has taken the defensive role—defensive in that instead of stressing their desire to command this country in leadership by eulogizing their past achievements and attacking unfavorable Democratic policies, in many cases they have sat passively being content to mar the President's character because of his acquaintances. Mr. Goldwater constantly links Johnson with the Bobby Baker case and his party with corruption. The Jenkin's case is the hottest issue going for the Republicans and will cost the Democrats votes. It will not be surprising to hear Goldwater at an opportune time connect Johnson with perversion.

The Democrats claim that Barry is a member of the John Birch Society with an imperialistic drive to wipe out our enemies. He is a military pervert who is reckless and irresponsible. These are the issues, not whether which party is to lead the nation, rather which man. Johnson is an infamous Communist and Goldwater a pugnacious radical.

The ironic problem is that whoever spreads the most dirt might win. Instead of accepting the belief in individualism, the parties have classified each man into an unfavorable group. How can you blame the President because his chief aid is a homosexual? This is an individual problem, a disease. Just because Bobby Baker is mixed up in corruption, it doesn't mean Johnson is. Just because Goldwater is backed by the John Birch Society doesn't mean he is a member. All around us is corruption and the parties should realize its prevalence in the government. There are always a few despicable characters even in the wonderful barrel of government. The American people should realize that by spreading this filth, the parties are forming a superficial facade instead of the real party doctrines. The main issues should be what the parties stand for, and unless the people show their disgust, a party could be elected whose doctrines would appeal only to a minority.

UMass Towing

Many people have been extremely upset about the vehicle towing practices on campus this semester. There are several reasons for the discontentment, some of which are completely justified.

The complaint heard most often is of the treatment which the towing victims receive from the service station involved. This refers not only to the treatment of the individuals involved, but also to that of their vehicles.

The language employed by the garage attendants indicates an attitude which has no place in the performance of an official function on a university campus. The owner has displayed a belief that since he has the towing contract already he can "do as he pleases." Comments have been made to the extent of "either pay now, or leave the car here and pay two dollars a day for storage, but either way, get . . . out of here.

This company has been reaping the profits of a very lucrative business, which they procured by offering the lower of two bids received. Did Anderson's Garage submit the low bid of 6 dollars planning to be careless with the autos which they towed and thus only giving 6 dollars worth of service? Apparently, this is the case. Perhaps Ashley's Garage, which is the only garage in the area authorized to bid, due to D.P.V. regulations, was offering 8 dollars worth of service when they submitted that figure as a bid. Certainly most campus motorists would rather pay the extra 2 dollars than have to pay 5 dollars for repairs to their grossly abused cars. It would appear that any "mechanics" would know that to tow a car with the parking brake on will either snap the brake cable or ruin the tires. Yet, the "mechanics" who tow our cars apparently do not know this. Either they don't know or don't care! Don't care would probably be the truer choice.

Editorial Policy

As stated on our nameplate, The Collegian is "A Free and Responsible Press".

Our primary position is that of the voice of the student body, and as such, it is our duty not only to report news of campus interest but also to allow students to express their personal convictions by editorializing on our editorial page.

Collegian policy holds that signed or bylined editorials or letters to the editor are statements of PERSONAL ideology and the Collegian does not necessarily agree with, or uphold these opinions.

Unsigned editorials state Collegian positions on issues and must be approved by at least five editors before going into print unsigned. They are reserved for subjects which we consider timely and important and are applied in what we consider to be useful and constructive manner.

Support or criticism of any idea pertinent to the University may be made by us or by anyone willing to stand behind his beliefs, providing that such polemics are in good taste and free from libel and slander.

The Collegian has always exemplified the spirit of free campus journalism and shall continue to do so for the good of the students and the University.

-An Apology-

To the Editor:

It seems only reasonable to assume that by the time a person gets to college, he would have some knowledge of the rudiments of courtesy. However, this is obviously not true. We were never so ashamed as we were by the behavior of the majority of UMass students toward Governor Peabody at the Homecoming Game on Saturday.

When the Governor entered the stadium he was greeted — not with the respect that is due him as chief executive of the state—but with mockery and rudeness. As he passed the stands on the way to his seat, he was booed, hissed, and laughed at—obviously because of his defeat in the primary elections. Mr. Peabody may not have been renominated, but he is still the governor of our state, as well as the president of the Board of Trustees of this University. We were appalled by the discourtesy and ignorance displayed by so many students.

We would like to call attention to the fact that this is the man who had enough ineres in our education to fight for a Boston extension of the University. There is no excuse for the reception Governor Peabody received, particularly when he deserves our respect and admiration. May we suggest that the student government offer the Governor an apology, on behalf of the student body.

Young Dems Initiate "Johnson Week"

By Richard Caproni

With the national, state and local elections less than a week away the Young Democrats of the University are busy with their "Johnson Week." This dynamic new group under the leadership of President Dave Podbros has been very active since the start of the school year and now boasts of a membership of 100. The Young Dems are now in the process of voicing support for the re-election of the president both on campus and in the surrounding areas.

The National Committee, under the tutelage of Dave Hunter, has set up a table in the lobby of the Student Union. This display contains Johnson-Humphrey buttons, bumper stickers and literature on the candidates and the party. The group also passed out several thousand leaflets at the football game this UMass appeared in the Home-Saturday. The Johnson Girls of coming parade on Friday night and have other plans for the week.

The State Committee with Bruce Schlosberg at its head was also at the game Saturday with Bellotti stickers and literature on the Democratic candidates for state office. The committee is also expecting a visit from Bellotti before the election.

On the local level, Steve Blackmore is working closely with local candidates and the Democratic Town Committee. This group has been helping out at the headquarters in town and will also be making phone calls on election day to get out a large vote. The group will make a trip to Greenfield on November second to make door - to - door calls to get out the vote for the Democratic incumbent for state representative in that town.

On Monday and Wednesday of this week panel discussions were held with the Young Republicans. Tonight's discussion will be on domestic politics and will begin at 7:30 in the Student Union ballroom. On Sunday night Nov. 1, a Faculty-Student Rally will be held in the ballroom. More information on the program will appear in Friday's Collegian.

There will be a general meeting of all members and all those interested in being members on Thursday October 29 at 8 p.m. in SBA 120.

WMUA Presents Second Sex Seminar

Sex long the number one topic of discussion on campus, will again be in the spotlight on WMUA (91.1 F.M.) this Sunday, Nov. 1, when WMUA presents the second in its current series of programs on sex education from 7 to 8 p.m.

Doctors Gage, Allen, Janowitz, Havens and McBride, all of the University Health Service, will devote the hour to frank discussion of problems which have been brought to their attention through questions submitted by students via the question boxes in the Student Union and the Infirmary.

As the question boxes are the only means of rating the success of the series, students wishing to see it continued are urged to make use of them.

As a service to the University community, WMUA will broadcast live the meeting of the Student Senate this evening beginning at 7 p.m.

SZO Sponsors Israeli-African Program

Tonight at 8:00 there will be a film and a speaker sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization in the Plymouth Room of the SU.

Israel is a country of about 2.5 million people, surrounded by hostile states that are determined to destroy her. Yet this country, that must skimp to meet its national budget, finds people and money to aid the newly emerging nations. Israel has given technical and educational aid to countries such as Ghana, Nigeria and Tthipia. Although this aid is small, when compared to that of America and Russia, it is highly appreciated by many Africans.

Yet some Africans say that Israel is trying to buy votes in the UN or to bribe favorable conferences.

The Israelis insist that it is an honest attempt to aid these countries out of an understanding for their problems and a desire to cultivate friendship.

Sp'fld. A.I.C. Fraternities Curtailed

The five campus fraternities of American International College (AIC) are operating under a new set of rules that severely curtail their social functions.

Under a set of guides handed the fraternities by the AIC admay hold no open mixers, hold only seven social functions each semester, admit neither freshmen men nor freshmen women to their houses, and may not serve alcoholic beverages to anyone in the house.

The new rules were an administration reaction to several parties held at fraternities over the summer during which neighbors of the houses called Springfield police to quell disturbances. The parties themselves violated AIC rules which prohibit summer fraternity social events.

The fraternities at the College had been holding "open mixers" every Friday evening and "they had been getting out of hand," according to one observer. It was to curtail these parties that the social events of the fraternities were limited to seven parties — stag or mixed— each semester.

Under the new rulings, guards and college officials may enter fraternities at any time to make sure rules are not being violated. Harry J. Courniotes, vice-president of the College, explained that "it would be better for campus cops to enter the fraternity houses rather than Springfield police."

The fraternities are currently in a bad state of public relations, and the rules are an attempt to bring them back to a status of repute," Courniotes said.

WFCR to Broadcast Live Concerts

WFCR, the Four College educational radio station, will be broadcasting three concert series live this year.

The New York Philharmonic concert will be broadcast from Lincoln Center in New York City, the Metropolitan Opera from New York and the Boston Symphony from Symphony Hall in Boston. Albert Hulsen, station manager, said that WFCR will be the only area radio station broadcasting these programs live.

Through October the Prague Spring Festival has been broadcast. The concerts were recorded at the International Music Festival last May. The Vienna Music Festival will be programmed in November.

All five programs will be rebroadcast by WGBH in Boston and WAMC in Albany.

WFCR will be broadcasting interviews with visiting dignitaries who come to any of the Four Colleges. Special lectures at any of the colleges will also be broadcast. Hulsen said, "We feel that we should broadcast programs which will also interest the minority, whose tastes may not always be the same as the majority." He explained that this was one of the reasons for broadcasting the lectures, and that he believes educational radio programs should vary from those of commercial stations.

Interviews being taped and rebroadcast will be planned by Shulamith Oppenheim and Elizabeth Spiro, who are producers for the station.

Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst and the University of Massachusetts all contribute to the financing and programs of WFCR.

Fashion Show Success

by LOIS SKOLNICK

"Today's Fashion trends are set by the young." This was the theme of the annual fall fashion show, sponsored by the Student Union Special Events Committee, last night in the Student Union Ballroom.

Eleven charming UMass Coeds displayed youthful fall fashions from local shops. Misses Carol Bradford, Jeannie Carlson, Judy Carr, Sandra Cunningham, Debbie Harvey, Claudia Hammond, Brenda McEvoy, Ruth Rubin, Joyce Selansky, Karen Sullivan, Joyce Selansky and Sue Yokel presented the fashions, under the narration of Miss Carol Ann Russell.

In an array of clothes for the college campus, some definite trends were evident.

Campus coeds will be relieved to hear that last year's popular colors are still in vogue. Predominant colors were the very popular cranberry red, royal blue, subdued "parfait" pink, bright red and the classics, black and white.

There was an emphasis on the black and white combinations, with frequent use of black and white checks and herringbone tweeds.

The classic cardigan and skirt outfits, so popular on campus in past years, is with us again, in a wide variety of colors.

The "V Neck" jumper, in checks and solid colors was fashioned frequently. The two-piece jersey jumper was also shown. The turtle neck jersey was ever present, under jumpers and with skirts and ski pants.

The very familiar stretch pants, in a variety of colors—one pair in transcluscent blue—were featured. The quilted ski parka seems to be the current "must" on the slopes.

The double breasted style was leading among the coats featured. This style was used in long, three quarter and short length coats.

One interesting variation on double breasted jacket was featured in a slack ensemble. The jacket was very much like the sailor jacket, popular a few years ago.

The highlights of the evening were the evening clothes, dominated by the new "discotheque" thestyle. The black discotheque shown in a sheeth of tier on tier fringes, with rhine stone straps.

As a whole, this year's fashion show is closely reflected in current campus trends.

Whelchel and Bryant Lead Conference

Bill Bryant of the University of Rhode Island and Jerry Whelchel of the University of Massachusetts are the leading ground gainer and passer, respectively, of the Yankee Conference to date, statistics released from the conference publicity office today revealed.

Bryant, a fullback, has gained a total of 313 yards in 74 carries for an average of 4.2 yards per carry. Dean Kent, a halfback from Vermont, has the best rushing average, 6.8 yards per rush on 22 carries for 151 yards. In total yards, Frank Harney of Maine is runner-up with 219 yards in 59 carries.

Whelchel, an all-conference choice for the past two years, has completed 19 passes in 30 attempts in three games for 200 yards, two touchdowns and an average of .633. Dick DeVarney, Maine's mighty mite, has competed in five games and completed 53 passes in 109 attempts for 722 yards and three touchdowns.

Harney has caught the greatest number of passes, 12 for 150 yards, while Jm McMahon of Rhode Island and Bob Meers of Massachusetts each has caught ten. McMahon has a total of 135 yards and one tuchdown while Meers has gained 113 yards and also has one touchdown.

Jack Redmond of Connecticut is the leading punter with an average of 39.1 yards per kick with Bill Perkins of Maine second with an average of 38.2.

Bryant, Brent Keene of Maine and Richie Reynolds of Vermont are tied for first in scoring with 18 points each and other leaders are Ken Andrade, Vermont, 15; Harney, Maine, Perkins, Maine, Phil DeRose, Mass., and Marty Hall, New Hampshire, 12 each; and Rick Jackson, Rhode Island, 10.

Harriers Host YanCon Meet

The University of Massachusetts cross country team will host the other five Yankee Conference teams this weekend in the annual championship meet. The race will start Saturday morning at 11:00 behind the Women's Physical Education Building.

At the beginning of the year it looked like it would be a battle between Maine and the University of New Hampshire for the title. But Maine has come up with several surprises and recently swamped UNH in a dual meet. Maine also downed the Redmen early in the year as part of a trimeet with Northeastern. Off of these performances, the Black Bears rate the nod in the meet. UMass also lost a close meet to URI and must be rated a slim chance to regain the crown they lost to Maine last year after three consecutive wins.

The home team harriers, however, weren't supposed to do anything this year with the graduation of Bob Brouillet and several others. Coach Footrick had only three lettermen to start the year with. The other four slots have been capably taken over by sophcmores and an inspired performance could turn the trick this Saturday. From this corner it looks like the order will be Maine, UMass, URI, and UNH in the first four slots.

Individually speaking, Maine's Fred Judkins, a sixth place finisher a year ago, seems to have the best chance since all those who beat him have graduated. He is undefeated in the conference this year. His stiffest competition will be Reneau and Dean of UNH, Wooten of UConn, and Carpenter of UMass.

Terry lost to Judkins by 23 seconds in the Boston meet. It was a level course, however, and the hilly home course could work to the advantage of the strong soph. The other three men all have two years of varsity experience and cannot be counted out.

The rest of the Redman squad will be co-capts. Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey, Steve St. Clair, Mike Sheely, Bob Larson, and Charley Mitchell.

Pro Flankerbacks 'Misfits'

The flank in pro football is a home for misfits, according to an article in the current issue of SPORT magazine.

A list of the outstanding flankerbacks of the last few years includes Kyle Rote, whose injured knees forced him to move from running back to the flank; Frank Gifford, who retired as a halfback and came back as a flanker; Tommy McDonald, too small to play halfback, but speedy and elusive enough to play wide, and Bobby Mitchell who had his problems as a running back but achieved greatness on the flank.

Perhaps the classic example of the misfit-turned-star, according to SPORT, is Bobby Joe Conrad of the St. Louis Cardinals, the sure-handed flankerback who led the National Football League in pass receptions with 73 last season.

In his first four years as a professional, he played offensive and defensive halfback, returned punts and kickoffs, defensed against punt and kickoff returns, and kicked field goals.

During this period, Bobby Joe came to realize that his best position might be flankerback, but unfortunately, the Cardinal offense didn't have one. Finally late in the 1961 season, coach Pop Ivy quit the Cardinals and his assistants installed the three end offense with Conrad on the flank for the last three games. Bobby Joe finished the season with 30 catches for 499 yards.

When Wally Lemm took over the coaching reins in 1962, he kept Bobby Joe wide and the grateful flanker hauled in 62 passes for 954 yards.

But as far as Bobby Joe is concerned, says the SPORT magazine article, he still feels that he is regarded as a misfit. How else can he explain the fact that he was not chosen to appear in the All-Star Pro Bowl game at the end of last season, despite leading the NFL in pass receptions? Both Bobby Mitchell and Tommy McDonald were chosen ahead of him and Frank Gifford was a late selection to replace the injured Mitchell.

However, Bobby Joe did receive the balm of selection by both the AP and UPI to their all-league teams, and the disappointment gives him one more goal to shoot at this year.

Coach Receives Little Praise For Redmen Performances

By John Goodrich

One of the loneliest men on the football field after last Saturday's win over the Terriers of Boston University was head Coach Vic Fusia. Many students and alumni passed by the Coach, but few took the opportunity to congratulate him.

This is a most unfortunate situation. The University of Massachusetts is playing their most ambitious schedule ever this year and have won five of their first six games. Yet, it seems that many students, including this writer and the sports editor, have been quite harsh when analyzing the performances of the team.

Since Fusia has arrived on the scene, the Redmen have a record of 18 wins, 7 losses, and one tie. The Redmen have come from an also ran into the highest echelon of college football in New England. They won this mythical title last year and are very high in the ratings again this year.

It would appear that the coach is the last to be praised in a win and the first to hear about a loss, or even a sub-par performance. It is a very important fact that a team loaded with talent will go nowhere with out the proper coaching, and the University of Massachusetts should be thankful for the fine staff it has.

A case in point over the role a coach plays is Notre Dame, a team that fell right out of sight on the national level for quite a few years. Now with a new coach, Ara Parseghian, the team is ranked number two in the nation, with a quarterback who couldn't earn a letter last year. The coach seems to have revitalized the famous Irish spirit.

Yet the majority of the students who would point to the fact the University has had to struggle through the games this season against some supposed easy opponents. No one can deny that this is true, but let's take a closer look at the teams.

Every one the Redmen have faced this year could counter with a team steeped in veterans. Only Boston U. was light on lettermen. Most of these opponents can remember the unkind treatment at the hands of the Redmen a year ago. URI was looking to even off the 57-0 trouncing and even Harvard wanted to show the 0-0 game was merely a fluke.

With a schedule like this, the Redmen cannot let up for a single opponent. Most of the teams, especially those in the Yankee Conference, point to the Redmen as the pivotal game on their schedule. They set themselves emotionally for the best they can muster when they play UMass. Fans, it just is not easy to get up for every game.

Boston University came to town most anxious to do all they could to counter the 21-0 game of a year ago. One need only to have walked within earshot of their dressing room prior to the game to notice the intensive emotional pitch they had worked themselves up to for the contest. Yet, the Redmen were equally ready to play and perhaps to prove some of the comments in the week after the URI game weren't the truth.

The best way to show how much emotion plays in this game is to look at the University of Mississippi. This team was the consensus choice as number one in the nation by every magazine from Sports Illustrated to Playboy. Their opening game was with Memphis State, a team that had held it to a 0-0 tie the year before the only blot on its record.

Ole Miss was ready for the game and won 30-0, but the next week they had to face a team that is famous for upsets, University of Florida. The Gators easily downed the Rebels 30-14. The next week the story was repeated, and just this last Saturday, lowly Vanderbilt tied Mississippi, 7-7. Each of these teams wanted to beat the Rebels and set themselves for that game. They simply wanted to beat the best.

The same thing works here. Every team wants the honor of saying they beat the mighty Redman of the University of Massachusetts. We here at the state university should be extremely happy that we have the talent on the field and the coaching staff that has been able to carry the Redmen over the obstacles and maintain their lofty position in New England.

Freshmen Prepare For Holy Cross

By Rick Curwin

The Little Redmen wil try to run their winning streak to three games this Thursday against the strong Holy Cross Freshmen. Featuring a stingy defense that has given up three points in the two games played thus far, UMass will have its hands full containing a team capable of exploding at any time. After losing 9-0 against Dartmouth the Crusaders scored forty-four points in a romp over BU. UMass beat BU 18-0. The team will be without the services of its fine guard, Mickey Bailey, who has been ill with pneumonia. They will be at full strength otherwise.

THE LEADING GROUND GAINER so far has been right hb Kevin Kopka with 88 yds. in 12 rushes. Close behind him is Mike Keblin with 82 yds. in 19

Law Violators In Minority Says Marchant

OFFICIAL NOTICE

"Last Saturday two accidents involving pedestrians occured in the center of Amherst within minutes of each other. This is a measure of the public safety problem faced by a growing community.

"The University, for its part, is at the center of an even more serious problem. Traffic rules and regulations are a necessity, and their enforcement is in the interest of the safety and welfare of all staff members and students.

"VIOLATORS ARE IN THE MINORITY. Their disregard, in the last analysis, is not only for necessary regulations and enforcement officers, but for the rights of every other citizen of the campus community.

Specifically, the University has clearly marked parking areas and it is expected that vehicles owned or operated by persons connected with the University will be parked only in areas marked for either students or faculty.

"WHEN ILLEGAL PARKING takes place in a "Tow Away Zone" or in lots marked for official vehicles or for visitors, the vehicle will be towed away. Vehicles will also be towed away if parked in the following locations specified in Section 5 of the University Automobile Regulations of June 6, 1964:

During the period December 1 to April 1 all night parking on any part of any way in such a manner as to impede the removal or plowing of snow or ice, and in any parking lot or area except those set aside or designated for the use of residents of University dormitory or housing units.

Upon any sidewalk.

Upon any crosswalk.

Upon any way within twenty (20) feet of an intersecting way except alleys.

Upon or within ten (10) feet of a fire hydrant.

U.N. Carni

Pond to be Fair Site Today

Fraternities and sororities will sponsor a United Nations Week fund-raising carnival today in the area around the campus pond.

The carnival, proceeds of which are marked for the U.N. fund, will run from 7 to 11 p.m. In case of rain, the amusements will be moved into the Student Union's Commonwealth Room.

Steve Graham, president of the Interfraternity Council, said the carnival will feature 10 game booths and two ticket-selling booths. Townspeople and their children are cordially invited to participate in pie throwing, dart throwing and beat-the-clock contests, as well as other events.

Each of the amusement booths, Graham said, will be co-sponsored by a UMass fraternity and sorority.

The entire Greek system on campus will be participating in the fund-raising effort, which has become a traditional I.F.C.-Panhellenic Council contribution to the annual U.N. Week here.

10 Pumpkins Send 5 UM Men to Jail

Five undergraduates went to jail for lack of bail today, after Amherst police arrested them last night in the town's annual "pumpkin pilfering" episode.

Charged with larceny of decorated pumpkins from a residence on Harlow Dr., Amherst, are John Duriel, 21, of 34 Lincoln St., Chicopee Falls; Raymond S. Stec, 20, of 34 St. James Ave., Chicopee Falls; Boris Chevoe, 21, of 238 Worcester St., Wellesley; Harry C. Hill, Jr., 19, of 37 Highland Ave., Chicopee, and William McCarthy, 18, of 41 Rich St., Chicopee Falls.

Amherst Police Chief Francis E. Hart said the arrests resulted from "more than an hour of intensive investigation and searching" which was inaugurated following calls from the neighborhood.

The Amherst department annually conducts a crackdown on the Halloween pranksters who invade residential streets from the 10,000 student campus.

To prevent further such occurrences, Chief Hart vowed today, "We will pinch pilferers plentifully, if necessary to curb their activities."

The five student defendants entered innocent pleas and went to jail for lack of $50 bail each to await trial Nov. 6.

Red Cross to Direct Campus Blood Drive

Recruiters working fervently to Register Blood Donors

This year's drive will be held on Nov. 17, 18 and 19 at the Student Union under the direction of the Hampshire County Red Cross.

During the past week, recruiters have been working at all campus residences to seek volunteer donors for the annual student blood drive.

REGISTRATION CARDS are still available at the desk in the lobby of the Student Union for students wishing to donate. Those students, faculty, and administration members who have not been approached and wish to give are urged to sign up immediately.

STUDENTS UNDER 21 (and over 18) must register in advance in order that parental permission may be obtained through the mailing committee headed by the University Women.

Each donor becomes a member of the Hampshire County Red Cross Blood Insurance Program. The provisions of this program are as follows:

1) BY DONATING A PINT OF BLOOD, a person becomes a member of the Insurance Program.

2) Membership entitles the donor and his immediate family living under one roof to any blood they may need during the next twelve months.

3) Members of the Program and their families will receive free blood without having to replace it. Non-members are required to replace pint for pint, as soon as possible.

4) BLOOD SUPPLIED TO HOSPITALS by the Red Cross is not charged for. Hospitals and doctors charge for administering blood.

"This Month We Honor"

Behind the Scenes Workers Cited

by Ethel Kaplan

The tradition of "This Month We Honor" is being reinstituted by the Student Union Program Council.

Diligent workers for many of the organizations on campus perform their duties behind the scenes and never receive recognition for their services to the University and the student body. The purpose of this program is to make the general campus aware of these people and the contributions that they have made. This month's honor students are two juniors, Michele Potvin and Robert (Kip) Johnson.

Miss Potvin has actively participated in the Student Senate, representing Arnold House last year and the class of '66 this year. As a contributing member on the Women's Affairs committee, she wrote the constitution for the Council of Women's Organizations.

The aim of this council is to promote further cooperation and communication among women students' organizations.

Miss Potvin is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and as such has worked on the Standards Committee, the Constitution Revision Committee and is now activities chairman. Her other activities in the past two years have included the S. U. G. Board, Collegian Publishing Board, Newman Club, Fine Arts Council and the Special Events Committee. Michele is a government major from Holyoke and plans to do government work after graduation.

Kip Johnson has started off this year with quite a load. Being a counselor on second floor at Gorman House and organizing the 1964 SWAP conference as a member of the executive committee headed his activities list this semester. For the past two years he has been an active member on the Class of '66 Executive Council. He is co-chairman of the queens committee and publicity committee for Winter Carnival.

Last year he worked on Las Vegas Night and was ticket chairman for Sophomore Banquet. He is a member of Theta Chi fraternity and co-rushing chairman. His abilities were recognized on Area Judiciary and Maroon Keys last year, which led him to be selected for

Constitutions Said To Be Cumbersome

The Student Senate moved to establish a subcommittee to review existing organizational charters at Wednesday night's meeting. The move was sparked by the knowledge that the constitutions of various student organizations are "old and cumbersome."

Senator Jones then resolved a bill requesting that another subcommittee be charged with "investigating the advisability of establishing a charter system to replace the present constitutional system."

Under this system, each organization would be subject to certain rules and standards and would then draft bylaws to suit its personal interests.

Referring to complaints of the abusive and indifferent attitudes of certain University service personnel, Senator Parks commented that the "rights of the students are being violated," and asked the senators to be the "voice of your constituents" concerning such matters.

Dealing with other matters, the Senate tabled a bill requiring class office nominees to read the section of the Election Rules concerning campaign procedures.

In the light of recent infractions of these procedures, some senators felt that this legislation would eliminate the placing of campaign literature in areas prohibited by University law.

Dr. Stresses Cash Crisis Threat in UN

On its nineteenth birthday, the United Nations is experiencing a grave monetary crisis, said Dr. Louis B. Sohn last night, in his keynote address for the commemmoration of United Nations Week. Speaking in the SU Ballroom, Sohn asserted that the United Nations will fail to fulfill its prime purpose as a "forum for two sides to enable people to get reasonable resolutions without fighting," unless a firm stand is taken with Russia concerning her enormous debt.

The United Nations has issued bonds to eliminate two hundred million dollars worth of debts, but is still faced with a debt of one hundred million dollars.

Russia, alone, has a debt exceeding two years' dues to the U.N. The Soviet Union

Committee Head Says:

Public Relations to Improve

by Tom Kiernan

Public relations, always a key problem plaguing the University's Student Government Association, has recently taken on a new light. The Public Relations Committee of the Student Senate under the chairmanship of Don Boyd, has taken great strides in an effort to bring the concept of student government closer to the student body.

A NEW CONCEPT of public relations has evolved under the leadership of Sen. Boyd. One of the most important contributions of this committee has been the publication of a pamphlet delineating the structure and function of student government as it exists on this campus. It has become an important source of information to the new student, explaining the workings of their student government.

The committee has also initiated an orientation program for its new senators in an effort to train them to fully assume their responsibilities.

Each Tuesday evening, the Public Relations Committee sponsors an informative program over WMUA which brings student leaders to the microphone to discuss current campus problems. This program is only one portion of the committee's effort to ellicit constructive criticism from the student body.

SEN. BOYD ENVISIONS that his committee will someday become the official sounding board for student opinion on current events as well as campus affairs.

He expressed hope that, "through polling the student body on various matters, the committee will be better able to assess the true needs of the student body and hence be able to more effectively guide the Student Senate in these directions."

THE PUBLIC RELATIONS Committee is also looking outward, beyond the University, toward the new state-supported junior colleges and UMass Boston. Presently, plans are being made for a conference on student government for all state-supported schools. It is hoped that through such a meeting these schools will be better able to profit by the experiences of the University's Student Government Association in setting up their own systems of student government.

FACULTY MEETING
The University Bulletin announces a meeting of the General Faculty on Nov. 3. This is an Error. The meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12.

YoungDemocrats To Sponsor Rally

The Young Democrats of the University will sponsor a student - faculty rally as a climax to Johnson Week on Sunday night at 8:00 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

A number of well-known faculty members will speak on various campaign issues. At the top of the list is Dr. Howard Quint of the history department speaking on foreign affairs; Dr. William Havard, head of the government department, recently here from LSU, speaking on southern politics; and Dr. Mayhew of the government department will speak on domestic policies.

These men are only a few of the faculty members expected to participate in the discussion.

Anyone may attend and participate. Coffee will be served during a question and answer period.

The Young Democrats invite all interested students and faculty members to attend the rally in the SU Ballroom.

Burke Wins AJR Contest

Neil Burke, a senior accounting major, won last week's Amherst Journal Record Football Contest, taking the $15 prize in a close contest.

Last Saturday's games were difficult ones for the predictors, with only two entrants missing as few as three games, and eight others missing four contests. Francis Mazzei of Amherst missed three games, as did Burke, but had to settle for second place because of the UMass student's greater accuracy in predicting the "Games - of - the-Week" scores.

More than two-thirds of the entrants missed a combination of games which included Rutgers over Columbia, Dartmouth over Harvard, Oregon State over Syracuse, A. I. C. over Springfield, and South Hadley over Amherst Regional.

Fair Sex On The Beam

If you followed the Olympic Games in Toyko last week on television, you could not help to be impressed by the beautiful work done by men and women gymnasts all over the world. Gymnastics is one of the newest and most beautiful sports for girls and getting more popular with every passing year.

In keeping with the trend of the times, the Women's Physical Education Department offers several gymnastic activities for the girls, depending on their interest and skill level. There is WAA gymnastics club for the student who wishes to develop grace and skill for her own enjoyment. There is also a WAA gymnastics team for the more skilled girl who wishes to compete with other colleges in this graceful and most definitely feminine sport. Our season starts next week and culminates in a co-ed gymnastic show on March 20.

Like any fairly new organization, both the girls' team and club are looking for new interested member. If you have never participated before but would like to try, please come to the opening meeting Tuesday, November 3rd, at 6:30 in the WPE building. In case you are interested but cannot come to the meeting, please give your name to one of the following girls: WAA Club: Jennifer Crispen '67 or Alice Lilly '67. SOHN CITES . . .

has threatened to walk out if she loses her vote.

The U.N. is confronted with a dilemma. If it does not enforce this minor sanction, it will have proven itself ineffective. On the other hand, a Russian walk-out would undermine the very principles upon which the U.N. is based.

This situation is a perfect example of the prime problem of the U.N.—that of enforcement. "The time has come to enforce international law and not just talk about using it," Dr. Sohn insisted. We must take firm action as we did in Cuba.

Despite its many problems, the U.N. has achieved a great deal in the past nineteen years. It has helped approximately fifty nations gain their independence. It has given technical assistance to developing countries, eliminated malaria, and increased the production of food.

The U.N.'s most severe test is in the area of the maintenance of peace and security. Unfortunately the U.N. does not have the means necessary to achieve these aims.

The first step advocated by Dr. Sohn is muitilateral disarmament by Russia and the United States of at least ninety percent of their nuclear weapons. Then the U.N. must be given firm control over the production of weapons to maintain this standard. Legal and political improvements are necessary in order to insure this control.

President Johnson has said that "peace is a journey of a thousand miles and must be taken one step at a time." Dr. Sohn has added another stipulation, "We must take steps now."

Mayer Speaks

Prof. Explains "Democracy"

Milton Mayer, writer, journalist, lecturer and a visiting English faculty member, humbly considers himself an "unemployed newspaperman."

Seated back, relaxed in his chair, pipe in hand, a cup of coffee before him on his desk, the author let his dark, stern eyes gaze meditatively out his office window.

"As a loyal and patriotic American, I decline to take nondisloyalty oaths," he declared. He then went on to advocate his belief. "The democratic faith is nothing more than the faith that all men are capable of the exercise of intelligence, which is the habit of attacking hard problems independently. The most wonderful thing about the democratic faith is its assumption that every man is a gentleman and should be educated accordingly."

He sees, however, two difficulties in administering an education in this era:

1. "This is the first generation to be crippled prematurely by television."

2. "Ever since 1957, our technologically backward nation has been following the false star of technological genius displayed by the Russians in that year and since." As a result, Mayer believes, education for the exercise of intelligence is "now operating in a declining market."

In speaking of the University of Massachusetts, Dr. Mayer stated, "The glory of this university is that it is resisting that decline." He cited English 25 (Masterpieces of World Literature) and English 26 (Masterpieces of Western Literature) as the courses which he considers best dedicated to the exercise of intelligence. "English 25 was once the heart of the education of a gentleman when that education was accessible only to the few and the schooling of the many consisted of elementary literacy plus job training," he said.

Grading, according to Mayer, is more of a form of "juvenile discipline" than it is as a measure of intelligence. He pointed out that the IQ has been discredited an an adequate measure of intelligence.

The articulate student, he thinks, is the student most likely to get the good grades but Dr. Mayer does not consider this to be a measure of a person's intelligence. "Articulation, important as it is to man, the only syntechnical animal, is not the same thing as intelligence. Articulation manifests largely an inherest gift in a student susceptible to development in everyone," he explained.

At the outbreak of World War II, Milton Mayer became a national figure when his article, "I Think I'll Sit This One Out," appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and established him as a pacifist. He is author of They Thought They Were Free; the Germans 1933-1945, What Can a Man Do, co-author of The Revolution in Education and in collaboration with others, the author of Revolution in Education and Western Education.

Improve That Image

With the advent of this year's U.N. Carnival, the often questioned Greek System is again given a chance to prove its worth to the University community.

The System is continually cited as nothing but a detriment to the University, as most of the notice they receive is from a negative perspective. They may prove advantageous to the individual, but their worth to the school, and the community is often doubtful. A large portion of the local population, including students, faculty, administration, and townspeople point an accusing finger at water riots, pledge hazing, and wild parties. These accusations cannot be merely brushed aside as prejudice, for it would be foolish to deny that Greeks are not involved in misdemeanors and breaches of law.

However, there is a much brighter side of the Greek picture. Each year at Christmas time fraternities and sororities plan parties for underprivileged children in the local area. Other public services include blood drives and collections for the Campus Chest. In fact, the Interfraternity Council went so far last year as to establish a blood bank at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital especially for the University and the town of Amherst.

The IFC and PanHel have united to sponsor a UN Carnival this evening at the campus pond. Booths featuring various games have been set up in order to obtain money for the UN Fund.

It is hoped that the Greeks will participate wholeheartedly in the carnival and encourage the rest of the campus community to lend their support. A successful UN Weekend could do much to improve the image of the Greek System and at the same time pave the way for more public service. Individual houses should do their best to see that this event is a success, so that the Greek System can affirm the position of stature which it claims to deserve at the University. They are being given a chance . . . lets see them make the best of it.

An Admonition

After writing this editorial, I feit compelled to add this introduction. As a supporter of Barry Goldwater, I feel that it is not good policy for me to criticize him or his followers. On the other hand, I am not a strict Goldwaterite; and as an editorial writer, I am engaged in event analysis and feel compelled to call things as I see them whether or not they are as I would like them to be.

Unfortunately, in the pre-election day scramble, it becomes difficult to distinguish policies of the candidate and policies of his supporters. For Conservatives to say, "You know in your heart, he's right," is to display a failure to understand the principles for which Mr. Goldwater stands. I sincerely hope that the Senator did not sanction this form of propaganda.

There is, however, another matter for which he must be held accountable. He obviously does not believe in the social security increase for which he voted. From a politician, like President Johnson, I would expect compromises of this sort; but from a man of principle, like Barry Goldwater, I expect "extreme" adherence to principle and am disappointed when I do not find it.

If Barry loses the election Tuesday—an event I hope not to witness—he may look to his own single compromise and to the misrepresentation by his followers.

Poor Review

To the editor:

I must register a complaint about your review of the University Theatre's production of "Born Yesterday." It was carelessly written, unsigned, an insult to the University Theatre generally and to Charlotte Werlin personally.

Laura Bishop, who played the role of the maid, was credited by your anonymous reviewer with playing the role of Billie Dawn. When one considers the time and talent that Miss Werlin put into this characterization, it seems a shame that her name does not appear anywhere in the Collegian's view of the play.

If you have trouble finding literate theatre reviewers, please consult me in the future. I'd be happy to suggest names of qualified writers (yes, even students) in this area.

Night Life?

I am a male member of the class of 1968, and a regular reader of our student newspaper, the Collegian.

I have read with interest the many letters written to the Collegian editor concerning various campus issues, and several times I was tempted to write in to express my own views. I can no longer remain silent, and I feel I must register strong criticism concerning an article that appeared in the Monday, Oct. 19 edition of the Collegian—"Night Life, Recommended For Normal College Tension."

This "piece of writing" was the most downright, disgusting article that I have ever seen in the Collegian. The whole article was "off-beat" and reeked with suggestive overtones. Moreover, the article was distasteful and offensive.

I believe in academic freedom, and freedom of speech and press; but there is a limit. What righteous purpose did the author have in joking at and practically condoning promiscuity and sexual perversion?

If this article was meant to be informative, it was not. If this article was meant to be amusing, it was not. If it was meant to be gross, it most certainly was. It was not only gross and offensive, but completely and utterly abominable.

Sex is dominant enough on campus as it is, so why encourage it by allowing trash like that to be printed in a respectable student newspaper.

I think that it is a downright shame that the author saw fit to resort to such tasteless writing for a fine newspaper such as the Collegian.

I can only say that I hope I never again see our newspaper morally degraded as it was when that article appeared.

Andy Anderson

To the Editor:

Although it is not my custom to give unsolicited testimonials, I feel that in the light of the recent abuse of Andy Anderson in the columns of your paper, I would like to report that I have been a regular customer of his for over two years, that during that time he has done an excellent job on my car, that he shows responsibility and integrity in his dealings with me, and that I have personally known him to extend credit to students who were unable to pay for the services he performed. If he presently takes something less than an enthusiastic attitude toward checks offered him by students, his attitude may be the result of experiences that have made him less trusting.

Creating A Problem

To the Editor:

What has happened to the creative mind on our campus? Simple mathematics of Caesura contributions show an abismal lack of creativity among what the daily news might term America's intelligencia—it's brain trust.

There are ten thousand—10,000—students enrolled in the University grad and undergrad programs. Of these, 50—only 50—have been able to produce material for consideration in the student literary magazine. That is only .5% of the campus population have, to date, and enough interest in writing to contribute to Caesura.

Several explanations might account for the apparent "non-think": lack of publicity soliciting material for the magazine; fear, on the students' part, that their material is not good enough or worth sharing; or a deterioration of creativity among students—perhaps a characteristic of our time.

Caesura does not want to pat itself on the head (yet) but it does feel that it has made a good effort in letting people know about deadlines and magazine policy. FINAL DEADLINE IS NOV. 2, MONDAY . . . STILL TIME!

To allay any fears of material not being good enough: if you are sincereiy interested, there is certainly no harm in trying. With a preliminary deadline we present an opportunity for revision and conferences with the staff about material submitted. The process, whether it results in the publication of your material or not, is thus a learning process. Simply having something you write considered is good experience; and if material appears, comments from friends might prove invaluable.

However, the third possible reason for the sparcity of creative effort indicated by Caesura contributions — a simple lack of creativity among students—seems most likely. Pointing out the deficiency —the inability of students to free themselves from surroundings and dream a little—is of dubious value.

Nonetheless, it seems interesting and worth editorializing the fact that only 50 of ten thousand college students are interested in writing, and in their literary magazine. The revolution won't change the society, but it might encourage a few folks who are hiding their talents to share their work with others.

DEFENSE OF OBJECTIVISM

To the Editor:

Mr. Don Aliferis, in the Friday, Oct. 23, issue of the Collegian, displayed an evident misunderstanding or deliberate distortion of the philosophy of Ayn Rand.

Mr. Aliferis concludes from the philosophy of objectivism that every individual is self-sufficient, is in non-cooperation with other individuals, and is living in a complete anarchy. This is neither expressed nor implied in Ayn Rand's writings. In fact, all of these statements are completely negated.

In Atlas Shrugged, Hank Rearden, at this trial for an illegal sale of a metal alloy which he had created and which has been placed under government rationing and control, stated as follows: "I do not want my attitude to be misunderstood. I shall be glad to state it for the record . . . I work for nothing but my own profit-which I make by selling a product they need to men who are willing and able to buy it. I do not produce it for their benefit at the expense of mine, and they do not buy it for my benefit at the expense of theirs, . . . we deal as equals by mutual consent to mutual advantage . . ." This would seem to negate the idea of non-cooperation between individuals. In fact, only through cooperation can any transaction, either material or morai, be conducted.

Ayn Rand also states explicitly in her writings that the only proper function of government is protection—protection against invaders and protection against the use of force by other individuals. This does not agree with the standard definitions of anarchy.

Is the individual who is dependent upon the government or collective society a free man? I think even Ayn Rand would agree the moment an individual enters into a transaction with another he loses some of his freedom. It is up to each individual to decide how much freedom he wishes to rescind. That individual who depends upon collective society has no freedom rather than more freedom, because his life is subject to that collective society. I certainly would not wish to "live according to the dictates of the human spirit" if that spirit indeed assumed the role of a dictator.

Yes, Objectivism is the philosophy of freedom for those who wish to be free.

Hunsberger To Address Debaters

Over 400 high school debaters will hear an address on Saturday, Nov. 7, by I. Moyer Hunsberger, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. The address highlighting the UMass. High School Debate Tournament to be held on campus that day, will be on the importance of rhetoric in higher education.

The debaters, representing over 40 Mass. High Schools, will participate in the biggest tournament of the year in the Commonwealth.

Gerald Goldhaber, tournament chairman for the UMass. Forensic Society, has announced that the topic to be debated is this year's National High School topic, "Resolved that an international organiation for disarmament be instituted".

Goldhaber said that the tournament schedule calls for one round of championship debate in the morning, then a banquet in the Student Union, and three more rounds of debate in the afternoon. Dean Hunsberger will speak during the banquet.

Trophies will be given to the best varsity and novice teams, as well as individual awards for the best affirmative and negative speakers.

Time keepers and other participants are needed. All interested students are urged to contact Phillips Biddle of the Speech Dept.

Activity Constitutions Reviewed

On WMUA Tuesday evening moderator Norm Sky hosted Jim Allen, chairman of the Senate Activities Committee, Don Haynes, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, and Armond DeGrenier, R. S. O. business manager.

THE MAJOR POINT of discussed by Senator Allen and Mr. DeGrenier was the pending motion to review constitutions of all the organizations registered with R.S.O.

Presently, the Activities Committee is reviewing constitutions of those groups that have requested a change or a new constitution. It was felt that an R.S.O. policy should be stated, and there should be a detailed review and report of each group on campus.

Each group should also be made responsible for the operations and by-laws of the organization. Mr. DeGrenier felt that this was a step in the right direction: to keep up with the times and keep a watchful eye on all groups. There are over 250 such organizations, some with more than one constitution.

Some of last year's accomplishments were discussed with Senator Haynes. The Activities committee succeeded in obtaining a one-day reading period this year and a possible three day reading period in the future.

Last year the committee polled the students on their feelings regarding year round operations of the University. It was found that most of the students were not in favor of this plan.

Plans for the future include: revisions in library hours, increase in diploma size, obtaining hoods for graduation gowns, requiring a graduation average for certain student leaders, and correcting the inequity of the grading system on campus, which Sen. Haynes felt could be revised with the equipment now available.

Sorority Round Robins

Freshmen women and transfer students will have their first introduction to sorority life this weekend at Round Robins. On Saturday Oct. 31, 1:00, those with last names that begin A-L will meet in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. They will break up into ten groups and then visit all the sorority houses. On Sun., Nov. 1, the M-Z group will also meet in the Commonwealth Room at 1:00 to begin Round Robins.

The Panhellenic Rush Handbook will be available in the Commonwealth Room, S.U. both Sat. and Sun. for Freshmen commuters and transfer students.

Physics Prof To Highlight Fri. Services

Dr. Melvin Steinberg of the Physics Department, Smith College will highlight Hillel's colorful Friday night services with an interesting account of his childhood in the South.

Dr. Steinberg's lecture, entitled "A Jewish Boyhood in Alabama," will enable many Hillel members to hear how the "Southern way of life" affects the lives of Southern Jews by sharing the personal experiences of Dr. Steinberg.

The services for Fri., Oct. 30, start at 7:00 p.m. They will be followed by an Oneg Shabbat in the Worcester Room of the Student Union.

Having lived in Montgomery, Alabama, since his college years, Dr. Steinberg attended Georgia Institute of Technology (Georgia Tech) for two years, and transferred to the University of North Carolina where he got his Bacheior's and Master's degrees in Science and Physics, respectively.

He received his Ph.D. at Yale, culminating three more years of study. Dr. Steinberg taught at Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N. J., then three years at the University of Massachusetts and is now teaching at Smith College.

Volpe Favors UMass-Boston

The University campus was visited yesterday afternoon by former governor John A. Volpe of Massachusetts. A reception was held for Volpe in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union from 1:45 to 2:30 p.m.

Volpe was introduced by U.S. Representative Silvio Conte and Fred Cennedelia, president of the Young Republicans Club.

Former Governor John A. Volpe visits UMass.

At the reception, Volpe stated, "Bellotti has no record of his own on which to campaign so he is attacking mine."

He also denied Bellotti's attack that he had cut the University's budget during his administration by 25%, stating that he had actually increased it by 10%.

When asked about his views on UMass-Boston, Volpe said that he is in favor of the best education possible for the students of Massachusetts and if this involves a UMass-Boston then he is definitely in favor of it.

He said that before making a final decision on this he would consult the Willis committee report on education in Mass., which he inititated in 1960 and is due in December 1964.

Volpe said that he will seek to increase the economy of the state to keep graduates of Massachusetts colleges in the state.

In closing he stated, "You as college students have more at stake in this election than anyone else in the state. Your government will be as good as you want it to be, or as bad as you want it to be."

THE TOWING AGENCY OPERATES on campus at the request of authorized members of the University Police Department. Only local towing agencies certificated by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities are utilized, and their rates are on file with that department.

The towing agency quoting the lowest rate has been used by the University Police. Once a vehicle is engaged in tow, because the tow operator has undertaken the expense of coming to the campus, the fee must be paid even though the vehicle may not yet have been removed from the spot.

University police officers involved in the orderly pursuit of their assigned duties have, in a few cases, taken considerable abuse from students and others. They are under orders to exercise full restraint in those difficult circumstances.

AT THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES MEETING October 24th, a member of the Board paid high tribute to Chief Blasko and his staff based on unsoliciated reports received on the courtesy and efficiency of our University police force.

It is hoped that full cooperation of the campus community with existing traffic regulations and with University officers may be extended as a matter of enlightened self interest.

The University has no alternative except to take action against that minority of individuals who become offenders.

Hoaxes Hoodwink Many

Ever since the serpent sold Eve a bill of goods about that apple, people the world over have been swallowing one hoax after another, some on a grand scale, and almost all designed to separate the gullible from their money.

One of history's most successful hoaxes was engineered by a French peasant girl named Therese Daurignac. One day in the early 1880's, she began showing her neighbors a duly attested copy of a will leaving her $20,000,000. The bequest was made by a rich American, in gratitude for her having nursed him through illness.

No one ever saw his money; the "legacy" was forever tied up in legal technicalities carefully invented by Mademoiselle Daurignac. But on the strength of it, she persuaded French bankers, over a 20-year period, to lend her $12,000,000!

What if a research scientist announced today that he has discovered a medication that relieves pain, reduces fever (although it will not alter a normal temperature), alleviates inflammation (especially in arthritis), will help you sleep (although it is not a sleeping pill), is one of the safest drugs known and sells for a fraction of a penny a tablet. A hoax? Not at all. It is the most widely used medicine in the world, with Americans taking about 16 billion tablets a year.

Gladchuck Injured in Auto Mishap; QTV vs. TEP In League A Playoff

by Howie Davis

Former football coach, Chet Gladchuck, was struck by a car Saturday afternoon while returning home from the Homecoming football game. The present director of Intramural Sports received injuries to both legs, and while he is recovering quickly, his presence at the intramural office is missed.

The intramural cross-country meet was held last Saturday. A field of 22 entries started and finished the race. It was won by Jerry Johnson representing the Forestry club in a time of 8 minutes and 20 seconds. In second place was Glen Ellis of Greenough; 3rd was Harold Cohen of Brett; 4th was Jim Williams of Grayson; 5th went to Jim Busby of LCA; 6th taken by Mike Dugan of Hills N.; and 7th place was won by Steve Johnson of the Forestry Club.

The campus lacrosse championship match was held last night with PSK from the IFC league meeting Plymouth Dorm.

Intramural bowling begins Monday night for the fraternities and Tuesday night for the dorms and independents. This year the new tenpin lanes in the Boyden Phys. Ed. Building will be used for the competition.

Tomorrow Mr. John Norton will defend his tennis championship against Mr. Backry.

Final statistics for the IFC football league show Crane of KS as the leading quarterback with a 73% completion record. He was also the leader in TD passes with 32. His favorite target, Neary, led the league with a total of 53 receptions.

The leading scorer in the league was Caisse of TKE who rolled up a total of 86 points.

In division A TEP found itself in a tie with QTV for the lead. These two teams will playoff Monday night to see who gets the right to meet KS for the IFC championship.

The winner of this game will play the dorm champ for the campus championship. The dorms have not as yet completed play and final statistics are not as yet available.

The following are the final standings of the IFC league:

League A		League B
TEP	5-1*	KS	7-0
QTV	5-1*	TKE	6-1
TC	4-2	AEP	5-2
BKP	3-3	LCA	4-3
PSK	3-3	PMD	3-4

croud, once a brilliant student at Paris' Ecole des Beaux-Arts, who was unable to make a name for himself in the highly competitive French art market —and found it more profitable to turn out phony Braques and Picassos.

For two years Jean-Pierre baffled even the experts, and picked up nearly a quarter of a million dollars, until his grand deception was uncovered in 1963. He did only drawings, water-colors and pastels. Why not oil paintings? "They take too long," Schecroud explained.

Those who have tried to get rich quick by cashing bogus checks have sometimes shown a sense of humor. The FBI reports that one hot check passer wrote his drafts on such fictitious institutions as "The East Bank of the Mississippi."

Redmen Invade UVM In Search of Beanpot

by John Goodrich

This Saturday's football game will be the contest that could decide the Yankee Conference title for 1964. The winner of the Massachusetts-Vermont game will be the champion for the year. A win by the Redmen will give them at worst a 4-1 record, if they should lose to UNH. Ver- would be slightly behind with a 3-1 record, losing a share of the title since they do not play U-Conn.

By the same means, a Catamount triumph would give them a 4-0 record and wrap up the title for them. A tie would favor the Redmen, because if they then downed UNH they could garner their second title in a row.

The game does not figure to be any soft touch. As was pointed out in Wednesday's article, teams don't forget one sided losses, and Vermont is no exception. The team has 20 lettermen from the team that was wiped out 41-0 at Alumni Field last season.

THE CLUB has two strong points, a fine backfield and a veteran interior line. The backfield has Scott Fitz at QB. He likes to roll out a lot, but has a reputation as only an adequate passer. The leading rusher is fullback Richie Reynolds with a 4.3 average on 353 yards. Frank Foerster is the number two man with 342 yards, but a 6.1 average. Deane Kent is a breakaway threat in the tradition of the graduated Ken Burton.

THE LINE is anchored by twice ECAC choice, center Rusty Brink. George Oelze and Captain Ron Herbel are a couple of pillars of strength at the guard slots. Fred Boese and Denis Blanck are the tackles. Jack Schweberger, the only soph in the lineup, and Paul Giardi are the ends. Neither is real experienced as a pass catcher. This appears as the flaw in the Catamount attack.

MASSACHUSETTS will start

John Schroeder has been an outstanding defensive safety for Coach Vic Fusia's Redmen.

Bob Meers and Milt Morin at the ends. They have 60% of all the Redmen receptions, the former with 19, equal to his total of a year ago, and the latter with 10. The tackles are Bob Burke and Don Hagberg, the big men in the forward wall.

Peter Pietz and Larry Spidle are the guards who will have their hands full with the rugged Vermont line. Charlie Scial will be the champion for the center and linebacker for the ailing Bernie Dallas.

Bob Ellis and Ken Palm, the number 4 and 3 rushers respectively, will be at the halfback slots while Mike Ross will be at fullback.

Ross jumped into the no. 2 spot rushing with his fine performance against BU. He has 222 yards.

Running the unit will be Jerry Whelchel. The QB has scored 41 points to rank number 2 in New England. The race is among seven men, but Whelchel is just a point out of the top spot. He has made 872 yards total offense, 298 rushing and 574 passing on 47 out of 78. In addition to his 41 points, he has tossed 5 touchdown passes. This means that Whelchel has had his hand in 71 of 109 points scored by the team.

THE MEN who will be called on for defensive work will be most important in this contest as they try to clamp down on the high flying UVM offense. Roger DiMinico and John Hudson see much action at the ends Bob Gogick and Bob Santucci are the strong two way sophomore guards, while Dave Kelly has moved into the cornerback slot. The defensive safety is John Schroeder, last year the second string QB but this year the key to the defense. Schroeder has done a fine job at his slot and made it possible for Jery Whelchel to play strictly on offense, a move of immeasurable importance to the team this year.

John Hudson is a talented defensive end that will see plenty of action against the Catamounts Sat.

Squaw, Papoose Left On Lederle's Lawn

By Dan Glosband

An issue of intrigue has finally struck the UMass campus. At midnight Thursday, an Indian maiden, complete with papoose, was found on President Lederle's front lawn by officer Cavanaugh of the Campus Police.

She was taken immediately to Campus Security Headquarters, where an investigation is being conducted.

Speculation has it that the squaw was abducted from a nearby habitat in Greenfield—if she was abducted at all. She may have come of her own accord to wish the Redmen well against Vermont. Then again, the issue may have been in relation to the papoose that she was bearing.

Regardless of the why and wherefore of the issue, the very attractive young lady did, in fact, put in an appearance on Campus. She must have had a very difficult journey, as she lost her left foot in transit. She should be credited for her great degree of fortitude.

Physically, the maid is about seven feet tall, quite well developed, and rather robust looking for a creature whose metabolism consists solely of fiberglass and paint. For, in fact, she is no more alive than our own Metawampe, although her attire is far more colorful and complete.

While the identity of her kidnappers remains unknown, her home is thought to have been found. State Police, after adeptly matching her with a "Missing Indian Bulletin," are in the process of returning her to the Mohawk Gardens in Greenfield.

Faculty Decries Barry, Bill

By Bill First

A petition, signed by 200 faculty members of the University, appeared in the Springfield Union and in the Springfield Daily News, last Tuesday.

It clearly spoke out against the Goldwater - Miller ticket, speaking of their possible election as endangering ". . . the peace of the world and the harmony and sense of justice of our national community."

The statement was initiated and authored by three professors of the government department, and then signed by professors representing most of the departments in the university. Professors Luther A. Allen, Lewis Mainzer, and David Mayhew, who drafted the petition, made clear that it was not so much pro-Johnson as it was anti-Goldwater.

In the statement they said that Goldwater's ". . . assumption of American omnipotence," and ". . . insensitivity to the implications of nuclear warfare . ." have already shown an increased lack of confidence in the United States, abroad.

Another issue that disturbed the 200 signers of the petition was the Goldwater position on civil rights. Finally, it stated that "Representative Miller is clearly not of presidential calibre."

One of the anonymously signed letters of response ends with the statement: "Judging by the foreign names included in the list published in today's paper, some of your associates must be on the communists' payroll."

Pro To Aid Operetta Guild

WAYNE LAMB, stage director and choreographer for the Operetta Guild's production of The Pajama Game, has returned to the University campus for his third season with the Guild. Students and community people may remember his work in the 1962 and 1963 fall productions of Guys and Dolls and The Music Man.

"A NEW YORKER but still with definite Kansas overtones," Lamb's credits are outstanding. He made his debut as a dancer in Dodge City at the age of 11, filling in for a sick member of the chorus line, at the dedication of a new band shell. From then on dancing was his main objective.

He studied under a local teacher, Daphne June Throm, soon becoming an assistant teacher at the school and a well-known performer in western Kansas.

During his third year at the University of Wichita, he got his first professional job as a replacement in the road company of Earl Carroll Vanities, playing in five-a-day movie houses. He left the show to join the Army and spent the next four years in the Armed Services here and in Europe, winning five campaign stars and the Bronze Star.

Upon his release from the Army, Lamb resumed his interrupted career in New York at the Alviene Academy of Theatrical Arts. In rapid succession came Day Before Spring, a featured part in Yours is My Heart, and the G.I. revue, Call Me Mister, which he had joined as lead understudy. He took over the part in the national company after one week in Boston.

AFTER SEVERAL BROADWAY SHOWS, Mr. Lamb was chosen by Max Liebman as one of the original dancers on television's first big spectacular, The Admiral Broadway Revue, which in turn became Your Show of Shows.

Three years later he turned to concert, making three transcontinental tours. During this period he found time for television appearances on the Martha Raye Show, Toast of the Town, Stop the Music, and The Colgate Comedy Hour, appearing with such stars as Ezio Pinza, Lily Pons, Alicia Markova, Rise Stevens, and Jan Pierce.

Lamb then directed his interest to choreography, working on concert groups, variety shows, and Shakespearean plays—one of which, Twelfth Night, received such acclaim by the New York critics that it was revived the following year.

HIS CAREER in modern musical comedy began as choreographer for Guys and Dolls at the Barn Theatre in Augusta, Michigan, where he is now general manager. He has directed, appeared in, and choreographed literally dozens of well-known successes.

In the past few years, Lamb has become interested in theatre in educational institutions. Last spring he was choreographer and resident at Purdue University, where he plans to return next semester.

The UMass govcernment department, helping prepare voters to use the machines on election day, has arranged with the Automatic Voting Machine. Similar machines are also in use in Greenfield, West Springfield, and Lenox. UMass government students will help run the Greenfield voting machines tomorrow.

Pre-Law

Club To Host B. U. Dean

James H. Kendall, Assistant Dean of the Boston University Law School will be at the University of Massachusetts Tuesday to interview any interested Pre-Law students and to answer any questions about the BU Law School. He will be available from 10:30 a.m. at the Government Office in Machmer Hall.

Mr. Kendall, who has been here for similar purposes the past two years, is coming at the request of Pre-Law Association president Don Boyd. Pre-Law students who wish to see Mr. Kendall should make an appointment at the Government Office.

In addition to Mr. Kendall's visit, the Pre-Law club will sponsor a lecture on Criminal Law to be given by Professor Henry P. Monaghan, also of the BU Law School. Professor Monaghan is a graduate of UMass and Yale Law School and teaches Constitutional and Criminal Law at BU.

WMUA To Broadcast Elections

Election returns will be the concern of nearly everyone in the university tomorrow night and WMUA will provide a complete coverage of the election story for its University and Amherst area listeners starting at 8:00 p.m.

Tomorrow's program will feature the work of three separate groups, the Ivy Broadcasting System, a group made up of many college and university radio stations in the East, the United Press International news service, and the WMUA news staff.

Until all the important results are in, the returns will be up to date on the presidential race, all the state office contests, and coverage of the election here in Amherst and surrounding areas.

The Ivy Network will provide the majority of the data on national returns with commentary

Eta Kappa Nu Will Present Physics Film

This week's presentation in the Eta Kappa Nu film series is entitled Deflecting Forces.

Prepared under the auspices of the Physical Sciences Study Committee, the film features Nathanial Frank of MIT, who discusses the nature of forces which produce curved paths. Simple demonstrations provide easy understanding of such concepts as centripetal vector acceleration and the derivation of forces from a knowledge of the mass and path of an object.

Running time for this black and white film is 29 minutes. Showing will take place in Gunness Laboratory, Room 10, at 11:15 a.m. Tuesday, November 3. All are welcome.

UMass Helps to Celebrate UN Birthday

The U.N. is celebrating its nineteenth birthday this week. UMass is honoring the U.N. with teas, a carnival, a candy sale and a speech by Dr. Louis Sohn.

A tea was held in Hamlin House Thursday night, featuring a travelogue entitled "Around the World in Sixty Minutes." A series of slides was shown, depicting life in ten countries. The slides were narrated by faculty members, visitors and students.

Cairo, Bangkok, Honolulu, Madrid, San Francisco and New York were discussed by Mrs. Rich, Hamlin's head of residence. She toured the world last summer and took the slides that were shown. She was greeted en route by the parents of some of the foreign students who were at the tea.

The Far East travels were covered by Yvonne Hua, Chia-Hing Pi, Lucy Cheng, Marjorie Kou, Joan Fu and Bonnie Sun. Special commentary was given by Dr. Leland Varley of the English department who talked on Japan, Joseph Kaniantha, from India, narrated a tour of his native country.

Russell Clausen, a local minister, conducted the tour of Jerusalem and Jordon. Egypt was seen through the eyes of Mary-Louise Aptelian of Cairo.

Another tea is to be held in Dwight House with a different panel of commentators.

The IFC and Pan Hel Council sponsored a U.N. Carnival Friday evening on the lawn adjacent to the Student Union. A cluster of booths housed games of chance and skill to raise money for U.N. funds.

Trick or Treaters solicited donations for UNICEF Hallowe'en night, an annual drive that has changed the spirit of the goblin's eve.

The Interdorm Council for the UN is sponsoring a candy sale to continue throughout the week.

Dr. Sohn in his Thursday night speech stressed the current monetary crisis that the UN is experiencing. Russia has compiled an enormous debt and Dr. Sohn expressed doubt that the UN could fulfill its prime purpose as a "forum for two sides to enable people to get reasonable resolutions without fighting" unless a firm stand is taken with Russia over her debt.

Peace and security are the main goals of the UN. Unfortunately the UN does not have the means to effectively achieve these aims at the present time.

Dr. Sohn advocated multilateral disarmament by Russia and the United States of at least ninety per cent of their nuclear inventory.

WMUA to BROADCAST . . .

This will be compiled by the Ivy's large number of news offices throughout the country and with a large Washington bureau.

UPI will provide up to the minute information in the races handled by Marvin Kitman, a nationally known political satirist who has written frequently for the Saturday Evening Post. for Massachusetts' governor, U. S. Senator, attorney general, and other races.

The WMUA news staff will present commentary on the local and state returns by using special supplements from US News and World Report magazine. The station will also present analysis of the returns as they come in throughout the evening and early morning hours.

R.O.T.C. to Hold Annual Fall Review

The Army ROTC detachment will hold the annual Fall Review on the lower athletic field Tuesday at 11:20 a.m. This is one of the two times during the year that the student body is able to see the cadets as a unit.

At the review, awards will be given to the 20 seniors who have earned Distinguished Military Student Awards. The four senior members of the outstanding company at the past Summer Camp held at Fort Devens will also receive recognition.

The last award will be made for the Cadet Colonel David S. Blodgett. The first "Cadet of the Month" wnner will be announced. After the brigade has passed in review the cadet adjutant, Major Thomas Kiernan will announce the company that won the lines award as the best in the review.

The Fall Review will be open to the public.

Young Democrats

LBJ Landslide Predicted

When the election returns are counted tomorrow, it "will probably turn out to be the biggest Democratic landslide in the history of the United States," predicted President Dave Podbros at a meeting of the Young Democrats Thursday night.

The group volunteered their services early and have been assisting in campaigning on the state, national and local levels.

Last night a faculty-student rally in the Student Union climaxed Johnson Week at the University. Katrin Winterer has been in charge of the Johnson girls who distributed campaign literature at the rally.

The week's activities began with panel discussions, sponsored jointly by Young Democrats and Young Republicans. Monday night's topic was foreign policy, while domestic issues were discussed on Wednesday. Morality, poverty, civil rights, agriculture and education were among the topics considered by the students.

Throughout the week, the club distributed campaign literature in the Student Union lobby. Tonight they will be campaigning in Greenfield for the re-election of representative tive Allan McGuane. Several Young Democrats have volunteered to assist Amherst officials in both partisan and nonpartisan work at the polls tomorrow.

Germany — Has it Changed?

The Student Zionist Organization will sponsor a panel discussion on "Germany—has it changed" Wednesday, Nov. 4, in the Student Union.

Participating will be Wolfgang D. Elfe, Dr. Josef Gerhards, Dr. Harold Gordon, and Dr. George Brounthall. Moderating the panel will be Miss Beate Ruhm Von Oppen.

When the war ended in 1945 the American government underwent the process of the Denazification of Germany. The United States hoped to make a democratic government exist where one had failed before.

As far as most people in this country are concerned they succeeded.

But as soon as Americans left Germany the ex-Nazis began to reinfiltrate the government with the consent and blessings of the people. Recent arrests in Germany of government officials indicate how high these people were able to rise.

If one looks at the laws passed in the government, he can find that pensions are given to those who served as guards of concentration camps.

In contrast to this a new Germany has arisen, that of the youth who are questioning what existed in the past and what presently exists in their homeland.

Will Hitler eventually become another Napoleon? These and many other questions now need to be answered.

Old Order Exit

The election is tomorrow and one hears everywhere that this is a pivotal election, which will decide the role of the United States for decades to come. But we are caught up in the process of living day-to-day and don't realize that the pivotal change in our lives has been in a process of development since 1963 and will continue to bear heavily on our actions, regardless of the outcome of this election. Johnson must win. He is the holdover of an age passing us by, an age no one seems to realize is gone. In England, France and the Soviet Union the age has disappeared. Gone are the days of MacMillan, Keeler and the TVX. The British have decided on a change, a precarious change which can be dissolved in five Laborites who sleep late and miss Parliament. Gone from England is the conservative philosophy and the divided British look to some semblence of the old order—only Mr. Johnson is there.

The French, great pretenders at autonomy, first to break with the old order, threaten to pull out of NATO. They look with fright, hidden perhaps, at that Senator running for President. If for no other reason than a seeming lack of concern on the part of the United States, the French want the President to remain, as the exponent of the old age, an age lived through by DeGaulle. DeGaulle, one who has survived a multitude of ages, is more wary of the present one than any others. Mr. DeGaulle, sir, the Chinese have exploded an atom bomb. You must look to the United States—to the familiar establishment—President Johnson.

And there are the Russians, exhibiting a great change. Gone is the fat, bald-headed man who ranted and raved in Geneva in 1960, and later in the United Nations. One feels an uneasy sensation when re-viewing films of the 1961 meeting in Vienna. Both protagonists are gone and new leaders appear in the Soviet Union, appearing perhaps with a new policy. They disapprove of the Republican candidate, a candidate with a "war fever" reputation. They want to look back to the "old age", to MacMillan, Eisenhower and then Kennedy. Who is left now in the old order?—Johnson, a Texan who has taken over as leader of the free world, thrust into a position he was originally unable to perform. He alone has the experience associated with the old order. He has proved his worth.

We must look above election threats and promises. There is but one man left of all those who have kept the peace. The world looks to Washington, to leaders trained in the art of government. Surely we can show the way. There is something more important in this election than the question of whom the president associates with. We must continue to be leaders.

Nuclear Issue

To the Editor:

Recently I had the privilege of attending a briefing in the Pentagon given by Col. Dmitri Evdokimoff who is the Directorate of Plans and Operations, Long Range Planning Division, Chief Aerospace Concepts Branch. The briefing was on the use of limited nuclear weapons; a subject of great controversy in the national campaigns. I would like to convey to your readers what I learned.

The use of limited nuclear weapons is based on the assumption that the leaders of a nation involved in a war would be rational. That is, they would not willfully engage in an all out war that would result in total destruction. If this assumption holds true, the use of limited nuclear weapons is desirable and has a definite purpose in warfare.

When the United States enters a conflict with another nation the desired outcome is to win; to overpower the enemy. This requires a stronger force than the enemy's—whether it be better weapons, weapon systems, or greater manpower. It is here that limited nuclear weapons enter the battle field. If we can escalate the force of our offensive to a greater degree than our aggressor without entering into an all out holocaust, the enemy would be forced to negotiate. Even if the enemy had unlimited nuclear power, its use would be prohibited by rationality.

Thus, if we can develop weapons more potent than any that our aggressors can devise, yet still remain below the level of an all out holocaust, we stand in a better position to win or force the enemy into negotiating.

It is unfortunate that Senator Goldwater has chosen this topic in his campaigning. Public opinion is so strongly against the use of nuclear weapons that its mere mention causes fright. President Johnson has also built up Goldwater to be a warmonger out of this issue. I believe that, regardless of who is President, the use of limited nuclear weapons will evolve, and I admire and respect Senator Goldwater's honesty and forthrightness on the issue.

A Clear Choice

To the Editor:

I would like to disagree with Don Aliferis' letter in last Wednesday's Collegian. I don't think the choice between the two gubernatorial candidates is one of the "lesser of two evils." The choice is clear. Far from "two years of nebulous effort and aggravation of state problems by inaction," the two years that Mr. Volpe was Governor were two years of progress. The "inaction" of the Volpe Administration included: The establishment of the Crime Commission, the enactment of a Code of Ethics and Conflict of Interest law, requirement of state audits of independent authorities—removing the veil of secrecy which had previously surrounded these operations, the creation of the UMass Medical School, the voting of fiscal autonomy for the University, increase in state minimum wage rates ahead of Federal law, elimination of corporate excise tax to stimulate the business economy, immediate settlement of two MTA strikes, and balancing of the state's budget for both years without any new or increased taxes and with a surplus of several million dollars.

There have been stories that Volpe cut the U-Mass budget while in office. Volpe, of course, denies it. I wonder how many people took the trouble to look up the records in the library Well, I spent an interesting half-hour looking up the budget messages of governors from Herter through Volpe (Peabody's weren't available yet.) I discovered that the amount of money recommended by the Governor, as well as the amount actually appropriated by the Geneal Court, increased more during Volpe's administration than they had during the previous two years of the Furcolo Administration!

Inaction in solving state problems? The proposed constitutional amendments on the ballot this year were initiated by Governor Volpe—including the four-year term for governor—since amendments to the state constitution must be passed by two successive legislatures before going on the ballot.

The choice is clear: either we continue the progress toward honest government made by the Volpe and Peabody Administrations, or we return to the scandal and corruption which has too long characterized the government of this Commonwealth.

IS THIS "NON-THINK"?

To the Editor:

This is my answer to D. B. Axelrod, Editorial Board, CAESURA.

In quiet repose, far from the uncomprehensibly violent and unpredictable human animals, there lies in virgin fields and forests the lower and simpler forms of life: rabbits, deer, fox, frogs, butterflies . . . nature! Natural nature, not controlled by a state of wise individuals, but a true state of natural laws: those laws concerning survival of the fittest, physics, chemistry, anatomy, and weather, revolving around an unexplainable phenomenon called life. Here amongst the grasses, trees, and rocks, love scenes, death battles, feeding, bearing of children, playing children, attending adults and all of the various highlights and disasters of life are portrayed in all sincerity.

These members of a multicaste society do not act in plays, do not pretend to be heroes, to be great, or to be superior. Each member must move through his daily life cautiously; first providing for his sustenance, then security, then pleasure. The mangy fox does not cry, "I am superior." He cries, "I am hungry, BEWARE." The butterfly, all ensplendored in color does not proclaim, "I am BEAUTIFUL," but merely, "Please find me; let us go to together."

For men there is a different way of life. Through his intelligence he has managed to provide a society, not governed by natural laws: he has superceded those; but a labyrinth of fine, complex guides that envelop the newborn in a web so restricting and constricting, that all natural laws have been delegated to an unconscious, unreasoning part of life. How paradoxal it is to say that any man has freedom: there is no democracy.

Man has spun this web of restrictions to protect himself from by far the most dangerous and odious enemy: other men and himself. The human being is, I am sure, capable of much more profound way of life than the one which he has built for himself. There could be a Utopia, because man is brilliant: he could find one.

HOW!? The answer I am sure lies in the natural laws which man has delegated to such inferior position. Surely this all encompassing web of tradition can be flexed to allow for nature. To begin with an outlet for free thought; a means and outlet for inspiration.

WHY is the CAESURA lacking for material? The reason lies in this inflexible web of mores and folkways which man has spun; and in the literary field, the Caesura has spun some of the finest strands*—"Non-think," or perhaps "NON-DARE-THINK!!!!!"

An escaped but not unscathed fly,
William R. Payne

Teaching Assistants

To the Editor:

Since not only all the best state universities in the country but also Harvard, Yale, Princeton and other institutions with top-notch undergraduate reputations, use assistants to teach, our use of them here can hardly be taken as in itself indicative of declining standards in teaching. Our assistants are advanced and superior students. Quite a number of them are well advanced toward the Ph.D. Many of them are already experienced teachers, several in our Department coming to us highly recommended for service in other schools or colleges.

Apparently no inconsiderable proportion of our faculty in the past have taught here full-time while working part-time on their own Ph.D.'s. Since our assistants are only permitted to teach part-time, they actually can devote more attention to their students than some of their critics did.

One must remember that this Commonwealth and this nation are in even greater need of college teachers than of other highly educated personnel. During this present year and the next the number of well-qualified young people coming of college age is being doubled, with consequent enormous increase in the need for college teachers. These cannot possibly be supplied in sufficient numbers from the former graduate programs. All agencies interested in this problem, including the federal government, are therefore encouraging those universities that can do so to establish new graduate programs and to expand those already existing.

We surely do not want to put ourselves in the position of denying well-qualified young people their chance to receive a college education just because helping to train teachers for them is somewhat inconvenient for us, especially when there is reason to suppose from the example of other good universities that this objective can be achieved while simultaneously supplying a high quality of instruction for our undergraduates. In fact, it is obvious that if graduate work is not immediately and greatly increased there must be a catastrophic fall in the general level of preparation of those teaching in college.

Intramural Report

Backry breezed through the first set, it looked as if a major upset would be in store. Backry said after the match that he had all the chances he needed, but wasn't able to take advantage of them.

The lacrosse championships were played Thursday night with Phi Sigma Kappa beating Plymouth dorm 6-2. The score is deceiving since Plymouth led at halftime 2-1. But in the second half Smith, of PSK, pumped in four goals to run away from the dorm entry.

The schedule for the campus championship touch football playoffs were released from the intramural office Friday. Tonight TEP and QTV square off to see who plays Kappa Sig tomorrow evening. The independent champ will play the winner of the KS game for the right to go into the championship game versus the dormitory champ. This game will be played at the beginning of next week. No definite date has yet been set.

The Gorman Elms have won their divisional championship and will play the Chadbourne Maroons to see who plays the Baker Bruins for the dorm championship. This year the dorms showed excellent balance as all indivlidual leaders were from different teams. The passing leader was Kassatly of the Hills So. Cherrywoods; Libby of the Baker Bruins was the league's leading receiver; Carrigan of the Brett Chestnuts led in scoring; and the Baker Buffaloes and the Hills No. Hoovers were the best offensive and defensive teams respectively. A prediction from this typewriter shows the Bruins and the Elms in the finals for the dorm championship. In a close game the Bruins will prevail and eventually will meet powerful Kappa Sig for the campus crown.

In center is Jerry Johnson, winner of the intramural cross-country meet held homecoming week-end; flanked on each side are the runner-ups.

Phi Sigma Kappa lacrosse team downed Plymouth, 6-2, to win campus title.

SOCCER . . .

Martin has had a fine year giving up more than two goals in only one game. He has given up only 15 goals in 9 games for an average of 1.67 goals per game.

Clark went into the game with a 3-2-2 record, holding victories over Tufts, Assumption, and Hartford. With this tie the U-Mass-Clark series stands at 16-2-1 in favor of the Redmen.

Saturday, the Redmen invaded Burlington, Vt. to face the University of Vermont for the first time. UMass came away with a 4-2 victory. With high-scoring wing Gary Gibbons connecting on two first period penalty kicks, the Redmen jumped out in front, 2-0. Gibbons now has 7 goals for the season.

Aba Ayanaba, who played a great game, scored his second goal of the year in the third period and Kevin Lyons made a beautiful play to notch his second goal of the season. The Catamounts came up with their two goals in the second half.

The Redmen play their final game of the year Wednesday at Amherst College. UMass has only been able to beat their cross-town rival 4 times in 31 games played with 5 ties. Last year Amherst won 2-0.

Redmen Retain Beanpot

UMass Dumps Vermont, 28-7

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts earned its second consecutive Yankee Confrence football crown by knocking Vermont from the undefeated ranks, 28-7, before an overflow crowd of 8500 at Burlington.

Phil DeRose was the man who really broke the back of the home forces as he raced 87 yards with the second half kickoff on a picture play that saw Massachusetts blockers, led by Larry Spidle and Bob Burke, clear out the entire right side. DeRose outran the last man for the score. That made it 21-0 and took all of the sting out of the possible Vermont comeback.

The Redmen dominated the game so completely that the Cats got to the UMass 49 for the first time with less than seven minutes left in the third quarter. Vermont had its only scoring thrust in the fourth period with the game already out of reach. The score, however, was the first on the Redmen since the 1963 Maine game, some 520 Yankee Conference game minutes earlier. Richie Reynolds scored on a two yard run after Jim Brennan had ran and passed the club into position.

Besides that, it was all UMass. The Redmen couldn't capitalize on a weak punt at the start of the game, but got another shot shortly thereafter, as Charlie Scialdone recovered an errant Scott Fitz pitchout. From the 23, Bob Ellis gained eight, Mike Ross picked up 4, but Ken Palm hit off tackle and twisted his way for the score. Jerry Whelchel converted and it was 7-0.

UMass held the Vermont rushing offense that had rolled up almost 1500 yards well in check allowing only 20 yards in the first half. The Redmen with this defense had kept the Cats deep in their own territory around the 12. Charlie Foster punted to Palm who ran it back to the 31 of UVM. His arm was hooked causing a fumble but John Schroeder was right there to gather it in.

Ross hit over center for seven yards, and Whelchel followed with a 10 yard completion to Bob Meers. Ross then ran the same trap play up the center and this time he powered the final 13 yards to paydirt. After much ado, including two penalties, the PAT was finally made by Whelchel. And Massachusetts went to the locker room with a 14-0 lead.

The half opened with DeRose and his fine run. The next time the Redmen got the ball they were off and running again as Whelchel found Palm for a 42-yard pass completion to the UVM 21. Ellis then swept right end for 8, Ross gained 4 and Whelchel ran for one of the few times, picking up six. He then called on Ellis twice, and Bob scored the TD. Whelchel converted his fourth PAT and Massachusetts had the beanpot for another year.

The Cats finally got going despite the fact the Redmen gave ground grudgingly. They drove into Mass territory and were held. The Redmen drove behind DeRose and Leo Biron inside the UVM 35.

The teams then moved back and forth as the game went to the fourth quarter.

Nonetheless Brennan had the team moving, and he ran 16 yards to the 2 before Reynolds scored with 5:35 left, ending the last of the Redman defensive records begun last season.

The UMass strategy makers felt the Cats would key on Whelchel, so Jerry spent most of the day handing off. He tried just nine passes and completed but two. The rushers were the stars, as they rolled up almost 300 yards. Ross had 60, Biron got 56, Ellis ran for 53, and Palm added 41. The defense led by John Schroeder and Dave Kelly deserved plenty of credit as they held Vermont to 87 yards rushing, most of which came in the last quarter.

The best of UVM was centerlinebacker Rutsy Brink, who ranks with Bernie Dallas as the best in New England.

The win gave the Redmen a 6-1 record, 4-0 in the conference. Vermont took its first loss for a 6-1 record, 3-1 in league play.

The intramural tennis championship was won by John Norton last Saturday as he defeated Bud Backry 2-6, 6-2, 6-3. The weather conditions were far from ideal as play was interrupted many times due to wind gusts. Norton, whose father won the same tournament last year, keeps the tennis trophy in the family. Redmen Booters Continue Streak

By Morris Shubow

The University of Massachusetts soccer team extended their unbeaten streak by tying Clark, 0-0, and defeating the University of Vermont, 4-2. The tie with Clark was the Redmen's third shutout in a row. The team has not lost in their last four games and has brought its record up to the 500 mark. The Redmen, who were 1-4 at the halfway mark, are now 4-4-1 with one game to go.

In Thursday's home game with Clark the Redmen almost completely dominated play, outshooting Clark, 38-13. The Clark goalie, Mark Halperin, was brilliant, coming up time after time with great saves. In the overtime periods the Redmen got 5 shots, keeping Clark from taking a single shot.

Redmen goalie Larry Martin had a great save on a Clark direct kick in the third period

ROTC Fall Review Decorates 23 Cadets

The Army ROTC Brigade held its annual Fall Review Tuesday on the lower athletic field. Twenty-three cadets received awards during the ceremonies.

DURING THE SOUND-OFF PORTION of the program, the ROTC sponsored drill team, the Precisionettes, performed. Persons to be decorated were then called forward by Cadet Colonel David Blodgett.

The first award was a ceremonial sabre presented by the PMS Col. Albert W. Aykroyd presented to the Cadet Colonel. This award is presented each year to the cadet choosen to lead the brigade.

Twenty-one senior cadets were awarded Distinguished Military Student citations: Richard Bailey, Blodgett, Peter Clegg, James Fassell, Evan Fournaris, John Goodrich, John Hudson, John Johanson, Thomas Kiernan, Edward Lemieux, and George Marold.

Also Norman MacLeod, Donald Margeson, Herbert Mongue, Richard Murphy, Kenneth Needham, Richard Rice, Douglas Robb, John Schroeder, Richard Strecker, and Michael Scafati.

Four seniors were awarded ribbons for being members of the outstanding company at the 1964 ROTC Summer Camp at Fort Devens. They are Margeson, Scafati, Richard Decilio, and Craig MacPherson.

The Review was witnessed by two guests from Fort Devens, Colonel Stratta, Deputy 13th Corps Commander, and Colonel Landry, the Deputy for ROTC Affairs.

After the review, it was announced that "C" company under the command of Cadet Capt. Johanson won the lines award as the best in the review.

The final announcement was that of Cadet of the Month for October. The winner was Alfred Walter of Baker House and the class of 1967. A member of "D" Company he was chosen from a group of eight basic cadets representing the eight companies in the brigade.

The other seven nominees were John Mullin, David Eaton, Miles Bentley, Richard Lennon, Earle Richardson, Edward St. Martin, and Charles Soderstrom.

Who's Who

Michael Clarifies Selections

By Stephen Gordon

With the National Who's Who Organization due to release the 1965 University of Massachusetts Who's Who selections Monday, Senate President George Michael, as chairman of the University's Who's Who Selection Council, explains this year's selection procedure.

THE PROCEDURE, as set forth by Student Senate legislation last year, provides for a Selection Council of four undergraduates appointed by the Dean of Students to serve with the chairman, the President of the Student Senate. These five students then select three more.

Michael said that he had sent a letter to campus organizations requesting nominations for Who's Who. He hoped that through this means of nomination the more inconspicuous student who has significantly contributed to the University would become known to the committee.

"In reviewing the nominations," said Michael, "the Selection Council considers each nominee on the basis of scholarship, leadership, cooperation in education and extra curricular activities, general citizenship, and promise of future usefulness."

AFTER SEVERAL COUNCIL MEETINGS, the final quota of Who's Who selections is determined.

During the past several years, the quota has been a maximum of thirty-five. Michael felt that this maximum was outdated and, with the help of Dr. Mark Hoffsinger, Student Activities Coordinator, he requested that the National Who's Who Organization grant the University 20 more selections. Twenty - three more were granted to raise the UMass quota to 58.

Michael concluded by saying Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities "is one of the highest recognitions received by a senior."

Webster Dorm

Ed. Program In Full Swing

By Jim Fondy

Commenting that the Civil Rights Bill of 1964 was "the most important piece of legislation passed in this country in a long time", Jack Thompson of the history department opened another well-attended Webster House discussion.

SUNDAY'S TALK FOCUSED on the main aspects and future developments of the recent civil rights legislation which "commits Congress to set national goals beyond constitutional requirements".

Pointing out the violence in Burmingham in April and May of 1963 as events which "turned the course of history", Thompson delved into the background of civil rights legislation during the past decade, and indicated that police brutality in Birmingham coupled with the murder of Medgar Evars "caused the people and president of the country to push for greater and more effective legislation."

A BRIEF EXPLANATION OF THE BILL stressed the public accommodations, education, voter registration, and equal employment clauses as among the most important and prominent in the public's eyes.

Thompson believes that an increase in voter registration and school desegregation will be the most immediate results, and he said that it is the "threat of action which will result in compliance with the law."

COMPARING IT with the unsuccessful Civil Rights Bill of the late 1800's, Thompson stated that the country was not committed to civil liberties at that time . . . "now the goals are set; the country is committed . . . the necessary action will be obtained."

Junior class president and star center of the football team, Bernie Dallas, was operated on today at Cooley Dickinson Hospital. All those who want to wish Bernie a speedy recovery please sign the card in the Student Union lobby.

UMass-Boston

New Committees Announced

Three planning committees for the University of Massachusetts-Boston were appointed by President John W. Lederle.

The three new committees will study faculty policies, search for a chief academic officer for UMass-Boston, and discuss new concepts and new departures made necessary by the planned opening next September of the new facility.

Associate Professor Arthur Gentile of the botany department has been named chairman of the faculty policies committee.

UMass Provost Oswald Tippo will sit as chairman of the search committee, and Dr. Leo F. Redfern, dean of administration, will direct the efforts of the committee on new concepts.

The already-established course of study committee under the chairmanship of Dr. William C. Venman, assistant to the provost, will also serve as a committee on curriculum.

Members of the committee on faculty policies, in addition to chairman Gentile, include Provost Tippo, Prof. Joseph Marcus, civil engineering; Prof. Jay Savereid, speech; Asst. Prof. Robert Wellman, education; Prof. Harold J. Gordon, Jr., history, and UMass-Boston task force chairman, Donald W. Cadigan.

The search committee under Provost Tippo will consist of Dr. Robert Potash, professor of history; Dr. John Conlon, associate professor and assistant dean of business administration; Dr. Loren P. Beth, professor of government; Dr. William B. Esselen, commonwealth head of the food science and technology department; Dr. Howard O. Brogan, commonwealth head of the English department, and Dr. Clifford V. Jones, professor of education.

Former U.S. Ambassador

Dr. Cole To Lead Seminar

Dr. Charles Cole, former president of Amherst college and former U. S. ambassador to Chile, will speak this Friday at UMass on "The Ambassador's Role in Overseas Activities."

Dr. Cole's address is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth room of the Student Union. The lecture is open to the public.

Sponsored by the department of sociology and anthropology at the University, Dr. Cole's talk is the first in a series of eight to ten to be given on campus.

All the discussions will center on the role of the professional person overseas. The seminar series is intended to stimulate interest in professional work overseas.

The speakers, from various academic disciplines and professional areas, will present position papers, then discuss those papers with members of the audience.

Scheduled to speak at a later date is John Scott Overton, executive director of the Overseas Education Service and a former vice president of the Ford Foundation.

The lecture series is supported by the Ford Foundation and is an outgrowth of a Ford Foundation study completed this summer by two members of the sociology department, Dr. C Wendell King and Dr. Edwin D. Driver.

Women Voters To Sponsor Poverty Programs

"New Programs to Fight Poverty" will be the theme of an open community meeting sponsored by the League of Women Voters Nov. 5 at 8 p.m. in the Amherst Regional High School cafeteria.

Prof. Edward K. Knapp of the University, recently appointed by Governor Peabody as University liaison with state and federal agencies in connection with the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, and William Wells, director of Public Information and Legal Services Specialist for Action for Boston Community Development (ABCD), will be the speakers.

Knapp has just returned from Washington, D. C., briefing meetings on the Economic opportunity act passed late in the last session of Congress.

He will speak about the role of the federal and state governments in the "War on Poverty."

Knapp has been serving the University as Extension Analyst since October 1962.

Drive, He Said

By Ben Sackmary

Drive, He Said is Jeremy Larner's first novel. It is a story of today and the American college student. But Hector Bloom and his roommate Gabriel Reuben are not the average American students (or perhaps they are). They want something beyond education. Even more they want to find just what it is they do want.

Hector is a star basketball player but his game only receives his partial attention, his love for a professor's wife only receives a portion of himself and, in fact, Hector never seems to be quite there at whatever he does. He wants a wholeness and asks the questions, "What is this, where am I?" and "When shall I win a victory I can enjoy?" However the answers he wants need new questions and he doesn't have these. Gabriel rejects the world and, for emphasis, writes in red letters on his wall: "SQUARE-SELF CONTROL, HIP—THE RIGHT REACTION."

They seek first with a group of marijauna - smoking revolutionaries who plot for the rise of "the collective unconscious" and an end (or a beginning?) of world chaos. No one seems to know. Poets, anarchists and writers around them deride and laud the world, a millionaire of the missile industry can find no love nor happiness and the professors and administrators have lost whatever contact they had with Hector and Gabriel.

From the episodes of pacifist failure at the gates of the war industry, a wild high speed escape from pursuing teen-agers, a murder (or was it?) and the other wild occurrences within this book, the reader receives a crackling satire and shares the particular mood of partness of Hector Bloom and his search for love and "a person, a real person . . . ."

Harvard Students Protest

Publish or Perish

Two hundred Harvard students staged an angry rally recently to protest the dismissal of several popular young instructors.

The controversy swirls around four teachers in the History of Religions Department who have published little.

One, an assistant professor, taught a popular course in early Christianity, but wrote nothing. On mild days, he habitually shepherded his class to a small mountain for his lecture.

Departmental officials charged that the lectures were given in an unscholarly manner and amounted to little more than sermonizing. The Faculty was also concerned about the professor's dubious parentage.

When questioned, the professor said only, "They know not what they do."

Another instructor, an expert in Jewish theology, has composed only ten sentences while at the University. Even these, the department charges, were written by someone else. The instructor has been passed over for promotion several times.

The Faculty also dismissed one of the department's more prolific members, whose work includes 95 theses. The department had complained that nailing the theses to the instructor's office door did not constitute an acceptable mode of scholarly publication.

The final case in the Religious Department involves an instructor in oriental studies who spent much of his time sitting under a tree with his feet crossed, contemplating Holyoke Center.

"I have no desire for promotion. In fact, I have no desire," students quoted him as saying. His department charged "lack of initiative."

On Friday, The Collegian will run an extensive analysis of the outcome of the election, both on the presidential and gubernatorial levels. The analysis will include interviews with elected officials, campus administration and faculty. There will also be a commentary by Collegian editors on what college students expect from the new officials in the next four years.

Recognition Due Police

It is about time that the University population started to give some recognition where it is sorely due. The "where" in this case is the Campus Police Department. Due to the widely debated towing issue, nearly all of the other functions, which over the years have been designated to the police, have been forgotten.

The smallest fraction of the Police Dept.'s time is given to the tagging and towing of cars. The vast majority of time is devoted to many other campus duties.

The Campus Police Dept. is a security force rather than a police force.

The dept. is responsible for all money problems involving security. This is extremely time consuming, and in most cases, it is money belonging to students through one organization or another.

The police are also responsible for investigating all theft and damage reports which are turned in to them by students. However, it is only a small percentage of students who use these services. It should be realized that if only 3% of the students use this service each semester, that would still equal over 300 full investigations necessary during that period of time.

Thefts are not limited to dorm rooms as has been shown during the past few days when several batteries were found missing from cars by their owners. These are not the only things which have been removed from cars. The police are also responsible for investigating all accidents which occur on the campus.

Another service which the police perform regularly is what Chief "Red" Blasko terms "infirmary runs," that is, picking up sick or injured students and delivering them to the infirmary. It is surprising to learn that this procedure occurs at least three times every day.

Aside from these more specific services, the Campus Police are also responsible for the regular building security checks and routine patrols necessary on any university campus.

As for the parking, there are now 3520 parking spaces and 4000 registered cars. (About 2000 are owned by students, and the same number by faculty.) There should be no problem since not everyone is on campus at the same time. However, due to the overabundance of unregistered cars, there is indeed a problem. It is for this reason that the police have been very strict this year about the parking regulations. Last year a total of 5,200 parking tickets were issued. In the three weeks during which there was no towing, over 2,000 tickets were given out, and that number has long since been passed.

After an investigation, it becomes apparent that the only real complaint about the Campus Police Dept. is as a result of the tagging and towing of autos. Anyone who looks at this procedure objectively sees that it is a necessary practice, and one which must continue.

Chief Blasko has stated that he would welcome any constructive suggestions on how to improve the parking situation or any other of the services which are mentioned above. It is only in this way that the services can change to the needs of the campus. It is apparent that the Police are genuinely interested in providing a high standard of service, which should be realized and appreciated by the entire UMASS community.

FROSH MISREPRESENTATION

To the Editor:

Although I am not a member of the class of '68, I feel compelled to raise a point about the recent freshman election. Because of the newly inaugurated tri-mester system, many freshmen who will be returning for Spring semester (as their second semester) will have missed out on an opportunity to vote for their class officers.

There is an inequity manifested in this situation. Perhaps I am laboring under a misconception, but as I understood, certain members of the class of 1968 were forced to come to school during the summer and then wait one semester to return. These students were denied the right to vote for the men and women who may very likely represen them for the remainder of their college careers.

One may raise in rebuttal that these returning students may choose their representatives for their sophomore year, or indeed, if they are completely dissatisfied, can run themselves. But we all realize how difficult it is to upset an incumbent.

I can offer no solution to the problem at hand. With the system as it is, it is a situation nearly impossible to rectify. But I hope that my question will be taken into close study, and possibly a solution can be found for the returning student who has almost totally lost his right to be represented by a person he himself has chosen.

NEW NAME

To the Editor:

The most frequent objection to large universities is that they tend to lessen individuality. In my case, the University of Massachusetts has diminished my individuality to the extent of choosing a new name for me.

In a fit of bureaucracy, UMass has supplied me with a middle name — something I never had before — and now I must provide the Records Office with my birth certificate to prove that this spurious middle name is not mine.

In the University's application blank, there was space provided for "Last name, First name, middle name". Not having a middle name, I left the last space blank. My high school, however, processing this, unaccountably filled in the blank with the middle name "Joan". The University now insists that, officially, my name is Kathleen Joan Nolan and that the only way I can change it is my producing a court order or my birth certificate.

The reason given to me for this rigamarole was that "this is a state school and we must be careful." Care is fine, but to me my name is the hallmark of my individuality — and I resent the ridiculous procedure of having to prove my own name.

North Commons

To the Editor:

The North Dining Commons has recently been turned into a kindergarten playground. On several occasions a few tables of boys have displayed obnoxious behavior. I don't think they realize that they have progressed to college level, at which youths are supposedly considered responsible adults. But apple slinging and butter hurling are childish traits, not worthy of college students. Furthermore, nasty remarks by others passing by and the general uproar they cause are similarly out of place in college. In case the people concerned haven't noticed, music is now being piped in during some meals. I'm sure those eating dinner would prefer to listen to the music and not to the whistling and shouting that currently go on. If the girls are expected to act as young ladies and wear skirts to dinner, I think it only fair to expect civilized and, if it's not asking too much, mature behavior from the boys.

Hats Off!

Shortly after the arrival of the University football squad and coaches at a motor lodge outside of Burlington, Vermont, Friday evening, there arose a din of cries, "Go, Cats, go!" from a crowd of enthusiastic supporters of the University of Vermont football team who had marched three times from the campus to perhaps do their part in frightening the Redmen out of victory on Saturday. They marched around the motel for fifteen minutes or so before deciding to return to campus to await the battle of the next day. I was rather amused by a poster one student carried which read:

"Massachusetts vs Vermont" or "Quantity
vs Quality"

By Saturday evening, however, I am sure that Mr. G-Ho Vermont had disposed of his foolish poster in the nearest trash barrel.

Centennial Field saw perhaps one of its largest crowds Saturday afternoon and, of course, the great majority were U.V.M. fans. But it turned out to be Massachusetts Day in Vermont. When the UMass band performed its pre-game show, I could sense a feeling of pride in being associated with "Quantity." This was a mere preview for the Vermont fans of what was to come during the half. What did come was perfection and excellence. The "Election Preview" was very pleasing to the thousands of fans who stood in wonder at the precision and beauty of the music which has been thrilling throughout the football season. As the band completed its finale number of "God Bless America," the crowd expressed its approval by a three-minute ovation which was wonderful to see. I spoke with the manager of the U.V.M. team who told me that he had never seen a band like ours anywhere in the state of Vermont.

There was no question of quality in the performance of the football team. The dazzling eighty-seven yard run of Phil DeRose and the perfect forty-one yard pass by Jerry Whelchel to Ken Palm were but two indications of the type of quality the Redmen have maintained over the last two years.

Thus, the reputation of the quality of activities at the University of Massachusetts, beyond the academic world (I remember College Bowl), was solidly established in high fashion this past weekend.

Hats off to the dedicated men who are striving to produce this quality—John Jenkins of the Marching Band, Coach Fusia and staff of the Fighting Redmen, and those members of the student body who are striving with them.

Oh yes! Hats off to the cheerleaders and all those loyal fans who blazed the long, cold trail to Burlington to promote Quality—UMass style.

Letters To The Editor

Perspective—Blasko

In response to all the derogatory remarks made recently about "Red" Blasko this perspective is written. During the past few weeks, since the "crack-down" on the illegal parking of cars, the chief of the campus Police has been subjected to many uncalled for criticisms and insults. Most of these have been very unjust and were made as a result of a student not "getting away" with defying the law.

The illegal parking problem has increased this year by a very significant amount. It would seem that on a University campus students would have enough sense not to park in areas in which parking is strictly prohibited — especially if they know their cars will be towed away as a result. Yet, it seems as if many "students of higher education" do not even have the education or intelligence necessary to read and obey a "no parking—tow area" sign.

Upon the request of a set of parking regulations, Chief Blasko personally points out to the interested party the section on towing. It is certainly not his fault if students are "uninformed" as to where they may park.

It should be realized by the University population that the Campus Police have a tremendous responsibility. They are held accountable for the safety and welfare of over 10,000 people. This is a very difficult job, and it requires the co-operation of all people on the campus. No police force has ever been effective unless it has been supported by the population. The campus police certainly are not getting this support, and are doing a remarkable job in spite of it.

No one likes to be told what to do, but without certain rules no society could function. It is also necessary for every society to have some form of regulating force to insure that the citizens comply with the rules. It is not a pleasant job to enforce laws, but it is a necessary one. Chief Blasko is doing all in his power to do a fair, unbiased job, but he needs your co-operation!

J.H.

PARKING

In the middle of all the current lathering over the towing of illegally parked cars on campus, students seem to have lost sight of some perfectly obvious facts. The most important one is: cars are a necessity only for some commuting students and for staff and faculty living beyond walking distance.

Cars are fun. BUT: they are not a necessity.

The alleged purpose of attendance at UMass is the acquiring of an education. Everything else is secondary, if not extraneous.

Since the campus is crawling with pot-bellied, overweight college boys and ample-bottomed coeds, it might be suggested that walking and even bicycling might have some therapeutic value for our coddled kiddies.

Dorm Polls

Johnson House conducted a mock election of national and state officers Monday evening, November 2. With over half the dorm voting, the ratios were:

Johnson-Humphrey
9:1 over Goldwater-Miller
Kennedy — 8:1 over Whitmore
Volpe — 4:3 over Bellotti
Richardson — 2:1 over Costello
Brooke — 10:1 over Hennigan
White — 3:1 over Crawford
Crane — 3:1 over Hahn and for Auditor there was a tie between Buczko and Miller.

Well over half the dorm voted. Most of these girls are not of voting age, yet they felt the necessity to express themselves on their choice of candidates.

When projected on the national level, these figures show an overwhelming victory for Johnson. Kennedy, as was expected, carried the dorm by a very lopsided margin, as did Brooke for Attorney-General.

By the time you read this article, voting will be over, and we will have a new President, Governor, etc. The "ins" will have a chance to show their worth, the "outs" will have an opportunity to criticize. And once again, America will have proved to the world that the democratic way of voting can be accomplished successfully.

Katie Gibbs Scholarships Offered

Two national scholarships for college senior girls are offered for 1965-1966 by the Katharine Gibbs School. These awards were established in 1935 as a memorial to Mrs. Katharine M. Gibbs, founder and first president of the School.

Each scholarship consists of full tuition ($1,200) for the secretarial training course, plus an additional cash award of $500, totaling $1,700. The winners may select any one of the four Gibbs schools for their training—Boston, New York, Montclair, or Providence.

Winners are chosen by the Scholarship Committee on the basis of college academic record, personal and character qualifications, financial need, and potentialities for success in business.

Each college or university may recommend two candidates, and each candidate must have this official endorsement. Students who may be interested in competing for one of these Katharine Gibbs awards may obtain full information from the college placement bureau.

Dartmouth Men Resort To Mechanized Matchmaking

Well, it looks like they're computerizing you-know-what.

A caravan of blushing Boston University maidens, numbered one to 121, took an adventurous journey last week into the very heart of New Hampshire's Indian country, each wondering what lay in store.

At their destination in Hanover were a group of Dartmouth students, likewise numbered from one to 121, anxiously pawing the ground and scanning Route 10 for sighs of the B.U. bevy. These titillated males had each been paired with one of the female travelers through the use of a specially programmed electronic brain.

The cybernetically inclined matchmakers behind this numerical rendezous were a Dartmouth dorm social chairman in need of a gimmick and a contact at Boston University's Towers Dorm for women, Bonnie Bloom.

Having heard of a similar social experiment at Iowa State, the enterprising lad prepared a questionnaire which asked for physical statistics, major interests, favorite conversational topics and academic grades. The information was fed to a computer which "mated" the pairs it found potentially the most compatible.

According to Miss Bloom, the arrangement proved "very successful." The couples attended the Dartmouth-Brown game, a rock and roll dance, had dinner, and then went to private parties.

It gets very cold and lonely in Hanover.

Univ. Studies Admission Problems

Amherst, Mass. (I.P.) — In anticipation of a rapidly increasing demand for college vacancies, the University of Massachusetts has embarked on a dynamic program of expansion which will swell its enrollment from 7,000 to 20,000 within the span of a decade.

Confronted with the prospect of a mounting volume of admissions applications, the need for developing efficient equitable, and valid admission procedures has become an immediate concern of the Registrar's Office. The purpose of a recent research released by the Office of Institutional Research, "Preselection in College Admissions," by Robert H. Glover, former Associate Registrar at the University and now Assistant Director of the Northeast Regional Office of the College Entrance Examination Board, investigates the application and organization of currently accessible secondary school data to the problem of estimating academic achievement at the University.

The population included in the study comprised all students who originally entered the University with the graduating class of 1962-1966, excluding transfers, veterans, and students whose records were incomplete (N equals 7240). Because the paramount interest of this research was in the period of transition from secondary school to college, the second semester cumulative Quality Point Average was selected as the criterion.

The predictors studied were two measures of scholastic aptitude; College Board SAT Verbal and College Board SAT Math; two measures of achievement; Converted Class Rank and the mean of three College Board Achievements; and two measures to account for high school variation; School Factor and Adjusted Converted Rank.

Multiple variable regression techniques were applied to the subsamples of Men (excluding Engineers), Women, and Engineers for the classes of 1964, 1965, and 1966, which analysis of variance revealed were relatively homogeneous groups independent of each other on the basis of the variables considered. Prediction equations developed from 1964 and 1965 data were crossvalidated on new data from the classes of 1965 and 1966 respectively.

School Factor, Adjusted Converted Rank, and Achievements all produced negative results in attempting to improve upon the predictive efficiency of the basic variable combination of SAT Verbal, SAT Math, and Converted Class Rank.

Ottawa Chaplain

Premarital Sex Can Be OK

OTTAWA, Canada (CPS-CUP)—A chaplain at Carleton University, Rev. Gerald W. Paul, representing the Anglican, Presbyterian and United churches on campus said recently "only if we are certain the sexual relationship will help more than harm our partner in the long run as well as in the immediate encounter, are we justified in premarital sex."

Rev. Paul said the reasonable student today doesn't think the church is justified in relating the commandment prohibiting adultery to a type of sex engaged in by two unmarried students.

He says students today generally adopt one of two attitudes towards premarital sex. Some cling to the absolute law against sex outside marriage. Others, who cannot embrace a sex ethic that does not take account of the social, psychological and religious insight of post-Victorian thinkers, adopt a relative approach to sex activities.

Members of the second group might say, "If two people want to go to bed together, what's wrong with that? Everyone has his own life to live. With all the tensions of university life, students should be free to seek a release wherever they can find it."

According to Rev. Paul, the "open door" policy towards sex is not new, but with modern methods of contraception, students today have less to fear than did their parents.

Instead of an "outmoded" and "irrelevant" absolute standard supported by God, or a relative ethic that ignores God, Rev. Paul suggested an ethic of love; "unless we are certain that sexual union will contribute to the growth of the other person, we should leave it alone."

Quoting an essay called "Chastity" by Glen Cavaliero, he said, "Sexual experience is a great healer, but unrelated to the rest of life, unrelated to personal committment, it can ravage and destroy."

Following publication of Rev. Paul's remarks, spokesmen of the three churches he represents said they would investigate the matter.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

When two top teams, both undefeated in league competition, meet to decide who shall receive the Beanpot, there is an excitement in the air, hardly surpassed by the "Pro-Bowl" or the World Series. For the Vermont Catamounts, this game was to represent more than just another victory over "another" team. Last year Vermont suffered the bitter taste of defeat in a 41-0 thrashing that left them speechless as well as demoralized. However, the Catamounts quickly recovered for a fine 6-2 season. Having built up a winning streak since the Masachusetts game, which covered a span of seven games. Vermont had an opportunity to not only extend its streak, but also to vindicate themselves and win the precious "Beanpot," symbolic of Yankee Conference supremacy. Vermont was totally convinced that they were the best team in the conference.

Unfortunately, there was only one obstacle to prevent Vermont from sweeping through its season undefeated. That obstacle was the University of Massachusetts, possessors of the Beanpot, who had absolutely no intention of relinquishing it. Mass also considered this an all important contest. During the previous week, the omnipotent Boston newspapers, so very unaware of Western Massachusetts, gave Vermont more publicity than the Redmen, a native team, have received since the Harvard game. Boston sportswriters were more impressed by Vermont's undefeated record than UMass' opponents. Therefore, the Redmen were determined to prove themselves, not only as conference champions, but also as quite worthy of bowl consideration.

The fired up Redmen took the field before a sellout crowd, which was as anxious as the boys of UVM. The outcome is now history. UMass dominated the game with the exception of the lone Vermont touchdown, anticlimatic as far as the outcome was concerned. A strong running game ran around, over and through the Catamount line, which fought desperately but ineffectively. Palm, DeRose, Ellis, Biron, Ross and Benoit all enjoyed turns bucking for yardage. There was no holding the Redmen down, and by halftime, Verwanted only to salvage her prestige. She finally did this by scoring the first Yan Con touchdown against UMass in the 1964 season.

Few fans were aware of the excellent job done by the Redmen linebackers, who held the Catamount backs to minimum yardage. Particular praise goes to Dave Kelly and Jack Schroeder who seemed to be in on almost every tackle. As second string quarterback, Schroeder has seen very little offensive action, but as a defensive specialist has proved himself invaluable. His work has enabled Jerry Whelchel to concentrate on offensive chores, rather than playing both ways.

As usual Jerry Whelchel played in his incomparable fashion. He faked and bootlegged well, giving the deceptive advantage to the other members of the backfield. Even against a strong crosswind, Whelchel was able to complete two long passes for over 50 yards; Gino Burgin, the versatile football manager, had tipped off the coaches concerning the "cushion control" football used by Vermont, enabling the quarterbacks to practice beforehand.

An offensive innovation was the quick pitch by Whelchel directly to the halfbacks. This allowed for more moves over tackle, rather than around the ends, and placing more pressure on the defensive middle linebacker.

Vermont is thoroughly convinced that the Fighting Redmen and their stalwart band are invincible. Now to convince the skeptical Crusaders and the Worcester Telegram.

Carpenter Yan-Con Champ But URI Takes Team Title

The University of Rhode Island placed 5 men in the top 16 runners to edge past Mass and Maine Saturday and win for itself the annual Yankee Conference Cross Country Championship. But the big thrill for the many fans who were onhand to witness the meet which was held on the UMass course was the race for first place. UMass sophomore Terry Carpenter, who set a blistering early pace, had enough left at the end to outsprint Maine's Fred Judkins to the tape and win the individual title by a half second. Carpenter's upset victory enables him to follow in the footsteps of Bob Brouillet, who won the title for 3 consecutive years.

Others who placed for UMass were Bob Ramsey, 8th place; Steve St. Clair, 14th place; Bob Larson, 17th place; Mike Sheeley, 19th place; and Tom Panke, 20th place. The team scores were URI, 52; UMss, 59; UMaine, 69; UNH, 81; UConn, 121; UVM, 152.

Significance Of Election Results Discussed By Profs.

by Carol Neilon

There was little agreement on "the Significance of the Election Results" by three professors discussing the topic before the student body in a panel discussion Wednesday night in the small auditorium of the new Business Administration building.

Representing the liberal faction were Professor David R. Mayhew of the government department and Dr. David Leonard of the history department. Professor Carl Keyser represented the conservative political element.

Professor Mayhew began the discussion by attributing Goldwater's defeat to a mass repudiation of his stand on three issues: the welfare state, civil rights and co-existance.

"There were issues and there was a choice made. President Johnson received 61.3% of the major party vote. The election does give us some kind of repudiation of the right wing."

Prof. Mayhew also commented briefly on the future of the Republican party, the change in the South's voting pattern, the Democrats' gains in the Senate and in the House and the potentiality of a Congress "more liberal than any other since 1936."

Speaking on the future of the Republican party he said, "I expect the moderates in the party will start chipping away at the Goldwater machinery."

About the Senate gains, he said that the Democrats may have picked up two seats and will have one more "from Minnesota when Humphrey moves across town."

In closing Professor Mayhew said, "The Democrats owe their major victories in Congress directly to Senator Goldwater."

Although Dr. Leonard was anti-Goldwater during the pre-election campaign, his remarks were from a different perspective than that of Prof. Mayhew.

He began by expressing skepticism about the meaning of Johnson's "landslide" and finally attributed it to a "massive repudiation of Senator Goldwater's ideas and the ideology he has made his name associated with.

"What was this ideology?"

"He calls it Conservatism."

Speaking of the sincerity attributed to Mr. Goldwater by his followers, he calls him a "Don Quixote."

"It is amazing that anyone seriously seeking public office would go to Kentucky and tell the people that poverty is their own fault or go to Tennessee and say that TVA ought to be sold."

Speaking on the same theme, he said, "There are an awful lot of people in this country who keep on moving backwards. Daniel Boone and far less freedom than you and I on fundamental things: basic truth and basic knowledge. It is naive and childish to think that because you move into the brush you're free."

In closing, he said he also feared President Johnson, "not because he made one million dollars or more in the U. S. Senate. That's so common I'm surprised that anyone was amazed by it." He feared Johnson because he failed throughout his campaign too discuss "basic and essential" issues: world peace, the realization that problem the U. S. faces with Red China is "our fault," the proposal for a multi-lateral nuclear force and the breakdown of NATO and civil rights.

When Prof. Keyser took the stand he said about Dr. Leonard's speech, "All I can say is 'Wow!'"

Skull-duggery Afoot

Human Skull Unearthed Here

by Peter Henderson

A human skull was discovered behind Thatcher House yesterday afternoon by Charles Zahigian of Thatcher.

Zahigian, a sophomore, was about to go to a 1:25 class when his attention was diverted by a small animal playing on the hillside beyond the road.

He decided to investigate and went down to the road to look more closely at the area. He observed a smooth white object projecting from the earth, barely visible among the leaves and sand.

"I thought I saw eye sockets and nose bones peering down the hill at me and had to go up and dig it out," he said.

Zahigian climbed 10 or 15 feet up the hill grasped the object, a skull, and pulled it from the loose earth.

"The hill was very crumbly and I dug around a bit more, finding some vertabrae in the same immediate area. I almost scared myself to death when I first saw it," he said.

He brought the bones to his room, and consulted Robert Mooney, also of Thatcher, who advised him to contact someone in the zoology department.

They took the vertabrae to Dr. Klingenger in the zoo. dept., who identified them as being human. He came to the dorm and looked at the skull. Klingenger noted that there were holes drilled into the skull and vertebrae, presumably to hold wires that would allow the jaw to move and maintain the form of the skeleton.

The Campus Police were then called and came to the dormitory with Dr. Gage, Director of Student Health Services.

Gage noted decomposition of the bones and thought that they had rested in the ground for 15 to 20 years.

They were probably buried prior to construction of the road, at any rate a long time ago. "It is quite evident that the skeleton was a lab specimen", he said after examination of the bones.

Mooney speculated that "the skeleton was buried in an upright position and that erosion of the hill gradually brought it closer to the surface of the slope."

The District Attorney and The State Police were also notified of the discovery.

Security Force Profile

Facts Defend Campus Police

by Don Boyd

With all of the notoriety currently being generated about the campus police and their involvement in the towing and parking violation problems, it seems appropriate for the Collegian to provide its readers with a brief profile of the Campus Security Force.

According to Co. John Marchant, Director of Campus Security, all but two of the present 10 members of the campus police have completed the local Police Officers Training School. This school is attached to the State Police Academy.

A specialized curriculum has been devised for the school by leading physicians, judges, university professors and police officers and includes the areas of criminal law, first aid and motor vehicle law. Weapons training is also a requisite and is broken down into practical pistol experience and special weapons. This latter category includes such things as tear-gas grenades and riot control techniques.

The eight University officers have also taken other courses required by the Training School, including interrogation, search and seizure, and court procedures. In addition, these officers undertook courses in the areas of investigative techniques, unarmed arrest and police tactics.

The matter of securing a position on the University of Massachusetts Security Force, however, is another matter, according to Col. Marchant. Earlier in the semester, there were 146 applicants for one opening on the force.

Position was filled after a series of physical agility and intelligence tests, as well as an interview by several psychologists and state police officers.

Another test is being devised under the supervision of Col. Marchant to determine police aptitude.

Recruiting Still On For Campus Blood Drive

A meeting of recruiters for the Red Cross Blood Drive was held yesterday in the Student Union.

Because the drive has seriously lagged behind this year, recruiters met to discuss various methods of getting students, faculty, and administration members to pledge blood.

"This year's quota must equal or surpass last year's quota," according to George Marshall, chairman of the drive, "but this will not be possible at the present rate of pledge."

Marshall also noted that donation of a pint of blood entitles the donor and his immediate family, living under one roof, to any blood they might need for a year following the contribution.

University members are urged to sign up now in the lobby of the Student Union.

Preserve Emily Dickinson's Home!

A University English professor with an interest in Emily Dickinson, David Porter, has suggested the preservation and use of her house might be a mutual concern of the University or Amherst College and the town.

Porter termed such "creative activity" as an obligation of the town and said that some financial backing could well come from that source. He pointed out that the college-Dickinson family connections are "manifold" when naming it, along with the University, as a potential source of "money and energy."

He went on to outline future potentials of the house, saying first "one hopes that it will be in the hands of people who are willing to receive visitors with regular visiting hours, displays, and perhaps, even brochures.

"But one hopes ultimately that the house can make a more vital contribution beyond its mere physical presence," Porter continued with money and the proper direction it could serve as a center for the arts, especially poetry, but quite possibly including drama, music, plastic arts.

He makes several concrete suggestions:

1. Work space could be provided for active writers and for scholars in the humanities.

2. It could be a place for readings of contemporary poetry, drama and other arts and for performances and visiting speakers.

3. It might eventually house a printing press primarily for publication of new work of unpublished writers. It might specialize in New England writers and critics.

Porter emphasized the need of undergraduates for the sort of privacy for their writing and work which could be provided there.

In summing up, he turned to one of Emily Dickinson's poems. The house can be more than a local Pompeii with "all the occupations crystallized, everybody gone away."

ally ascribed to Conservatives by Liberals, he said, "As far as the election is concerned, we Conservatives do not concede that it was lost. We are still waiting for the rural vote to come in."

He attributed Goldwater's defeat to the "illusion of peace and of prosperity" created by the Johnson administration, the prematurity of Senator Goldwater's candidacy, lack of support by moderate Republicans, failure to have his views adequately communicated, and misrepresentation by the working newsmen.

He expressed hope that "conservatives will keep control of the Republican party and that the realliance in the two parties will be permanent.

In closing, he said, "'Better to fail in a course that will ultimately succeed than succeed in a course that will ultimately fail.' Or to put it in others words, 'Better to be right than President.'"

A discussion and a question period followed the lectures.

UNM Exchange Students

No Such Thing as "All Nighter"

By Harriet J. Braunfeld

"We love it," exclaimed Mary (Torri) Crawford and Michael Ann (Mike) Martinez, exchange students from the University of New Mexico, when asked how they like UMass.

"No matter who you talk to, everyone says the same thing: 'I'm so far behind and have so much to do'," said Mike.

"THERE'S MUCH more reading at UMass, and fewer exams. At UNM, courses with one text and two paperbacks are considered the worst possible punishment," added Torri. "It's much easier to stay caught up under those conditions. Also, there's no such thing as an 'all-nighter' at UNM."

Mike and Torri are here for the semester, along with Estelle Lehman and Sandra Abernathy. In return, ten UMass students are spending the semester at UNM.

About UMass social life, Mike chuckled; "Oh, it's not lacking AT ALL!

Mike said: "Sports are more in abundance here. Everything is more or less taken for granted. Five thousand people turn out just to see a track meet. There aren't as many different kinds of teams at home."

"Everybody's so friendly," said Mike. Torri added, "College kids are the same everywhere, but the New Englanders in general have been just great to us."

This tends to contradict the idea that New Englanders are not the friendliest of geographical groups. Of New England in general: "It's supposed to get cold," Torri remarked hopefully.

"I'm really anxious for the snow," said Mike. "At home, we have about four inches annually. When it does snow, you have to get up at 6 a.m. to build your snowmen, because the sun will melt all the snow by noon."

ALBUQUERQUE, site of UNM, is located in a valley. Some of the largest ski resorts in the Southwest are located in area mountains. "You can ski down the mountain in your parka; change and play tennis in sunny Alburquerque," said Torri.

Mike, who lives in Emily Dickinson House, sings praises of the new Orchard Complex.

"It's like living in a hotel—not like school at all It's not really inconvenient now that most of the facilities have been installed."

BOTH TORRI AND MIKE agree that the UMass Education Department, UNM's co-sponsor in the exchange program, is "just marvelous. The people in the Education Department would bend over backwards for us, and they have."

They went on to say that it might be advantageous if the program accepted more sophomores. It would be better for students to participate at a time when filling major requirements wasn't such a great necessity.

Summing up, Mike stated, "UMass is exactly what a college should be."

Rigorous Training For Special Forces

The campus-based Army ROTC Bay State Special Forces Unit has been involved in some of the most rigorous activity it will have this year

During Homecoming Weekend, the group spent Sunday in Huntington, serving as aggresors for the Northampton National Guard unit. The BSSF had to fight a delaying action before making a stand at a pre-determined point.

The delaying action was fought in teams of 10 men. The unit then combined for the final action. The group also intercepted radio messages, and was successful in efforts to separate the Guard unit on the approach march.

Cadet Major Richard Murphy expressed pleasure over the performance of his unit, especially

60's Failure is 64's Success

The Italian film "L'Avventura," directed by Michaelangelo Antonioni, will be shown on Sunday, Nov. 8, at 7 p.m. in the Student Union.

The plot of L'Aventura is deceptively simple: during a yachting trip off Sicily, a young woman disappears. Her lover searches for her unsuccessfully, meanwhile falling in love with her best friend. The latter, at the end of the film, discovers him in the arms of another woman. In the film's last lingering shot she is seen touching him in a gesture of pity.

It is safe to say that "L'Aventura" is a landmark in the history of the cinema. Not only is it an acknowledged masterpiece in itself, but it has had an extraordinary influence in creating a new language of the cinema through its profoundly modern technique. Since its nearly disastrous presentation at the Cannes Film Festival in 1960, L'Avventura has been recognied as one of the most important films of modern times. In a recent survey of 110 film critics throughout the world, "L'Avventura" was second only to "Citizen Kane" as the finest motion picture ever made.

During the shooting of L'Aventura, Anotonioni wrote: "I want the audience to work. I ask them to see the film from the beginning and devote their full attention to it, treating it with the same respect they would give any other work of art. The picture develops like a mosaic. Not until the last piece is in place can you see what the whole thing is about." The rigor and complexity of L'Aventura requires the closest attention on the part of the audience and should not be missed by anyone interested in the enormous future of the modern cinema.

Peter Ward, sophomore at the University, performed last Sunday at the weekly student union music hour, from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. Ward opened with a song of Pete Seeger, the TB Blues, which showed him at his best. Although his voice needs much refinement, it showed a potential for country blues and yodeling. If he sticks with this instead of Bob Dylan imitations, he should become quite good.

Pat Sky, now at the Saladin Tea House, in Amherst, represents an excellent talent not to be passed up. Half Cherokee Indian, Pat Sky mainly frequents Boston and New York, concentrating on Greenwich Village coffee houses and bars. He writes much of his own material and some for Buffy St. Marie, who graduated from UMass in 1962 Pat is an excellent Blues and Ballad singer, and concentrates his singing on these two spheres. He wrote the lead song on Buffy's new album, to be released in the near future.

Response to Election Results

Hands Off Policy

Governor-elect John A. Volpe has promised a hands-off policy in selection of the Medical School site in response to a question put to him Wednesday.

As part of a whirlwind tour of the state "to say thank-you to the great army of supporters...who worked day and night" for his election, Governor-elect Volpe helicoptered into Springfield for a half-hour visit. Greeted by several hundred party faithful, the Governor appeared tired almost to the point of exhaustion. In the midst of the noise and confusion of the press and TV people we got a chance to ask him several questions on the University.

Replying to a question on his opinion of a site for the Medical School the Governor promised to "leave the site of the Medical School up to the people who are choosing it." With a hands off position by the new governor the committee has a chance to locate the school where it can do the most good for the state.

The creation of a state university medical school can become a political football. The school and its attendant facilities become sought after by the various communities for the prestige, revenue, and other intangibles. With the State's Chief Executive promising no personal involvement, a committee of medical men can make the decision from a viewpoint of health service to the state.

We are not questioning the argument that the Connecticut Valley or Worcester might need a general hospital, or the advantages of Boston. We applaud the new Governor for his stand on the site and point out that now there is no reason for the committee to choose a site that can be questioned as political instead of medical. The choice is theirs; the University and the Commonwealth await the decision.

Election Analysis

This election may represent three characteristics of national politics. First, the overwhelming importance of foreign policy in this national election. If this is the case, it represents the growing appreciation by the electorate of the difficulties and nature of diplomacy in the atomic world. Secondly, the growing importance of the Negro as a cohesive voting block. The election witnessed a temporary odd alliance of the prosperous, safe, and moderate middle classes with the most underprivileged element in the population. They came together for different reasons. The policy of the administration in the next four years will decide whether they will stay together. Finally, future historians may see this election as the final turning away from the last vestiges of regional politics, to a more flexible politics of social psychological, and economic interest groups. In this sense the poor white population of Mississippi who voted for Goldwater may represent a group threatened by the new structure in their own southern society. All of these observations could only be validated by detailed analysis of local voting patterns.

Bitter and Sweet

Now that the presidential campaign is over, there are mixed feelings in regard to the oucome of the election.

No doubt many Goldwater supporters are bitter about President Johnson's victory. Some of them may even go so far as to bear grudges against the President. Yet, the fact remains that Lyndon B. Johnson has been elected by public approval, and not just by a mere majority, but by a landslide. Johnson is no longer merely a candidate for office, but the President of the United States, a position of respect and honor. When a thoughtless person ventures to denounce the President, he not only denounces the whole structure of government but also his own status as a U.S. citizen.

On the othtr side of the fence there are many opponents of Goldwater who sneer and make jokes about the Senator's defeat. Such individuals are equally at fault with poor losers who fail to concede to the victor. Senator Goldwater is a man of strong conviction. He ran for the Presidency because he believed that he could win. The fact that he lost in no way undermines his integrity nor detracts from the respect for his capabilities.

On both sides there is a sigh of relief that the election is over. People glance back at the campaign as one of the most vicious and underhanded in political history. The fact that mud-throwing and below the belt punches were employed by both parties cannot be denied.

Yet, there is a sweeter side to the campaign apple. This is the first election in a long time which has given voters a real choice betwten differing platforms. In the past the Democratic and Republican platforms were so similar, that in reality they represented only various shades of a middle of the road policy. The presidential elections were merely contests between personalities, and not contests between political issues and philosophies. To a great extent, the presidential races between Eisenhower and Stevenson, and Kennedy and Nixon, can be so characterized.

However, in this election there has been a great difference between the Democratic and Republican positions. Johnson matched his "welfare state" policy against Goldwater's special brand of conservatism. The voters have decided in favor of Johnson's policy.

Another feeling generated by the eltction is the fear that Goldwater's defeat has proven a death blow to the GOP. The argument runs that Johnson's landslide has destroyed the Republican party as an effective opposition. Such a fear appears highly exaggerated. True, the Democrats have gained an impressive number of seats over the Republicans in congressional and governorship contests. An example of this is Robert F. Kennedy's victory over veteran GOP Senator Kenneth B. Keating.

However, the Republicans have also gained substantial victories. Michigan's Governor George Romney bucked Lyndon's landslide to win a second term. California voters who gave Johnson a massive majority dropped Pierre Salinger in favor of Republican George Murphy. Another notable Republican gain included Volpe's victory in Mass. In short, although Goldwater's defeat has inevitably weakened the GOP, it has not destroyed its power as an effective opposition.

A final factor which needs clarification is the failurt of many voters to look beyond the immediate outcome of the election. The fact remains that right after the election, the government is still confronted with the same problems it faced before. Consequently, the new administration, like the old, willl have to tangle with the Communist threat, civil rights, and the poverty issue.

The challenge lies in the ability of the President to devise more effective means of handling the old problems, without creating any new ones. The vote of confidence which the American people have given Lyndon B. Johnson is a strong indication that he will meet this challenge.

GOLDWATER ECHO

One wonders what must go through the mind of a man who has lost an election as Barry Goldfater lost his. For the country, in rejecting him has rejected his values and political philosophy as well. No matter what can be said about Barry Goldwater in the negative it can't be denied that he is concerned about individual liberty in the modern state. He is, I think, basically an idealist. This was brought out so strongly in his acceptance speech where he envisioned a great and free society extending from American to Western Europe, where man can live and experience freedom.

But Barry Goldwater was not meant for these times. The American people did not want an antagonistic approach to Communism, nor did they wish to dismantle the huge governmental structures which have had to grow up to meet the demands of the twentieth century. Barry learned this the campaign evolved. He found that he would have to moderate his views to the "mainstream" of American attitudes, if he was to be considered seriously by the American electorate. And this he tried to do. But how could a man who felt so strongly in one direction change his position concerning the issues, like the United Nations and Social Security, but he tried. This is where the inconsistencies arose in Goldwater's campaign—one day saying one thing, another day, another thing. It was a campaign of a man who wasn't sure just how he felt.

Barry always believed that there was a relevancy between his values and those of the American people. Thus came the slogan, "In your heart you know he's right." Perhaps there would have been a relevance, if the confrontation at Cuba had never occurred, if the Test Ban Treaty had never been signed, if Russia was still pursuing a hard line on Communism instead of peaceful coexistence, if the tax cut had not been approved and we were in a recession or depression. The change in attitude which Goldwater wished to bring about would require a reservoir of dissatisfaction which could be agitated.

Goldwater's policies required a faith. That is a faith in America's inherent rightness on the world stage, and a faith in the principle, the less government, the more freedom. To believe these maxims requires a quasi-religious zeal, which could only arise from a dissatisfaction and unrest in our society. This unrest was not present in the election of 1964, for which, I believe, Americans should be thankful.

To say it wasn't present in 1964 isn't to say that it won't be present in 1968 or in 1972, 1976 or even in 1980. As long as modern society is in the flux and change that has been its pattern since 1914, anything could happen. This is why rational people must always be on guard that this unrest, if it should occur, won't dominate the American mentality.

There is alternative to this antagonistic approach to Communism, and to the need to dismantle the government in order to have freedom. First we must always be devoted to the freedom that we have, and then to realize that the Communist world is here to stay. Then we must try to find some common ground upon which we and they can meet secondly for the first time in the history of man we are able to do away with poverty, and thus grant freedom and equality to all Americans. In this way we would be allowing every man to have an environment where his talents could be expressed. It is to this ideal and that of civil rights for all Americans that we can become devoted.

Barry Goldwater has lost. Yet his echoes of freedom and liberty linger. We have the opportunity to resolve these ideals through the structure of government that we have and, by the realization of the Communist threat and the need for communication with this threat.

Election Response

Apology Due

In the wake of election results, I believe that the American public owes Barry Goldwater an apolgy, indeed . . . a tribute. I am not a Republican, much less a conservative, and it is not as a member of any political party that I make this statement.

The American public has been deluged with campaign propaganda by both political parties, in many cases, inaccurate criteria by which to judge the qualifications of both candidates. It is not my intention to delve into this mass of political cobwebs, but merely to point out that as a result of it, the image of Mr. Goldwater assumed that of a "trigger-happy war mongor with radical designs to abolish the social security system and the recent civil rights law." Mr. Johnson was envisioned as the "cool, calm, and iollected Texan who could lead this nation forward in peace to prosperity."

Again I must remind you that I am in no way trying to describe Mr. Goldwater as martryed by political mal-treatment, or to detract in any way from Mr. Johnson's capabilities as a leader; rather, I am merely trying to point out that because of his radical views on certain main issues, the American public tends to think of Mr. Goldwater as a man possessed of a warped set of values, to put it quite colloquially, "some kind of a nut." The humor in this is short-lived, if not entirely in bad taste, and it is in this respect that the American public owes Mr. Goldwater an apology. For, no human being or group of human beings has the right to set itself up as judge of another person's set of values.

While I agree with those people who feel that Mr. Goldwater would not have made a good President, I must disagree with those who believe that this is so because he has a odd set of values. It is not for us as Americans, to say that he does or doesn't have a proper set of values. Yet we do, and it is tragic that we have failed as human beings to be able to distinguish between Barry Goldwater the "Politician" and Barry Goldwater the "man".

Yet Mr. Goldwater has taken this affront in stride, never giving up hope, believing in his cause and always throwing his sincere efforts into every endeavor. I only hope that Americans will not remember him as an extremist who sought to wrest the Presidency of the United States free from those who would use it to sustain peace and prosperity, but as a man of conviction and character who fought llong and hard for a cause he believed to be right, and that because he did so, is no dishonorable detraction from a set of values which he holds as a man. If Americans will do this, they will be paying him a tribute he deserves.

POLICY CONTINUATION

The effects of this election, in world peace, will most likely be the continuation of the prevailing trend in our foreign policy toward seeking common areas of agreement and accomodations between ourselves and the Soviet Union. There will probably be continuing efforts to resolve disputes through diplomacy and other peaceful means with a view to avoiding major, direct confrontations, between the nuclear powers.

In regard to the campaign question, there was more than the usual amount of abusive and degrading personal attack used by both parties.

In the future, it might be useful to shorten the length of campaign by reducing the time span between the convention and the election.

Mr. Sweeney
Dept. of Government

NEW ADMINISTRATION

The new administration will continue trends toward policies which have been preeminent since the New Deal. It would be a clear repudiation of radical rights as anything approaching a majority group can. In foreign policies, the administration would be a vindication of flexible policies characterizing most of our problems since the era of Truman.

As far as the campaign goes, the dirtiness of the campaign, the "mudslinging", was mostly on the side of the Republicans. Johnson conducted himself in a refined and restrained fashion, after being faced with "moral corruption". There is a decided bitterness to the campaign which could have damaged the image of this country, for the U.S. has always been known as "pulling together" in times of crisis.

In regard to the streamlining of the presidential campaign, from a highly idealistic viewpoint, if there were a consensus between parties about getting their messages over to the public, in terms of hour or half hour broadcasts, it would help the public and shorten the campaign.

Mr. Havard

Student Communication

Editor's note: (The following is by Jonathan Fife, former President of the Student Senate. The Collegian will be printing these articles to bring to the students the ideas, experience, and viewpoints that Fife has gained through participation in major student activities.)

The students at the University should be proud of the fact that we have two medias of mass communication to serve the campus. The Collegian, with its $29,000.00 budget, and WMUA, with its budget, are student run, owned and operated organizations. Each organization has an advisory board made up of faculty advisors and students that sets the policies of management. It is the students themselves who put these policies into operation. At the university, where academic freedom is so vital to the growth of the University, we have completely uncensored mass communication by the students.

I think that we will all agree that part of a newspapers responsibility is to present the news as it happens in a fair, factual, and honest manner. Here at the University I think that the job is far more important. We have a "Free and Responsible Press" with the unique position of being a monopoly. It is the sole voice of the Student Body because there is no other paper on campus nor other mass means for the students to express their opinions. Because of this the paper has two great responsibilities. The first is to make sure that when it states opinions of the students it takes extreme care to present the view of the majority or at least both sides of the issue. All too often the Collegian failed to present more that one minority's opinion. All too often has the Collegian brought forth opinions that did not fairly express the viewpoint of the campus as a whole.

The second responsibility may seem to be in conflict with the first but it is not. Because the members of the newspaper are more informed then the average student they have the responsibility to form opinion. It is the duty and the obligation of a newspaper to see that the scattered facts are related in to present the whole picture and form viewpoints that are not based on emotions or on preconceived prejudices. It is timt that the Collegian learned that it has this duty to the students. What appears on the surface of the news is not always what it seems to be—the paper must bring out the hidden facts. It must point out to the students where the true meanings lie, it must show the perspective of the news—even if it is counter to what has already been published.

But lets not put all the blame on the Collegian. The only other means that the student has to express himself is through a mass communication media WMUA. In the past the radio station has brought to the students good music, National news from their UPI teletype, and series of lectures and on campus programs. The job that they have been doing has been an excellent one but they have not gone far enough. In the past four years the production of worthwhile news concerning the campus has been at a minimum. Since this station is the only means to counteract what the Collegian has on their editorial page they have the responsibiliy and the duty to the students to help form opinion. If they do not do it, or if they fail to counter act what the monopoly of the press has said, then they have failed the students.

Both the Collegian and WMUA have a great obligation to the campus to bring forth the opinions and viewpoints of the students to the students and administration. If they fail to do this then they fail not only the students but the state by hindering the growth of the University. (On WMUA, Sunday Nov. 8th, at 7:00 p.m. Interaction will have as its panel Jeff Davidow, former Editor-in-chief of tne Collegian; Scott Freedland Editor-in-chief of the Collegian, and Ken Moon, Station Manager of WMUA. Thty will discuss this article and their viewpoints of the duties of the student mass communications media.

First Annual Tournament

UMass Welcomes High School Debaters

The University of Massachusetts welcomes the over 200 High School debaters who will participate in the First Annual UMass High School debate tournament, Sat., Nov. 7.

The tournament, sponsored by the UMass. Forensic Society in cooperation with Alpha Phi Omega, will be of special importance to the visiting debators. It will be their first opportunity to debate the National High School Debate topic, "Resolved that an international organization for disarmament be instituted."

Gerald Goldhaber, chairman of the tournament for the UMass Forensic Society and David Arlen, chairman for APO, have announced the schedule for the tournament:

9:30 A.M. Registration at the School of Business Administration
10:15 A.M. Orientation at Mahar Auditorium of SBA
11:00 A.M. Round One of Debate
12:15 P.M. Banquet at Student Union Ballroom. Dean Hunsberger, Speaker
1:45 P.M. Round Two Debate
3:00 P.M. Round Three Debate
4:15 P.M. Round Four Debate
6:00 P.M. Presentation of Awards, Mahar Auditorium, SBA

Goldhaber has invited all members of the student body and faculty to witness the actual debating which will take place in various classrooms throughout Bartlett Hall School of Business Administration, and Hasbrouck Laboratory at the assigned times. Tournament headquarters will be located in room 100 of SBA where all UMass students may find out where each high school will be debating.

The highlight of the tournament will occur at the banquet when the debaters will hear an address by Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger, of the College of Arts and Sciences. Dean Hunsberger will speak on the importance of rhetoric in higher education.

Trophies will be given out for the following events: Best Affirmative Team, Varsity and novice, Best Negative Team, Varsity and Novice, Best Overall Team, Varsity and Novice, Best Affirmative Speaker, Varsity and Novice, Best Negative Speaker, Varsity and Novice.

Chairman Goldhaber stated that the purpose of the tournament is to further the goals of debating by instilling the spirit of forceful speaking mixed with sound research and fluent thought. All University students are invited to cheer on their home town high school debaters.

ROTC Visits Otis Air Base

A group of thirty-five cadets and officers of the 370th AFROTC Detachment, UMass, visited Otis AFB on Cape Cod on Oct. 31. The cadets were flown from Westover AFB in a C-121, better known as a Super-Constellation, by the 961st Early Warning and Control Squadron, sponsors of the 370th Cadet Wing. (The 961st E and C is based at Otis.)

Upon their arrival at Otis the cadets were welcomed by Lt/Col. William Mitchell, Commander of the 961st, who gave a talk on the history and role of ADC (Air Defense Command), special emphasis being on the role of Otis and the 961st within the total scope of national defense planning. The cadets were then given a tour of Squadron Operations, having the opportunity to see Air Defense Operations in action.

After the tour the cadets and officers were the guests of the 961st at the Officers' Club for a roast chicken dinner. The repast was highlighted by the presentation by Lt/Col. Mitchell of the "Decree of Adoption" to Cadet Colonel Keith C. Ross, Commander, 370th Cadet Wing.

After the luncheon and presentation the cadets were given a tour of the RC-121 and F-101 Voodoo Interceptor aircrafts, the primary air-power means of accomplishing the base's mission of defending the northeast coastline from any possible enemy attack. The cadets then returned to Westover and the University that same afternoon.

Band To Perform At Weekend Game

The University Marching band, which last week received a standing ovation for its political show in Vermont, will provide entertainment at Holy Cross this weekend as it presents "A Century of Show Business".

The band will feature original Dixieland jazz and will pay tribute to one of America's greatest jazz singers, Al Jolson, as it makes its own special formation of a jazz singer.

THE BAND WILL PLAY Broadway classics such as "Showbusiness," "April Showers," and "Chicago" specially arranged by Jerry Bilik foremost among arrangers of band music. After reliving the famous 1870 steamboat race between the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee, the Band will bring the Walls of Jericho down. The cornets will form an army who move up to the walls and blow them down.

The Band will close this century of show business with a rendering of "Old Man River" while it forms the famous Showboat.

Food Science Club Offers Micro. Talk

The Food Science and Technology Club will present Dr. Hamed M. El-Bisi, prominent food microbiologist, on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at :30 p.m., in the Council Chambers, Student Union.

Dr. El-Bisi, formerly on the UMass Department of Food Science and Technology, is presently chief of the Microbiology Branch in the Food Division of the U. S. Army Natick Laboratories. He earned his B.S. in 194 at the University of Heliopolis, Egypt, and M.S. and Ph.D. in 1952 and 1955 at the University of Illinois.

Dr. El-Bisi will discuss current research programs in microbiology at the Natick Laboratories, especially those related to radiation preservation of foods and to thermobacteriology.

All students and faculty are invited to attend.

Interaction

Do Mass Media Reflect Majority View

Are the student mass communication media expressing the majority viewpoint on campus?

This question will be the topic of Interaction on WMUA at 7 p.m. Sunday when moderator Jon Fife welcomes a panel consisting of Jeff Davidow, Ken Moon and Scott Freedland.

Ken Moon is the station manager of WMUA, Scott Freedland is editor-in-chief of the Collegian, and Jeff Davidow was the Collegian's editor-in-chief for 1963-64. He is now president of Adelphia.

The panel will discuss the policies of the Collegian and WMUA. Among questions under consideration are: Does the Collegian's news reporting satisfy the majority of students? Does WMUA's programming reflect the tastes or opinions of a student majority?

These topics will be discussed from 7 to 7:30. Then the panel will answer questions phoned to the studio by students and faculty members.

Singing Wings Look Towards Bright Future

The Singing Wings, glee club of the UMass AFROTC detachment, has increased its membership to over 30 and now includes spirituals and college songs in its repertoire.

The new arrangements are the work of 2nd/Lt. Bernard Pitkin and are sung by the group along with its barbershop tunes. This fall, the Singing Wings will sing at Otis Air Force Base. Captain Robert W. Galley, cadet commandant, is contacting other area air bases to line up future singing engagements.

The group is sponsored by the John P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air society.

Enthusiasm in the group is very high, according to Information Officer Ray Crowell. All of the singers are looking forward to future concerts, including a possible trip to Florida in the spring and a planned recording session with WMUA.

Crowell said that the group, which has doubled in size since last year, can never be too large and that all AFROTC cadets are urged to join. Any interested cadet can contact him in Greenough House or leave his name with the Information officer at Arnold Air Society Headquarters in Dickinson Hall.

Priest Talks On Religion—Mental Health

"Anxiety — the opposite of peace of mind" was the problem spoken on by Rev. John McCall, S.J., in his talk, "Religion and Mental Health" given at the recent general meeting of the Newman club. Father McCall, professor of psychology at both Boston College and Weston College, stressed the relation of psychology, psychiatry and religion.

Father McCall offered an explanation to man's anxiety in that man has lost his ability to fear—now he is only anxious. His suggested therapy for treating anxiety is to mentally recreate the situation that first caused panic and analyze it. However, Father McCall also noted that one's religion can bring one peace of mind concerning these things.

Volunteer Fire Dept. Up to 16 Men; Paid For By C.D.

The University volunteer fire department, up to full strength for the first time this fall, has logged an unusually high number of fires.

Eight undergraduate volunteers were inducted last night, bringing the force to 16 men, the maximum covered by Civil Defense insurance arrangements. CD also provides the equipment.

The fire brigade, all unpaid student volunteers, has responded to 16 box alarms this fall, involving $175,000 damage.

Besides fighting fires, the group, led by Chief Leon Alford and Deputy Chief Eric Swenson, has drills, tours and field trips and attends drills twice convenience and a tight-knit group.

As part of their intensive training, the BSSF travelled to Fort Devens for a weekend. On Friday, the unit practiced drill for the Fall review and get their first taste of barracks campus.

The Saturday program called for an early rising, with some physical training to start the day. After breakfast the unit moved to the bayonet range to conclude the training begun on campus.

The rest of the day consisted of daylight and night work on the compass course. After finishing up with some battle drill, the unit will return to campus at midnight, after a rigorous weekend.

NEA Reports

Student Suicides Increasing

(CPS) — The number of student suicides has risen alarmingly in the United States during the past few years, according to a report in the November issue of the NEA Journal, official magaizne of the National Education Association.

"Depressed boys and girls, victims of inner turmoil and increasingly difficult outside conditions, are taking this way out of their troubles," Marguerite Clark of the Cornell University Medical College declared in the current issue. In 1962, about 550 young people between 15 and 19 years old took their own lives.

Cornell University conducted a study of suicide among college students. Dr. Leif Braaten, former psychologist of Cornell and author of the study, outlined four motives for student suicides in his report.

—A desire to destroy themselves because they can no longer tolerate the discrepancy between how they appear to themselves and how they would like to be.

—A need to punish others who hurt them.

—An urge to repent from some sin.

—A cry for help—"Please rescue me. Don't leave me alone."

Surprisingly, the Cornell doctors found that the student-patient who gets the highest marks is the one most likely to commit suicide. "Students with suicidal tendencies, were, as a group, good or very good students. Non-suicidal students, on the other hand, were often doing poorly in their academic work," the study noted. "The bright students were often overreaching themselves, measuring themselves by their own standards, which were much higher and more demanding than the minimum standards of the University," the report concluded.

tie. It was the third shutout in a row for UMass. Then the Redmen finished with a 4-2 victory over Vermont and Wednesday's 2-1 win over Amherst. The season was over and the Redmen were over 500—5 wins, 4 losses, and one tie.

Gary Gibbons, only a sophomore, led the team in scoring with seven goals, getting 2 goals in each of two games. Senior Kevin Lyons had 3 goals as did soph Aba Ayanaba.

On the defensive side so much credit must be given to junior Capt. Ray Yando, who was a fine team leader and was always there at his fullback position to make the big play. Peter Conlon deserves recognition for his fine all around play. Others meriting mention are Mike Russo, Charlie Monnier, Don Johnson, and Pat Dougherty.

In the goal soph Larry Martin had a great year giving up only 16 goals in 10 games for a 1.60 average. He surely wil be one of the best goalies in UMass soccer history.

Most of the team returns next year and the Freshmen had a 4-2 record and have some real good prospects. Soccer fans here at UMass have good reason to be otpimistic for next year.

monthly with the Amherst fire department.

Alarms occur at all times of the day and when the campus steam whistle blasts the volunteers report to the Amherst station immediately and in force.

Woods, grass and barn fires are the most frequent types encountered by the firemen. The dry woods and, according to fire officials, arson have been the chief causes of the high incidence this fall. The biggest occurred over Homecoming weekend when firemen helped battle a 30-acre grass fire for seven hours.

Most of the volunteers come from small towns where they serve on similar brigades. Chadbourne's second floor south side is home to seven of the firemen and new members move there when space is available.

"If there is any doubt about the ability of these men to cope with the unexpected, you should look at their service records", said Col. Marchant. All but one of the campus police officers have been in the armed services, the majority in combat branches.

A Final Reminder
TO Liberal Arts Majors

You must apply by Nov. 27th to be eligible to take NSA's
Professional Qualification Test

The PQT itself won't be given until Saturday, December 12th, but, in order to take the test and qualify for a career position with the National Security Agency, you must stop by the College Placement Office, pick up your PQT brochure, and mail in the enclosed application card NO LATER THAN FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27TH. You are not under any obligation to NSA if you take this test, but all Liberal Arts majors (Mathematicians excepted) must pass the PQT before they can be considered.

Remember—whatever your specialty—finance & accounting, personnel, business administration, data systems programming, political science, history, languages or linguistic research . . . you can make immediate use of your college-acquired capabilities with the National Security Agency, headquarters for secure communications research and development . . . unusual design refinements for computer and edp systems . . . and cryptologic techniques.

Remember, too, these special NSA advantages:

1. Widely-diversified research programs not available anywhere else.
2. Advancement geared to either technical or administrative capabilities.
3. Unique training in new disciplines and methods.
4. Encouragement and financial assistance in your advance degree work.
5. Association with staff members and consultants of recognized stature.
6. Ideal location midway between Washington and Baltimore . . . and near the Chesapeake Bay resort region.

Starting salaries of $6,050 (for B.A. degrees) plus regular increases, excellent promotion possibilities . . . and all the benefits of Federal employment.

Apply now and be sure. You must be a U.S. citizen, subject to a character and loyalty check. Engineers, scientists, and mathematicians should also consult their College Placement Officer for information on NSA and interview dates.

UMass Harriers Drop Dual Meet to Springfield, 22-34

by Russell Murphy

The UMass harriers, fresh from taking second place in this year's YanCon championship meet, ran into some tough competition at home this Wednesday, dropping their fourth dual meet of the season to Springfield College, 34-22. This places the Redmen 2-4 in dual meet competition with two meets to go.

Soph Terry Carpenter came through in his usual winning form to take home his fifth straight personal victory of the season. Terry, this year's YanCon champ, ran thirty seconds slower than his record time of 22:52 on the 4.38 mile home course, but he still won handily.

Springfield, however, took the next three places and then sixth and seventh place to win the meet. If anything, UMass was hampered by a lack of the usual close-knit depth they have been showing lately. Still, there were a number of fine individual performances by the Redmen.

Junior Bob Larson, a fine runner to begin with, has improved considerably this year, so much so that he ran an excellent fourth for UMass both Wednesday and in Saturday's YanCon fete. John Andersen, a sophomore sprinter running cross country to get in shape for the indoor season, has proved himself a strong enough distance man to have run a praiseworthy 24:45 sixth for the Redmen against Springfield.

Junior Carl Lopes and sophomore Bob Craigin, both newcomers halfway through the season, are now runing seventh and eight for UMass, and sophomore Charlie Mitchell, who ran an excellent race in the YanCon meet Saturday, was hindered from turning in another such performance Wednesday by cramps. All these boys are involved in competition now for a berth on the Redmen's NEICAA team.

Co-captains Bob Ramsay and Tom Panke, both seniors, and another promising sophomore, Steve St. Clair, should certainly not be ignored. These three runners and Terry have been the team's spirited and strong nucleus all season, placing in the scoring top five consistently. On the other hand, sophomores Tony Manfredi, Mike Sheely, and Jim Parker are all strong harriers lately prevented from running at all or as well as they could by either schoolwork or injuries.

This season was to have been a "building season" for UMass and heartbreaks were expected, yet the Redmen still took second place in the Yankee Conference.

Coach Footrick is more than pleased with the boys' efforts and is looking for a victory in today's home meet with the Coast Guard Academy. The top seven Redmen in this meet will go to Franklin Park, Boston, Monday to represent UMass in the highlight (event) of the New England cross-country season, the NEICAA meet.

These seven men are the returning veterans for the Redmen basketball team this year. L-R: they are Dan Laakso, Jim Painten, Tim Edwards, co-capt. Charlie Kingston, co-capt. Chuck O'Rourke, Paul Gullicksen, and Clarence Hill.

Redman Booters Finish Strong; Topple Amherst College, 2-1

by Morris Shubow

The University of Massachusetts soccer team climaxed their first winning season in about five years with a 2-1 victory over Amherst Wednesday afternoon. This is quite a feat considering that the team had a 1-4 record at one point in the season.

The victory over the Lord Jeffs was the first in recent years. Center-forward Kevin Lyons opened the scoring for the Redmen in the second period.

In the third period Amherst came up with the tieing goal. But in the fourth period soph Aba Ayanaba scored the winning goal, his third of the season. Goalie Larry Martin played another fine game.

In reviewing the season it is seen that the team played only one game in which they were soundly beaten. This game, the 7-2 loss to Trinity, followed the contest with Williams in which the Redmen had played extremely well in a losing cause.

The season started auspiciously with a 2-1 victory over Coast Guard Academy. This game was followed by the four consecutive losses to Williams, Trinity, UConn, and W.P.I. In the Williams game the Redmen dropped a real rough one, 2-1. This was followed by the 7-2 loss to Trinity. UConn was next and this game proved to be one of the most exciting of the year with the only goal coming with 4 minutes left by Husky David Owalo. The W.P.I. game proved to be disappointing with the Engineers on top, 2-0.

At this juncture in the season the Redmen were 1-4 with five games to go, four of which were away games. The Redmen beat Rhode Island and Tufts in away games, 3-0 and 2-0 respectively.

Clark next visited the Redmen and the game ended a scoreless

Intramural Report

by Howie Davis

The final tabulations for the IFC All-Star team have been released by the intramural office. There are 24 men selected by the IFC players to play All-Stars from dorms Wednesday at 2:00. Twelve men were selected from League A and from League B. The fraternities will have a twelve man defensive unit and a twelve man offensive unit.

Kappa Sig, the fraternity champs, placed six men on the League B team. They are Crane at quarterback, Morgan and Kamena at the halfbacks, Neary at one end and Harrington at center. The other position on the offensive unit went to Caisse of TKE who will be at the other end.

The defensive team for League B finds Street of KS, Padochowski of TKE and Shea of LCA at the rushing positions and Bernard of TKE, Parnell of AEPi and Varin of LCA at the safeties.

League A's contribution to the team finds Allen of QTV at quarterback, Lombard of SPE and Yovner of TC at the halfbacks, Bowen of QTV at center, and Corbett of BKP and Miller of SPE at the ends.

The defensive unit finds Forte of PSK, McMahon of TC and Bugenhagen of QTV at the rushing positions, and Whitney of PSK, Wojnar of PSK and O'hara of QTV at the safeties.

These men will not be playing each other, but will field the best team possible to battle the dormitory Al-Stars. The members of the latter team have not as yet been decided.

Kappa Sig successfully defended its fraternity championship as it destroyed TEP 46-14. It proceeded to vanquish Forestry Club, the independent champs by a score of 32-6.

Monday night the Baker Bruins and the Chadburne Maroons square off to determine dormitory championship. The winner will meet KS at 7:30 the same night to determine the campus intramural champion

The Forestry Club wil play the losers of the Bruins-Maroons game to determine third place.

The first round of the intramural ten pin bowling tournament has been completed. The top single game was thrown by Clark of the Brett Chestnuts who roled a 210. Tiberio of Grayson #1 was the best man for two games with a total of 537. He was also tops for a three game average with a 179.

Four team shutouts occurred during this round with TKE beating KS, QTV over SPE, PSD took PMD, and AEPi blanked ASP, all by the scores of eight games to nothing.

REDMEN TO MEET HC IN VITAL TEST

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts travels to Worcester Saturday to take on the improving Holy Cross Crusaders. While the comparative records of the club would give the Redmen the edge and they will in fact enter the game as slight favorites, the Cross could be the toughest team UMass has met this year.

Cross dropped its first three contests to Colgate, Syracuse and undefeated Villanova, then behind the fine running of quarterback Jack Lentz the club has rebounded to top Quantico Marines, Buffalo, and Richmond. Lentz has netted 492 running in the last games.

Co-Capt. Peter Pietz has been a steady performer all year at guard. This week he received ECAC honors for his efforts aaginst Vermont.

After last year's disasterous 2-6-1 season, Coach Eddie Anderson has come up with enough good material to run two units and get him close to his mark of 200 career victories. The Crusaders could bring him to that milestone if they win this week.

The offensive team for the Redman opponents will have its primary line strength in the tackles, Joe Lilly and John Mee. Supporting them will be Bob Kimener and Dick Kochansky at ends, Bob Williams and Joe Constantini at the guards, and Bill Morris at center.

Doing the ball carrying along with Lentz wil be Ray Blake and Earl Kirmser at the halfback slots and Pete Meehan at full. Meehan has also done a fine job of blocking for the speedy Lentz. The star of last year's stunning victory over Boston College, halfback Jim Marcellino, celebrated his return to the lineup after being injured by scoring 3 TDs against Richmond.

The victory over Vermont enabled the Redmen to hold their number ten ranking nationally for small schools. Also the club remained number three in New England for large schools behind BC and Yale. An interesting sidelight is that Vermont held the number five position despite their thumping at the hands of Massachusetts.

Peter Pietz, an ECAC choice for his performance in the UVM game, is ready for another big effort. He will receive plenty of help from Larry Spidle, Bob Burke, Don Hagberg, and Charlie Sciaidone in the interior line. Dick Kehoe, Bob Gogick, Bob Santucci, and Joe Doyle are expected to see plenty of service against the Cross.

Massachusetts' talented ends are far and away the leaders in pass catching. Bob Meers has 20 and Milt Morin 10. Meers has a new college season high with these catches. Added to those of last year, he now has 39 and could reach the all-time Redmen record of 70 barring injury for the rest of this season and next.

The position of the rushers from last week remain unchanged although they did close up. Jerry Whelchel is first, then Mike Ross, Ken Palm, and Bob Ellis. This will be the starting backfield Saturday.

Whelchel will be seeking to improve his passing percentage which has fallen off during the last two outings. He still has a fine .563 percentage with 49 completions in 87 attempts. He also holds the number slot in scoring for New England with 45 points, including 21 from his talented toe. Chuck Mercein of Yale is first with 47.

The game is expected to feature the running of Holy Cross against the rugged UMas defense and diversified attack. The game looms as every bit as exciting as the Buffalo game earlier in the season. UMass should be able to pull it out with Whelchel outdueling Lentz for individual honors.

Bob Gogick has been one of the two outstanding sopho more guards for the Redmen this season.

Redmen Cagers Prepare For Rugged Schedule

Massachusetts basketball coach Johnny Orr greeted 16 varsity candidates at the team's opening practice session.

Co-Captains Charlie O'Rourke, 6'7, (Hadley) and Charlie Kingsston, 5'11, (Springfield) led the Redmen in their opening day drills. Returning veterans included juniors Tim Edwards, 6'4, (Duquesne, Pa.) Clarence Hill, 6'1, (Washington, D.C.), Jim Painten, 6'4, (Quincy), Paul Gullicksen, 6'5, (Quincy), Dick Beniamin, 6'6, (Greenfield, and Jack Forst, 6'4, (Union, N.J.), and seniors Dan Laakso, 6'4, (Norwood) and John Ricci, 6'2, (Waltham).

Hill and Laakso missed the entire season last winter. Hill was out of school as a result of mononucleosis and Laakso was sidelined with a shoulder injury.

Sophomores present were Jim Babyak, 6'2, (Easthampton), Frank Stewart, 6'3, (Lynnfield, Mike Meola, 5'11, (Schenectady, N.Y.), John Lisack, 6'3, (Allendale, N.J.), Bob Murphy, 6'3, (No. Andover) and Rick Ericson, 5'11 (Quincy).

The Redmen open a rugged 24-game shcedule Dec. 1 at Boston University. In addition to the tough Yankee Conference rivals UMass will face Rutgers, Bradley, Evansville, Washington (Mo.), Pittsburgh, Boston College, Army, Holy Cross, St. John's and Providence.

The complete UMass schedule for 1964-65: Dec. 1 at Boston U.; Dec. 5 Rutgers, home; Dec. 9 at Rhode Island; Dec. 12 Maine, home; Dec. 15 at Connecticut; Dec. 18 New Hampshire, home; Dec. 26 at Evansville; Dec. 28 at Bradley; Dec. 30 at Washington (Mo.); Jan 2 at Northeastern; Jan 8 Vermont, home; Jan. 9 A.I.C., home, Jan. 29 Pittsburgh, home; Feb. 2 Boston Col-

"Superlative Cellist" To Perform at UMass

Leonard Rose, former first-desk cellist with the New York Philharmonic and a renowned soloist since 1951, will appear in concert on Monday, Nov. 9, in the Student Union ballroom at 8 p.m.

Monday night's program will include a Bach-Siloti piece and selections from Brahms, Boccherini, Martinu, Schumann, and Chopin. Samuel Sanders will be at the piano.

LEONARD ROSE

Called "the superlative cellist of today" by the late Dimitri Mitropoulos, Leonard Rose has played to entranced audiences from coast to coast in this country and in foreign musical festivals fro mEdinburgh to Israel. He appeared both as a soloist and with violinist Isaac Stern and pianist Eugene Istomin.

One critic, Irving Kolodin of "Saturday Review," called the trio's chamber music "beyond the reach of any other group of players now performing."

In addition to concerts and appearances with American and European orchestras, Rose has recorded extensively for Columbia Masterworks Records.

Rose's performance is being sponsored by the Concert Association. Tickets will be available

Collegian First Class Paper

By Peter Hendrickson

The Collegian was recently awarded a First Class honor rating by the Associated Collegiate Press (ACP), competing with all other college newspapers that publish two to three times a week.

ALL-AMERICAN IS THE HIGHEST RATING, and there are four lower ratings. The last time the Collegian received First Class honors was in the spring semester of 1961. Since then the paper has been second class.

The newspapers that were judged were from the month of May as representative of the spring semester. The editorial board and staff from last spring's first class newspaper have remained essentially the same.

DAVID AXELROD WHO WAS EDITOR-IN-CHIEF resigned and has been replaced by Scott Freedland, Managing Editor; Sherry Spear remains Feature Editor; Robert Surrette has been replaced by Ross Jones and Darryl Fine as Photography Editors; Marshall Karol remains Sports Editor. Paul Rodman, Advertising Manager; Ted Weinberg, Business-Manager; and Terry Stock, News Editor, hold their positions.

The News pages received 740 out of a possible 800 points, with coverage rating 200—the highest score possible. The judge noted, "Thorough coverage! Your staff seems to be reaching the sources."

HE ALSO NOTED THE EXCELLENCE of "good front page news-feature copy." He pointed to the extensive use of the "essay-type features" and suggested more "localization of copy and timeliness."

The editorial page features rereceived a superior score, one that is rarely given. The judge commented, however, "Seems to me you write around a subject and sometimes become obtuse."

SPORTS COVERAGE WAS RATED "excellent," but some writing contained "Objectionable slang, trick writing, partisanship, and cliches."

The sports page and front page makeup were rated as excellent and the judge recommended that feature be attractively displayed under good feature headlines. He criticized the layout of the inside pages. This has resulted in a stricter style format in makeup.

THE HEADLINES AND USE OF BOLD-FACE LEADINS were praised. The judge recommended that the headlines "Be more than mere labels" and that "More colorful vocabulary" be used, while avoiding slang. Training in this area is now underway.

The ACP hastens to note that: Standards may vary from one classification to another, and from year to year, so scores cannot be used as an indication of progress from year to year, nor is a comparison of scores in two different classifications valid. "Your score THIS YEAR determines your relative standing in your group this year".

The Collegian is now conducting a newspaper lab under the direction of Alvin Oickle, Managing Editor of the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette, in connection with Prof. Arthur Musgrave's journalism classes.

IFC Studies Greek Ideals

The Interfraternity Council took a giant step towards evaluation and improvement of their system last week by the formation of a committee to study and appraise the respective houses on campus.

The aim of this committee is to gather information from all male Greeks in order to pool policies and procedures and to formulate a basic ideal fraternity system.

HEADING THE COMMITTEE are: George Rodgers, Fraternity Manager; Dennis Healy, executive vice-president of I.F.C.; Jeffrey A. Kudsk, President of Theta Chi.

According to Rodgers, the purpose of this committee is not to defend the fraternity system but to improve it.

"This is a highly energetic I.F.C. trying to deal with the inevitable problems of expansion and the changing aspects of college life," he said.

The committee has been studying similar surveys done at the Universities of Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island and Alabama to aid the formation of its evaluation criteria.

According to Kudsk, the committee will have five purposes:

It will gather all information available about fraternities in the past decade.

It will send a letter to each fraternity president indicating procedure for an interview, with an enclosed flyer outlining topics to be discussed.

A committee member will meet with the house president and executive board to discuss fraternity policies and procedures in each house.

ALL INFORMATION WILL BE EXAMINED and the ideal fraternity for the University campus will be defined.

Finally a report of the results of the study will be presented to the Interfraternity Council with suggestions for future action by fraternities.

"Pajama Game" Curtain Will Rise Friday

The Operetta Guild will open its Eighteenth Musical Theatre Season this Friday, Nov. 13, in Bowker Theatre with this production of The Pajama Game.

Performances will be repeated Nov. 14, 20 and 21, at 8:15 p.m. In addition, there will be a matinee Sat., Nov. 21, at 2 p.m.

The curtain rises on the sleep-Tite Pajama Factory in a small western town. The workers are discovered "Racing with the Clock." Hinesey (Dick Morrill), the time-study man, who "can tell ya for seconds how many stitches go into a pair of pajamas," sets the mad pace.

The stitchers and office boys wonder when "old man Hasler (Stephen Rosoff) will break down and come up with that 7½ cent raise," but no hope seems in sight.

THE NEW SUPERINTENDENT, Sid (Jim Duncan), lost in this "New Blue Town," vows to be tough. He does, however, have quite an effect on the women, who tease Babe (Donna Pratt) about falling for him. Babe admits, "He's quite a hunk a guy, but an inch too sure of himself for me."

Hinesey has romantic problems, too. Gladys (Ellie Swartz) is always infuriating him; but with the help of Mabel (Jacqueline Kenswil) his buddy, Hinesey promises, "I'll Never Be Jealous Again." Mabel draws some vivid images; these doses are designed to make Hinesey immune to any suspicuous situations in the future.

Donna Pratt is leading lady of Pajama Game, to be presented Nov. 13, 14, 20, and 21 in Bowker Auditorium.

Sid sings "Hey There." He knows Babe has him "dancing on a string, break it, and she won't care." But this reasoning can't change his feelings.

The annual picnic rolls around. "Once-a-Year Day" is one of the feature production numbers. Exuberant, excited and carefree, the workers declare, "Everyone's entitled to be wild, be a child, be a goof, raise the roof of once a year!"

ANOTHER EXCITING DANCE NUMBER is "Steam Heat," performed by Gladys, Prez (Ron Julius) and Don Kingsbury.

"Think of the Time I Save" is a clever song. Hinesey enumberates several bizarre ways of saving minutes, including sleeping in his clothes and shaving in bed. There are drawbacks and his shave is messy, but the time

Spain Imaged in Slides

By Dave Haracz

What is the state of Spain 25 years after the revolution?

PROFESSOR SIDNEY F. WEXLER of the department of romance languages will attempt to answer this, among other questions this Thursday in a slide commentary entitled "Images of Spain: Yesterday and Today", to be shown at 7:30 p.m. in the School of education auditorium.

Dr. Sidney Wexler

The basis of Dr. Wexler's presentation is his experience in Spain on trips in 1961 and during an extended leave in that country, from which he has just returned.

WHILE THE PROGRAM WILL NECESSARILY INCLUDE aspects of the landscape and physical nature of Spain, Professor Wexler said in a Collegian interview that he intends to provide a "vertical view of the country's people and government." This he describes as a "careful exploration of the thinking and doing of Spain" in many areas, such as politics, government, economics, and the fine arts.

The program, according to Professor Wexler, is intended to present certain images of Spain and her people, how they think and

RD To Produce Three One-Act Plays

Roister Doisters, the student drama organization, is about to get its 1965 production under way.

The RD executive board will announce the program of three one-act plays to be produced Feb. 5 and 6 at a meeting Tuesday, 7:00 p.m. in the Plymouth Room.

"Casting won't be scheduled until Dec." said RD Vice Pres. Paula Norton, "but we're hoping that students interested in working on the plays in any capacity — onstage or backstage — will come to the meeting and find out more about our plans."

The Rositer Doister one-act plays will be produced the first week of the second semester. This gives theatrically-minded students a chance to put the three plays together during intersession, unhampered by studies. "A wonderful way to recuperate from final exams" said one RD member.

Last year Rositer Doisters presented Edward Albee's "The American Dream", Tennessee Williams' "Something Unspoken", and the Pyramus and Thisbe scenes from Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." The same "Evening of One-Act Plays is planned for this year.

A rehearsal scene from one of Roister Doister's 1964 productions, Shakespeare's "Pyramus and Thisbe". Top to Bottom: Ken Feinberg '67 as the Moon, David Axelrod '65 as Flute (Thisbe), and Jim Wrynn '64 as Bottom (Pyramus).

Poet Reads Own Works

by Steve Gordon

A gathering of about 70 persons heard Richard Murphy, a renowned Irish poet, read from his own works Friday night, Nov. 6, in Bartlett Auditorium. The poetry reading was sponsored by the English Department Lecture Committee.

Murphy, a youngish poet at 37, began his reading with a few words about himself, especially about his connection with the sea and Anglo-Irish life, on which most of his poems center.

His first poem, entitled "Disaster of Kleggen Key", was the detailed story of a storm disaster and its aftermath. Murphy's English-accent added much to the sea flavor of the poem.

"Girl at the Seaside" was a short piece about a girl contemplating suicide by the sea. Here again the poet's intimate experience with the sea gave his poem the air of authenticity.

Murphy read selected passages from a work of his still in progress, called "Eulogy of a Battle". The poem describes the Battle of Aughrim in Ireland in 1691, when a seven-nation Protestant army fought with the native Irish army. Following the theme of a religious war, the excerpts he read concerned not only the fighters, but all those emotionally involved as well. Many of these same excerpts appeared in The Massachusetts Review.

He concluded the reading with an eulogy to his grandmother, in whose house he was brought up and called "The Woman of the House."

Murphy is currently on a tour of the United States and came to the University from the University of Connecticut. Upon leaving here, he is headed for Yale University.

He said he enjoys reading his works to audiences because "The very best poetry is written to be read aloud, very much as good music is written to be heard."

Murphy has won high praise for the recent gathering of his best work entitled Sailing to an Island published last year by the Chilmark Press in New York and by Faber and Faber in London, where it was the Spring Choice of the Poetry Book Society. He won the A.E. Award for poetry in 1951 and First Prize in the Guiness Awards in 1962.

Food Science Club Offers Micro. Talk

The Food Science and Technology Club will present Dr. Hamed M. El-Bisi, prominent food microbiologist, on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at :30 p.m., in the Council Chambers, Student Union.

Dr. El-Bisi, formerly on the UMass Department of Food Science and Technology, is presently chief of the Microbiology Branch in the Food Division of the U. S. Army Natick Laboratories. He earned his B.S. at the University of Heliopolis, Egypt, and M.S. and Ph.D. in 1952 and 1955 at the University of Illinois.

Dr. El-Bisi will discuss current research programs in microbiology at the Natick Laboratories, especially those related to radiation preservation of foods and to thermobacteriology.

All students and faculty are invited to attend.

Libe Installs New Book Depository

The University Library has installed a book return for use during times when the library is closed, according to an announcement made by Robert M. Agard, assistant librarian for Reader Services.

This return is in the window to the left of the main entrance to the library and is available for use between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m. on weekdays and from 5 p.m. Saturday to 2 p.m. Sunday. Books to be returned during open hours should be left at the desk from which they were borrowed.

The library service feature is a result of joint efforts of the Senate Services Committee and the University library administration.

Transfer Students Excell

Transfer students from the Bay State's five community colleges and three public junior colleges have made a successful transition to academic life at the University.

According to figures released today by the University, 17 of 74 transfers enrolled last spring achieved honors list semester averages of 3.0 or better.

In June, seven students, all from Berkshire Community College in Pittsfield, became the first transfers from the community colleges to graduate with a degree from UMass. Two of them graduated with honors.

The University and the community colleges have been working closely together since the first of the two-year schools, Berkshire Community College, opened its doors in 1960. At that time the University agreed to accept as many transfers as possible upon the recommendation of college officials.

This year the University more than doubled last year's transfer enrollment by admitting 179 community college students.

The community colleges have been charged with preparing many of their students for eventual enrollment in four year colleges and universities. The Universities experience with these students is an indication of the excellent academic environment being provided by the community and junior colleges. Despite the pressures for admission to the University, places will be kept open for qualified transfers."

UMass admissions officers consulted with college officials on transfer applications and future cooperation between UMass and the two-year schools, last spring.

It is difficult to make accurate comparisons between the transfers and the total UMass student body because of the small sample of transfers and the fact that they are at UMass only for two years. But available figures suggest that they are doing well.

J IS FOR JAZZ

Christmas and All That Jazz

By Rez

With the holiday season approaching, record manufacturers have released the year's best offerings.

"My Fair Lady Loves Jazz" showcases the talents of Quincy Jones, Gerry Mulligan, Jimmy Cleveland, and Ed Thigpen. The movie is to be released this month, but this album is a re-release of 7 years ago. It is available on Impulse and is mediocre.

George Shearing "Deep Velvet" (Capitol) is another fine effort by Shearing and voices. The only problem we find with Shearing is that most of his albums follow the same general pattern—vibes, soft lush tone, etc. However, it's worth a spin.

Atlantic's November releases include Herbie Mann and the Bill Evan's Trio. "Nirvana" is the title and it's a good work. Two Mann originals and four standards comprise the album.

Philly Joe and Elvin Jones "Together" for the first time backed by Hank Mobley, Blue Mitchell, Curtis Fuller, Wynton Kelly, and Paul Chambers. Philly Joe "broke" up the Newport Jazz Fest last summer and Elvin has worked with Coltrane. This album swings from beginning to end.

Jimmy McGriff at the organ may be heard on two new albums for SUE. "Topkapi" is the first and Jimmy glides through 12 tunes fro mrecent movie tracks. The best cut is "Mr. Lucky." Incidentally the liner notes are written by our good friend, Del Shields, of WDAS-FM in Philadelphia.

Teh other album is "Christmas with McGriff". Featured tunes include "White Christmas," "Winter Wonderland," and "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer." This album will appeal to all ages.

Laurendo Almeida "Guitar from Ipanema" (Capitol) is a bossa nova sound. It's been a long time since we've heard Almeida and he sounds fine here. He plays tunes written by Jobim, Bonfa, Gilberto, and others. He's backed with soft guitars and a gentle Latin Percussion.

ALBUM OF THE WEEK: "The Jazz Story" on Capitol. This five album package features rare masters from the original Dixieland to the modern "Free Form." Such greats to be heard include Marty Mattock, Leadbelly, Teagarden, Ray Turner, Joe Venuti, Fats Waller, Billie Holiday, Glen Gray, Kenton, Sahib Shihab, John Lewis, and Max Roach. This is a collector's item and it would make a fine gift to some jazz lover.

REZ says:

It's a sad thing when the BEATLES can demand a $20,000 guarantee against 60% of their gross for a one nighter and we cannot support a band led by Gerry Mulligan, Quincy Jones, Sal Salvador or others who have tried in the past.

AROUND TOWN:

Appearing at the Jazz Workshop on Boston's Boylston St. this week is Mose Allison and the trio.

Friday night, the 13th Nancy Wilson at Donnelly Memorial.

INFORMAL TRAINING SESSIONS COVERING ALL ASPECTS of newspaper work are being held by the staff editors. New members are introduced to the many facets of newspaper work and then invited to work on the staff that fits their interests and qualifications.

Post mortem sessions are conducted after publication to discuss the mistakes and noteworthy aspects of the issue.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF FREEDLAND SAID, "We are very proud of our First Class rating, but realize that there are a great many improvements yet to be made. The newspaper is no better than the students that work on it. We are always in need of more competent photographers, reporters and people with imaginative minds to publish an informative and interesting Collegian."

Physics Department Initiates Ph.D. Program

The physics department will offer a program of study and research leading to the Ph.D. degree, Graduate School Dean Edward C. Moore announced today.

The new Ph.D. program augments the present M.S. program in physics and, according to Dean Moore, will complement doctoral programs in the other physical sciences at UMass.

Students entering as Ph.D. candidates will have the option of registering for a University of Massachusetts degree or for the Four-College Cooperative degree, offered by UMass with Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke Colleges.

The physics department is launching the new Ph.D. program under the leadership of its new head, Dr. Robert L. Gluckstern, who came to the University this fall from Yale University. The first candidates will be accepted next semester.

The new Ph.D. program will involve a combination of course work and research.

Research work is now being carried on or is planned in the areas of high energy, nuclear, solid state, atomic, and plasma physics.

"The research activities for Ph.D. candidates," Dr. Gluckstern says, "will include both theoretical and experimental work."

It is expected that available laboratory facilities throughout the northeast will be used in the program.

Students First

Within the last few weeks, we of the Collegian have received some unwarranted criticism from both faculty members and students. Unwarranted criticism because the Collegian is a "student newspaper" not a university newspaper with hired student editors working under professional management, as are the papers at the Universities of Wisconsin, Iowa, and Michigan.

As students, first, we cannot be expected to do the job of fulltime, paid newspaper employees. We carry a full academic load with its attendant problems, in addition to, the so evident problems of everyday college life. With released time, credits, and remuneration we would be able to publish a daily, unexcelled in its coverage of campus, state and national afairs. However, the Collegian is a student activity, not a professional newspaper, owned, and operated by the University.

Despite the obstacles which the Collegian staffers have to face we have obtained a First Class Honor Rating from the American Collegiate Press for the first time in four years. We are now aiming for the top All-American rating which we missed by less than 200 points.

A Tip of The Hat

While it is not characteristic of me to single out individual organizations on campus, one such organization has received such poor publicity recently, that a congratulatory word is justified and richly deserved. I am speaking of the University Theatre which recently put on a production of the finest quality, yet, because of the lack of a drama critic with a knowledge of theater art, received a review which bordered on disgust. The University Theatre has made great gains in recent years and offers the university dramatic entertainment of the finest caliber. But it also has a purpose beyond the entertainment of the student body.

The department of theatre serves as a laboratory, a testing ground for those students, regardless of major, who desire to acquaint themselves with all phases of theatre work. It helps any individual, through accredited courses, to acquire knowledge concerning the mechanics of dramatic technique. With the development of a broad fine arts program, the University Theatre will undoubtedly continue to be a major link in the continuing chain of fine art entertainment.

The University student should not allow an apathetic attitude to develop. The Theatre must continue to have our support.

SUG Policy

To the Editor:

Mr. Story's letter of October 26, 1964 discussed what the role of a university administration should be and what he sees it to be at our university. When giving examples of the administration overstepping themselves, Mr. Story pointed to the incident when the Student Union facilities were closed during a convocation held on September 24, 1964. Whether this action was justified or not is not my main concern in this letter. It is my concern, however, to point out again, (as the Collegian adequately publicized this issue previously) that the Student Union Governing Board was responsive to the desire and complaints of the students, and that Mr. Story's statement that such an occurrence could easily happen again was incorrect.

At the Student Union Governing Board meeting of October 5, 1964, it was resolved that the essential Student Union facilities would not be closed during regularly scheduled hours without the Board's approval. This is not to say that the possibility does not exist that these facilities could be closed in the future. However, it will be the policy of the SUG Board to inform the campus community prior to such a closing.

I believe this particular incident serves as an example of the responsible representatives the students have selected to be members of the Board. I also believe it proves that the problem of the vanishing powers of the Board is not a valid one. We do look to the administration for professional advice and for the implementation of those things which "we're unable to do ourselves." However, I believe a closer examination of the operation of the Student Union would prove that the students are basically responsible for policies and procedures.

I appreciate Mr. Story's concern and I hope this letter clarifies that particular situation.

IFC Blood Bank

Alan Burne of TKE has been recruiting the fraternities with good response. Last year the I.F.C. donated blood at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital. This year they are donating through the Red Cross Bloodmobile which is putting the blood to better service as all blood collected by the Red Cross Bloodmobile is pooled and stored as to type in the central blood supply bank in Springfield.

Blood collected at the University is credited to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital. When the hospital calls central supply, they ask for the number of pints of blood they have in each type. This is when the blood credits are used. By using this credit method the hospital is always able to have on hand any type that they may need.

Not only are the members of fraternities insuring themselves and their immediate families under the Hamsphire County Blood Insurance Program but they are performing a great Community service.

Congratulations I.F.C.

No Joke

To the Editor:

A joke is a joke but ruining six months of research is not funny.

Two weeks ago, Wednesday night, if you happened to be down by the barn, you probably noticed that the animals were mingling in a friendly fashion. These animals were being used in a selective breeding program, which was obviously spoiled. Horses were let out of their barn also, but they were geldings, so no breeding problem was involved. Police woke up George Hawthorne, to come and get the horses back to the barn. It was approximately 12:30 at night.

If you think that ruining research projects is funny, than you don't belong on a college campus. My mother runs a perfectly lovely nursery school which would be just about right.

Voter Apathy

To the Editor:

In this time of world crisis and heightened political activity, we were profoundly shocked at the apathy which the members of the Class of 1968 demonstrated in the election Thursday. We know that it was a rainy day, but . . . if you weren't across the street at class, how many of you were downstairs in the Hatch, drinking Cokes and socializing with your friends? Was it too much of an exertion to walk across the street or up the stairs to vote? . . . or just don't you care?

It was astounding to see that less than half the class voted for the officers who will represent us for the coming year. Is this the fate our country is resigned to? Is this the haphazard way it is to be run in the future? We sincerely hope not!

MORE RESPONSIBILITY

To the Editor:

The subtitle of the Collegian is "A Free and Responsible Press." I am afraid that since last Spring, the Collegian has been anything but a "responsible" press.

Every issue contains misinformation, misquotes, and a general disregard for true and accurate news reporting. It is interesting to note that in the past several weeks a growing number of complaints from faculty and students have been voiced in regard to either flagrant errors, or an overall poor quality in writing of articles.

I believe that the student body deserves a statement from the Collegian Editorial Board concerning the declining quality of our student publication. Perhaps the Student Senate might profit from an investigation of the workings of the Collegian, which receives such a large percentage of our Student Tax.

If the publication can not be responsibly run under student management, perhaps a stronger faculty advisory board is necessary in order to insure true and accurate news reporting.

Richard Morril '65

Editor's Reply:

Dear Mr. Morril,

Since you were the one to broach the subject of responsibility, I feel entirely justified in calling attention to the gross generality of your letter, which was, in itself, a manifestation of irresponsibility. You seem quick to accuse, but fail to cite any factual instances worthy of such strong accusation.

Granted, the Collegian has been guilty of occasional error, as is any news media. However, the degree of fault, except for one or two cases of which we are regretfully well aware, does not warrant reproach.

As for your statement concerning declining quality, let me call attention to the fact that our national rating has advanced from Second to First Class, between last Spring and the present.

Should you feel qualified, you have the privilege of submitting any constructive criticism which you feel we deserve and which you can empirically support. As for such flagrant generality as your letter, I find trouble in justifying the time spent writing an answer.

Sincerely,
Dan Glosband

Letting Off Steam

To the Editor:

Recently you had an article concerning poor behavior in the North Commons. I agree that it is obnoxious and most aptly could be labeled atrocious. However, there is something which was not mentioned which I feel should be brought to attention.

The students who are the participants of these outbursts are letting off steam at the first available time, since at least two or three days a week they have classes going from 8:00 A.M. until 5:00 P.M. with only a break for lunch. They carry an average of thirty-one, yes 31, semester hours,which I'm sure everyone will agree requires work and study demanding long, hard hours.

I am not writing this as an excuse for the unbecoming behavior which has been seen, but it just shows the other side of those persons who have been so vigorously condemned.

I am sure that the forthcoming behavior will comply with the age and character of the persons involved.

Apologia
D.B.

Foreign Job Opportunities

Students interested in foreign trade and world business will have an opportunity to discuss current developments and prospects in the international field when Mr. Berger Erickson, Executive Vice President of the American Institute for Foreign Trade (Thunderbird), comes to campus on Nov. 13th.

There is an increasing demand today for young men and women qualified to represent America's expanding interests abroad. Companies want college graduates with backgrounds such as Agricultural Economics, Engineering, Accounting, Social Anthropology, Marketing, Food Technology, Psychology and Foreign Trade. Two highly successful Thunderbirds had undergraduate majors in Music.

The Institute's curriculum emphasizes three main fields — languages most wanted by companies (Spanish, Portuguese' French), area studies, and world trade and banking. Language classes are limited to eight students. International business courses, presented by scholars with a minimum experience of ten years as executives in foreign lands, are of seminar size. The training is rigorous, with three to five hours a day on language study and the balance divided between area studies and the technical side of foreign trade.

The placement record is very good. Of students available for employment in 1964, 95% of the Jan. class and 86% of the May class were placed before gradu-act, "considering that their intellectual and behavior patterns are controlled by the several elements that make up the state."

ADMITTING THAT THE OBSERVER NATURALLY SUPERIMPOSES on any record of his experiences "the concepts of the society in which he himself has been reared," Wexler added that to the best of his ability he intends to present "a fair, balanced, and objective report."

Geographically, Professor Wexler's survey of Spain will include cities such as Madrid, Barcelona, Salamanca, Avila, Valladolid, Seville, Granada, Cordoba, and Cadiz, as well as other cities and areas of the country.

ELEMENTS OF MODERN SPAIN TO BE TOUCHED UPON in the "depth" observations of the nation and its people include: Franco, the State, the armed forces, the domestic political structure, international relations, economics, the Church, minority groups, and literature.

In summary, Professor Wexler urged attendance of those interested in modern Spain.

NSA's Professional Qualification Test is your first step towards a uniquely rewarding career

Let us clarify what we mean by a "uniquely rewarding career." If you agree with our definition, then perhaps you should see your College Placement Officer to learn more about the National Security Agency and the Professional Qualification Test to be given Saturday, December 12th (Passing this test does not commit you in any way, but you must pass it first in order to schedule an on-campus interview with NSA representatives.)

First of all, whatever your major interest—finance & accounting, personnel or business administration, data systems programming, languages or linguistic research—you can make use of your college-acquired capabilities with the National Security Agency, headquarters for secure communications research and development . . . unusual design refinements in computer & edp systems . . . cryptologic and related techniques. Your professional growth and earning power expand from the day you join us, without having to wait for years of "experience."

Then, too, you will engage in study and research that will take you well beyond known and accepted boundaries of knowledge. Although NSA is a key research activity within the Department of Defense, it has influence and responsibility of far greater scope . . . and intellectual associations with leading institutions, laboratories, agencies and consultants. The art and science of secure communications in all its ramifications is utterly without precedent or restriction, and involves programs of national importance.

PROGRAMS OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE—a thought worth repeating. For what it may be worth to you personally, you'll realize an extra measure of satisfaction from your NSA work, knowing that the results may benefit a lot of people.

In this regard, you'll find, too, that the NSA interchange-of-information leads easily and naturally to a maximum extension of your individual capabilities. You'll find yourself working with people from an amazing range of intellectual sectors—philosophy, psychology, history, international affairs, English, art and music . . . over 500 of whom have advanced degrees—in a near-academic environment. NSA conducts internal development programs to acquaint you with its new technologies, and encourages advance degree programs at nearby universities.

Now, what of the more pragmatic rewards? Your BA degree makes you eligible to start at $6,050 . . . with regular increases as well as excellent promotion possibilities in your field. As a Federal employee, you are entitled to a number of meaningful benefits—including 13 working days' leave the first year. NSA also offers both aid and encouragement in your pursuit of advance degree education at nearby universities (Maryland and Johns Hopkins in particular are nearby).

One further advantage is NSA's location . . . midway between Washington and Baltimore in an area of fast-growing business, industry, and research expansion. Take your pick of in-town, suburban, or rural living—and enjoy the proximity to the Chesapeake Bay and ocean resort region.

If you agree-act now

If you are interested in an NSA career, you must apply for the Professional Qualification Test NO LATER THAN FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27th. Your College Placement Officer has a PQT brochure and application. (You must be a U.S. citizen, and are subject to a character & loyalty check.)

Dorms Meet Fraternities In Intramural All-Star Game

By Howie Davis

The roster for the dorm All-Star team was released Friday by the intramural office. The following men will form the team to meet the fraternity team Wednesday at 2:00. Quarterbacks: E. Polchlopek from the Baker Bruins, and J. Ritchie of the Chadbourne Maroons. Halfbacks: R. Kinsella from the Plymouth Palms, R. Libby of the Bruins, J. Grady of the Palms and C. Farnsworth of the Butterfield Lemons. Centers: K. Steede of the Middlesex Redmen and R. Stewart of the Maroons. Ends: P. Garvillen and W. Wilkinson of the Greenough Grants, W. Carrigan of the Brett Chestnuts and A. Larvey of the Thatcher Redwoods.

The defensive team finds M. Johnson, R. Bumpus, G. Sorcinelli, J. Margarian, J. Habicht, and M. Wulnn at the rushing positions; M. Kalikow, W. Nooth, G. White, G. Manos, C. Clifford, and R. Marsh will be the safeties.

The coaches will be T. Leary from the Maroons, J. Grady of the Palms and D. Boyd of the Bruins.

THE GAME will be played on the varsity football field. Movies will be taken of the game and the band will be on hand to perform at half-time. Mr. Gladchuck, Director of Intramurals, has worked hard for this game's realization and hopes a large crowd will attend.

KAPPA SIG faces the Chadbourne Maroons THIS EVENING at 7:30 for the campus championship. The game will be played on the intramural field. A consolation game between the Baker Bruins and the Forestry Club will be played one hour earlier to determine third and fourth place.

The intramural bowling leagues have now completed the first week of competition. The Wheeler Trojans, Plymouth House, and Mills House are tied for the lead in the West League and Grayson #1 holds sole possession of first place in the East League.

The fraternities show a four way tie for first place between PSD, TKE, QTV, and AEPi.

All persons interested in officiating basketball sign up at the intramural office.

The Campus Touch Football Champion will play the University of New Hampshire champ Friday.

FOOTBALL . . .

the HC attack was hurt when Lentz reinjured his side, but even at full speed he couldn't have saved the Crusaders.

After another Redman drive had been stopped as Whelchel's 31 yard field goal try was wide, the Crusaders attempted to move. This they did, but in the wrong direction. Doyle hit Jim Marcellino for a 6 yard loss; a penalty put the Crusaders back on the nine, and Doyle, Hagberg, and Ellis trapped Cunnion in the endzone for the safety.

HOLY CROSS was pretty well frustrated by this time, but the UM team and fans were just getting warmed up. Another UM drive was halted at the HC 31, but another bad snap and poor punt gave UM the ball at the Cross 41. Ellis gained 19 yards in two plays as the Redmen moved to the 13. From there, Whelchel hit Ross with a pass and Mike carried it across for the final score. The PAT was good, and it was a somewhat surprising 25-0 margin.

Dr. Eddie Anderson, unable to gain win number 200 in this one, resorted to using Brian Flatley, a converted halfback at QB. He proceeded to move the club for their only score as he broke over left tackle from the 2 yard line. He moved the Crusaders again next time they had the ball, but the Mass reserves held at the 11.

Final statistics show Massachusetts with a 340-243 margin in total offense. However, over half of the Crusader total came in those last two late fourth period drives. Whelchel had 197 yards total on 59 running and 138 passing. He hit on 8 of 14 for that total. In addition he scored 11 points and called a great game. Ellis led the rushers with 71 yards, while Ken Palm was most impressive with his hard running.

THE UM DEFENSE held Lentz to 29 yards in 11 carries. Flatley had 49 yards and Marcellino 47 for the Crusaders. The win gave Mass a 7-1 record and added fuel to possible Tangerine Bowl hopes. Holy Cross, badley beaten here, slips to 3-4.

Bowl Bid Rumored

Redmen Bury Holy Cross Crusaders, 25-6

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts reached its peak performance, the full 60 minute effort Coach Fusia was looking for, Saturday before 20,000 fans at Worcester, who saw the Redmen roll over Holy Cross, 25-6.

It was the incomparable Jerry Whelchel, the do everything quarterback, and his supporting cast that completely dominated the contest and didn't allow the Crusaders inside the Redman 35 until late in the fourth period.

THE TWO BIG ENDS, Bob Meers, and Milt Morin, along with center Joe Doyle were towers of strength in the forward wall. Meers had four pass receptions and Morin two, while together they combined to contain the end sweeps of HC QB, Jack Lentz. Doyle had a big block that wiped out two Crusaders and sprung Phil DeRose on a 79 yard punt return. Along with Bob Ellis and Don Hagberg he got through the line to tackle Mike Cunnion for a third period safety.

Mass won the toss and took the opening kickoff. Palm returned in 30 yards to the Mass 34. Eleven plays later, the Redmen were on the scoreboard. The big plays in the drive were three passes to Bob Meers that gained 39 yards and a 20 yard run by Ellis. Whelchel scored on a sneak and promptly coverted.

The Crusaders, after an exchange of punts, got a drive going with Lentz running, but it ground to a halt at the UM 35, when Don Hagberg recovered a fumble. Ross helped the Redmen move with a 21 yard carry, but the held on downs at the 32. Massachusetts returned by holding HC. Cunnion, who got no support from his center on snaps for punts, fielded one out of the dirt and just got it away. With two of the enemy closing on him, DeRose picked up the ball and was off. He got the big block from Doyle, moved through heavy traffic, and twisted away from a last grasp tackle to breeze 79 yards for the score.

Whelchel had his PAT go wide. His fourth miss in 20 attempts. DeRose became the victim of tough luck a few series later as he sustained a possible shoulder separation. So the scrappy halfback, who will almost certainly miss next week's game, closes out his varsity career with an 87 yard return last week, and the 79 yard beauty this time.

Massachusetts added to their margin in the first half, as they got started on their own nine and moved downfield in rapid fashion. Whelchel gained 19 yards, hit Meers on a 30 yard gain, and found Morin at the 2 for 26 more. Milt had a great catch on that pass, and UM seemed certain to score another TD. Tom Nissi, however, shot the gap and dumped Whelchel for a nine yard loss. UM got that back, but couldn't score. Whelchel kicked a 25 yard field goal to up the total to 16-0.

THE SECOND HALF was more of the same, as the Redmen spent most of the game deep in Holy Cross territory. Further,

Harriers Down Coast Guard; Compete In New Englands

by Russell Murphy

The Redmen harriers scored an easy 20-41 triumph over the Coast Guard Academy last Friday, in a home meet. With a 3-4 dual meet record, and only New Hampshire remaining, this UMass cross-country season could predictably wind up with a fairly successful 4-4 record.

Taking the honors against the Coast Guard, one of the last of his varsity career, was senior co-captain Bob Ramsay. One of the sole three previous lettermen on this year's team, Bob has been placing a strong second or third all season, but this is his first individual victory, running a 23:48 on the 4.38 mile home course.

Terry Carpenter, who was possibly saving himself for today's all-important NEICAA meet, ran a second place 1:10 behind his course record time of 22:52 set the week before. He was followed by sophomore Steve St. Clair, junior Bob Larson, and senior co-captain Tom Panke.

These five along with sophs John Andersen and Mike Sheely, sidelined for the last few meets with a shoulder injury, are representing UMass today at Franklin Park in Boston for the New Englands, and they will in all likelihood be the same team that will represent UMass in the IC4A's at New York City on No-

Band To Introduce Arranger Sat.

THE 1964 MARCHING BAND will dedicate its final performance this Saturday at Alumni Field to Gerald Bilik who has arranged all the music played in the half-time shows this season.

BILIK, PROFESSOR OF MUSIC THEORY at the University of Michigan, is spending this weekend at the UMass as a guest of the Band.

The Band will hold an informal reception in his honor on Saturday evening at 7:00 in Memorial Hall and cordially invites the students, faculty, and administration to attend.

COMBINING BANJOS, GUITARS AND RAGTIME with its precision high stepping and sound, the Band will present a History of Hootenany Saturday. Back in the early 1900"s pianos throughout America were thumping out ragtime, and the Band will recall these days as it dances and plays Alexander's Ragtime Band.

The Band will pay tribute to Al Jolson as they play April Showers and from a huge jazz singer. From early minstrel shows, they will dramatize Joshua Fit de Battle of Jericho as the cornets form an army to march up to Jericho and blow down the walls.

FROM THE AMERICAN FRONTIER of the 1850's they will create a 45 yard-long banjo and will hold a hootenany hoedown. After tuning up its strings, the Band will play Oh Suzanna and then form a guitar and strum out Red River Valley.

The finale of this season will be George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue in which traditional folk music and contemporary swing rhythms were synthesized into a symphonic jazz classic.

Two Students Arraigned

by Don Boyd

Two University students were arraigned in District Court last Tuesday on charges ranging from drunkenness to assault on a police officer.

Robert E. Meers of Hudson and Joseph E. Ross of Scituate were arrested early Monday morning for offenses allegedly committed after being stopped for a routine traffic violation at the entrance to Kapa Sigma fraternity on Butterfield Terrace.

The assaults were allegedly committed upon officers Donald Zidik, Philip Cavanaugh and Peter Sienkiewicz, all members of the campus police department.

ACCORDING TO THE AUTHORITIES, Ross was charged with drunkenness, driving under the influence, two counts of assault on a police officer, failure to keep to the right of the road, failure to have registration, and failure to have a license in his possession.

Meers was charged with three counts of assault on an officer of the law and drunkenness.

BOTH STUDENTS PLEADED NOT GUILTY to the charges and were released on $500 bail each. Their cases were continued to Nov. 18 by Judge Charles J. O'Connor.

Govt. Dept. To Sponsor Munich Prof.

University of Munich Professor Eric Voegelin, one of the foremost modern political philosophers and historians, will speak at the University next Monday, Nov. 16, at 8 p.m. in room 120 of the new business administration building.

The government department is sponsoring Dr. Voegelin's lecture, titled "What is Political Reality?" The public is invited to attend the talk.

Professor Voegelin, currently visiting professor of government at Harvard University, taught at the University of Vienna before coming to the U.S. as a refugee in 1938.

He taught at several American colleges and universities until 1958, when he returned to Europe as professor of political science at Munich.

Dr. Voegelin's books have been published here and in Europe. His works include "The New Science of Politics," published by the University of Chicago Press.

New Asst. Dean Named To Admission

David P. Lawrence, former assistant director of Placement and Financial Aid Services, has been named assistant dean of admissions, it was announced today by Dean of Students William F. Field.

In his new position, he will work under Dr. William F. Tunis, Dean of Admissions and Records.

Lawrence, a former resident of Springfield, received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Boston University.

Field also announced the appointment of Lynn E. Santner as staff assistant, Placement and Financial Aid Services. Santner, who comes to UMass from the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory where he was an assistant in personnel management. He graduated from Allegheny College in 1957.

Last Rally Tonight; Big Turnout Expected

With talk of a bowl bid for the Redmen football team finding its way into the conversation of numerous UMass fans, attendance at tonight's pre-New Hampshire game rally is expected to be high.

Well over a thousand Redmen rooters are expected to storm down Butterfield Hill and North Pleasant street to be on hand at 7:30 behind the Student Union when the team that drubbed Holy Cross last week-end is officially welcomed home from Worcester.

Warren McGuirk, dean of the University's College of Physical Education, is scheduled to say a few words at the rally, as are Redmen co-captains Jerry Whelchel and Peter Pietz.

It is not known whether McGuirk will have any definite news about a possible UMass bowl game.

Educated guessers on campus think that no definite bid to play in Florida's Tangerine bowl will come until after UMass has knocked off Yankee conference opponent UNH on Saturday.

In announcing the activities for Friday night, co-chairmen of the rally, Adelphians Bob Healy and Bill Wilkinson

Superlative Orchestra To Begin Season

Sixteen musicians form the Operetta Guild Orchestra organized by musical Director Paul Bartsch '66 for the 18th Musical Theatre Season of the Operetta Guild, opening tonight.

All musicians are students from this campus and the Four-College area.

For the first time in five years, there will be a string section. Two girls from Mount Holyoke, Elizabeth Weissemann and Susan Stein, play the violin.

In addition, there are a string bass, a percussion, a piano, five reeds, three trumphets and three trombones.

Peter Fink and Pat Virga alternate on the piano. Paul, however, plays the lead songs: "New Blue Town" and the reprees to "Hey There."

The orchestra includes a professional musician, Kenneth Hohenberger.

About the ability of the orchestra, Paul says: "The Bowker pit is very difficult to handle this kind of an orchestra. Nevertheless, I think it is one of the most wel-rehearsed orchestras we have had in the Guild's history."

WMUA Runs Sex Series

Petting, pregnancy, abortion and artificial insemination are the problems which will be subject to open and frank discussion with Dr. Robert Gage, director of the University Health Services, as WMUA presents the third in its current series of programs on sex education.

The program will be heard Sunday, Nov. 15, from 7-8 p.m.

Any student with a question he would like answered is urged to leave it in one of the boxes in the Student Union lobby or in the Infirmary.

Dr. Gage and the medical staff will also consider questions on general health matters if they warrant attention.

WMUA and the staff of the University Health Services are very much interested in student opinion and reaction to this series. Students are asked to write to WMUA-Sex Education Series.

Dr. Paul Norton To Speak To Baltimore Group

Dr. Paul F. Norton, head of the art department at UMass, will address a Baltimore meeting of the Maryland Historical Society on Nov. 16.

Dr. Norton will speak on "B.H. Latrobe and the Practice of Keeping a Journal."

Benjamin H. Latrobe was a famous early American architect. The Maryland society's meeting wil commemorate the 200th anniversary of his birth with the Norton lecture and an exhibition of Latrobe's work.

Dr. Norton has been a member of the UMass faculty since 1958.

He is a member of the Society of Architectural Historians, the National Trust for Preservation of Historic Monuments, the American Institute of Archaeology, and several other organizations.

Young Ind. Present "Raisin In The Sun"

Young Independents will sponsor the much acclaimed motion picture, A Raisin in the Sun, the dramatic and intriguing saga of the Negroes' fight for equality in a white world.

To be presented Monday at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium, "A Raisin in the Sun" stars academy award-winning Sidney Poitier and Claudia McNeil.

Walter Kerr of the N.Y. Herald Tribune says, "An honest, intelligible and moving experience."

Brooks Atkinson of the N.Y. Times states, "With honestry, compassion and humor, this prize-winning drama breathes life into the daily joys and furies" of a young Negro husband and his family.

Press Club Holds Meeting, Elects Officers

The newly organized Press Club held its second meeting at 4:00 p.m. Friday, Nov. 6, in Room E13 of Machmer Hall. The following officers were elected: President, Oleh Pawluk; Vice-President, Dave Moore; Secretary, Carol Neilon; and Treasurer, Joan Shusta.

Dr. Arthur B. Musgrave, Professor of Journalism, discussed how students could procure positions as University correspondents with local papers. Various members gave reports on their work in this field.

The Press Club will hold its next meeting tonight at 5:30 p.m. in Room E13 of Machmer Hall.

New Health Director Named

Howard A. Peters, a 38-year-old native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, has been named director of environmental health and safety and assistant professor of public health at UMass.

A graduate of the University of Omaha, Peters expects to receive his Ph.D. degree shortly from the University of North Carolina.

As environmental health and safety director at UMass, Peters will be concerned with sanitation, industrial hygiene, radiation health, and safety in the large and growing University community.

He will work under the general supervision of Robert W. Gage, M.D., director of the University's health services, and will cooperate closely with campus, town, and state officials to develop and coordinate a health and safety program for UMass.

In addition to his studies at Omaha and North Carolina, Peters has held positions with the Omaha-Douglas County Health Dept. and has had specialized training at the R.A. Taft Sanitary Engineering Center in Cincinnati, and at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and Institute of Nuclear Studies.

For his doctoral dissertation, Peters has been investigating staphylococcus bacteria under a grant from the Army Medical Service Corps.

Award Winning Film

'The House Under The Rocks'

The Hungarian film, The House Under the Rocks, directed by Karoly Makk, will be shown Sunday, Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Three people—a returned prisoner of war, his beautiful second wife, and the possessive, hunchbacked spinster who is his sister-in-law by his first marriage —are isolated in a little house under an extinct volcano.

Each strives for personal happiness but is suffocated by his dependence on the others.

The first major work of a young Hungarian director, this film has achieved international recognition for the finesse of its tense psychological story, winning the Best Film prize at the San Francisco festival in 1958.

Newman Club To Sponsor Autumnal Dinner and Dance

The Newman Club will sponsor a dinner dance in the social hall of the Newman Center from 7:30 p.m. to 12 p.m. on Saturday, November 21.

The theme of this year's dance will be "Autumn leaves-Snow flies".

The dinner will be a buffet consisting of hot and cold meats, vegetables, coffee, punch, and pastry. Music for dancing will be provided by a band that will play a variety of tempos.

Tickets for "Autumn leaves-Snow flies" are $5.00 per couple for members and $6.0 per couple for non-members. They will be sold until Nov. 16 at the Newman Center.

Wilkinson told the Collegian that the last scheduled rally of the year will be a departure from the first three. According to Wilkinson there will be no rally parade down the hill.

Wilkinson also said that he expected there would be some surprises at the rally with the Revelers promising to stage some antics.

The Emeralds, a twist band with a female vocalist, will be the performers at the dance that will follow the rally and the traditional bonfire.

stressed the importance of a large student turnout for Friday night's festivities.

Healy who broadcasts the Redmen football games over WMUA said that this "was the most important rally of the year" for the football team.

from 9-12 p.m.

(2) Walk-ins are strongly encouraged to donate. They may report to the center at their convenience on any of the drive days.

(3) Donors are reminded that a good night's sleep and a good breakfast or lunch are advised before giving.

Donors under the Hampshire County Insurance Program are protecting themselves and their immediate family's need for blood at any time during the following year.

The blood under the present program is available to the university community and is based on the success of each annual drive. This year's goal of 800 to 900 pints needs support. Blood donation means life for others and protection for the donor.

"I'm a Junkie"

The Fantastic Lodge: The autobiography of a girl drug addict, edited by Helen MacGill Hughes, is a true story taken from tape recording sessions in which Janet Clark told the details of her life to a social researcher.

"I'm a junkie," Janet says. "It's like belonging to some fantastic lodge, you know, but the initiation ceremony is a lot rougher." Indeed it is! In her early teens she becomes acquainted with liquor, has an affair that leads to pregnancy and the surrendering of her child, later becoming involved in a sub-world of marihauna smoking musicians, and a succession of affairs until she meets Bob Lockwood and falls in love.

Bob is a heroin addict and Janet soon gets the habit big.

Fantastic Lodge

Their life together oscillates between arrests, jail, the need for "junk," break-ups, family problems, attempted cures and finally separation. Left alone Janet turns to theft and prostitution to support her habit and eventually commits suicide.

The book is an acute review of the inverted values of the drug addicts and the cataclysmic life they lead. It makes some major points about the popular conception of the addict and deals at length with the thoroughly unpleasant circumstances Janet encounters while in jail.

If you wish to delve into the life of our modern day waif, and if you want to dig the cool world of the members of the fantastic lodge — read it. — Ben Sachmary.

Cookbook Cast With Scoreboard Scenes

By Mike Clark

It was obvious to those who suffered through the foreign film last Sunday night at the Student Union, that the title L'Aventura was a misnomer if there ever was one. A far more honest title should have been La Bordom. The only interesting, never mind adventurous, part of the offering appeared in the credits, when, after such Italian cook-book type names as Gluseppi Cassaroli, Casavano Pastavasuli and Josseppi Macaroni appeared the name of John Adams.

The characters looked so much alike that you couldn't tell one from another. Scorecards should have been issued. For instance, we thought only two people were on an island where some action, or rather inaction, took place, but there turned out to be about forty.

Most of the audience stayed till the end to find out what happened to Ana, a leading character. The females looked so much alike that we didn't even know that she was missing. Are we supposed to return next week to see House Under the Rocks to see if Ana might be there?

One hundred and ten of the world's film critics rated this the second best motion picture ever made. There are only two possible reasons it was chosen for the number two spot. The first is obvious—all the critics were Italians. The second—these critics have seen only two movies in their lives.

In conclusion, the only far-reaching bit of anything that was learned from this film was that if your steady girl disappears on you, go to bed with her best friend (if that best friend is a girl, of course).

Peg H. S. Drop-Outs in First Grade

by Frances Buckhoff

"We can predict four out of five high school drop-outs toward the end of first grade," declares Dr. Robert L. Byrne, co-director of the University Reading Clinic. "About 80-90% of high school drop-outs have reading problems initiated in the age period from four to six.

Dr. Byrne tipped back his office chair and enthusiastically explained the Clinic which he co-directs with Dr. Helen O'Leary, School of Ed. Primary purpose is to train graduate students to be reading specialists.

The Clinic is involved with testing students from kindergarten through college for physical and emotional problems. This year, the Clinic is working with 200 college students having a wide range of reading skills. From remedial help to working on advanced levels.

The program for grade school children lasts six weeks during the summer, 1½ hours a day, five days a week. The method of individual help is used by 40 teachers with 60 children. Before and after the program, teachers confer with the parents.

Dr. Byrne explained, "The total language experience a child has before school age is the most influential."

A further fact Dr. Byrne declares is the relation of reading to emotional disturbances. "This is a chicken and egg problem," he smiles. However, the case

SNEAK PREVIEW

"The Pajama Game"

By Harriet Brumfeld

Like color and action? Like a few laughs here and there?

"The Pajama Game," as previewed at Wednesday's dress rehearsal promises to supply color, action, laughs and much more in the way of good entertainment when the curtain rises tonight on the Operetta Guild's fall production.

The overture ended, the audience is informed by Hinesey (Dick Morrill), the time study man, that: "This is a very serious drama—about capital and labor." Think back to the overture. The songs didn't seem very serious. Chuckle number one.

The curtain rises. The stage is ablaze with bolts of cloth and beautiful girls. Hinesey introduces several of the principals —"Old Man" Hasler (Stephen Rosoff), the boss who represents "Capital with a capital C," and Prez (Ron Julius), president of the union, who advocates a strike if the employees don't get their 7½¢. Says Hinesey: "See how the ideas keep creeping through? That's to take the sting off the sexy parts." Chuckle again.

Sexy parts? Well, yes. There is another element to this show. "Love comes at last to Babe Williams (Donna Pratt) in the form of Sid Sirokin (Jim Duncan), "that new superintendent from Chicago."

Facilities Unlimited

WHERE ARE THEY? This is meant to mean particularly the infirmary. It is a long time since a new wing should have been started, and it won't be long until it will be a necessity to have it in operation.

It now takes approximately one hour of waiting to obtain ten minutes of service at the presently undersized, under-staffed facility, which is expected to provide complete medical services for 11,000 students and variously assorted other groups whose names appear on the outpatient sheet. This is one hour, whether the patient has a common cold, a broken arm, or a seriously bleeding cut.

With all the money being spent on and about this University, it is about time that someone on the all powerful planning board started to consider our health. This may be an institution of higher learning, but let's stick to the old order of HEALTH first, then education and welfare. Students out of classes due to illness do not learn.

This is not meant to reflect on the services offered at the infirmary, or the treatment given by the doctors once one is permitted to see one. It is a reflection of the inadequacy of the size of the Health Service which is so necessary on a college campus. It seems that with all the unlimited facilities provided in the other areas of the University someone should remember the Health Service.

Voice Of Student Body

To the Editor

The publication on Monday, November 9, contained an article by Richard Morril, '65, suggesting that "perhaps the Student Senate might profit from an investigation of the workings of the Collegian, which receives such a large percentage of our student tax." I would like to thank Mr. Morril for his suggestion and to explain the working relationship that exists between the Student Senate and the Collegian.

The Collegian receives $29,226.76 from the 1964-65 Student Activities Tax Fund (SATF) budget of $169,978.90, which is accumulated through taxing each undergraduate $20.00 per year. Understanding that the Student Senate controls and directs the spending of the students' money, realizing that the Collegian receives one-fourth of the total SATF budget, and recognizing that the Student Senate is the voice of the student body, the Student Senate and the Collegian have maintained and advanced the following philosophies:

1. That in a Free and Responsible Press, emphasis be equally placed on Freedom and Responsibility.

2. That to continue to be responsible, the Collegian must relentlessly seek to improve.

3. That in order to preserve the education that a student receives by being part of the Collegian staff, the student staff make all final decisions in regard to the publication, but yet be eager to accept in good grace all constructive advice from the faculty and the administration.

At the beginning of the semester, the Collegian asked the Student Senate to allow only two publications per week instead of the usual three during the first three weeks of school in order to train over fifty students interested in the school newspaper. The Senate recognized that a Collegian training program would improve the publication and, therefore, permission was granted.

Early in the year, Scott Freedland, Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian, came to the Senate asking for suggestions to improve the Collegian. Since then, I have been meeting weekly with the Collegian as well as with Index, Caesura, Ya-Hoo, and WMUA in an effort to improve these student groups.

Because student organizations like the Collegian, Student Senate, Student Union Governing Board, and many others, are sincerely devoted to the "will to improve," a broad education will continue to be received in extra-curricular participation.

Holders of the Gun

To the Editor:

Somewhere between the time when the University existed to serve the college community and now, there was a seesawing of power, abetted by each person giving up more and more of his responsibility and with it, responsibility's other face, his freedom.

The daily interplay between the campus police and parking offenders, however farcical to bicyclers and bystanders, serves a sad writ: who is master of the house?

The issue is fraught with illogic, and ultimate reason rests, as in all oligarchies, with the holders of the gun. Even in that sty of corruption called Boston, when the law was not equally enforced, a court order restrained the police from towing.

Who sits in the throne of justice for parking offenders? The police. Who makes the laws? the police. Who enforces the laws? The police. Who hires the police? The community.

The lamentable conclusions are these: the institution no longer serves us and reponsibility has been equated with self-protective anonymity. If the parking problem hardly seems to justify these correlaries, then look at an irritating and, unfortunately, enduring sty in mass eye the school's news architecture.

Grieving about injustice in Mississippi and Viet Nam, vending machines in Washington, conflict in Moscow and Peiping, is like a man wth lice, neglecting to clean himself, but complaining about vermin maggoting his neighbors.

"Discontented"

Yahoo Should Go

To the Editor:

I was appalled to discover that the most recently published Yahoo, the campus' humorous magazine, cost students at this University (approximately $1,218.00 ($4,856.00 annually). With over seven pages of advertising, three more pages devoted to Miss Testa, and the remainder spattered with inanities, the publication has thus presented for inspection the culmination of financial waste.

With a need for better quality within almost every aspect of University life it is most irritating to me, as a student, to be required to support financially such wasteful, worthless enterprises. The granting of operating funds should be closely examined; Yahoo should go!

And Yahoo is not the only 'offender' ... $5,620.00 is given to girls to entertain (Precisionettes), almost $40,000.00 for ruminating romantics (Index) and almost $6,000.00 for the University Handbook. To outrightly waste money on such items is nothing other than the exemplification of approved or condoned ignorance.

George Rollins

Quality Improved

To the Editor:

I am a senior at the University, and I have been reading the Collegian for over three years. In my opinion, the quality of the paper has improved 100 per cent in that time. Keep up the good work!

A JOB WELL DONE

This Saturday's football game with the University of New Hampshire will be the last home game for eighteen Redmen seniors. Over the last three years these men, under the capable guidance of Vic Fusia and his coaching staff, have compiled an outstanding 21-4-1 record.

This record includes the impressive win over Villanova, sophomore year; an undefeated season, junior year; and retention of the "Bean Pot," senior year with a 7-1 record to date. These men have done much and have worked hard to uphold the improving image of the University of Massachusetts—as much, I submit as any individual or group of individuals.

I would like to congratulate these seniors on a job well done and suggest to the entire student body that we give these men an appreciative ovation when they leave the field at the end of Saturday's game.

The Seniors are:

Dick Bourdelais 81	Dick Kehough 73
Bob Burke 70	Joe Morris 21
Roger Deminico 80	Clyde Meyerhoefer 78
Phil DeRose 22	Ken Palm 20
Joe Doyle 50	Pete Pietz 61
Art Driscoll 88	Mike Ross 31
Jim Fassell 86	Jack Schroeder 11
Don Hagberg 74	Charlie Scialdone 53
John Hudson 84	Jerry Whelchel 10

Roister Doisters Announce Plays, Name Director

Roister Doisters has announced its choice of three, one-act plays to be produced the first weekend of next semester.

The student dramatic organization will present Eugene Ionesco's The Bald Soprano, excerpts from Bertolt Brecht's Private Life of the Master Race, and Moliere's The Forced Marriage.

The plays will be directed by Mrs. George Forest, a new member of the speech department faculty. Mrs. Forest directed last year's "Evening of One-Act Plays" for Roister Doisters while working at Smith College.

RD President Tom Kerrigan has given details of the production plans. "Tryouts will be held Dec. 14, 15, and 16" he said, "time and place to be announced later." Scripts of the plays will be available at the RSO office on Dec. 7 for all interested students.

"We have already started our publicity campaign" he continued. "The catchword is IBM, the initials of the three playwrights, and we hope that from now until February IBM will mean 'An Evening of One - Act Plays' to UMass students."

The plays will be presented in Bowker Auditorium, February 5 and 6, at 8:15 p.m. The tickets, priced at $1.00, will go on sale after intersession.

"We're looking for students interested in staying on campus during intersession" said RD Secretary Christina Ryan. Anyone who wants to work on any aspect of the plays can get in touch with us through the RSO office."

Asked about the concept of the plays , she said, The Bald Soprano is an example of the modern Theatre of the Absurd. The Brecht play is a study of the Nazi rise to power and its effect on common people. The Forced Marriage is typical of Moliere, and almost slapstick comedy with some biting satire underneath."

Reading Clinic--

history approach is used to help in determining the source of the problem. Dr. Byrne cited this paradox. "In our opinion, parents helping their children with emotional disturbances often have a negative effect. They are likely to become emotionally involved and put a lot of pressure on the child."

Dr. Byrne has also become interested in adolescent social problems. He believes that reading difficulties are closely related to emotional difficultes, adolescents being particularly affected. Normal emotional and psychological traumns of this age group are enhanced by pressures of their peer group and teachers as well as parents if they are lacking in reading skills, he said.

Dr. Byrne declared: "You can imagine the kind of world an adolescent must be in if he can't read. It has been found that 90% of the juvenile delinquents have reading problems."

"Since the clinic began there have been numerous reading teachers hired in schools throughout the state and we can't keep ahead of the demand." Many universities have found this a vital field and have been expanding.

Dr. Byrne smiled and said: "We can't take all the credit."

Freshmen Booters Complete Season

The University of Massachusetts freshman soccer team followed the lead of its varsity counterparts by finishing strong with a three game win streak.

The club, under the direction of Coach Jack Leaman, finished with a 4-2 record and is almost certain to provide plenty of talent for the varsity next year.

The biggest win of the year was over Trinity as the little Redmen fought from a 2-1 deficit to a winning score of 5-2.

THE DEFENSE WAS OUTSTANDING all season, with such leading lights as halfbacks Phil Bozenhard, Dick Hale, Bill Allan, and Philip Scogland. The deep defense men were fullbacks Harry Gould, Frank Howard and Dave Jekanowski along with alternate goalies Mike Hamilton and Dan Greengold.

The offense was the best in the last five years, as they outscored opponents 25-11 for the season, and 17-5 during the win streak. Rich Rosoff led the scorers with 8 goals, while Gerry Cellilli added 6. Marty Smith had 6 assists for the year.

The rest of the forward wall that played well this year were Howie Ricklas (5 goals), Gary Gasperack (3 goals), and Joe Burke (1 goal). It might be noted that Gasperack was only on the team for the later half of the season but did a sound job for the little Redmen.

At the end of the season, Richard Hale was elected captain of the club by his teammates.

Kappa Sig Meets UNH Tonight After Rally

Kappa Sig Campus Champs; IFC Takes All-Star Game

By Howie Davis

Kappa Sig completed an undefeated season by winning the campus championship of intramural football team they defeated the Chadbourne Maroons 32-7.

The story behind the victory was depth. KS fielded an offensive unit and a defensive unit while the Maroons were forced to have one team going both ways. The rest that the offensive boys from KS were given by the defense started to show during the second half.

THE FIRST HALF ended with the score 13-7 and the expected slaughter seemed to be squelched. But the well rested Kappa Sig's came on the field for the second half and completely outplayed the Maroons.

All of the KS TD's were the results of Crane's accurate arm as he unloaded for 5 TD passes. He completed 22 out of 35 passes.

His favorite target all season, Jim Neary, was the receiving leader as he hauled in 9 passes. The big scorer for KS was John Harrington with 18 points.

The Chadbourne Maroons were under the capable field leadership of Jim Ritchie who completed 16 of 28 and threw for the lone Maroon's TD. Dick Haavisto was on the receiving end of the TD pass.

Aside from depth, one other factor to be considered was the excellent protection supplied for Crane. It was a difficult manouver for the Maroons to get in on Crane and make him hurry his passes.

THE ALL-STAR GAME, played under wet weather conditions, saw Crane completing 9 of 17 and throwing 3 TD passes as he led the fraternities to a 39-20 victory.

Equally impressive was the frats reserve quarterback Dick Allen who completed 8 of 14 passes and one TD. Ritchie, firing for the dorms, completed 11 of 20 for 2 TD's.

THE LEADING SCORER for the frats was Ira Yavner who went across for twelve.

Some outstanding plays saw Pete Bernard of TKE intercepting a pass and returning it 50 yards for a TD. This made the score 13-0. The pass was on the flat variety and once he caught it he just outran everybody.

The dorms shared in the spectacular plays category when P. Garvillen caught a pass from Ritchie, laterralled to Bill Wilkinson, who carried it in for a TD.,

Vie for Bowl Bid

Redmen Host UNH In Finale

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts football team will windup a 48 year history of play this Saturday when they face University of New Hampshire in the final regular game of the season.

Over the years, the Redmen have a 95-73-7 record and are currently riding a seven game winning streak at home. The first team to defeat the Redmen at Alumni was UNH. Mass will be certain that UNH is not the team to close out the long years with a win. However, UNH will be the last visiting team to win here because they did it in 1962. So either way, they cannot loose the distinction.

This year, UNH is definitely on the down side. They have only 11 lettermen are on the squad led by Pete Ballo and Dave Federowicz. Since Chief Boston has had to go heavily with sophomores, he has been struggling, and in fact dropped the first five games. Since the sophs have come through, the team has rebounded to hold UConn to a scoreless tie, and defeat Springfield, 16-14. As Boston puts its, "We know the UMass material, but we are not afraid of them."

Meanwhile, Coach Vic Fusia of the Redmen has been struggling to keep the talk of a bowl bid at a minimum while the club prepares for the game. No formal invitation can be extended until after the completion of the season. In addition, 15 other teams have said that they would accept a bid to the Tangerine Bowl if offered.

For his performance against the Crusaders, Milt Morin was selected for the weekly ECAC team. Morin pulled in two passes on a pair of circus catches for a 53 yard total, and in addition turned in a sterling defensive game as he and the Redmen combined to hold star HC runner Jack Lentz to 29 yards.

JERRY WHELCHEL, however, has moved to the head of the scoring list for New England with 56 points. He has a six point margin over Chuck Mercein of Yale and Jim Leitz. On the school record lists, Whelchel holds holds ten records, and ranks second in nine more categories. John MacCormick or Noel Reebenacker may have been better passers, but this campus has never seen a player who can do as many things as well as Whelchel.

Whelchel continues to add to his total offense record as he is having his best season. He passed the old mark 300 yards ago. His passing and rushing statistics lead the Redmen.

Below Jerry, Mike Ross, Ken Palm and Bob Ellis are continuously shifting positions for the runnerup slot. Ellis moved into third behind Ross but all three are so close it is uncertain who will finish where. Bob Meers added four receptions against the Cross to earn a team high of 24, 12 more than Morin.

Along with Whelchel, Ross, Palm, the following will be closing out their careers Saturday: ends John Hudson, Roger DiMinico, Dick Bourdelais, Art Driscoll, and Jim Fassell; tackles Bob Burke, Dick Kehoe, Don

Harriers Take Fifth In N. E. Competition

by RUSELL MURPHY

UMass put up a very good showing this Monday at Franklin Park in Boston by coming in fifth out of a field of twenty schools in the 52nd Annual NEICAA cross-country meet.

To turn in such a commendable performance UMass had to overcome such New England cross-country powerhouses as Brown, MIT, and Holy Cross. The harriers also beat out Maine and Springfield, teams to which they had dropped dual meets earlier in the season.

Running first once more for the Redmen was the strong sophomore harrier, Terry Carpenter. Tery finished tenth in a time of 21:13 on the 4.2 mile course, less than a minute behind PC's Barry Brown, the first place finished who paced his team to an easy victory.

TERRY WAS FOLLOWED by senior co-captains Bob Ramsay and Tom Panke. Both boys ran well and Tom ran one of his best races of the season in this vital meet. Sophomores Steve St. Clair and John Andersen, who has been turning in amazing performances as of late, ran fourth and fifth for the Redmen, and junior Bob Larson ran sixth.

One sour note in the meet was New Hampshire's running an excitingly close sixth, being only one point behind UMass in the final tally. This Saturday at 2:00 in Amherst the Redmen will meet UNH for the final dual meet of the season, and the closeness of Monday's results speaks of an interesting race tomorrow.

MONDAY Coach Footrick will take his boys to New York City for what will most likely be the final meet of this fall's Redmen cross country, the IC4A's. He will definitely be taking a stronger, more closely knit, and more winning team than anyone had expected at the beginning of the year. It speaks well both of Bill Footrick's coaching abilities and the caliber of the UMass trackman.

Donations Urged For Campus Blood Drive

The Campus Religious Council sponsors a blood drive in conjunction with the Red Cross each year in the middle of November. A contribution to this drive guarantees blood to the donor and his family if the need arises.

This annual Campus Blood Drive begins tomorrow and continues through to Thursday, Nov. 19. Students over 21 may walk right in to the collection center to be set up in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union on these days to give the blood which will protect them, their families and contributing fellow students if the need should arise.

Students with appointments for the general drive may inquire at the information desk which will be in operation in the lobby of the Student Union on the days of the drive.

Last March William Barry '65 had sudden surgery at Cooley Dickinson hospital in Northampton. He needed much blood. Fortunately because blood banks exist, he was able to receive blood. He never knew that he might need blood during his junior year in college.

Pre-Law Coffee Hour

Assoc. To Be Reorganized

By Paul Rodman, Advertising Manager

The Pre-Law Association of the University will hold a coffee hour this week to discuss organization and program for the coming year.

A growing group of legal aspirants, the Association began this year's program with visits from officials of Harvard and Boston University's law schools.

Dr. Richard Hartzler of the School of Business Administration at the University is the Association's advisor and has addressed the club on preparation for law school. He is now in the process of establishing the Association's library of law school catalogues and information.

In addition to presenting speakers and bringing law school officials to the campus to meet prospective students, the Pre-Law Association is establishing a Faculty Council to advise students on law school admissions and to provide counseling and assistance to the students.

This Thursday's coffee hour will be held in the Berkshire and Bristol Rooms of the Student Union at 7:00 p.m. The Association's president, Don Boyd, will present an outline of the program for the coming year and preside at the nomination of officers.

All University students, regardless of their major course of study, are invited to attend.

After the brief business meeting, coffee will be served and Dr. Hartzler will lead a discussion on pre-legal education.

Officers To Be Selected For SWAP

The selection of S.W.A.P. executive committee will be held on Thursday, Nov. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers A.

Positions are open for a secretary, treasurer and chairmen of men's and women's residence halls, fraternities, sororities and major activities.

S.W.A.P. executive committee plans and organizes the weekend, selects a place for the gathering, obtains main speakers and makes sure a well-rounded representation of faculty and students attend.

This year's S.W.A.P. conference was held at the Oak 'n Spruce Resort Area in Lee.

The purpose of S.W.A.P. is to foster better reations between faculty, administration and students, plus attempting to solve campus problems.

Although many people look for tangible evidences of success from the conference, most of it does not show for a long period of time. Yet, those who have attended the conferences in the past have considered them very worthwhile and beneficial.

All students interested in trying out for the S.W.A.P. executice board are requested to attend the above meeting.

Max Morath

Ragtime To Return Tomorrow

"It is superb, it is brilliant, it is heartstopping. And it's fun!" raves the New York Post about Max Morath's presentation of Ragtime Revisited.

The "celebrated Maestro" and his Original Rag Quartet will appear in a scintillating program of ragtime selections tomorrow in the Student Union ballroom at 7 p.m.

The men who swing out such infectious rags as "Easy Winners," "Euphonic Sounds," "The Bunny Hug" and "The Kangaroo Hop" are Jim Tyler, Felix Pappalardi, Barry Kornfeld and Max Morath.

A man with Van Dyke beard plucks the tenor banjo. He is Jim Tyler, who has had experience playing many stringed instruments including the lute and has performed in Greenwich Village coffee houses.

Felix Pappalardi is in control of the base instrument, the guitarron, a huge Mexican guitar. He is also a cornetist, percussionist, conductor of the New York Baroque Brass Ensemble and music director of rhythm and blues groups.

Barry Kornfeld's interest in classic rags was increased through his work with jug bands. For two years he accompanied the Reverend Gary Davis, a blind gospel and blues singer. With the quartet he plays banjo, guitar and harmonica.

Morath, who has worked in radio and television, is now devoting all of his time to the ragtime era.

Ragtime revisited will feature Max Morath tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom. Admission 50 cents.

The "syncopated syncopation", of the era 1890-1910 is a reflection of some of the happiest and most optimistic years of our nation's history. On Tuesday night, with such selections as "Who Paid the Rent for Mrs. Rip Van Winkle When Rip Van Winkle Went Away?" and "Where Did Robinson Crusoe Go with Friday on Saturday Night?", Max Morath and his Original Rag Quartet will burst forth with the happiness and exurberance of the Ragtime era.

Seniors Get New Advisor

Robert Fitzpatrick, Associate Professor of Agricultural Economics at the University for the past 18 years, recently became one of the advisors to the class of 1965. Both the senior class and Fitzpatrick are enthusiastic about the new position.

Said Fitzpatrick, "I couldn't refuse Bob when he asked me." "Bob" refers to class president Bob O'Leary.

Fitzpatrick indeed is anxious to offer his services to the students. As treasurer of the Alumnae association, his experience will be invaluable to the seniors in planning the future action of their class.

Fitzpatrick is familiar with the smooth operation of any organization, for as a '43 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, where he received a B.S. in Agricultural Economics, he was president of his class and editor of the Collegian Quarterly, forerunner of the Caesura.

He was commissioned at Midshipman's School and received advanced training at Annapolis, seeing action as a signal officer during the battle for Okinawa.

After doing graduate work at Brown University, Fitzpatrick received his Master's in Agricultural Economics from the University of Massachusetts. In 1955 he did further graduate work at Purdue, and returned to UMass to assume full-time teaching duties.

After the smashing victory of UMass over UNH last Saturday, the audience cried "We want the goal posts."

The exuberant crowd stormed the goal posts, as the police made an effort to guard the post.

Pres. Lederle called to the announcer, saying, "Let them come down, we are tearing up the field anyway to make room for our new Administration Building."

The students removed the goal posts in short order.

Pajama Game

"Rollicking Good Fun"

By Tom Kerrigan

This weekend the University's Operetta Guild opened its eighteenth season with a production of the George Abbott - Richard Bissell musical comedy The Pajama Game.

The play, based on Bissell's novel Seven-and-a-Half-Cents, is rollicking good fun. The transition from novel to stage is delightful. Abbott's magic touch coupled with the Bissell invention makes for an evening of lively, hilarious dialogue.

Richard Adler and Jerry Ross collaborate on music and lyrics. Since The Pajama Game made its Broadway debut some ten years ago, many of the Adler-Ross musical creations have become "standards" — notably, "Hey There," "Hernando's Hideaway" and "Steam Heat."

The play is unabashedly frank in its humor. Indeed, the authors spoof themselves and the production by having characters address the audience with the following freshness: "This is a very serious drama. It's kind of a problem play. It's about Capital and Labor. I wouldn't bother to make such a point of all this except later on if you happen to see a lot of naked women being chased through the woods, I don't want you to get the wrong impression. This play is full of SYMBOLISM." It is this approach which saves the time worn boy-meets-girl plot from becoming tiresome.

Occasionally something is said beyond the comic banter—something of a more serious nature. A case in point is the song sung by Hines, the "Time Study Man" of the Sleep Tite Pajama Factory in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Hines makes the statement "...I live my life by the clock!" Although this is one of the most delightful of the many production numbers and was by no means played for "social implications," the Abbott satire scores.

To be sure the American concern for "counting seconds" is a very real one. "Think of the Time I Save" is a brilliant spoof of that concern.

If the freshness of the Abbott-Bissell collaboration enlivens the dialogue, no less can be said for the Adler - Ross score. Musical Director Paul R. Bartsch brought dignity and professionalism to a difficult, certainly demanding, musical work. Whether conducting or accompanying, Bartsch was always in control. The orchestra was much larger than in past Guild productions and performed well. Notable additions were to be found in the string and brass sections.

Director Wayne Lamb has staged a colorful, successful production. His rapport with his actors and dancers evidenced itself time and again.

The Guild's production is in large measure a happy success, but there are disturbing inconsistancies. From time to time when one can leave Bartsch's music and Lamb's colorful pictures, one becomes aware of the scenery. Better if you concentrate on the music and pictures. Whether through faulty design or faulty execution, Mongue's settings add literally nothing to an otherwise good show. For the most part one usually expects smooth technical transformations from one scene to another—not so in the case of The Pajama Game.

The first act was unbearably long, largely because of the time wasted between set changes. To be sure, this was an amateur, albeit, a student production. This is no excuse for some of the carelessness that was evident and that is the word—carelessness. Most of these technicalities will not bother the average theatergoer, for indeed they are technicalities. However, for the discerning critic who has more than just a token understanding of what is going on in the theatre, the Guild's production is sometimes disconcerting.

With these few reservations I enjoyed the production completely. There were touches of brilliance not always seen on college stages. The esprit de corps of all involved was highly evident.

Playboy Bunnies Picketed

(CPS) — Seventeen students from Xavier University marched silently in front of the city's new Playboy Club for two hours, carrying signs with such slogans as "Hide From Reality Here" and "Do You Want Your Daughter to Be a Playmate?"

The leader of the group, Thomas Conway, a sophomore from Cleveland, said the demonstrators objected to the presence of the key club because of its connection with Playboy magazine, which he described as "pornographic trash."

"In picketing the Playboy Club," said one student, "we as university students wish to point out that the entire Playboy philosophy not only opposes the basic Judeo-Christian principles of our society but openly advocates their overthrow. We decry Hugh Hefner's 'new morality.' It is nothing but plain old immorality."

Arnold Morton, vice-president of Playboy Club International, told reporters that, "The presence of the pickets was embarrassing to some of our guests. We are not immoral."

He said, "The leader (Conway) has never been inside a Playboy Club. He reflects an uninformed attitude of emotional blindness. He is doing what he has been told to by adults."

Air Pledges Initiated At Worcester

Twenty - three pledges of Angel Flight and three pledges of the Arnold Air Society were initiated into their respective organizations at a ceremony held at Westover Air Force Base last Friday. At this banquet, the pledges were congratulated on passing the rigorous period of preparation and training they had undergone for the past past month to join Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight. These new members represent the best of many that had applied for positions in these two organizations.

Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight both have the purpose of promoting the tradition and concepts of the United States Air Force. Angel Flight is composed

"Mr. Thomson....please!"

Please tell me how you manage to make me look so great on campus.
The only thing I can't pass now is a crowd of boys. Those vertical stretch pants follow the sleek line of most resistance.
And guarantee the least resistance on campus. Then, total recovery (only the pants, Mr. Thomson, not the boys).
The reflex action of your proportioned stretch pants is second only to the reflex action of that Psych major I've had my eye on.
And the fit! Mr. Thomson, please, how did you get them to fit so well?
I adore you, Mr. Thomson!

Going over final plans for the Fall Review are (from l. to r.) Cadet Majors Paul Ferenz, Wing Materials Officer; Wayne Wooley, Wing Information Officer; Thomas Cleland, Wing Deputy Commander; Cadet Colonel Keith C. Ross, Wing Commander; Cadet 1st Lieutenant Paul DiTullio, Wing Executive Officer; and Cadet Majors Gordon Breault, Wing Inspector; and Paul Goldberg, Securities and Law Enforcement Officer.

AFROTC REVIEW TUESDAY

THE AIR FORCE ROTC CADET Wing at UMass will participate in the reinstituted Fall Review 11:15 a.m. Tuesday on the lower lacrosse field.

The colorful ceremony, open to the public, will include an exhibition by the Flying Redmen, the University's championship AFROTC drill team. An "exchange of flags" ceremony will also take place between the 370th Cadet Wing and the 961st Airborne Early Warning and Control Squadron (the Cadet Wing's sponsor) of Otis AFB, Falmouth. Included in the ceremony will be the designation of three of the Wing's sixteen flights as Honor Flights, denoting overall top proficiency in basic drill, military procedure and courtesy.

The reviewing officer will be Lt. Col. Wm. Mitchell, commander of the Otis AFB squadron. Lt. Col. Mitchell will be joined by Mr. Robert S. Hopkins, Jr., Dean of Men, and Lt Col. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., Professor of Air Science, Dr. John W. Lederle, President of the University, has also been invited.

Music for the review will be by the 8th Air Force Band from Westover AFB, Chicopee. During the ceremony Air National Guard fighters from Barnes Airport, Westfield, will fly over the field at pre-arranged time sequence.

(ITHACA) — THE FUTURE FOR FULL ATTENDANCE at Ithaca College lectures may soon be non-existent.

Beginning in Sept. 1965, all lectures to 30 or more students will be recorded on tape and filed at the college's Electronics Communication Center.

A student wishing to hear the lecture will dial the tape's code number on a telephone linking his dorm room with the center and listen to it with headphones.

(CONNECTICUT) — WELCOME TO THE RANKS DEPT.: Trinity College has become the first dry men's school in New England.

Liquor has been banned for all undergraduates on campus, fraternities, and at all social functions.

(BRYN MAWR)—A recent authorization allowing visiting hours for male guests in private rooms is apparently working out successfully in every dormitory.

Hall presidents report no complaints, no problems other than minor ones, and only express surprise that the number of guests so far has been less than anticipated.

(CHICAGO)—It seems as though the Health Service at Roosevelt University has its problems. Last week it was found that the office was closed "because of illness." Sources tell us that the attendants of the Health Service have caught the flu —from flue vaccine which they have been administering.

(IOWA)—An Iowa State history professor, obviously not a native Iowlan, was heard to remark cynically to his class, "And as to the theory that rich topsoil is a key for the development of an advanced civilization—well my friends, take for example Iowa . . ." How many similar mistakes are found in UMieland?

The Iowa State campus has 15 miles of sidewalks or a distance equal to from Ames to Boone. UMass has at least 15 miles of dirt sidewalks (mud when it rains).

Should You Falter Before The Altar?

A boy of 18 or 19 has no business picking a wife for a man of 26.

Amid a plethora of scholarly advice and solemn warnings, this strikes us as one of most cogent reasons for avoiding teenage marriage.

Behind the advice lie several facts of life largely ignored by youngsters who gally trip to the altar before they may legally enter a voting booth. Among them are the following.

1. A man does not grow up all in one piece. Character usually develops last, far behind sexual maturity. Most men do not really understand themselves, much less what life is all about, until they are somewhere between 26 and 28. A teen-ager picking a wife thus uses vastly different criteria than he might employ a few years later.

2. Most girls mature four or five years ahead of men. A girl of 19 will probably become a woman at 22 or 23. But the man she marries may still be immature at that age. The qualities that appealed to her in the boy she married are certain to be far less attractive a few years later.

3. Teen-age marriages are less able than most to withstand economic stress. Rare is the teenage couple tha can live comfortably without relying on parents for financial help. Such reliance reduces marriage to "playing house at someone else's expense."

4. During the insecure teens, most boys tend to choose girls who don't pose too much competition in the way of brains. This can make for an unbearably empty life later on.

"Slums" On Campus

A few weeks ago the Senate Services Committee asked the administration if it would be possible to tear down the old math building because it is an eyesore in its location near the entrance to the campus. The answer given was that the building now used for storage of pillows will be used for classes next year. By this pictorial we intend to show the need for paint, landscaping and general cleaning up around our campus. We will point out that it was not necessary to go out of our way to find these buildings, most of them being in plain view of campus roads.

Battle Cry

In view of recent criticism, the editorial staff met with Mr. Alvin Oickle, tutor in journalism, to discuss improvement of the editorial page.

We have decided that the following suggestions are worthy of consideration:

1. Acquire an editorial cartoonist.
2. Run more columns.
3. Introduce a controversial issue every month.
4. Invite the faculty to express their opinions on issues and events.

However, there are obstacles which we, as an editorial staff, are not able to surmount alone. The Collegian is a "student newspaper" and cannot exist without student support. In interviewing student and faculty members, we are habitually confronted with:

"I don't have time," "I don't have an opinion," or "I think this . . . but don't print it." We cannot publish an interesting and well written page with the amount of cooperation we have been getting.

There is more involved than just writing editorials. Letters and editorials must be copy read; they often must be typed(It has recently been decided that no letters will be printed unless they are typed and signed.) ; the page must be set; every thing must be titled; and all articles must be proofed. Two or three students, carrying a full academic load, cannot do this alone.

Controversy on the editorial page is an indication of an alert student body, one willing to explore the different aspects of a particular issue. On the other hand, complacency on the editorial page points towards a passive student body, one not having enough initiative to take a stand. Surely our campus isn't a Shangri-la that students can't find any need for criticism and improvement. Conversely, our university is not that lacking in talent and activity that students can't submit congratulatory letters on campus organizations and activities.

The Collegian belongs to the students. It is their forum for information, controversy and debate. How well the Collegian fulfills its function is a responsibility of all students, and not just the editors elected to carry out the executive functions.

The Collegian can embark on one of two paths—one leading towards responsible and controversial journalism—the other towards tame and trite chatter. Which one of these paths the Collegian takes rests in the hands of the students.

Theft On Rise

It seems that this wonderful campus of ours is undergoing a rapid moral change today. As on other campuses across the country, the first angry reaction is to the so-called sexual revolution, and the loosening of Victorian codes. However, there is another phase of our moral change that no-one has ventured to mention: the appalling rise of theft on campus.

Every day, somewhere on University grounds, personal as well as state property is being pilfered. This is evidenced by the number of jackets stolen from the new South Commons, the ne wirons stolen from the dorm complex, and the daily reports of more petty larceny. I think we should stop screaming perversion and start tracking down these little, good-for-nothings who think nothing of "borrowing" someone else's personal things.

From the snitching of detergent powders in the laundries to the outright swiping of valuable U. M. jackets in the commons and outside auditoriums, it is obvious that the petty thief can have a field day without the slightest qualm about retribution. If these persons have no moral codes to keep them from their light-fingered activities, then it .s time that a few of them were apprehended, and as the campus jargon goes, "SHAFTED."

In all probability, these thieves don't really NEED what they steal, and could probably buy their booty with ease. However, just because you go to college doesn't mean that you can withstand the loss of an eighteen-dollar jacket to one of these persons. The toll is already too high, and its about time for the administration to take steps to stamp out such vermin.

YAHOO

The other day, a letter was printed in the Collegian by George Rollins stating that he was appalled by certain facts concerning the Yahoo. Members of the Yahoo were appalled by this letter. The fiscal facts were completely non-existent, and one is appalled at Mr. Rollin's for writing a letter about a subject of which he knows nothing.

First of all, Mr. Rollins stated that the past issue cost $1,218. The magazine cost a flat $1,000, the charge of the printer. Next, Mr. Rollins stated that there were ads on seven pages, but were over seven pages of ads. If he had observed closely, there only three pages total of ads, not including national advertising. Thees ads are the key to cutting down the cost of the magazine. They represent a total of approximately $200, excluding national advertisers. This gave us our covers free plus an extra $50. The actual cost of the magazine to the students becomes $750. 7,500 magazines are printed about an 85% distribution) making the total cost per student 10¢.

If the other charges of Mr. Rollins against Index, and Handbook are as unfounded as those against Yahoo, they must also be worth ten cents.

Defective Piano

To the Editor:

The piano provided last Monday evening for the concert given by Leonard Rose and his excellent accompanist, Samuel Sanders, suffered from a defective soft pedal mechanism. When Mr. Sanders depressed the soft pedal the upper register of the piano was greatly distorted, sounding something like a cross between a celesta and a second-rate guitar. It is most unfortunate that concert artists as fine as Mr. Rose are compelled to cope with a poor instrument.

Certainly, having shown the good judgment to bring an artist like Mr. Rose to the campus, the Concert Association should have shown similar good sense by procuring a respectable piano.

STUDENT I.Q.

To the Editor:

We recently read the bulletin board outside the Hatch where our compatriots are hopefully advertising their wares. They also advertise other things, to judge from the items below:

You can buy a tire for $10 which has a "guarantee."

Or how about a car with "vinle" upholstery?

Perhaps—but we doubt it—somebody will offer some speling books for sale on one of them 3x5 cards. They shud cell like hotcaks.

A Critical Review

"None Dare Call It Treason"

(CPS) There is a book being distributed free, nationwide, by some Republican organizations, and even some university professors. Here, it is also being distributed by the New Mexico Conservative Voters, a recently formed "independent" group.

The book is titled "None Dare Call It Treason." Taken as a whole, or by its individual parts, it is a lie.

Perhaps, buried among the distortions, perverted quotations, and falsehoods, author John A. Stormer has a legitimate point or two. It would take months of research to find such, and a point by point refutation of the entire book would be many times as long as the book itself.

Stormer's central thesis is that the United States is the victim of a communist (nee socialist) conspiracy; if his writings are to be believed, this conspiracy involves practically the entire population of the country.

Stormer has been indefatigable in pursuit of evidence of this conspiracy: 818 references are offered in the 14 chapters of "Treason." A partial list of his sources includes Readers' Digest, Life Time, Coronet, Sports Afield, and many extreme rightwing publications.

Miscellaneous authorities include Who's Who, the UN Charter, Sayings of Confucius, the US Constitution, Patrick Henry's famous speech, and something put out by American Legion Post 140, Atlanta, Ga.

But that is just a beginning. His main sources of information are the daily papers (102 references), the extreme rightest newsletter, Human Events (41), and the Congressional Record (82). Stormer finds evidence in 119 references to hearings and proceedings of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. The latter are chiefly from the days of Senator Joe McCarthy; frequently citations from either source turn out to be unsupported testimony rather than formal findings of the committees.

Since it is patently impossible to refute every 'phoney' in "Treason" only a few random examples are given here. If some should consider this unfair, this reviewer can only challenge them to check in detail as many as they like of their own choice.

A good example is on page 168 of "Treason:" Stormer states that "despite exposure of the Communist control of the CIO (labor union) by Congressional investigations in 1938-39, the Communists remained in open control for at least seven more years." The citation for this is the Congressional Record, Sept. 22, 1950, p.A-6831.

Upon checking, this turns out to be a long, rambling effort by Martin Dies, accusing practically the entire U.S. of aiding the Communists. At no place in the 9000-word article did Dies use the words, or even the idea, that Stormer has presented. The reference is phoney.

Another one is Stormer's indictment of the Protestant clergy, in particular the scholars who worked on the Revised Standard edition of the Bible issued a few years ago. He claims (page 128), that 30 of the 95 experts on this project had 'records of support for communist causes, and cites the Congressional Record, March 3, 1960, p. 3981 for authority.

March 3 is not on page 3981, so both the date and pages were checked separately. The Senate for that period was completely tied up in civil rights debates, with nothing else on the record. The House record for that immediate period consists of little more than negligible miscellany, including a presentation titled "Kansas Wheat Makes the Best Pancakes in the World." The citation is phoney.

In the course of the 236 pages, Stormer manages to attack every facet of our society in the most damning terms. All the usual objects of right wing scorn are berated—our entire educational system, churches, the press, radio, and television establishments, the whole structure of modern sociology, psychology, and psychiatry, organized labor, tax exempt foundations, modern economic and government concepts—all these are in active part of a great international conspiracy.

Some things are known. The author is chairman of the Missouri Federation of Young Republicans, a member of the Republican State Committee of Missouri, and a member of the John Birch Society.

We know that his "Treason" has been disowned and denounced by one Charles Blackmer, president of the Jackson County (Kansas City) Republican Club, with the words, "This book is full of defamatory statements, quotations out of context, erroneous interpretations, and flagrantly erroneous statements."

'Nominal Fee' Phobia

(ACP)—One of Colorado State University's Sweet Young Things arrived in the Collegian office to display her serious concern over being charged a nominal fee (10¢) to be readmitted to her dorm room. As she told the story: She was brushing her teeth, the wind blew her door shut and she was left in the cold —sans key or dime.

One can envision all manner of bizarre situations. A poor girl could spend endless years in her hall because she only carried nine cents with her when she went to the bathroom.

The Dorm Mother said the fine was to teach the Sweet Young Things to remember their keys —and besides, the money is to be used to buy decorations (and stuff) for the dorm.

The Collegian heartily agrees with this philosophy, and suggests that it could be carried even further. Perhaps a fine of 25¢ could be instituted for those who forget the date, 75¢ for those who need a light and a $1.50 fine for those who can't remember what Inter-Hall Council is for.

We could even start charging the girls 10¢ to get into the bathroom.

The man in the Housing Office says he doesn't know anything about it—but we didn't have to tell you that, that's just general policy.

It used to be, in the old days, that the dorms were given money by Inter-Hall Council to buy decorations. What with the Council's decision to pay themselves salaries for their efforts this year, the fines must be a necessity.

Applications Open

Study Abroad 1965-66

The Institute of European Studies has announced the opening of application periods for undergraduate foreign study in Paris, Madrid, Vienna and Freiburg, West Germany.

All four Institute centers will offer both spring-semester, 1965 and full-year, 1965-66 programs for students in history, political science, modern languages and literatures, philosophy, and other liberal arts and social science fields. The programs are designed for college juniors, but some sophomores are admitted in Paris and Vienna.

Formal applications are due Dec. 7 for next spring's programs and May 10, 1965, for full-year programs starting next fall. Sailings are set for Feb. 1 and late August or mid-Sept. All programs end in late June or July.

An Institute spokesman said the programs aim at "immersing the student as deeply as his background permits" in a European university. Total immersion is rarely practical, he said, because European university courses are so highly specialized that U.S. undergraduates can usually profit from foreign university courses only in their major or minor fields.

"On the other hand," he said, "we don't want to place the student in a 'ghetto' where he is exposed only to American-style courses taught by American professors, and must live and study only with other Americans. Whether you look at it academically or culturally, the European experience should be both and excellent and different.

"Our aim is to maximize the student's confrontation with Europe and European education, within the practical limits set by U.S. college requirements."

For its Vienna programs, the Institute has introduced a new requirement of at least a semester of college German or a year of German in high school. These programs also require a C-plus college grade average.

All the other centers require a B average and one or two years of the appropriate language. Applications must also have the approval of their U.S. colleges and universities.

Students in all the centers live in private European homes or in European student dormitories. Before regular classes begin, they are given from four to seven weeks of intensive language training.

Descriptive literature is obtainable from the Institute of European Studies, 35 E. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois, 60601 Contact: Byron Rouse.

RAGTIME REVISITED

TEP Institutes DVP

"Not only the University, but the town of Amherst, would benefit by the establishment of a medical school here." This statement was part of an informal address to the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity by Allan Torrey, town manager of Amherst.

Torrey, who visited TEP last Tuesday, was the second guest speaker in TEP's new Distinguished Visitors Program, a program designed to acquaint the brothers with some of the prominent figures from the University and the surrounding area.

In his discussion, Torrey mentioned several of the problems which have led to hostilities between University students and Amherst townspeople. Among these problems is the fact that the growing University represents a large piece of untaxable property that still requires some public services from the town. Another source of hostility is the fact that UMass students (unlike those at Amherst College) are often fairly close to home and are thus more likely to patronize stores in their own communities rather than those in Amherst.

The first visitor in the program was Dr. Janowitz of the University Health Department, who spoke on the subject of mental health. The pattern of the speeches has been that of an informal chat with questions and answers, rather than of a speaker lecturing to an audience.

In attendance at this banquet were Capt. Richard B. Close and his wife, Capt. Close, Advisor to Arnold Air Society and to Angel Flight, introduced the guest speaker, Lt. Col. Tindall, USAF chaplain.

Lt. Col. Tindall spoke of "The necessity of today's future leaders of America to be prepared for the problems of life and always put a maximum effort into achieving their goals; once a goal has been reached always set a higher goal in life and strive to achieve it."

Following the guest speaker, the Commander of Arnold Air, Paul Krzynowek, and the Commander of Angel Flight, Miss Nancy Fuller, officiated at presenting the new members with their cords and rank membership to the respective organizations.

Federal Grants For Guidance

The Federal government will make available to Massachusetts $520,709 for guidance, counseling and testing in connection with improvements in elementary and high school education.

States must match such grants dollar for dollar.

The amount available is part of the overall program appropriation of $76.6 million, announced by the office of education of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Prof. Wexler's Slide Program

Images of Spain, Past and Present

By Steve Gordon

A capacity crowd filled the School of Education auditorium last Thursday night for Professor Sidney F. Wexler's slide commentary entitled Images of Spain, Past and Present.

In showing the state of Spain today, both the traditional and the modern, Dr. Wexler emphasized the uniqueness of Spain. "She has a mystique that resists the investigator," he commented.

Professor Wexler began his sight and sound tour of Spain with British Gibraltar. He then went onto Barcelona, Saville and, finally, Madrid. The landscapes, buildings and Spanish people were made vivid by Professor Wexler's delightful descriptions of his experiences in the country.

The viewing included shots of Arabic architecture, the streetmade doughnuts of Seville and a beautiful portrayal of Holy Week. Dr. Wexler was able to show aspects of the various religions and cultures which have influenced Spain throughout the ages.

Noticeable in the presentation was Professor Wexler's sincere delight with everything Spanish, except, regretfully, its political situation. Any criticism he had of Spain he described as "more of a lamentation, a sorrowing."

Within the limited scope of his purpose, Professor Wexler successfully conveyed to his audience the images of Spain today, and the reasons that they are today's images of Spain.

Hoopsters Scrimmage In Pre-Season Trial

The University of Massachusetts hoopsters opened up their informal basketball schedule as they met Albany State in a scrimmage Friday night. The team was a little cold on the shooting, a rather common problem at this stage of the season, but warmed up quite well as the action progressed.

The schools played five halves with the Redmen regulars getting the edge over the Staters. Overall, the scrimmage was very close, with the scores at the ends of the first three periods being UM 27-26, Albany 60-50, and UMass on top again 99-98. After that the Redmen outplayed the visitors by a wide margin.

The outstanding factor was the speed exhibited by the Redmen. The departure of Pete Bernard might not be quite as hard to take after seeing the performance of Clarence Hill.

THE STARTING UNIT for the contest was Clarence Hill, Tim Edwards, Jim Painten, and co-capts. Charlie Kingston and Charlie O'Rourke. Keeping with the tradition he started a year ago, Painten tossed in the first hoop.

O'Rourke, Edwards, and Paul Gullicksen were particularly impressive under the boards. O'Rourke has a good shot at the school rebound record this year.

THE SOPHOMORES that stood out were Mike Meola and Jim Babyak. The former is a real fine shot, while the latter is the scrappy type of ball player that stands out in a contest.

UMass will go at it against Fairfield Friday night at seven. The Stags are a veteran club, almost the same one that extended the Redmen to a double overtime victory in the championship game of the Staten Island Tourney. The Stags recently were given major college status and will, in the next three years or so, probably be in the top spots of New England hoop levels. Mike Branch, Pat Burke, and Stan Poole are the leaders of the club.

Kappa Sig Routs UNH Champs; Trophies Awarded To Champs

By Howie Davis

Kappa Sig, the UMass intramural champs, began a weeeknd route of UNH with a 40-0 victory Friday night.

A combination of rule differences and depth were the factors that led to the onesided victory. U. of New Hampshire plays with nine men on a team and has five downs to go the length of the field. They were forced to incorporate new plays and situations to fit our standards of a six man team, and possible first down pickups.

BILL CRANE showed the reason why he was a unanimous selection for the IFC All-Star team. He completed 17 of 22 passes, threw five TD's and ran for a sixth to figure in all of the KS scoring. One of these TD passes went approximately 55 yards in the air for the longest score of the night.

John Harrington was the big scorer of the evening with 20 points. He picked off three Crane passes for TD's and scored two extra points.

THE UNH TEAM, was led by a capable quarterback from Methuen, Chadwick. He completed 17 of 34 passes for a fine 50% completion record, but his receivers were unable to contend with the strong KS defense.

The conclusion was that KS had too much depth, organization and practice for UNH. Crane received more protection than has been seen in quite some time. He took advantage of the situation and led his team admirably.

The following are the trophies and prizes awarded to champions for the Fall season: Football: Campus champ, Kappa Sigma; IFC champ, Kappa Sigma; Dorm champ, Chadbourne Maroons; Independent Champ; Forestry Club. Individual rewards: Leading passer, William Crane, KS; Leading receiver, James Neary KS; Leading scorer, Paul Caisse, TKE; Team offense, Kappa Sigma; Team defense, Mills Birch. Lacrosse: Campus champ: Phi Sigma Kappa. Tennis: Campus champ: John Norton; runner-up: Alex Backery. Cross Country: Gerald Johnson, champ; runner up: Glenn Ellis. Trophies were awarded to the champs and tie clasps to the runner ups.

LAST WEEKS BOWLING RESULTS for IFC competition show AEPi currently in first place with a 16-0 record. Liederman of TEP had last week's high single game for the IFC, a 207. Kaplan of AEPi was tops for a three game total with a 529. Pittibit of QTV had the best three game average, a 173.

The dorm West League shows Hills So. in first with an 8-0 record. Mills has won more games, 14, but has two losses on its record. The dorm East League is turning into a runaway with Grayson #1 posting a 16-0 record. Second place Greenough with a 12-4 record is already four games behind and will have to work hard to top the leaders.

BOWL BID?

Redmen Trample UNH, 47-0

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts drew down the curtain on Alumni Field and the 1964 football season by soundly drubbing the University of New Hampshire, 47-0.

THE REDMEN iced the contest in the very first period as they pushed across 27 points against the undermanned Wildcats. Phil DeRose turned the trick again this week as he raced 99 yards with the opening kickoff. It had been a rolling kick that got passed three Redmen. DeRose came across the field, picked up the elusive pigskin and shot down the left sideline. A block thrown by Dick Kehoe helped get the job done.

UNH did get across the midfield stripe, but Dave Kelley killed any ambitions that the visitors had when he picked off a Pete Ballo pass and returned it to the UNH 23. Five plays later, Jerry Whelchel hit Ken Palm at the goal line on an 11 yard strike. The kick failed and it was 12-0.

After the Wildcats ran three plays Marty Hall punted. It took the Redmen three plays to cover the last 65 yards. Whelchel ran for 30, Mike Ross carried for 7, and Bob Ellis turned the last 27 yards on a reverse for the score. Whelchel then ran from the halfback slot and on the option play tossed a two point conversion pass to Milt Morin.

PHIL DEROSE gave the home forces another boost when he returned a punt four plays later 45 yards before being caught from behind. Seven plays of action centered around DeRose who carried the final two yards for the score. Whelchel's boot was good.

After a poor punt by Hall, which carried to the UNH 38, Whelchel hit Morin on the right side, and Morin rushed across the field and went over for a score. With the toss, Whelchel broke another of Noel Reebenacker's marks, this one for the most career completions a fine 160. Jerry converted on the extra point and the half time score was 34-0.

Five plays after the third quarter began, Mike Ross rambled 52 yards for another touchdown. Whelchel converted again.

UNH which had only one first down and a total offense of 23 yards in the first half, finally got rolling behind the running of Tim Churchard and the passing of Ballo and Paul Lovallo. The drive came to a halt as Ballo was forced out of bounds on the UM seven.

THE REDMEN then went 92 yards in 11 plays for the last score in the history of Alumni Field. Whelchel gained 35 yards and DeRose 26 in the drive, but it was for senior halfback Joe Morris to carry the ball over from the one.

UNH kept up the passing, but just didn't have the material to pose any problem to the Redmen. They finished with 9 completions in 14 tries, but had three intercepted.

Whelchel produced 161 yards in total offense, 78 passing and 83 rushing. Mike Ross chipped in with 70 and Leo Biron added 62. Bobby Ellis, sick most of the week, carried only twice but earned 42 yards. Dick Benoit and DeRose were also outstanding in the contest.

The Redmen end with a fine 8-1 mark and 5-0 in the conference. They outscored the conference teams 118-7.

President Lederle had this comment on a bowl bid after the game, "If today's win puts Massachusetts in line for a post season bowl bid, than I think we should respond favorably". He added that the conference presidents have given the necessary assent and the athletic council voted approval. Once the bid arrives, if it does, the team must vote on it an action that should occur possibly Monday evening.

Harlem Globetrotters To Come To Campus

Basketball history will be made on Dec. 8, at the Curry Hicks Cage, when those inimitable imps. the Harlem Globetrotters, come to town.

They'll be taking on the Washington Generals, another of the strongest traveling quintets in the nation, in the feature of a program jampacked with entertainment and thrills and starting at 8:00 p.m.

This is the 39th annual edition of the fabulous Trotters, who have carried their cage artistry and fantastic fun to 87 countries, covering all six continents.

The program is being sponsored by the Class of '65 for a scholarship fund. There will be a limited number of student tickets to be sold in the Student Union.

SEND BAND TO BOWL

Wherever the bowl bound football team has played, the UMass Marching Band has performed. The many standing ovations that John J. Jenkins' marching band has received this past season, show that the band and team are inseparable.

ALL TRIP EXPENSES FOR THE TEAM to the Tangerine Bowl are being absorbed by the NCAA. George Michael, President of the Student Senate, is coordinating many groups on campus in an effort to gain student support for a fund raising program that will send both the band and cheerleaders to the bowl game.

Approximately $12,000 dollars is needed to pay trip expenses. Presently, the fund raising program consists of selling 10,000 tangerine colored and shaped booster pins at 25¢ each in the Student Union lobby starting Friday, Nov. 20.

A "HIGHLIGHT NIGHT" at which UMass football highlights of the past season will be shown, the band will play traditional songs and the cheerleaders will lead our cheers, will be held in the cage at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 1. Unofficial, informed sources report that it is very probable that a portion of University funds will help absorb the band and cheerleader expenses. It is also hoped that a citrus fruit concern will donate tangerines to be sold on campus at a minimal charge.

Questionnaires are being circulated throughout campus to seek the student response to closed circuit telecast of the game in the Cage and Boyden Building at a cost of $2.00 per student and $3.00 for others. Closed TV cost is estimated at $13,000.

The primary purpose of this questionnaire is to seek student ideas for the campus-wide fund raising program that will finance the band and cheerleaders.

Pajama Game Praised by Critics

The Operetta Guild opened its Eighteenth Musical Theatre Season last weekend with its production of The Pajama Game, one of Broadway's most successful comedy hits. Performances will be repeated Nov. 20 and 21 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Theatre. In addition, there wil be a matinee, Sat., Nov. 21 at 2:00 p.m.

Saturday evening's performance was a sell-out. Five-sixth of the house has been sold for this Saturday night's show. Good seats are still available for Friday's production and the matinee. Tickets are on sale at the Student Union Box Office from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Those that remain will be on sale at the door.

Area critics praised the Guild production. The Springfield Union reported that the O.G. season opened "with more zest, color, and comical appeal than could be imagined." It credited Dick Morril, as Hines, who opens the play "with more punch than any spiked party bowl could possibly contain"; Steve Rosoff, as Hasler, the play's "fighter" boss; Ron Julius, as Prez, the union boss; and Jim Duncan as Sid, "the show's vocal master." The Union continued, "Wayne Lamb's professional talents are markedly evident in the play's fast-moving, intricate choreography."

Wayne Smith, Greenfield Recorder-Gazette critic, called the University production "gay, stylish, refreshing."

He wrote, "The burden of credit goes to Wayne Lamb for his imaginative choreography and astute stage direction. No less distinguished was the music under supervision of Paul Bartsch, who assembled a band big, raucus, and brassy."

He credited Jim Duncan with "singing honors."

Smith recognized other major contributions by Dick Morril (Hines), Steve Rosoff (Hasler), Elizabeth Cotton (Poopsie), Robert Emerson (Charlie), Jacqueline Genswil (Mabel), Gary Pass (Joe), Ron Julius (Prez), Janice Lombard (Mae), Betty Huttman (Brenda), and George Dimock (Pop). Smith concluded, "The Guild Workshop has a long list of fine shows to its credit. This one matches the best."

Will Honesty Triumph?

The Streets of New York, a 19th-century melodrama revived in New York last year as a musical, will be the next University Theatre production.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF SPEECH Cosmo Catalano, director of the production, said today that the Dion Boucicacault play will be staged Dec. 10, 11, and 12 in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

The Streets of New York is a play that pits a poor but honest population against a rich but not so honest villain. Nobody ends up tied to a railroad track, but a young man does dash into a burning basement, saves some important papers, marrys the good girl, and defeats the evil Gideon Bloodgood.

THE UNIVERSITY THEATRE will present The Streets of New York as it was presented in the 1890's. Dale Amlund, a speech instructor new to the UMass department this year, has designed and painted, scenery, and backdrops typical of the period. Bruce MacCombie, a junior from Swansea, is musical director for the show.

Milton freshman Chuck Interland is cast as Captain Fairweather, one of Bloodgood's victims. The evil one himself is played by Ken Bordner, a graduate student from Massillon, Ohio.

CAROLYN MILLER OF WELLESLEY, a freshman, plays the part of Lucy Fairweather, the captain's daughter. Young Mark Livingstone, the lad who dashes into burning buildings and ends up marrying Lucy, is played by Tom Kerrigan, a senior from Caledonia, Minnesota.

SENIOR PICTURES
Senior pictures will be taken Nov. 19 and 20. Sittings are $2.50; retakes are $2.00.

Landis Revues Towing Issue

By Jim Foudy

Opening last week's meeting, the Student Senate swore in the class of 68's new Senators-at-large, Joan Beskenis, Bob Goswin and Richard Moriarty.

The Senate then took up the order of business, passing a bill requiring all candidates to sign a paper stating that they have read and will adhere to the rules of campaign procedure. It is hoped that this bill will put teeth into the elections Committee and enable it to enforce the law.

A debate then developed over the question of imposing a class tax of a dollar on the "Special Freshmen" here during the summer.

An amendment supported by a number of senators proposed that the tax be dropped on the grounds that the summer students had no class officers and no organized class functions.

The opinion that the "Special Freshmen" had the same privileges as the other members of the class of 1968 prevailed and the amendment was defeated.

Before adjourning, Vice President Landis took the floor for a report on a meeting he attended concerning matters of campus security, illegal parking and the towing of automobiles.

Clarifying points of the meeting headed by President Lederle, Dean Field and members of the University's police and security departments, Landis stated that the University's policy toward towing permits illegally parked cars to be towed, but that as soon as the tow hook is placed on the car, it becomes the problem of the owner and tower.

Senator Landis stressed that there was "no provocation for abusive language" on anyone's part, and that "any person who feels that their person or prop-

Lecture Thursday "After the B.A., What Next?"

By Tom Kiernan

The topic "Should I do Graduate Work in Business Administration?" will be discussed by Richard Schulz, Director, Academic Office, College of Business Administration, University of Rochester.

Schulz will be discussing the relative and material advantages available to persons with the MBA degree. This will be the second lecture in a series sponsored by the University Economics Association entitled "After the B.A., What Next?"

Schulz will begin at 7 p.m. Thurs. evening in the Council Chambers of the Student Union. The discussion will be open to the entire student body and would be of special interest to juniors and seniors who are contemplating a career in business. The talk will be followed by a question and answer period. Refreshments will be served.

Newman Club Provides for Needy

By Linda Paul

What does Thanksgiving mean?

To most UMass students, Thanksgiving probably means forgetting the next hour exam and enjoying a home-cooked dinner with all the trimmings.

However, warmth and thankfulness will be missing from some homes this Nov. 26 because of financial problems which prevent these families from purchasing a Thanksgiving dinner. For this reason, the Newmen Club has decided to "adopt" 30 needy families in the Springfield area and provide them with an adequate Thanksgiving meal.

Until Sunday, the Newman Club captains will be collecting donations of canned goods and money to buy the turkeys.

Freshmen mid-semester grades will be available from Advisers after Thursday, November 19. Each freshman should arrange a consultation with his Adviser within the next few days in order to discuss his progress.

Army ROTC

Scabbard & Blade Initiates Pledges

The Society of the Scabbard and Blade recently initiated four pledges. The men were Charles Litchfield, Thomas Keliher, Richard Strecker, and John Goodrich.

The pledges worked on the Army ROTC cadet brigade participation in the blood drive.

A reception for the entire brigade was also organized by them.

The cadet pledges ran a tactical problem on Mt. Toby against the 11 Society members. The problem was conducted in complete darkness to acquaint the cadets with control in a night maneuver.

The cadets were also required to take a written examination administered by the national office of the S and B.

The reception planned by the pledges and brotherhood was held Saturday at Wiggins Tavern in Northampton. Approximately 50 couples from all classes attended the dance and social hour.

With the successful use of the cannon at football games, the Scabbard and Blade is now seeking other possible campus activities and ROTC brigade.

Want Work Abroad?

A Pennsylvania State University teacher and Peace Corps consultant will be the second speaker in a series of University lectures on professional overseas personnel.

Dr. George Guthrie, professor of psychology at Penn State, will speak this Friday at 4 p.m. in the Worcester Room of the Student Union. His talk is titled "American Professionals and Technical Assistance."

Dr. Guthrie's lecture is the second in a planned series of eight to ten concerned with the role of American professional people in overseas positions. The series is sponsored by the department of sociology and anthropology at the University.

The lecture series grew out of a Ford Foundation study completed this summer by Dr. C. Wendell King and Dr. Edwin D. Driver, both of the UMass sociology department. The talks and discussions, also underwritten by the Ford Foundation, are intended to stimulate interest in overseas work.

23 N.D.E.A. Fellowships Awarded

Dr. Edward C. Moore, dean of the graduate school at U-Mass, announced today that the University has been awarded 23 new National Defense Education Act graduate fellowships for the 1965-66 academic year.

"This is twice the number," Dean Moore said, "awarded to us in any previous year and indicates the University's graduate program is maintaining a stature commensurate with its increase in size."

In addition to the 23 new fellowships, Dean Moore said, U-Mass already has 24 graduate students studying under previously awarded NDEA fellowships.

The NDEA fellowship program is intended to increase the number of well-trained college and university teachers. Fellowships are awarded to able students working toward the Ph.D.

The UMass departments of English, geology, philosophy and sociology each received four of the new NDEA fellowships. Three were given to the department of chemical engineering and two of the new fellowships to the German and French departments.

Education Club Presents Panel

The Education Club of the University will hold a meeting and panel discussion about elementary education tonight in the Education Building. The panel will include a school superintendent, a school board chairman and an elementary school principal.

The club began this year's activities with a membership picnic to bring together those at the University interested in education for a mutual exchange of ideas.

The purpose of the University Education Club is "to enable those interested in education to become more informed on the educational scene." Membership in the club is open to anyone who has an interest in education.

Membership dues will be collected until Dec. 5. Members receive informative literature including the National Education Association Journal.

New members may join at tonights meeting.

"Father of American Pragmatism"

UMass Press Publishes Second Volume

The University of Massachusetts Press this week published its second book, a collection of essays on Charles Sanders Peirce, "The Father of American Pragmatism."

This second series on Peirce —the first was published by Harvard University Press in 1952—was edited by Dean Edward C. Moore, UMass Graduate School, and by Dr. Richard S. Robin, assistant professor of philosophy at Mount Holyoke College.

The two editors of Studies in the Philosophy of Charles Sanders Peirce are president and vice president, respectively, of the Charles Sanders Peirce Society. The book commemorates the 50th anniversary of Peirce's death.

Peirce published very little of his work during his lifetime. Until Harvard University Press published his collected papers in the early 1930's, he was remembered more as a scientist—with the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey—than as a philosopher. In recognition of his scientific contributions, the survey named one of its ships for him last year.

The new Moore-Robin collection brings to light several new facets of Peirce's life and work.

Peirce's influence on his Harvard classmate William James was instrumental in James' development and conception of pragmatism.

Peirce also made great contributions in the field of mathematical logic. Much of his work in this area has been "rediscovered" by recent philosophers and logicians.

Since the Harvard editions of his collected papers, he has been widely considered the most important American philosopher.

Admissions Dean Named Advisor To Class Of '68

Dr. William D. Tunis, University dean of admissions and records, has been named advisor to the class of 1968, freshman class president John Robinson announced.

Robinson, in announcing the selection, said he felt the choice was a good one. Dean Tunis "knows the people in this class," he said, since this is "the first class he has chosen."

Dr. Tunis came to UMass from UConn in 1959 as an associate professor of entomology and assumed the position of dean of admissions last Nov. He served as director of the University's Waltham Field Station from 1961 to 1963.

Dr. Tunis received his B.S. and Ph.D. from UMass, and his M.A. from the University of Minnesota. He is a member of Sigma Xi scientific fraternity and has written numerous articles for professional and scientific journals. He served in the infantry in World War II.

Students Pledge To Donate Blood For Red Cross

Over 880 pints of blood have been pledged during this year's campus blood drive. Although this figure is slightly behind that of last year at this time, the drive is progressing well and the Red Cross is enthusiastic about its outcome.

On Tuesday close to 220 pints of blood were collected and Wednesday's and Thursday's schedule are also full.

In order to assure the success of this year's drive, every student who filled out a pledge form is urged to keep his appointment, or if unable to do so to walk in at a later time. Any student over 21 who would like to donate is urged to walk in tomorrow, the last day of the drive, and to give, in order to put the drive over the top.

Process Of Selection

This may come as startling news to more than half of the campus population, but you were not admitted to UMass by an I.B.M. machine. For some reason, this rumor, which seems to start by itself every year at admissions time, is now, once again, in circulation.

The story, which is completely unfounded, usually goes something approximate to what follows. When a student applies to the University, all his application material is punched on a standard I.B.M. programming card. This card is then processed by machine along with the cards of all the other applicants. The machine then picks from among these cards those students whose records indicate probable success.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Not only is the selection done by the admissions officers (in person), but each applicant (yes—all 13,000 of them) is treated as an individual. In fact, the only purpose for which machines are employed is to accumulate the data compiled on each student and print it on a concise form.

In view of such information, it seems almost incomprehensible that students would actually believe that they were selected wholly by machine. The admissions process is one facet of the University Administration that will probably never lend itself to a data processing machine. How, for instance, could a machine be programmed to read an autobiography of a candidate?

The office of admissions has made tremendous progress during the past few years in predicting accurately the success of potential students. This progress has been made due to the extensive amount of time which has been devoted by the admissions officers. No, you were not admitted by an I.B.M. machine, but by a very human and hard working admissions board.

Better Facilities

Take a defective Public Address System, weave it into the acoustical monstrosity that is the S.U. Ballroom, invite a reputable artist to perform on the mechanically unsound piano contained therein, and you have a source of embar*assment to the University of Massachusetts students and faculty alike.*

How long and why must these situations continue to exist? A University having organizations like Concert Assn. and the Arts and Music Committee who have the good sense to invite performers of high caliber and renown, should also have the facilities to accommodate such artists in a way that will not detract from the effectiveness of a performance.

It is hoped that proper facilities, in the form of a Fine Arts complex, will come in time. In the meantime, we should make every effort to correct the aforementioned sources of irritation as soon as possible. To continue to invite performers to appear at this University under present conditions is a sloppy dishonesty.

HOW TO CON THE DEAN

Suppose you have just received a phone call from the Dean's office telling you that your grades are so poor you are being considered as a likely candidate for probation. What do you do when you go to see the Dean?

In order to influence the Dean and prevent his putting you on probation, you must appeal to his heart. Here are a group of statements to offer, which must be accompanied by sincere looks and suspicious moisture in the eyes:

"It isn't my fault my grades slipped. My room-mate tried to commit suicide and I used up all my energy trying to help him gain a better mental attitude, Sir."

"It isn't my fault my grades slipped. I tried to commit suicide and I've used up all my time and energy trying to make a better adjustment these past two weeks. Sir?"

"It isn't that I can't do the work. I don't hear so well and in all my lectures they seated me toward the back of the room, so I missed everything."

"I had Mononucleosis" (see Solution to Situation One).

"I thought I was pregnant." (This should only be used by co-eds. Usually.)

"The reason I neglected my studies, Sir, was because I was busy working with my Dad on his plans to build a new Gymnasium for the College."

"Wasn't that Miss Helston of the Accounting Department I saw you with in the motel outside of town last weekend, Sir?"

Good Planning?

In Bartlett Auditorium on November 16th, the Young Independents presented the movie "Raisin' in the Sun", starring Sydney Poitier.

I congratulate them on their choice of subject, and their having a full house, but I feel it necessary to point out a fact that ruined the evening for many people.

The movie was scheduled to start at 8:00 p.m., and with a 135 minute film this meant it was to end at 10:15, giving just enough time for the Freshman girls to sign in on time. However, the movie started more than five minutes late, and, counting a break in the film, ended about 10:20 p.m. leaving a group of freshman girls barely time to run to their dorms. Many of these girls live in the Orchard complex, so they and their dates had to leave five to ten minutes prior to the end of the film.

I suggest that better planning be used in the future if any group wishes to draw freshman participation.

L'Avventura

To the Editor:

In reference to Mike Clark's "perceptive" article on L'Avventura we wish to offer our congratulations. One who paid so much attention to details such as the credits could not help but see that L'Avventura was a fraud. How ridiculous for an Italian film to have Italian names in the credits. Profound observation, Mr. Clark. Until we read your article, we were not aware of such a gross flaw in the film.

It was truly difficult to distinguish between all three main characters, one of whom disappeared in the first part of the film. This left two main characters who were distinguishable only by such subtle differences as hair color and sex (one being male, the other female).

Anna's not returning for a happy reunion at the end of the film was outrageous. Antonioni certainly lacks the realistic technique, so familiar to the Disney set. Antonioni still has much to learn from Hollywood about stark realism.

Mr. Clark also wittily commented that L'Avventura should have been named La Bordom. How could Antonioni possibly have expected an audience to sit for two and a half hours without so much as a John Wayne fist-fight, a chariot race, or the bombing of Pearl Harbor?

If subtlety and food for thought are what you are looking for, Mr. Clark, better stick to Beach Party.

Very sincerely,

PAJAMA GAME

To the Editor:

In the Collegian dated Monday, Nov. 16, 1964, The Operetta Guild's production of THE PAJAMA GAME was reviewed and given the overall recommendation as a night's entertainment that could be enjoyed by all. As a viewer of said production over the past weekend I could not agree with Mr. Kerrigan's declaration of success for the venture. If success is measured in trite composition, garbled songs, and atrocious sets then perhaps the show was more than successful—it was definitely terrific. While Mr. Kerrigan is well-known in dramatic circles on campus, I must be quick to remind him that the laws of drama are not wholly applicable to the musical theatre, as it is generally conceived of as an art form within a larger art—the theatre.

As for the production, there was spirit, but spirit does not make a show when it has intrinsic defects. Nor does Mr. Kerrigans com'ments on faculty set designing begin to accommodate a just criticism of the show.

To begin with the production is fighting one major defect every night of production—Bowker auditorium. The hall is a mass of reverberations, dead spots, and overall bad acoustical accommodation. The more posteriorly the chorus was located on stage, the less you heard of them. The number "Racing With The Clock," which introduces the atmosphere of the Sleeptite Pajama Factory could only be described as dead. This contrast exists obviously when compared with two other chorus numbers, "I'm Not At All In Love," and "Seven And A Half Cents," both done in the anterior section of the stage, and rousingly applauded by the audience at their completion. It was such numbers which kept the show from dragging completely.

A point in conjunction with the bad acoustical properties of Bowker auditorium is the lack of clarity on the part of chorus and soloists in their singing. Many times the lyrics were indistinguishable and vapid. This point is one that is often overlooked by pseudo-critics of the musical theatre, and which audiences don't demand enough of from musicals because they feel inadequately qualified to comment on convention in musical theatre.

More specifically, songs for musicals are—traditionally—plot songs. They are expositions on events, characters, and emotions. Lyrics, being set to music, give them the additional facility of emotional impact. The words, however, help our understanding of the plot and, as such, should be clearly conveyed to an audience. Such clarity gives a show an aura of professionalism. While clarity is difficult, even amateur productions can develop a reasonable amount of sophistication in this department with discipline. In singing, it is easy to roll over consonants and turn meaningful lyrics into so much gobble-tygok. In PAJAMA GAME, numbers like "There Once Was A Man" and "Her Is," showed the aforementioned dictional confusion in salient profusion.

The sets received criticism from Mr. Kerrigan so I will not comment further except to add that the drabness of drops left any attempts at color and styling in costumes in an anachronistic position. Modern styling in dress just didn't seem to match the peeling—I presume it was peeling—plaster of the pajama factory. The true sadness of the sets lies in the fact that with a theatre department and scene shop on the campus that the Operetta guild could not elicit a share of their services for set construction.

JOHN JENKINS
Conductor

The Sound Of University Music

The University Marching Band climaxed its 1964 season at the New Hampshire game by presenting its arranger, Jerry H. Bilik. While Bilik listened from the field, the Band performed "Rhapsody in Blue," as scored by him for their "Hootenany Hoedown" show. Bilik, a faculty member at the University of Michigan, has arranged all the music used by the band in its 1964 performances. His visit to Amherst was a surprise for Conductor John Jenkins from the members of the Marching Band.

Jenkins and Bilik were members of the University of Michigan Marching and Symphony Bands during their undergraduate days together. Donald Mattran, conductor for the UNH Band, was also a classmate.

ARRANGER BILIK was the band's guest for two days in what became a Marching Band Weekend. He arrived Saturday in time for the band's final rehearsal for the UNH halftime show and remained with the band for the post-season banquet at the Lord Jeffery Inn Sunday.

Bilik is nationally noted for his imaginative marching band scoring, as well as for his many arrangements for television productions. He composed the best selling march, "The Block M," and has produced numerous other original compositions for band.

BILIK'S ARRANGEMENTS for the UMass Marching Band are a great contributing factor to the musical sound for which the band has become noted.

Bilik was guest of honor at Sunday night's banquet for the bandsmen and cheerleaders. He spoke enthusiastically of his impressions of the UMass Marching Band's "Hootenany Hoedown" show during halftime.

Guests who spoke at the banquet were President Lederle, Dr. Tippo, Dean McGuirk, Dr. Bezanson, new head of the music department, Dean Field and Coach Vic Fusia. Dr. William Venman was master of ceremonies.

After Bilik's main address, band awards were presented by Manager Ernest Patrikis. Band pins and guards were given trombonists Peter Ordway and Allen Bunce, clarinetist Joanna Gregory and twirler Susan Longfellow. Esther Eisenberg received a pen set for outstanding service to University Bands 1961-1965. Honorary band pins were presented to John Jenkins, Jerry Bilik and William Venman.

As a gesture of appreciation from the band's graduating seniors, Band Manager Ernest Patrikis and Administrative Assistant Esther Eisenberg presented Conductor Jenkins a check as the first contribution to an alumni scholarship fund.

Because of the almost 8500 games they have played since their inception, the Trotters set a record every second they are on the court.

The tall and torrid Trotters will floor a crack ensemble, headed by the internationally-celebrated court jester, Meadowlark Lemon, funnier than ever with new tricks added to his already-extensive repertoire.

He'll be assisted by such aces as the great Connie Hawkins, Tex Harrison, Tim Robinson, seven-foot Bill Garner, Bobby Joe Mason and others of equal stature.

The tickets will be 1.50 for students and 2.50 for general admission, and are on sale in the Student Union lobby.

Judo Club Notice

The UMass Oriental Sports Club is now re-organizing for the purpose of teaching judo after a year of inactivity.

The club is open to all male students of the University, with provisions for both graduate and undergraduate memberships. Its purpose is to create an interest in Judo as a sport and to encourage physical fitness and principles of sportsmanship.

The club needs someone to serve as coach or instructor before it can become active, and once he is found instruction can begin immediately.

Anyone interested in taking part in this organization is asked to attend a meeting at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 19 in the Essex Room of the Student Union, or to contact Capt. Richard Parker of the Military Science Department, or Tom Kerrnan, at 370 Hills South.

Will Face East Carolina State

Fusiamen Tangerine Bowl Bound

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts will be playing East Carolina College, in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Florida on December 12. Athletic Director Warren McGuirk announced the acceptance of the bid late Monday afternoon.

The bowl is more than just a reward for the fine season the Redmen had. Under a new NCAA policy, the nation is divided into four sections, each of which will have a bowl game to determine the regional championship on the college division level. The Tangerine Bowl is one of these four bowls. The winner of the contest will be crowned college division champ for the Atlantic Coast area.

The opponent for the Redmen is East Carolina State College of Greenville, S.C. The club has finished with an 8-1 record, identical to that of the Redmen, and moved to number 8 position on the small college poll. The Redmen jumped to the number six position.

It had been felt that Florida A and M might get the bid, but the school was defeated 43-20 by Southern University and dropped out of the ratings from the number 3 spot. None of the other teams in the top ten are from the Eastern region.

The other three bowl games

Jerry Whelchel drops back to pass the Redmen on to bigger and better things.

will be the Grantland Rice Bowl played at Murfreesboro, Tenn., Pecan Bowl in Abilene, Texas, and the Camillia Bowl in Sacramento, Cal.

The Redmen will take the rest of the week off then start light workouts next week. The rule limits the traveling squad to 35 players, with seven other spots for Coaches and managers. The team is expected leave Massachusetts on Wednesday, Dec. 9.

Since the game will be played at night heat shouldn't be a problem. Temperatures should range in the 60's for ideal football weather.

The Redmen are right at their peak now and hope to stay there for the extra month. The club turned in a tremendous job against Holy Cross and hit UNH with a 27 point first quarter.

This is the second time that the Redmen have been invited to a bowl game, the first being last year after the undefeated season. The bid was turned down, but the senior-studded team wanted to play a bowl game this year.

It appears that one of the key operatives for the Redmen might not be able to make the game. Charlie Scialdone has a hernia which might well require surgery and keep him on the sidelines. If this is the case, there will be a tremendous burden placed on Joe Doyle.

AN INTERESTING SIDELIGHT about the Bowl game is that it will match two teams on the rise as football leaders. The rise of the Redmen is well known, with Coach Fusia and his 27-8-1 record here at the University. As for East Carolina they are old in style, using the single wing on offense, but new in the higher ranks. They played Northeastern's undefeated squad a year ago and beat them. The school will be playing in the Southern Conference next season against such teams as West Virginia, the Citadel, and William and Mary.

Redmen Harriers Down UNH In Final Dual Meet

By Russell Murphy

A very close win over UNH last Saturday at Amherst allowed the UMass harriers to compile a respectable 4-4 dual meet record for the 1964 cross-country season. The final score in this meet, the last of the season, was a squeaky 27-28.

Terry Carpenter, who by his performances this season, has marked himself as a key man for the Redmen for the next few years, once more took individual honors, beating out UNH's Esterbrook by five seconds with a time of 23:12 on the 4.38 mile course.

Senior co-captains Bob Ramsay and Tom Panke ran this last dual meet of their varsity careers in the winning form they have displayed all season, placing second and third for the Redmen. Soph Steve St. Clair, another of this season's consistant point-getters, accounted for some of the difference in the meet by passing a few of the UNH boys in the final few hundred yards. Mike Sheeley, sidelined by a shoulder injury for some of the last meets, ran well enough Saturday to be fifth man for the Redmen.

Coach Bill Footrick expected this meet to be a close one, as UNH has been closing the gap between themselves and UMass in the past two or three weeks. Nevertheless, having lost the greatest harrier in UMass history, Bob Brouillet, through graduation, and finding returning letterman Bob Molvar ineligible this semester, Coach Footrick began this season with the thought that it might be his first losing one at UMass. However, with a 4-4 record, a second in the Yankee Conference, and a fifth in the NEICAA meet, he has good reason to be proud.

Tangerine Bowl Round-Up

by Peter Hendrickson

Preparations for the Tangerine Bowl have set campus service organizations spinning madly. Plans are thrown out and modified hourly as new fund raising and transportation schemes are hatched.

A total of 10,000 Tangerine Booster Tags will go on sale today in the SU lobby for 25¢ apiece minimum donation to raise funds for the band and cheerleaders.

George Michael, Senate president and campus co-ordinator for the bowl activities said, "The spirit of the tangerine tags is to see who can wear the most tags on their buttons and who will have the heart to wear them on the seat of their pants."

HIGHLIGHTS NIGHT will be held in the Curry Hicks Cage at 7:30 Tuesday, Dec. 1, to raise the $12,000 necessary. Six thousand tickets are being sold in the SU lobby and in Boyden for $1 apiece.

There will be a drawing of ticket stubs deposited in ballot boxes in the Amherst Tower, Louis' Foods and SU lobby. The winner will receive an all expense paid trip to the bowl by jet for the duration of the activities.

The entire team will be introduced, the marching band will play and the cheerleaders will be present. Highlight films from the past season will be shown with commentary. George Michael will preside.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA and Alpha Phi Omega, the service sorority and fraternity, are managing the sale of the tangerine tags and highlight tickets. Brochures are being passed out with the tickets that are sold to give more information on Highlights Night.

Michael contacted a citrus fruit concern in Florida and they promised to send either crates of tangerines or small tangerine trees that will grow to maturity in Massachusetts. They will be sold at a small fee to raise more money for the band fund.

Last night the annual Sports Banquet was held in the Waltham Field Station, sponsored by the Greater Boston Chapter of the Alumni association. Jack Morgan, the commission chairman for the NCAA, explained the activities associated with the bowl. The Collegian will interview Morgan today, as he is scheduled to appear on campus.

THE HALF-TIME PROGRAM GRAM has not been officially settled yet but the University Drill Team, the Flying Redmen, has been allotted five minutes of pre-game time to go through a close-order routine. Plans for the band are indefinite at this date. Tentative arrangements are also being made for the Precisionettes to appear.

Proceeds from the IFC and Pan Hel skits Monday night in the SU Ballroom will be donated to the band fund.

Donations from local merchants are being accepted, as are gifts from townspeople. The Coca-Cola Co. and Narragansett Brewing Co. have shown interest in making a contribution to the bowl fund.

IT APPEARS that there will be no closed circuit TV because of the large expense. There is a possibility that WWLP (channel 22) and WBZ (channel 4) will carry the game.

Student Senate President George Michael sells first "Tangerine Tag" to Dean Field.

Survey To Study Housing

With the ever increasing growth of the University, comes the concurrent problem of housing for faculty, married students and graduate students. In an attempt to cope with this problem, the Housing Office is performing a survey to determine the specific needs of these off-campus dwellers, and to pinpoint future requirements.

Robert Van Vliet, Head of Off Campus Housing, has undertaken the project and given it top priority for this Fall. This first concrete step is a necessity before private builders and financiers will risk thousands of dollars to meet the University's needs.

The survey results can be used to predict the specific numbers and types of apartment needed. The published data can then be passed to building and investing firms as a factual base to plan on.

Survey forms will be sent to all new faculty members, and to every third graduate and married student. High returns from the mailing are necessary if the information is to be useful. Participants are strongly urged to respond with the realization that they are contributing to the future and betterment of their University.

Morath Quartet Transports Audience to Early 1900's

by Steve Gordon

A capacity crowd filled the Student Union Ballroom last Tuesday night to hear the turn-of-the-century sounds of Max Morath and the Original Ragtime Quartet.

The group, only six months old, was brought to the University by the Arts and Music Committee.

The show started fast and happy with a rag called "My Gal is a High Born Lady", and it never let down once. While concentrating fully on the sounds they were making, the musicians seemed to be having great fun in playing the original ragtime music.

The Quartet consists of Max Morath's piano; Jim Tyler on the four-string tenor banjo; Barry Kornfield played the guitar, the five-string banjo, and the harmonica; and Felix Pappalardi with his Guitarron.

No one cared about the "dubious cultural value" of ragtime after hearing such sensational numbers as " Bill Bailey" and "Tiger Rag."

Morath himself, using the illustrated song, succeeded in turning the Student Union Ballroom into a 1910 silent movie house. The authentic and unretouched views of life in the early 1900's coupled with Morath's piano, transported the delighted audience back to the era of ragtime.

"The Quartet," said Morath, "is not trying to be nostalgic, but, rather, trying to extend Ragtime to authentic styles closer to the original turn-of-the-century sounds without overdoing it."

Thus attaching their energetic, happy music to the folk stream, the group, authentic to their 1909 styled clothing, succeeds in interesting the audience in original ragtime, completely without gimmicks.

The Original Ragtime Quartet, a young group, first opened at the Village Vanguard in New York. They are currently touring in conjunction with the Association of College Union Concerts. They came to the University after stopping at Penn State, Pitt, and UConn.

The group has recorded a single for Epic called "My Gal is a High Born Lady." They are working on an album now, also on the Epic label.

Senate Votes To Subsidize Expenses

Looking forward to the appearance of the University's Fighting Redmen in the Tangerine Bowl on Dec. 12, the Student Senate moved Wed. evening to subsidize "a portion" of the expenses (transportation, lodging and board) that will be incurred by the band and cheerleaders.

Calling the band, cheerleaders, and team, "inseperable" President George Michael explained the procedure that would be used in raising the funds.

First, the proceeds from the sale of "Tangerine Bowl" buttons, Football Highlights Night, and possibly tangerines will be used. Secondly, additional sources and means will be investigated. In the event that the total of $12,000 can not be reached by these programs then the Senate will "contribute no more than fifty per cent of the amount needed to reach the total."

President Michael pointed out that while the bid for the bowl had been received only two days before, the administration was willing to contribute one half of the deficit, if necessary.

As of Dec. 27 the Collegian distribution will be cut from 80% to 50% of total residents in fraternities, sororities and residence halls. However, 1,400 copies of the Collegian will be made available in the Student Union for "all students.'

Sources concerned with this matter have called the new procedure "a way of getting the most papers to the most people at an early hour while still providing sufficient copies in the residence halls.

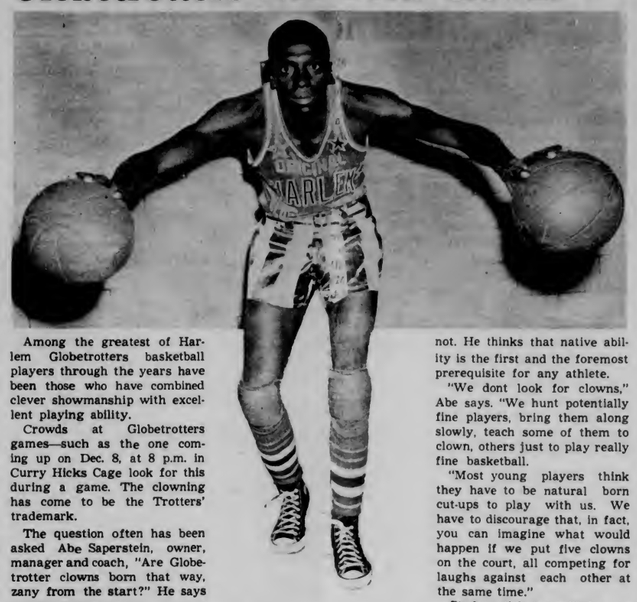
Globetrotters Not Born Clowns



"Meadowlark" Lemon - Center - Harlem Globetrotters Basketball Team.

Among the greatest of Harlem Globetrotters basketball players through the years have been those who have combined clever showmanship with excellent playing ability.

Crowds at Globetrotters games—such as the one coming up on Dec. 8, at 8 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage look for this during a game. The clowning has come to be the Trotters' trademark.

The question often has been asked Abe Saperstein, owner, manager and coach, "Are Globetrotter clowns born that way, zany from the start?" He says not. He thinks that native ability is the first and the foremost prerequisite for any athlete.

"We dont look for clowns," Abe says. "We hunt potentially fine players, bring them along slowly, teach some of them to clown, others just to play really fine basketball.

"Most young players think they have to be natural born cut-ups to play with us. We have to discourage that, in fact, you can imagine what would happen if we put five clowns on the court, all competing for laughs against each other at the same time."

Student tickets will be on sale at $1.50 for a limited time in the Student Union. General admissions will be $2.50.

Band Will Fly; Seats for Sale

The University of Massachusetts Marching Band and cheerleaders will fly to Orlando, Florida on Friday, Dec. 11 to perform at the Tangerine Bowl, it was announced today by Dean of Students William F. Field.

Two planes will make the trip. There will be approximately 68 extra seats on one of these flights for students, faculty, and their immediate dependents. Students will be given priority. Round trip tickets will cost $68.-20. The Garber Travel Agency is making arrangements for both air tours, and will plan lodging and meals for the 68 travelers upon request.

An information reservation center has been established in Memorial Hall by the Alumni Association.

Several other two-day flights for faculty, alumni and students have been arranged by the Garber Agency and the Associate Alumni. Meals, lodging, and game tickets are included in these "package" air tickets.

In addition, the Boston area alumni have arranged a three-day "package" trip through Garden City tours.

Complete information on all of these tours will be announced in the Collegian and will also be available in Memorial Hall.

Opportunities In Food Science And Technology

Ever wonder about the 7000 to 8000 food items you may find on the sheives of today's supermarket? Dried soups, instant coffee, frozen juices, cake mixes, and foods in pressurized containers, are some of the miracles produced by food scientists and technologists working in one of the most exciting and challenging of all career fields for both men and women.

Even so, food science and technology—the application of modern science and engineering to the manufacture, preservation, and distribution of foods—is surprisingly recent. So recent, in fact, that few students are aware of its existence. But within the framework of this simple definition lies a vast complex of career challenges.

Graduates with a B.S. degree can expect a starting salary range of $550 to $600 per month, and demands for trained food specialists in industry, government, education, and private institutions are steadily increasing. For every five career opportunities in the food industry, two go unfilled.

The course of study for the B.S. degree emphasizes basic science - chemistry, mathematics, physics, microbiology, and engineering. Classes are usually small. For qualified students, the Institute of Food Technologists and the food industry offer a number of excellent scholarships.

The Food Science and Technology Department at the University is internationally famous and was the first department of its kind in the nation. Almost every major food company in the United States employs at least one of its graduates, many of whom now hold top managerial positions.

The $2 million addition to Chenoweth Laboratory nearing completion (Spring 1965) will provide the department with unsurpassed facilities and equipment. The Department is staffed with 20 scientists enjoying first rate reputations in their specialties.

Students and Bowl

For the first time in the history of the University, we are participating in a post-season football bowl game. Congratulations are in order for the team, coaches, and the student body which supported the team throughout the season.

As in the College Bowl, the University finds itself in a position to show the nation what the University of Massachusetts can do. In that vain, it is essential that the student body be represented by the band and cheerleaders. We all cannot be there, but the Redmen band can represent the students and by its excellent performance show the quality of the University students.

Those students who are able to be in Orlando must be aware that they are representing the University. Their actions will be noted by, the residents of Orlando, as indicative of the University. At all times they must realize what they represent.

For those of us unable to attend the game we are hopeful that a television hookup can be arranged. Whether or not we are able to attend the game, or see it on television, we are sure the University will be well represented by the team, band, and cheerleaders.

Scott Freedland, Editor in Chief

UMass vs. Fine Arts

Remember the Chicago Symphony? It left an indelible visual impression—a sea of multi-colored sports jackets led by a lone "tailed" conductor — in its performance at UMass in September.

It's hard to understand why the musicians didn't wish to don their more somber dress and share the lingering reminders of past UMass athletic greats. Were they too proud to mingle with the balm of the antiseptic locker room?

It was a memorable contest. As always, the indefatigable horde won out. We outdressed them. We moved more chairs. We applauded more often. We wrenched from them an encore. They raced to the final bar in a last-ditch effort, but we foiled them. We would not sit on our hands, but mocked them one last time with our thundering plaudits.

This week we hosted another foe, Max Morath and his Ragtime Quartet. Victory by sheer numbers would have been too easy a conquest. A more subtle offense was called for. Again we rose to the occasion, though unable to stamp our feet in the dust or bask in the splendor of glaring lights.

We foiled them with sound, the very medium they thrive on. How ingenious to sabotage the PA system. Where but at UMass could this have been possible?

Yet another plan of attack was employed against the former first-desk cellist from the New York Philharmonic, Leonard Rose. He brought his own instrument, virtually inaccesible to our plotters.

However, Rose overlooked the possibility of the piano's falling into our hands. His weak flank was exposed and we seized the opportunity with professional polish. Though unable to assail the key artist, we were in a position to render impotent his accompanist. The piano was rigged and the night was hours.

The Arts and Music Committee has presented the student body with another foe of lesser magnitude—the SU record collection. Easy prey for the devious schemers.

Any fumbling fool can grasp the records by the grooves and it's absurdly easy to dash the needle across the record. Someone has made an attempt, though, to stymie our best efforts.

Affixed to the jacket of Beethoven's Ninth is a directive:

Excerpt from the Constitution of the MUSIC RECORD CLUB:

Please use thorn of cactus needles because:

1. Thorn needles eliminate practically all surface scratch.

2. The needle wears out, not the record.

3. If all members will cooperate in this, the collection will remain in perfect condition indefinitely.

4. Thorn needles may be obtained at the library.

But then, who goes to a record booth to listen to records? It's one of the few places left to take your girl for a fleeting hour of seclusion. Only the scratched and scarred recordings are present to destroy the splendor of silence.

Our next worthy foe — The Modern Jazz Quartet, appearing Dec. 7. Ringside seats will be available to early comers. Don't come and the night is theirs. Be there and the night is ours!

Peter Hendrickson

BOWL RESPONSE

President John Lederle
Univ. of Mass., Amherst, Mass.

On behalf of the citizens of our great commonwealth, I am happy to extend congratulations to the University of Massachusetts, its fine football team coaching staff, and you for a very wonderful and successful football season. Best wishes for continued success in any future game that may be scheduled.

Endicott Peabody, Governor

To the Editor:

The recent decision to accept the Tangerine Bowl bid was, in my opinion, ill advised. I would wish that the Athletic Council and others responsible for the decision had shown better judgment.

Item 1. The timing is bad. Judging by the team's past record, it is conceivable that in the not-too-distant future UMass would have received an attractive bowl bid. Having accepted the first bid that came along, and a second-rate one at that, I doubt that this will enhance our position in the college bowl market in the future.

Item 2. Orlando is a second-rate bowl. It seats only some 10,000, the guarantee paid to participating schools is a bare minimum, and among sports fans in general the Tangerine Bowl lacks any real prestige. The date of the game puts it well out of prime time for holiday bowls when you can reasonably expect to attract some national attention. And the former contestants in this bowl represent a calibre of school which, I would like to think, is not on a par with UMass. (I still don't know where E. Caroline is. Do you?)

Item 3. Most importantly, this is exploitation of certain students. Granted, for the senior members of the squad with pro ball aspirations, there is a distinct advantage. But for most of the others, I am convinced that the motivation and desire is lacking. Two more weeks of practice plus the time away from campus may take a heavy toll where academic standing is already in jeopardy.

Item 4. UMass ought to read history. It might learn that true academic greatness and stature has never been achieved by way of the football stadium.

I am not anti-athletics. I have supported our teams in the past and will continue to do so. But I would hope that we would keep these activities in their proper perspective. Finally, the thought of sending the band to Orlando is adding stupidity to poor judgment.

Bowl Congratulations

The Tangerine Bowl bid is a well earned reward for two years of outstanding achievement by the Redmen, Coach Fusia and his staff, and all of the support groups and individuals related to team activity.

The team has my best wishes for victory on December 12th in Orlando.

John W. Lederle
President

Congratulations to the football team and to Vic Fusia for the championship they have won and for the national recognition they have received as a result of the bowl invitation.

Provost Tippo

It will be a fine experience for our football squad, the game and the trip south, wonderful exposure for our University. Our aim now is to follow precedent in bowl competition. (College Bowl).

Coach Vic Fusia

The pride and pleasure which we have all shared throughout this year in the performance of our football team, cheerleaders, and University band have been given a final lift by the Tangerine Bowl invitation. May I add my personal congratulations to all of those individuals whose collective excellent has brought this additional attention to the University.

We have all been given a unique opportunity to have the exciting story of the growth and progress at the University of Massachusetts presented to a large audience, extending far beyond the limits of the Commonwealth. I hope we can all express our appreciation by taking part in the Tangerine Bowl drive being sponsored by the Student Senate, I.F.C., A.P.O., Gamma Sigma Sigma and many others.

Letters To The Editor

Pajama Game

To the Editor:

After having seen The Pajama Game on Saturday night (Nov. 14, 1964), I was indeed upset to read the letter written about this presentation in the Collegian dated Wednesday, Nov. 18, 1964. Professing next to no skill in theatrical criticism, I would like to express my "pseudo-critical" impression of the play. To begin with, I had hoped merely to be entertained, but was surprised to gain not mere entertainment but first rate entertainment. To my relatively untrained eye, the sets were perhaps not the best; however, they certainly didn't detract from the production to the extent suggested by Mr. Spence in his letter. Since the Operetta Guild is an amateur group, the sets were sufficient for their purposes and in keeping with the resources given to them. Hence, they need no excuses.

To the chorus and the soloists, I wish to extend hearty praise. I found the chorus, in both their song and dance routines, confident and amusing. Wayne Lamb did an excellent job of co-ordinating the lyrics of the songs with the movements of the chorus members. The soloists were also extremely effective. Dick Morril, as Hines, tuned-up the audience at the opening of the play for a delightful performance, and they were not disappointed. If Mr. Spence found the songs garbled, which I presume was the point he wished to make. I must assure him that I failed to notice any perplexed members of the audience, nor did I hear any comments during the intermission expressing confusion as to who was singing what.

Songs in a musical production seem more effective when they are used to enhance the mood rather than to advance the plot. In fact, I challenge Mr. Spence to listen to the highly praised and polished Broadway production of Hello Dolly and "ungarble" the words in the song "Sunday Clothes." Though the words are seemingly unintelligible, this song remains one of the high points of the show. This censorship for lack of clarity should not be levelled at The Pajama Game, since the meaning of the words seemed quite clear in the context of the setting, mood and music.

Jim Duncan should be singled out for praise for his excellent portrayal of Sid Sorokin. He deserves the title "the show's vocal master." Jim's vocal training was readily apparent and gave added dignity to his performance. Further, he seemed to emit a sense of confidence, which inspired the rest of the cast.

I heartily agree with Mr. Spence regarding the abundant spirit of the show. However, it was well supported by talent, confidence and hard work. Indeed, the spirit with which the entire cast was imbued proved to be the finishing touch to The Pajama Game as evidenced by the enthusiastic applause.

Editor's note:

Donna Pratt, who plays the lead in the "Pajama Game," has been carelessly omitted from reviews both on and off campus. No conscientious reviewer would fail to mention the lead no matter how good or how poor she performs. Donna does an excellent job and should be congratulated.

A Positive View

To the Editor:

The Collegian editorial page has printed "Emmy Dick" complaints since the beginning of the school year. There has not been any response contrary to these letters of condemnation, extolling the benefits of the new student housing development. Have the other students in the Orchard Complex raised their collective voices in a wall of dismay over existing conditions? The apparent answer is "no," because the environment is not as bleak as is pictured. Granted, original conditions were deplorable, but they have been improved to a level of satisfaction. The "comfort of home" are more than adequate now.

The Orchard dorms are an experiment in better living. Unlike other dorms, there are two study lounges on each floor. These lounges will be used for late afternoon classes after the dedication some time in December. They are also used as corridor rec-rooms, for studying and across-the-balcony hootenanies. Political, cultural and religious issues are discussed by various professors and guest speakers weekly in the dorms.

Students are generally apathetic, yet when the opportunity presents itself to berate conditions, there is more than enough response. It's time for the students in the Orchard dorms to notice the virtues of dorm life and credit the past three months to experience. The satisfaction as each project is completed should be adequate compensation for the hardships.

Who needs the turkey when we can have tangerines?

"X" YAHOO

In the last Collegian there was a rebuttal by a Mr. Jones against the honorable George Rollins' point—that Ya-Hoo was deceiving, not that his monetary figures were wrong, but he neglected to see George Rollins point—that YA-Hoo is a literary "waste."

I would like to know who "censors" Yahoo material. The magazine is not like Playboy, which is suggestive, rather the entire story is boldly printed in black and white.

For the 10 cents we pay I can see a better investment by buying the Farmers' Almanac or a couple daily newspapers. It would not be a waste of money if it were a decent comic like Laurel & Hardy.

I do not hint but rather firmly assert that your office is saturated by "warped minds." If your job is to juggle the monetary figures, fine, but someone is really raising havoc with the figures in the "cartoons."

FINAL REMARK: CLOSE UP YOUR OFFICE AND GO HOME TO YOUR DEBAUCHERS.

Streets of New York

A Century Old And It's S till A Smash Hit

What makes a play a hit? Why does a show like "Streets of New York", dashed off in 17 days, still draw enthusiastic audiences after 107 years? Professor Cosmo Catalano of the Speech Department calls the continued popularity of Dion Boucicault's play "a tribute to the durability of an excellent piece of hack writing."

The University Theatre will present "Streets of New York" December 10, 11, and 12 in Bowker Auditorium. In an interview yesterday, Director Catalano discussed the factors that have made the play a perennial favorite.

"Students will be sure to recognize all the elements of the typical melodrama", he said. "That is why we chose the play. We have virtuous heroes and heroines, worldly villains, surprise, suspense, and the traditional appeal to sentiment."

The emphasis is on intricate plot and spectacular scenes. Theatre-goers of the last century would travel far to see the on-stage tenement fire in the fourth act of "Streets of New York" and present-day audiences are just as fascinated by these same exciting effects.

"We are presenting the play as it might have been done by a traveling company in the 18-90's" Mr. Catalano continued. "Acting technique was quite a bit different then, but our cast is getting used to the stylized gestures and the rather elaborate language of the period."

One "Gay Nineties" innovation seems to have been the use of "oleos", or vaudeville-type song and dance numbers, that kept audiences entertained while the scenery was being changed. "We'll be showing you a few of these, too", the director added.

The play itself, though an American favorite, had international origins. Boucicault had translated a French play called "Les Pauvres de Paris", changed the names of the characters, juggled the geography, and opened in London with "The Poor of London." In 1857 he made a few more minor changes and presented American audiences with "The Poor of New York".

Boucicault was a shrewd businessman. The Panic of 1857 was fresh in people's minds, and he knew that his tale of financial villainy would be have a great deal of topical interest. Later the play was renamed "Streets of New York" (or "Chicago" or "Richmond" or "New Orleans"), and taken on tour. It has been playing, in one form or another, ever since.

Will the UMass community be seeing a "Streets of Amherst"? "No" said Director Catalano, "the play doesn't need this device to be popular. Its present-day appeal lies in its quality of nostalgia, and it's sure to be a favorite for a long time to come.

Orlando to Host Bowl Game

Orlando, Fla., host city of the Tangerine Bowl, offers many things of interest for visitors.

Located in Central Florida, the city has the nightclubs and restaurants of a metropolitan area with a population of 400,000.

In addition the spectator sports of jai-alai, dog-racing and harness racing are in the area.

The game is played in the city's Municipal Stadium. For the first time this year, the attraction is under the sponsorship of the Orlando Elks and the NCAA.

The bowl game, which will be played at night, will decide the NCAA Atlantic Coast Division Championship. The Orlando Stadium seats 10,000 spectators.

The Orlando Chamber of Commerce is sending 5,000 tourist brochures to the UMass campus so that interested students can get additional information.

Unlike its noted big cousins—the Rose Bowl, Orange Bowl and others—the Tangerine Bowl does not include a parade and other festivities.

Medical School Site Remains Open Question

Dean Lamar Soutter said that all of the sites for the University Medical School are still in the running and on an equal footing.

He made the comment this week, following publication of the Harvard Medical Alumni Bulletin backing of Amherst as the best site for the Med School.

Soutter said that he was pleased by what he termed a "friendly article" in the Bulletin.

Harvard for Amherst

The Harvard Medical Alumni Bulletin fall issue says "six professional groups have surveyed the state and all of them have ranked Amherst first."

Dean George P. Berry of the Harvard Medical faculty declared: "The new medical school should be located in Amherst, where it can be integrated with the parent university. No matter where it finally stands, I shall do whatever I can to help the new institution attain the highest standards of medical education and patient care."

Harvard's argument in favor of Amherst is this:

"Having the medical school at the site of the university is the salient attraction in recruitment of a strong, fulltime, pre-clinical faculty, who can use its other departments. Faculty members today are more apt to prefer an environment with university colleagues with whom they can work than the attractions of a large, urban area.

Low Patient Ratio

"Outside of the Boston area, the state's doctor-patient ratio is very low as compared with other states and specialized hospitals are few and far between." It points out that the Worcester area has grown by three per cent during the last decade. During the same length of time the Springfield-Amherst area has grown by 17 per cent."

As for Boston as a site, Harvard says that the three medical schools now here are already utilizing all the patients available for teaching in Boston, "and their number is shrinking all the time.

The three existing medical schools would be undermined by a fourth one in the area according to the Bulletin article.

Japanese Actors To Perform

One result of the growing interest in the Orient is a performance of Japanese Noh drama by Japanese actors Nov. 23. Sponsored by a Four-College faculty seminar, the production will take place in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m. and is open to the public free of charge.

Actors Sadayo Kita and Akiyo Tomoeda will perform and comment on Noh drama. The actors came to the United States from Tokyo to direct a workshop production of a Noh play for the Institute for Advanced Studies in the Theater Arts in New York City.

Noh is an ancient Japanese theater art based on a synthesis of song, dance, instrumental music and drama. The production will feature authentic masks, wigs and costumes from Japan.

James D. Ellis, assistant professor of English at Mount Holyoke, is reponsible for bringing the production to this area. Along with faculty members from Amherst and the University, he took part this summer in a seminar on Japanese culture, making a special study of drama. Other faculty members studied Japanese linguistics, sculpture, literature, film, and political, philosophical and reli-

Revelers Night Planned

Revelers Scholarship Night on December 4th will feature three hitmaking Rock n' Roll groups presently touring the country: "The Crests," who sang to fame "16 Candles" and "Step by Step," "Dickie and the Sierras" who specialize in monkey rhythms and Beatle tunes, and a five-man acrobatic vocal group, "The Conservatones."

The three groups will alternate to provide music for dancing from 7:30-12:00 p.m., in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission to the Rock n' Roll show will be $1.00. All proceeds are to go toward a scholarship which will be awarded to an undergraduate of the University at Student Leader's Night in the spring.

Tickets may be purchased on November 30.

PRE-MARITAL SEX . . .

At 1:05 a nervous Arts woman drifted in, made herself a cup of coffee and stared at the ceiling.

Two other students arrived and settled down to their box lunches with oddly smug smiles. Finally someone said something about sex.

"Sexual intercourse before marriage depends on individual feelings and ideals," one avid participant in the discussion ventured. This was at 1:15.

At 1:20 a Ghanian student appeared, eager to learn about the Canadian outlook on pre-marital sex. "Most in my country want to marry virgins," he said.

At 1:30 he pulled out a pipe and started to smoke. The nervous woman leaned back in her chair and fidgeted with her volume of Bertrand Russell's "The Problems of Philosophy."

"All this fuss about sex is ridiculous," someone began.

At 1:40 a car went by outside. A student yawned.

Once more it has been proved; neither sex, socialism, sin, or Shintoism elicits more than a yawn from this complacent campus. At 1:42, McGill, satiated after its orgy, turned on its side and continued its eternal sleep.

Hillel Club Begins Prep. For Festival

B'nai Brith Hillel Foundation has begun preparations for its annual Chanukah festival. Hillel president Fred Lazin has announced the appointment of Carol Levine and Norman Lovitch as co-chairman of the exent, which is the colorful highlight of Hillel's fall activities.

This year the Hillel Foundation has increased its membership by 35% and has inaugurated a weekly coffee hour during which Hillel students can "kibbutz" (chat).

People interested in taking a more active part in the upcoming festival should report to the Hillel office.

Bowl Game Viewing Probable

by Joel Hartstone

The chances of UMass students seeing the Tangerine Bowl Game on Dec. 12 are better than 50% the University News office recently released. Although the means of bringing the game to the campus are at this time uncertain, there are several possibilities.

The preferred method would be for the game to be carried on commercial television. Channel 22 in Springfield has expressed a desire to carry the game, but is still hesitant to bear the total price of the telecast. The station officials have stated that if a Boston station would help bear the cost, then they would definitely be interested in carrying the game.

WBZ (Channel 4) in Boston has also expressed interest, but they are as yet unsure of being able to pre-empt their network shows. As Saturday night is considered the most prime time on the air, there is doubt as to whether this is possible. They have also expressed interest in airing the game on WBZ radio since the regular Redmen Network station (WORL) goes off the air at 6 o'clock.

There are also several minor possibilities for airing the game. If by some means, the game could be changed to a day game, WBZ would definitely carry it. Also under consideration is the possibility of video taping the game and showing it after the 11 o'clock news.

The NCAA is also working to get the game televised. It is trying to sell all four games to one network for telecasting in the respective areas of the games. This has been unsuccessful in recent year, and results for this year are doubtful.

As a last resort, due to the price, closed circuit TV is also being considered. However, the cost (min. of $12,000) is such that the University may not be able to back the production alone. One suggestion might be to get newspaper backing as Boston College did for their Bowl Game. The Boston Globe underwrote the production with all profits donated to the Kennedy Memorial.

The possibility of UMass students seeing their team in action is fairly good at this time. Definite plans for WBZ should be known by Monday, and closed-circuit TV arrangements can be held back until Dec. 1.

Catching Colds at UMass

By Mike Chuman

Students of UMass, now is the time for all of you to stand up and be counted! You too can join the millions of Americans who annually lose $5 billion in production, wages, and medical expenses. Your grades may be getting a shade too high, so here on a few helpful hints to aid you in catching your own official "Doozy" of a cold.

Since most people in the U.S. catch two or three colds a year, and the A.M.A. has said that no matter what climate you move to, you can't miss out on the fun of sneezing, sniffling, etc., you, as faithful Umies have an extraordinary advantage in that you live in the delightfully cryogenic Pioneer Valley. So if you'll just follow this advice, you will soon find yourself among the happily wretching cold-sufferers.

First, forget about eating the right foods, as they may lead to building up what is called "resistance". Missing the sumptuous culinary masterpieces of our commons may be painful at first, but living out of our many well-stocked machines is better for your purpose. Second, sleep can give impetus to this "resistance", so try to get a minimum; fight to stay awake during late shows, and pull a few "all-nighters" in preparation for your Basket weaving 87 quiz. And when it's damp or rainy out, make it a point to get soggy. Light coats when its subfreezing with gales, and no coats when it's just a nippy 45 degrees out can help also. Finally, it may interest you to know that one well-placed sneeze can fire 20,000 virus-bearing droplets a distance of 12 feet at 150 fps, so be sure to hang around those who already have their colds. And if you should miss a wheezing buddy at lunch, try to sit where he sat, as these viruses can remain airborne for up to a half-hour.

The task is not a difficult one, and you now have useful material to guide you on to your goal. So onward (sniff) Umies, Dr. (wheeze) Gage and (wretch) associates eargerly await you!

On Other Campi

(Fort Worth, Texas) . . . If Texas Christian University students saw or thought they saw an elephant on their campus last week, they were not mistaken. They only had to worry about whether it was pink or not. The elephant was transported to campus to aid in the Homecoming Festivities . . . The University Post Office has informed the students, faculty, and departments that they may mail frogs, other live specimens, chemicals, and cash.

(General) . . . Many a person to day thinks he is saved when he is damned by his own self-interest.

(Halifax, Nova Scotia) . . . The students at Dalhousie Univ. are no longer allowed to bring beer, liquor, wine, or other alcoholic beverages to football games. The crackdown on drinking at these games was due to the drunkenness, swearing, and general rowdyness encountered.

Professors Rig College's Mock Vote

To teach the student body that "the price of liberty is eternal vigilance—and don't anyone of you forget it" two political science professors at Goucher College in Townsend, Md. rigged the voting machine used in a campus mock election for President.

In the all-school election held last week, the vote originally stood at 311-163 in favor of Senator Barry Goldwater.

The results were in by 5 p.m.; by 6:30, the entire student body was huddled into little unbelieving enclaves. Even the campus conservatives couldn't believe it.

After writing a biting editorial, the editor of the student newspaper called one of the professors who had set up the machine to determine whether he would stand by his statement prior to the balloting that "the way Goucher goes is the way the East Coast will go."

He admitted that the machine had been fixed so that the first 200 votes that Johnson got were carried over to Goldwater. The actual vote was 363-111 in favor of Johnson.

The people who hadn't voted began to forgive themselves. Some of the Goldwater fans were furious, but one admitted: "I knew it wasn't true anyway." The newspaper editor had to write a new editorial. And Goucher agreed that in the defense of liberty, it was necessary to watch out for political science professors.

J IS FOR JAZZ

Wilson Debuts — Getz Back

By Rez

Last Friday night, we had the pleasure of seeing in concert the Boston debut of Miss Nancy Wilson at the Back Bay Theater. Despite the poor band accompaniment, Sweet Nancy electrified the audience for the entire length of her performance. She glided through such favorites as "Guess Who I Saw Today," "How Glad I Am," and "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please come Home." She has changed both her singing approach and her stage poise since we saw her last at Newport '63. Rounding out the program were the Swingle Singers from Paris. This octet's album "Bach's Greatest Hits" (Philips) has been selling well across the country. In spite of the concert beginning late and ending early, it was an evening well spent.

RECORD REVIEWS: Among the better releases received this week was a package from VERVE. An album that rates five stars on anyone's rating scale is the new offering by Stan Getz and Astrud Gilberto. The public has waited a long time since "The Girl From Ipanema" and "Getz Au Go Go" is one album to be added to your collection. Making a special appearance on this "live" recording at New York's newest Jazz spot is Antonio Carlos Jobim, the writer of Desafinado. Selections include "Corcovado," "It might As Well Be Spring," and "One Note Samba."

Also from Verve is Lalo Schifrin's latest "New Fantasy." The title song is the recurrent theme of New York's WNEW. Also featured are "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue" and "The Peanut Vendor." The album is full of variety and swings from beginning to end.

The American Jazz Ensemble premieres in fine style for EPIC in "New Dimensions." This album is good in spots, but fair for the rating. Timing is good on "Short on Bread" and "Deep River."

The Incredible Jimmy Smith's holiday release is "Christmas '64." Jimmy seems to get better on every record he makes and this VERVE LP is no exception Especially good are the big band sounds of "Jingle Bells" and "The Christmas Song." The album also contains some tracks of the trio.

From ARGO in Chicago comes The Three Souls on "The Dangerous Dan Express." Our good friend Del Shields of WDAS in Philadelphia reports that this album is being received quite well in that area; however, we find here that the album is more or less Rock and Roll and cannot qualify for a JAZZ rating. Miles Davis' "Milestones," however, is done up in fine jazz style.

REZ SAYS: We received a fine release from the 1964 Intercollegiate JAZZ Fest at Villanova. Although I have my doubts about Jazz being dead on this campus, it certainly is encouraging to know that JAZZ is being received so well at

Orchard Hill Nears Completion

By Alan Rice

The Orchard Hill dorm complex, subject of so much criticism early in the school year, has been transformed from the semi-complete stage to the luxury housing unit it was intended to be in only two months.

John C. Welles, director of housing, in an interview with The Collegian, reported that all important internal works were completed within a month of the beginning of the semester and that the majority of all work under way now will be completed by Christmas.

THE INCONVENIENCES students met upon entering the Orchard Hill dorms in September—lack of hot water, heating, electrical power and elevator service—were eliminated within a few weeks.

Welles listed four major projects still to be finished on the hill, and he stressed that these should be done in four to six weeks. They are installation of permanent electrical power, automatic heating system, intercoms and regular telephone, and the completion of site work. The electrical system and site work completion will nearly coincide since the presence of temporary transformers and external wire has prevented any major headway on the grading around the buildings. The electrical contractor is expected to be done between the Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations — two to three months ahead of the deadline set by the University. Work is being done with bulldozers and graders and the pace will increase until all cleanup and preliminary landscaping is done.

EARLY COMPLETION — perhaps two weeks—for the automatic heating units is seen by Welles. The permanent heating system will be regulated according to outside temperature and will be fully automatic. In addition, it will provide a complete supply of hot water—hot water service is limited now so that if at once, the water is only luke warm.

Orchard Hill telephones will be linked to the rest of the campus this week when units are installed on each floor of the four buildings. A few payphones have been in service since early October.

The phone installation will mark the last step in providing the social conveniences for Orchard Hill residents. Lounges, television rooms and recreation rooms with ping pong tables have already been put into full operation.

WELLES SAID one reason for the rapid work in the past two months has been the cooperation the residents of Dickinson, Field, Grayson and Webster Houses have given the contractors. This has been appreciated by him and the Housing Office staff.

Saturday night's performance of The Pajama Game has been sold out. Seats for Fri. evening's show at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Theatre are going fast. Good seats remain for the Matinee, Sat. Nov. 21. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

The MAC boarding house has enlarged its membership from 42 to 60 and still has more applicants than it can accommodate. The other boarding houses are full to overflowing.

SPORTS—LET'S FIGHT NICE

In describing the first game of the "90's" season, in which MAC lost 30-0, the sports editor commented, "The Aggie men all played a clean, gentlemanly game throughout and though often receiving severe provocations, did not descend into slugging."

A LETTER HOME

Dear Mother:

We have to keep regular hours as we must have our lights out by 9 p.m. The clock stopped one night and the next thing I knew I heard the janitor yell "lights out." I blew mine out and went to bed in the dark. Now I go to bed about half-past eight. I am too sleepy to sit up and study.

The sophomores are rough, they won't let us carry canes and one day they stacked my room. I am going to keep in my room nights now, because the Sophs say they will initiate me into the Owl Club and put me in the fountain.

The Morris Drum Corps goes to the Belchertown fair today to see the fair ladies, we presume, as much as to furnish music.

RETURNING FROM HOME

It was observed that the ride back to Amherst after the Christmas vacation was enlivened by the usual amusing incidents, and that the train, the Reading Express, contained one car full of Smith College students.

AT THE APOTHECARY

At Morgan's Pharmacy, students were reminded in an Aggie advertisement, that tobacco, pipes, confectionery and coal—presumably for the dorm room—could be had.

Chorale Conductor Returns

The Univ. of Mass. Chorale welcomes back its conductor Dr. John R. King from a sabbatical semester, which concluded with a round-the-world tour of organ recitals and lectures on choir conducting. Dr. King performed on the organ in New Zealand, Switzerland, Austria, England and Scotland.

The Chorale is both a credit course and an RSO member and has a membership of 80. Membership is open to all qualified persons.

A recent high point in the group's history was their appearance last spring with the Concert Band in the University's Fine Arts Festival. The Chorale also travelled to Palmer for a well-received program at Palmer High School.

Plans for the coming year include the traditional Christmas Concert scheduled for Dec. 13, at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. This concert will feature the beautiful "Gloria", by Antonio Vivaldi, as well as smaller works by Buxtehude, Hovhannes, and the modern American composer Arthur Shepherd.

Those interested in joining should contact Dr. King in room 4 of Old Chapel, Extensions 2227 or 2657.

In the past students have been handled quietly, in sympathy for the persons caught, now shoplifters will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Under the law, any theft of goods amounting to more than $10 in value is not just a misdemeanor, but is grand larceny, a criminal offense. A larceny record is permanent, and can plague a person all his life.

The explanation for student theft was that it is a lark and sometimes it becomes a "game."

Greeks To Present Skits

The Panhellenic and the Interfraternity Councils will present the 1964 Skits on Monday, Nov. 18 in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the Skits will be donated by the fraternities and sororities to the fund established to enable the UMass band to accompany the football team to the Tangerine Bowl.

Tickets for next Monday's Skits will be sold on campus by Panhellenic and Interfraternity representatives. Admission for this performance will be 50 cents.

Sororities and fraternities were paired at random for the Skits, and together they will prepare an act including 20 people and lasting approximately 10 minutes. Cash prizes will be awarded to the winning skit and its writer.

Four criteria will be used for judging the performances: originality, participation and enthusiasm, histrionics, and direction.

Professors Must Approve Absences

There will be no time off from classes for students going to the Tangerine Bowl Game, the Collegian learned recently.

Any student going to the bowl game will have to do so on his own time.

According to the Administration "students should remember that the cut regulations would be in effect at this time and hope that their instructors would be sympathetic."

It would be impossible for the administration to excuse students from classes for this purpose, and action on any absence for this reason would be up to the instructor involved.

WMUA

JFK Special Broadcast

WMUA will present a special program on the assassination of President Kennedy this Sunday at 6:45. The program will consist of a taped chronological report of the occurrences of that fateful day exactly as they happened.

The inconsistencies in the tape are due to the lack of adequate information available at the time. However, the tape captures the intense emotion felt by all during the hours immediately following the death of the President.

Former Station Manager Jim O'Hearn narrates the program, which contains many of the press releases and commentaries made that day about President Kennedy, his political history, and the assassination.

From 7:45 to 8:00, immediately following the taped portion of the show, a follow-up commentary will be presented. This commentary will deal primarily with the findings of the Warren Commission.

Hillel Services To Host German Dept. Guests

Tonight the Hillel services will be highlighted by faculty guests who will lead an informal discussion on topics of their choice.

The guests will be Dr. Enrlich a member of the philosophy department at the University, and his wife, a member of the German department.

This is an ideal opportunity for freshmen to meet their faculty and learn about their University.

The services will begin at 7:00 tonight in the Worcester Room of the Student Union. The Oneg Shabbat and discussion will follow.

All are invited to attend.

Gridmen Select Tri-captains In '65

Three outstanding juniors have been elected tri-captains of the UMass varsity football team for the 1965 season. Center Bernie Dallas (Philadelphia, Pa.), halfback Bob Ellis (Beverly) and end Bob Meers (Hudson) were elected by a vote of the Redmen this week. It is the first time that Massachusetts has ever elected tri-captains to lead its football team.

Dallas, 6' 215, missed the final portion of the season with a knee injury. But his performances as a sophomore and in the opening games this fall demonstrated excellent ability as an offensive center and defensive linebacker. Bernie has established himself as one of the smartest and most outstanding interior UMass lineman in many years. He is a graduate of Germantown (Pa.) Academy and is majoring in Hotel Management. Dallas has been president of his class at UMass for three years. He is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Ellis, 6'1 199, moved into the starting left halfback spot in the second game of his soph season and has started every game since. He netted 129 yards rushing last fall and led the team with four pass interceptions. This fall Bob netted 361 yards rushing for a 5.4 average, scored three touchdowns, caught six passes for 74 yards and intercepted twice. Ellis developed into the best blocking halfback as well as one of the surest tacklers in the defensive secondary. He is majoring in Physical Education and is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity

Meers, 6'2 215, has been a two-year regular. Bob led the Redmen in pass receiving as a soph with 19 for 270 yards and increased these totals to 24 receptions for 298 yards this fall. His sure-handedness and ability to run pass patterns to near-perfection have earned him a reputation as one of the East's finest ends. He was an All Yankee Conference selection as a sophomore. Meers is majoring in Food Management and is also a member of Kappa Sigma tion with a score of 2070. Closest competitor was Rutgers with a 2013, Penn Military trailed with a score of 1857.

Dallas, Ellis and Meers have been highly instrumental in leading the Redmen to a two-year varsity record of 16 wins, one loss and tie plus two Yankee Conference Championships.

High individual score of the day went to Rutgers Team Captain, Paul Pesthy, a member of the silver medal winning 1964 U.S. Olympic pentathalon team, with a 540. He was closely followed by two Umies, acting team captain George Wietecha with a 536, and Eric Mussen, turning in a 526. Other Umie starters on the four man team were Pete Thomas with a 514, and Roger Yee with a 494.

LOOKING particulary impressive was soph sub Charley Seavey with an individual score of 519. Don Hawkes also a sub closed out the UMass individual scores with a 455, a score better than that of half of the Penn. Military Colleges first team.

This puts UMass in first position in the Conference. The Redmen looked much improved after placing second in the New England Air Force Gallery Tournament at Hanscom Air Force Base on 31 Oct. The Redmen, last years tournament champs dropped the match to Coast Guard by the agonizingly close score of one point. M.I.T., another NIPC team was a distant third in the Tournament.

NIPC COMPETITION continues this weekend as a strong Villanova team visits the Redmen on Saturday. Villanova is regarded as a slight favorite, but the Redmen, with first match jitters over, and a solid week of practice behind them, are confident of victory.

No Date for Decision

Boston, Springfield and Worcester officials are still making bids for the Medical School to the Ad Hoc Committee, made up of five trustees who will make a recommendation to the full board of trustees. It is headed by Joseph P. Healey, president of the Middlesex County National Bank.

Framingham is also interested, and Brockton entered its bid just last week-end.

Dr. Soutter said that he did not know when the Ad Hoc Committee would make its recommendation. It has just recently asked for more information in regard to comparative costs, he added.

Redmen Roundup

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

Although it appears to the layman that only glory and sunshine await the bowl bound Redmen, those included in the actual participation are quite aware of the numerous problems. Coach Fusia and staff are primarily concerned with the challenging East Carolina Pirates. But so many other controversial matters have arisen that the school as well as the athletic department is in a turnmoil.

Perfunctory details such as room, board and traveling arrangements must be made not only for the team, staff and cohorts but also for the band, cheerleaders and possible oher groups which would accompany the Redmen contingent. The band must raise approximately $12-13000 to cover the various expenses incurred. This arrangement would include the cheerleaders but not the Precisionettes. Moreover, the question of student supporters and individual transportation measures are being handled by R.S.O.

For the first time in school history, the University is participating in a post season game. This also represents the first time any Western Mass. team has indulged in bowl game fervor. Last year Northeastern met the Pirates of East Carolina in the Eastern Bowl, and were soon convinced that post season games can be lethal.

The Redmen will face a most unique offense, since East Carolina sports a devastating single wing attack. The only time that Vic Fusia dealt with this type of attack was in his capacity as an assistant coach at Pittsburgh, in 1958, against U.C.L.A. Because so few teams use the single wing, information concerning East Carolina and offense will be difficult to obtain and analyze. Coach Clarence Stasavich's Pirates are led by tailback Bill Cline and fullback Dave Alexander. Cline has passed for 944 yards and has rushed for 630. Alexander rushed 978 yards and has 16 touchdowns to his credit.

As yet, the coaching staff has not reached a final decision concerning the members of the traveling squad. The NCAA sponsors 42 for the trip, but a maximum of 35 players will be permitted to dress for actual competition. The departure date from the University has been set for early Tuesday afternoon, taking off from Bradley Field on a commercial tourist jet by early evening.

Only falacious rumors have been presented concerning a telecast of the game. Closed circuit T.V. arrangements have been cancelled, but there is still a possibility for a regional telecast. The NCAA is handling these arrangements while casually mentioning channels 22, in Springfield and 4 in Boston as possibilities.

Musical Revived

"The Streets of New York," a 19th-century melodrama revived in New York last year as a musical, will be the next offering of he University Theatre.

Assistant professor of speech Cosmo Catalano, "Streets" director, said today the Dion Boucicault play will be staged Dec. 10, 11, and 12 in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

"The Streets of New York" is a play that pits poor but honest people against a rich and not so honest villain.

Nobody ends up tied to a railroad track, but a young man does dash into a burning tenement, save some important papers, marry the good girl, and defeat the evil Gideon Bloodgood.

The University Theatre will present "The Streets of New York" as it was presented in the 1890's. Dale Amlund, a speech instructor new to the department this year, has designed painted scenery and backdrops faithful to the period.

Milton freshman Chuck Interland is cast as Captain Fairweather, one of Bloodgood's victims. The evil one himself is played by Ken Bordner, a graduate student from Massillon, Ohio.

Others in the large cast include Charles Lawrence, Frances Gasson, Robert Kostecki, Ted Buswick, Lawrence Wilker, James Stockman, Richard Guerra, and Nancy Abrams.

Bruce MacCombie, a junior from Swansea, is musical director for the show.

For Sale One College

FOR SALE: ONE COLLEGE

For only $1.5 million, you can own your own college.

Carthage College, Carthage, Illinois, is for sale—classrooms, dormitories, library, chapel, football field and a bird sanctuary, among other facilities.

The college, which until last month was a fully-accredited four-year liberal arts college for 600 students, was put up for sale when the Illinois Synod of the Lutheran Church, which ran the college, merged with three other Lutheran groups. As a result of the merger, all college facilities were moved to Kenosha, Wisconsin.

With an increasing number of high school graduates looking for colleges, there certainly is a demand for Carthage's continued use. Any undergraduate would jump at the opportunity to run his own school—if he had the $1.5 million.

Globetrotters To Perform

The Harlem Globetrotters, a basketball team that's an American institution and a world-wide attraction, will headline an evening of sports and entertainment on Tuesday, Dec. 8 at the University of Massachusetts Curry Hicks Cage.

This 39th annual edition of the Globetrotters, called by owner-coach Abe Saperstein "one of the greatest," will take on the big, talented, Washington (D.C.) Generals in the feature attraction. The evening's entertainment will be sponsored by the senior class at UMass.

Meadowlark Lemon is the head showman in the Trotter talent show. Connie Hawkins, Bobby Joe Mason, Jim Robinson, Hallie Bryant, Bill Garner, Tex Harrison, Grady McCullom, and Fred "Slippery" Neal complete the roster.

Veteran vaudeville star and famed dance Peg-leg Bates tops the list of entertainers who will appear with the Globetrotters at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Other performers include table-tennis champions Richard Bergmann of England and Lee Dal Joon of South Korea; Canadian acrobat Mike LeMay; Chinese equilibrist George Lee; acrobatic juggler Lee Marx; and Steve Parry on the trampoline.

As a special attraction the ageless wonder of the baseball world, Leroy "Satchel" Paige, will also make an appearance during the evening.

Tickets for the Globetrotters' game and allied entertainment will be on sale at the UMass Student Union.

Proceeds will go into a trust fund to provide scholarships for children of members of the Class of 1965.

Mag. Offers Contest

Mademoiselle Magazine sponsors a variety of art and writing competitions for college women. Five are in specific fields: fiction, poetry, playwriting, art and photography. All offer their winners publication and monetary awards.

The sixth, more all-encompassing, is the College Board, or Guest Editor, competition which enables qualified girls to become members of a selected student group. Mademoiselle's college board members not only report academic concerns, but they also submit projects related to their interests.

Mlle seeks girls with aptitudes for writing, art, editing, photography, layout, fashion, promotion of advertising. Perhaps of most importance to their college departments, however, is the ability to provide thoughtful commentary on the contemporary scene at their schools or in their chosen fields.

Their college department subscribes to a wide cross section of college papers and other news sources such as the Collegiate Press Service. One of its associate staff members spends much of her time persuing news reports or clippings sent by the College Board members, and writing reports to the editors on collegiate topics.

The winners of the College Board competition are twenty Guest Editors who go to Mlle's offices for the month of June as salaried employees to work with their staff and help edit the August college issue.

Their work is by-lined in the issue. Other worthwhile opportunities include on-the-job training by Mlle's editors, visits to publishing firms, newspapers and advertising agencies, and social gatherings where they meet other young people who work in New York.

Another valuable aspect of this period is the chance the girls have to meet with outstanding public figures. In recent years, they have interviewed Lee Strasberg, Adlai Stevenson, E. E. Cummings and Jules Feiffer, and written up the meetings for publication in Mademoiselle.

Guest Editors and ten honorable mentions receive top consideration for permanent jobs with Mademoiselle and other Condé Nast publications.

About the contest: the two winners of the College Fiction Competion and the winner of the new One-Act-Play Competition will each receive $500 and publication of their entries in the magazine. One story and the play will be illustrated by the two Art Competition winners, who will also receive $500 apiece. The two Poetry Competition winners each receive $100 and their published work will be presented with photographs by the two winners of the Photography Competition, who will be paid $250 each.

Baker House Remodeling

Baker House is being remodeled. Fifty rooms of the 13 year old dormitory are being redone as the first step in a long range project to make older dorms more like the new ones.

Although the refinishing work will eventually include all old dorms, Baker House is being done first. The first group of 50 rooms should by completed by Christmas.

The work, which involves all first floor and odd-shaped rooms throughout the building, will be on the lines of the Orchard complex rooms.

Built-in desks will be separated by an eight drawer dresser under the window. Individual bookcases will be attached to the wall above each side of the desk.

In addition to his four drawers in the desk dresser, each student will have a dresser in his closet. The closets, which are presently open, will be fitted with sliding wooden slat doors.

A second shelf will be added to each closet and individual 4 x 4 foot bulletin boards will be attached over each bed. Eventually, the rooms will be repainted.

The timetable for final completion is not completely set now but it is likely that Baker will be completed in batches of 50 rooms before work is started on other dorms.

Room 106 will be completed first and will serve as the model.

Present counselors' rooms are being made into permanent singles.

Angel Flight To Sell Candy

The John P. Granville Angel Flight at the University is conducting a candy sale in the area through Dec. 12. The purpose of the drive is to raise funds for the Annual National Conclave to be held in the Spring.

Angel Flight is a newcomer to the campus and is relatively young nationwide. The first Angel Flight appeared on the campus of the University of Omaha in Feb. 1952.

In 1959, in New York City, Angel Flight was nationalized. It is now recognized by the United States Air Force as an honorary service organization of dedicated college women. There are presently more than one hundred Angel Flights on campuses throughout the nation.

WBZ-TV Interviews Geology Prof.

Professor Ward S. Motts, Associate Professor of the UMass Geology Department, was interviewed by W.B.Z.-TV, Boston channel 4, for a documentary on the present drought situation.

Motts is a member of the Water Resources Committee at the University. He was formerly with the U.S. Geological Survey, Ground Water Branch, before joining the Geology Staff in 1961. He has done considerable consulting for many neighboring communities on various water problems.

B.C. To Host Upperclass Law Institute

A unique institute for college upperclassmen interested in a career in law will be conducted at the Boston College Law School on Saturday, December 5, 1964.

The program to be offered will include a typical class in law school, a forum on careers in the legal profession and a moot court or mock trial sponsored by the students of the Boston College Law School.

This study is open to all students without charge or registration. The program starts at the legal profession at 3:15 p.m. 9:00 a.m. and will conclude after the showing of new films on

All upperclassmen attending the institute will be guests of the Boston College Law School for lunch.

The Pre-Law Association will make transportation arrangements. Contact Paul Rodman Collegian, Box 136.

Pre-Law Assoc. Convenes

The Pre-Law Association of the University introduced its new constitution to its growing membership during a coffee hour last Thursday in the Student Union. The new constitution was felt to express more clearly the aims and purposes of the newly re-activated Pre - Law Association.

As set in the newly accepted constitution, the goal of the Association is to bring to each member of the University community a better understanding of the broad and important field of law. After the new constitution was read by the constitution committee, it was unanimously accepted by the members.

Incumbent persident Don Boyd presided over the election of new officers. The Association's charter officers under the new constitution are:

President, Paul Rodman; Vice-President, Fred Cendella; Secretary, Peter Amaral; Treasurer, Jacquelyn Hall.

The new officers assumed their duties immediately after the election.

Under the order of new business, committees were established to investigate the formation of the Association's library of law school catagories and information. They also wish to determine the feasibility and advisability of the Association remaining an autonomous organization or of becoming an affiliate of R.S.O.

Dr. H. Richard Hartzler of the School of Business Administration and the Association's advisor outlined to the members the Association's immediate program for the forthcoming weeks. Also announced at this time was a scheduled visit from the Dean of the University of Maine Law School under the Association's auspices on December 2.

ed the business meeting and

An informal discussion followplans were set for another coffee hour immediately following the Thanksgiving recess.

The Association extends an invitation to all students, regardless of their major course of study, to attend its meetings and to become members.

JOURNALISM . . .

The Journalism part of the program consists of two-on-the-job reading and writing courses conducted by Professor Musgrave, each course lasting one year and giving three hours of credit with one summer workshop at the end of the first course for an intensive three weeks of study in a standard "content" course in Journalism. Successful completion of this program leads to the awarding of a certificate jointly by the University and by the New England Society of Newspaper Editors. Those receiving the certificate who are accepted to an appropriate graduate department, such as economics, English, government, history, psychology or sociology, may proceed toward the M.A., in that department, counting the certificate as a nine-credit minor.

Mr. Milton Mayer, noted author and campus lecturer, has initiated a joint proposal with Professor Musgrave to reconvene the Commission on Freedom of the Press, which issued a report that caused a stir some years after the conclusion of World War II. The University administration is offering facilities and partial support and Mr. Mayer is now approaching the distinguished surviving members of the Commission, whom he believes will be interested. A reconvening of the Commission at this University would certainly attract nationwide attention and might possibly lead to some such voluntary "watchdog" group of the sort established some years back in Britain.

MRA Director at Amherst

Peter Howard, director of Moral ReArmament, will give a public lecture on Monday, Nov. 23, in Johnson Chapel, Amherst College, at 8:00 p.m. The title of his address will be "Tomorrow May Be Too Late."

Born in London and educated at Oxford, Howard has established an international reputation as playwright, political columnist, author, sports writer, lecturer and farmer. In this last capacity, he is the owner of a famous farm in East Anglia which he has used as headquarters since 1937.

In the 1930s, Howard became the leading political columnist for Lord Beaverbrook's newspapers. As co-author of the book, Guilty Men, he is considered to have played a significant part in arousing opinion against appeasement of Hitler, and preparing for the advent of Winston Churchill as wartime Prime Minister. He is also well known as a sportsman, having captained the All-England rugby team and broken three world records at the Cortina d'Ampezzo bob-sled championships.

Howard is a prolific writer whose 14 books have sold more than four million copies and have been translated into twelve different languages; his 16 plays have run successfully on four continents.

Some Must Work

While most people are home eating Thanksgiving dinner with their families, Student Union employees will be working, members of the Operetta Guild will be preparing to return to campus the next day, foreign and special students will be celebrating the holiday on campus or in neighboring homes, and some professors and administrators may be catching up on their work.

For the first time in the history of the Student Union, a Thanksgiving dinner will be served in the Hatch. The meal is scheduled from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Anyone, who will be on campus and plans to take advantage of this program, is asked to notify the cashier in the Hatch. Union manager, Mr. Regan, expects from ten to thirty people.

Since the rest of the building will remain closed Thanksgiving Day, students are asked to enter the Hatch through the door in the corner by the parking lot.

S.U. employees will also be on campus the remaining days of vacation.

Two dorms will be open throughout the vacation: Brooks for the women and Webster for the men. Each has about ten students already signed up.

Operetta Guild members will return to campus Friday evening, Nov. 27, for rehearsal of the Pajama Game. They will leave early Saturday for Keene, N.H., where they will perform in the evening. They plan to return to campus late Saturday night.

Invitations to Thanksgiving dinner are being sent to all foreign students. Many will be going home with other students for the holiday.

The personnel office has sent a statement to all departments stating that all professors and administrators may have Thursday and Friday off unless their department specificially requests them to stay.

Admission Policy Explained

Dean of Amherst College Admissions, Eugene S. Wilson disclosed in his 18th annual report to secondary schools, "Admission to Amherst College in 1964," that 1,850 students applied for the 300 positions available in the entering class.

The record of each candidate is read and rated by at least three members of the nine-man admission committee. Of this year's 1,850 applicants, Dean Wilson said that, "approximately 1,000 received A's from all the readers; and most of the other 850 were qualified." By re-studying the records, this group was then reduced to the 410 candidates finally admitted.

In the final screening procedure, the nine - man admission committee looks for academic and extracurricular interests and achievements, geographical distribution of schools and homes, hobbies, jobs held, and personal characteristics.

"Since we seek diversification in terms of interest and achievements," Dean Wilson reported, "candidates whose greatest strength is in mathematics or science (including medicine) face a more competitive admission situation than students in the non-sciences. About 70 per cent of our applicants seem to be tentatively headed for math-science majors, but we try to give

In Memoriam

1917-1963

Thirty-fifth President of the United States

1961-1963

From his Inaugural Address

January 20, 1961

. . . man holds in his mortal hands the power to abolish all forms of human poverty and all forms of human life. And yet the same revolutionary beliefs for which our forebears fought are still at issue around the globe—belief that the rights of man come not from the generosity of the state, but from the hand of God.

We dare not forget today that we are the heirs of that first revolution. Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans—born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage—and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this Nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world.

Let every nation know whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

This much we pledge—and more.

ARE WE GRATEFUL

There may be some justification to the argument that America has over-commercialized the passing of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, that a stunned people have revered an admittedly fine President beyond his due. Too much has been written and pictured, some contend, too many places re-named, too much done and passed in his name—too exalted has been our commemoration of him above that of the founding fathers.

This is the feeling some may have, this the thought they might intelligently debate. Right reason may, indeed, be theirs, but not the sympathies and attention of a revitalized nation, into whose veins John Kennedy pumped a richer blood.

A year ago this Thanksgiving season, tables across the country were laden as they had been since the first Thanksgiving with the produce of a bountiful land. And yet it seemed somehow as if the harvest had been lost. How could a nation of families band together in a spirit of thanks while one of their numbers endured so much sorrow?

John F. Kennedy told the world to move ahead—and that it did—but not without casting a wondering glance to the past. What had his life really meant? How could we best measure up?

John Fitzgerald Kennedy called all the nation to seize upon a new fervor, a new pioneering drive and determination, fashioned after that which had brought our fathers through death and disappointment to the first Thanksgiving. If in his death, as in so many sorrowful events, we have found, and pledged ourselves to, a new spirit, than his life was a blessing for which we can be truly thankful this season.

Our University represents a community center for the very thought, idea, theory, and freedom which will shape tomorrow's human endeavor. But are we grateful for being here? Are we grateful for the privilege and opportunity of fighting for uncensored press? Are we grateful for the exchange of ideas over coffee, for the myriad of contacts which help mature our thinking, for the opportunity to question distinguished lecturers or hear educators in debate? Or are we too apathetic to see anything but crowded conditions, tagged cars, and lost exam points?

"The world is the Lords, and the fullness thereof . . ."
Life was John Kennedy's, and there was fullness therein.
The University is ours, but for what thereof are we thankful?

Dave Moore

A Tribute

. . . . In whatever arena of life one may meet the challenge of courage, whatever may be the sacrifices he faces if he follows his conscience—the loss of his friends, his fortune, his contentment, even the esteem of his fellow men—each man must decide for himself the course he will follow. The stories of past courage can define that ingredient—they can teach, they can offer hope, they can provide inspiration. But they cannot supply courage itself. For this each man must look into his own soul.

—John F. Kennedy, Profiles in Courage

A year has passed since the death of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. During this time his memory has been enshrined in the hearts of men everywhere.

He was a great man, yet a humble man. He was just as eager to talk to the average citizen as to the distinguished diplomat. He felt equally at home in the glamour of Washington and in the rustic simplicity of his native New England.

He was a gentle man, yet a firm man. His warmth and youthfulness were felt by all who knew him. He was quick to come to the aid of the down-trodden. Yet, he was a man of principle, a man of determination. He knew how to take a stand when the welfare of the country and the people he loved so much was in jeopardy.

Above all, John Fitzgerald Kennedy was a man of courage. He was well aware of the pitfalls of loyalty, but he was not one to avoid hardship or responsibility. During the fighting in the South Pacific, on the floor of the Senate, and in the office of the Presidency, he continually maintained the qualities of a dedicated leader who puts the well-being of those he leads above his own.

We must continue to honor John Fitzgerald Kennedy and to be inspired by his courage. However, to remember him by buying souvenirs and dedicating streets, stadiums, and airports in his name is not enough. This merely amounts to hero worship which passes with time. It remains for us to honor him by searching in our souls for that spark of courage which motivates man to faithfully serve God, country, and his fellow man.

Such a moral rededication is the highest tribute we can pay to our late President. It will serve as an enduring legacy of the greatness of John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Agriculture And T.V.

Once again, the battle over agriculture's "image" has caused bad feelings on campus. With the influx of more and more PhD's into the field that used to belong to the learn-from-pappa farmer, the idea that agriculture is slightly sinful is spreading everywhere.

So, what happens if some College of Agriculture kids are offered a berth on a TV show? Simple. Make sure they wear a suit and discuss something like "Hyperattenuated nematode pudendum and its effect on the metacarpal development of the genus Avioli margerans. This will impress the TV public and they will realize that agriculture schools aren't turning out farmers anymore. They're turning out all kinds of ologists, and nobody really knows who's going to grow the food.

In short, the business of agriculture is like the bathroom—it exists, but let's not talk about it, please. In this age when repairmen become technical service representatives, janitors are custodians, and housewives become career mothers, it's only fitting that we glamorize agriculture with a shiny, chrome-plated image. How about the Institute for Alimentary Proveners? Some folks are plugging for a title that includes "environmental sciences," but what is a non-environmental science"?

As far as we can see, the only non-environmental things hereabouts are certain bureacrats whose science is whim and a very unenlightened view of reality.

GREEK UNITY

To the Editor:

This year the Greek system has shown itself to be a more cohesive unit than in the past. The fraternities and sororities have been working together on a number of projects which have resulted in increased unity and cooperation. One of the major effects is shown in the success of the U.N. Carnival which donated to the United Nations the two hundred dollars collected.

This month the fraternities are working with sororities for the first time to put on the Greek skits. It is believed that this endeavor will provide rather interesting entertainment and is designed to benefit the entire University community.

Another new policy which has been instituted is having meetings between the social chairmen, rush chairmen and stewards of each of the fraternities to acquaint these officers with basic goals and philosophies in other houses. These discussions will also help the officers to obtain new ideas which will be beneficial to both the individual houses and to the system as a whole. The ultimate purpose is to encourage more fraternity men to understand the workings of the system and consequently to facilitate its operation.

The main coordinators of these new programs have been Pan Hel and I.F.C. With this accent on unity and cooperation there is sure to be an increase in the quality and quantity of Greek activities during the coming year.

Increased Bus Service

To the Editor:

The Student Senate Services Committee has arranged with the Peter Pan main business office to provide an excursion bus service from the University to Boston at 6:00 P.M. this Wednesday. Two buses will be on hand and if conditions warrant, one of the buses will be designated as an express service to Boston. The other bus will be the usual service from the University to Springfield to Boston. The regular 4:55 and 7:40 departures will not be changed.

SELECTION

To the editor:

Mr. Hartsone's commendable editorial on the "Process of Selection" needs one comment. Consciencious as the method of picking students for the University may be, checking much more carefully into an applicant's "non-academic" background is a necessity. A student's academic makeup and his moral makeup may be in discord. There have been enough books stolen in the past nine weeks to sink a small ship and enough coats and jackets taken to distend the belly of the Monster That Ate Anything. Jus today a typewriter worth over $100 was stolen from the room of a student while he was at class. I realize how sincere the admissions staff is in its job, but it can't be perfect. To combat these selfish undesirables who are, unfortunately, admitted, I suggest that all students adapt the Air Force Honor Code which reads: "I will not lie, cheat, or steal, and I will not allow among my associates anyone who will violate these precepts."

In this very tightly-knit organization called the U of M we must all work together for the better or suffer.

Ken Sherman, 40 Webster House

Editor's Note: It is hardly feasible to expect the admissions department to act as a criminal investigation board and still maintain the high level of performance which they achieve in their designated duties. It may interest you to know, however, that in their recommendation, the applicant's high school will often mention a criminal record. More important, they will nearly always reflect to some degree on the candidate's moral fibre.

Tired of YAHOO

To the Editor,

One gets tired of it all.

One gets tired of the angry critics demanding their money back. One gets tired of the Yahoo editors justifying their scatology on the grounds that it upsets their critics. One is far from cheered by the news that the inevitable Yahoo fete of post-publication self-congratulation is now to become a quarterly occurence.

There are five good, objective criticisms which can be leveled at Yahoo.

1. The magazine is consciously obscene.
2. The material and subject matter is sophomoric, displaying a lack, or a crude, ill-developed appreciation of satiric skill.
3. The magazine is consistently repetitive from issue to issue.
4. There is a total absence of constructive comment.
5. The magazine and its editors are insufferably provincial.

But who really cares? The Yahoos (I have been a contributor-staff member and know them) won't understand criticism—they are more inclined to judge their own efforts by their own sadly rationalistic standards. The student body has never been really offended or angered by the Yahoos' lack of artistic competence. And I myself would not like to see the humor magazine done in because of the failings of one small group of hacks.

What I plead for instead, gentlemen, is a tiny display of honesty. Please change your motto from the hypocritical "excelsior" to a more descriptive "ennui."

S. American To Present Art Exhibit

The UMass art department opened an exhibit of paintings by the Uruguayan artist, Julio Alpuy, on Sunday.

Alpuy's works will remain on display through Dec. 5.

The Uruguayan artist has exhibited on an international scale in both group and one-man shows.

His work has been shown at the J. Walter Thompson World Gallery of Contemporary Art in Yew York, at Centro de Artes y Letras "El Pais" in Montevideo, Uruguay, and at the "Magnet New York" exhibition at New York City's Bonino Gallery.

Alpuy began art studies in 1940 with Joaquin Torres Garcia. He was teacher-in-charge at the Montevideo studio from 1946 to 1951 and again from 1954 to 1957.

Alpuy is one of the original members of the "Taller Torres Garcia," a school which has had considerable influence on Uruguayan and South American art.

NDEA Grants Are Doubled For UMass.

Dr. Edward C. Moore, dean of the graduate school at the University, announced last Thursday that the University has been awarded 23 new National Defense Education Act graduate fellowships for the 1965-66 academic year.

"This is twice the number," Dean Moore said, "awarded to us in any previous year and indicates the University's graduate program is maintaining a stature commensurate with its increase in size."

In addition to the 23 new fellowships, Dean Moore said, UMass already has 24 graduate students studying under previously awarded NDEA fellowships.

The NDEA fellowship program is intended to increase the number of well-trained college and university teachers. Fellowships are awarded to able students working toward the Ph.D.

The UMass departments of English, geology, philosophy and sociology each received four of the new NDEA fellowships. Three were given to the department of chemical engineering, and two of the new fellowships to the German and French departments.

Caution During Nov. and Dec. Registrar Urges

The Registry of Motor Vehicles today strongly urged the 2.5 million motorists in Massachusetts to take special care and caution while operating their motor vehicles during the last two months of this year.

Each day for the remainder of the year, darkness will come a little bit sooner. This reduced visibility increases the chances and hazards of motor vehicle accidents.

The Registry is especially concerned since through Nov. 9, 1964, Massachusetts had already experienced 619 fatalities because of motor vehicle accidents.

November and December are traditionally months of high automobile accident frequency. In 1962, there were 81 fatalities in November and 79 in December, and in 1963, 65 in November and 49 in December. Some 25,000 men, women and children were injured in automobile accidents during these two months in 1963.

Our state also faces the problem of a continuing rise in accidents involving pedestrians, and with reduced visibility in prospect for this month and for December, particular care must be taken. It is hoped that pedestrians walking on dimly-lit streets at night, particularly in suburban and rural areas where street lighting is sometimes not available, will wear something white so that they can be seen. Motorists are cautioned to be particularly aware of pedestrians while driving near shopping centers, many of which will be open nights as the Christmas season approaches.

It will require the concerted and genuine effort of all of the citizens of Massachusetts if our state is not to experience continuing record figures in the number of fatalities and accidents occurring on our roads.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

November 12th and sundry times before, hysteria broke loose in Emily Dickinson. The cause is a "modern" invention which is unknown to the plush Orchard Complex — an efficient Bell Telephone System. We are endowed with an incoming phone where no calls can come in (long distance included) and two (for 350 girls) outgoing phones which take the incoming calls. Incoming and outgoing calls, being made on the same phone can create a few problems such as neurotic inmates who can't afford a coke. Before we are all on tranquilizers or in padded cells, we appeal to all telephones which maybe floating loose about the campus . . . HELP!

Results of Bowl Poll

The Tangerine Bowl Game questionnaire showed the interest of 2,347 UMass students in which groups will be sent to support the football team. The results showed that 280 students plan to travel to Florida to view the game in person. The questionnaire response is as follows:

Do you want to see the band and cheerleaders go to the bowl? Yes — 1932: no — 378.

Would you be willing to attend "Football Highlights Night" that will include introducing the team, showing football highlights on film of the past UMass season, hearing band selections supported by our cheerleaders for a $1.00 admission charge? Yes—2054; no—293.

Would you be willing to wear tangerine colored and shaped pins that will be sold in the S.U. for 25¢ apiece?. Yes—2054; no—293.

Would you be willing to pay 20¢ for tangerines that would be sold at a latter date? Yes—1978; no—354.

Right Wing Convention

A Conservative Convention will be held in the Plymouth Rm. of the Student Union on Dec. 1, 1964 at 8:00 p.m. sponsored by Young Americans for Freedom. The purpose of the meeting will be to acquaint students with Conservative and Anti-Communist publications and groups. Among the organizations and publications that will be discussed are Young Americans for Freedom, the John Birch Society, the National Review, Human Events and The Freeman.

HARDIN CALLS . . .

"The other night, I went to a pro game," he says, "and I saw one quarterback throw short a couple of times. I just know I could do better than that," he concludes.

When Staubach graduates from Annapolis this June, he'll enter the Navy for a four-year hitch. And despite his earnest protestations to the contrary, Roger Staubach's love of football may make him a 27-year-old pro rookie quarterback in 1969, after his military obligations have been discharged.

NHL Referees Object; Charge 'Go Easy' Orders

'Administrative officials of the National Hockey League are trying to influence referees to 'go easy on the bottom teams,' " charges former referee Jack Mehlenbacher. "All the NHL is interested in is 2-1 and 3-2 scores," he says.

Dalton MacArthur, Red Storey and Eddie Powers are among a group of respected ex-referees who have made similar charges, according to sportswriter Stan Fischler.

In summation of all the referees' complaints, McArthur states, "I want to go on record that I know of no player, coach or manager who would have anything to do with any attempts to fix or adjust the outcome of a game."

"However," he emphasizes, the NHL's referee-in-chief (Carl Voss) and his immediate supervisor (Clarence Campbell, league president) have tried to influence the assessment of penalties at various times."

According to Fischler, McArthur states that he was instructed by chief referee Voss to call only the most obvious penalties against the New York Rangers in an important March, 1961, game in Boston. "Any penalties you call against New York tonight must be 'good penalties,'" McArthur quotes Voss as saying before the game.

"The novelty of having the Rangers beat out Detroit for the fourth play-off spot would have helped hockey at the box-office and league officials didn't want to see this jeopardized in a defeat by Boston," says author Fischler.

Jack Mehlenbacher, fired by the NHL after incurring the ire of particular owners for decisions against their teams, he believes, says, "Any time you got a bottom team playing against a top team, you were told to go easy on the bottom team because close games mean better box-office."

And the rules are stretched or ignored at different times, according to Mehlenbacher. "Referee-in-chief Voss told me not to call any penalties in the last ten minutes of a game unless they were blatantly obvious," he adds.

Red Storey, who quit in 1959 after league president Campbell had been quoted as calling him a "choke-up," shed more light on the controlling of final scores during an interview on Canadian television in which he explained the special treatment afforded teams playing the Montreal Canadiens during their best days.

"You automatically made sure that if the visiting team was going to get a penalty, it had to be a dandy because the Canadiens were home with two or three goals and the game would be over in a minute. Our instructions were to be careful what penalties we gave to the visitors, making sure they were 'good' ones, because otherwise, we ruined a good game."

Continues Storey, "I was told by Mr. Campbell that if there were any breaks going, to give them to the home team. The policy is to keep the league balanced."

Eddie Powers, who quit refereeing in February 1963 because he was not being backed by Campbell against untoward attacks on his competence, complains about inconsistency and intereference from the league office. "A referee would call a game a certain way in one period and then be told he's calling it too close. Another time he'd let everything go and be told he's not calling it close enough. What's a guy supposed to do—read their minds?" he asks.

"If referees are not permitted to work independently of league owners, and according to the standards in the rule-book, major league hockey will not survive," concludes Fischler.

Intramurals Appreciated

There has been a great deal of attention, of late, to the hypothetical impersonalization of our rapidly expanding University. Partially motivated by this fear the Administration has undertaken a variety of academic and social experiments designed to personalize the individual's University experience. Of all the recent attempts to this end few have been as totally successful as the Fall intramural football program. Of all those of the faculty who are aware of the students' problems, few have demonstrated a dedication to the task comparable to Coach Gladchuk whom, we feel, was most responsible for the success of this program.

We of Baker House entered four teams in the League C competition. More than sixty men were thus enabled to participate in what proved to be highly organized, well officiated, and surprisingly competitive team sport. League standings and statistics were kept religiously and promptly distributed to the team athletic chairman after each series of games. The result of this planning and genuine interest from Coach Gladchuk and his staff was almost 100% participation by virtually all of those who originally "signed up" for each of the four respective teams. In past years Baker has found it difficult to muster and field two complete teams consistently.

This letter, then, is intended to express the gratitude of the men of Baker House to Coach Gladchuk and his staff who were primarily responsible for the success of the intramural football program. We appreciated the Coach's pre-season visit to our dorm when he personally explained the program and we appreciated his frequent personal visits to many of the evening games.

The Coach, we feel, has made a genuine contribution to the effort of personalizing the University and is deserving of our sincere appreciation.

In what is known as "The Game", a valiant Harvard Crimson stiffled the odds in typical Ivy League fashion and flattened the highly touted Bulldogs of Yale, 18-14.

A crowd of 40,000 saw speedy sophomore halfback Bobby Leo, race 46 yards to erase an earlier 14-12 Yale lead, and secure the Crimson victory.

Probably the big loss for the Bulldogs was the injury of Chuck Mercein. The big fullback was the Bulldog's main running threat all season and without him, Yale had little luck going through the tough Harvard line. This was a sad predicament for the Elis, but an agonizing experience for Mercein. Having subjected himself to beating after beating during the season, the big fullback looked forward to the Stadium encounter, a rivalry which encourages alumni and fans from all over the country to back their alma mater. Yet, Chuck Mercein was forced to content himself with a view from the bench. The bruised and battered back was not even allowed to kick extra points, a major decision since Mercein was only several points behind UMass quarterback Jerry Whelchel in the New England Scoring title race. The result is a victory for Yale, and the New England scoring title for the Redmen chief, Jerry Whelchel.

Major Bowl Outlook

While the University of Mass. has accepted a bid to the Tangerine Bowl, a recently sanctioned postseason game by authorization of NCAA, major bowl participants are being determined.

Louisiana State University, ranked eighth nationally, has accepted to meet Syracuse University, ranked ninth, in the 31st annual Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans. Saturday, the Orangemen were upset by West Virginia, 28-27, While LSU defeated arch rival Tulane, 13-3. This will be the first time that Syracuse has participated in the Louisiana classic and the seventh time for the Tigers of LSU.

SYRACUSE has built up a devastating ground offense led by fullback Jim Nance, and sophomore halfback whiz, Floyd Little, both potential All-Americans. Before the loss to West Virginia. Syracuse was rated the number one team in the East, and now sports a 7-3 record.

LOUISIANA STATE is led by halfback Joe Labruzzo, Quarterbacks Pat Screen and Billy Ezell and fullback Don Schwab, who have presented a consistent and diversified offense all year.

After a hard fought victory over the University of Florida, the Seminoles of Florida State agreed to participate in the Gator Bowl, a post-season game at Jacksonville, Jan. 2. Quarterback Steve Tensi and end Fred Bilentikaff have been notorious this season on the long bomb combination. The Seminoles boast a rugged defense and a speedy backfield, the rave of the Southeastern Conference. The committee has yet to choose an opponent.

Hardin Calls Roger Staubach Better Than Colts' Unitas

"Roger Staubach is a better quarterback than Johnny Unitas," says Navy coach Wayne Hardin in an article in the current issue of SPORT magazine.

Hardin's comparison of his All-America quarterback with all-pro quarterback Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts was made at a recent banquet at which the Colts' field-leader was also a guest.

Said Hardin, "Roger can do everything better on a football field than any man I've ever seen. Other people can run better, throw better and lead better, but Staubach does it all better," Hardin continued. "However, Unitas is second best," conceded the Navy coach.

Staubach himself has some interesting views on his abilities and professional football. "The chances are very slim that I'll play pro ball," he says.

"However," continues Roger, "if you've done something all your life, like playing football, it's hard to give it up. I know I can play football better than I can do everything else that's physical, and you naturally want to reach the highest point, which is what the pros are. If I had gone to another school," admits the Navy All-America, "I would have jumped at the chance."

Though Staubach has exhibited genuine modesty regarding his abilities despite coach Hardin's comparison with Unitas, he does have great confidence in his prowess.

Says Bigotry and Ignorance Make MVP Award a Farce

"Bigotry, ignorance and a dearth of rules clarifying what constitutes the 'Most Valuable Player,' make baseball's highest award a farce," charges sportswriter Jack Lang in a hard-hitting article in a national magazine.

"Malice on the part of certain electors has resulted in the snubbing of logical winners down through the years," according to Lang's article in the current issue of SPORT magazine, "and the lack of rules has enabled other voters to develop their own varying criteria for making and justifying their selections."

"Vindictiveness halted Ted Williams' bid for MVP honors in 1947 when he won the 'triple crown,' and again in 1957 when he hit .388 with 38 homers at the age of 39. In those years, certain prejudiced voters placed him ninth or tenth among most valuable player candidates, while others ignored him altogether," asserts Lang.

Jackie Robinson and Joe Black, too, had their problems in vying for the MVP award. "One reporter announced that he would never vote for Robinson, a Negro, to win the award in 1949," says Lang. Black, also a Negro, won 15 games, saved 15 others, and was the man most responsible for the Dodgers' winning the pennant in 1952, but failed to gain even a tenth-place selection on three of the 24 ballots cast for the MVP.

The ignorance of some of the electors has been documented over the years by ballots listing 10 rookies, ballots with mixtures of National and American League stars, and late ballots. However, the biggest stumbling block to rational voting by the baseball-writing electorate is a lack of set rules governing the selectors, according to author Lang. "The most important step in changing the situation is the creation of a working definition of 'Most Valuable Player,'" says Lang. "Even today, some writers will only select a ballplayer from a pennant-winner, while others refuse to consider pitchers for the award."

"Also, a screening committee should be established to reduce the list of candidates and weed out 'favorite son' votes," he continues. "Given a choice of eight or ten men, the committee is much more likely to come up with the proper decision."

D.V.P. To Present Susskind Panel

Four young veterans of this year's long, hot Mississippi summer and television personality David Susskind will discuss civil rights' work in the South tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

David Gelfand, Jacob Blum, Luther Seabrook, and Anne Moody will appear with Susskind in a program titled "Murder in Mississippi, Four Who Came Back."

The Susskind-moderated panel discussion is being sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program (DVP).

The public is invited to the discussion. Audience participation is expected and will be encouraged, according to DVP spokesmen.

Gelfand is a 20-year-old Brandeis University junior. He worked on voter registration drives in Laurel, Mississippi, this past summer, receiving a severe beating from some local citizens in the process.

Jacob Blum, a Yale sophomore, spent the summer workin on voter registration projects in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Luther Seabrook, born in Charleston, S.C., now teaches junior high school in East Harlem, N.Y. He worked in Hattiesburg's "freedom schools" this summer.

Anne Moody, 23, was born and raised in Centerville, Miss. Because of her civil rights work, she is no longer welcome in her home town.

Moderator David Susskind is known to television audiences for his part in the "Open End" programs as well as for his association with many critically-acclaimed "specials." He is a 1942 graduate of Harvard University.

Collegian To Be Available In S.U. Beginning Friday

by Jackie David

Commuters will no longer need their "Commuter I.D." to pick up the Collegian as of Friday, Dec. 4.

Under a new distribution policy passed by the Student Senate on Nov. 18, 1400 Collegians will be made available to both commuter and resident students.

The Student Union Governing Board, at its last meeting, decided to have the papers left at the far end of the lobby counter by the telephone booths in the Student Union for the convenience of the student body.

In order to increase the amount of papers in the S.U., the number of copies to be delivered to each residence hall, fraternity, and sorority shall correspond to 50 percent plus or minus 10 percent of the total undergraduates residing in the respective living quarters.

Under the present policy, many Commuters have found it difficult to pick up their papers in the checkroom during the limited hours of 1-4.

Concurrently, the resident students haven't been reading the Collegian until they return to their dorm, fraternity, or sorority. This is often late in the evening for many.

It is hoped that this new policy will stimulate more student interest in the Collegian so that it will be read and discussed during the day.

This policy will be in effect on a temporary basis until the end of the fall semester at which time its effectiveness will be evaluated by Senate Finance Committee and appropriate changes made.

It is requested that those students who do return to their place of residence during the day, pick up their Collegian there, thereby reducing a possibe rush in the Student Union.

Any criticism by members of the student body concerning this policy is welcomed and should be turned in at the Collegian office.

In order to alter the percentage of papers distributed to the dorms, it is requested that all housemothers note the degree of demand in their respective dorms, and report any necessary changes to the Collegian.

Orange Tags Aiding Band

Tags, tickets and trees have raised $1,000 so far in the University student drive to send the Redmen Marching Band to the Tangerine Bowl Dec. 12.

COACH VIC FUSIA'S TEAM was selected to meet East Carolina State College in the football classic. Team expenses are being met by the NCAA, which sponsors the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Florida.

Student-generated enthusiasm to send the band and cheerleaders began last week with the sale of tangerine tags boosting the band.

OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS to the campaign are coming from ticket sales to tonight's "1964 Football Highlights" movie at 7:30 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage, an Interfraternity - Panhellenic Skit Night, and sales of miniature tangerine trees by students.

Solicitations are being made among students, alumni, and others throughout Massachusetts interested in sending the band to the Tangerine Bowl.

Highlights Night

Bowl Trip Offered As Prize

A free trip to the Tangerine Bowl game in Orlando, Florida is the door prize offered at tonight's Football Highlights presentation in the Boyden Physical Education Building.

TRANSPORTATION TO AND FROM the Florida city to watch the UMass Redmen football team battle the Pirates of East Carolina State College in the NCAA sponsored Tangerine Bowl will be the prize awarded to the lucky ticket holder.

The stubs from the one dollar admission tickets will be collected at the door. Homecoming Queen Mary Lou Leonard will draw the winning stub sometime during the program which starts at 7:30 this evening.

On the program, in addition to the highlights film, narrated by Redmen backfield coach Jack Delaney, will be the University's marching band and cheerleaders.

THE BAND WILL PLAY highlights from the following shows they have presented during the football season:

World's Fair, Hootenanny Hoe Down, Mississippi Riverboat, and Political Preview.

George Michael, president of the Student Senate and a driving force behind the organization which has been set up to raise the band and cheerleader funds, will emcee the program.

All possible sources continue to be tapped in the drive to help send the band and cheerleaders to the Tangerine Bowl. The Bowl Bound Backer Stickers and the Highlights Night tickets are on sale in the S.U. lobby. New projects are being initiated wherever possible.

The "Tangerine Special" Fund has now passed the $1,000 mark, Student Senate Treasurer, Joseph Plecuch announced yesterday.

DONATIONS FROM AMHERST businessmen and from surrounding towns total approximately $250 with over $200 more promised.

SALE OF STICKERS will continue through Dec. 11. It is requested that all receipts from ticket sales and unsold tickets be returned to the RSO office by Wednesday noon, Dec. 2. Tickets available at door.

There'll be a hot time in the old hall tonight! It will take more than fire hoses to dampen the audience's enthusiasm for the University Theatre Production of Dion Boucicault's The Streets of New York Opening Thursday, December 10 at Bowker Auditorium. Curtain at 8:15. Depicted here is a drawing of the original fire scene from the melodrama as it was staged in the last century.

We Aren't Mere Numbers

By Joe Sullivan

Does the University of Massachusetts student feel himself to be a numerically designated nonentity, a mere digital component in the seemingly complex mathematical stratification imposed by the almighty I.B.M.?

"No," said Dr. Bernard Berenson of the University Counseling Service.

DR. BERENSON, in a recent interview with the Collegian, stated that, "Size alone is not sufficient to traumatically overawe the average student."

"Indeed," said the doctor, "the continual growth of the University makes it possible for more and more students to find their own particular niche in campus life."

He elaborated that with size comes such wide diversity of personality and interest that virtually every University student is able, at least theoretically, to locate and identify himself with other people on campus.

"EVERY HUMAN BEING," he continued, "seeks to order his universe, to sink, as it were, a mental anchor or point of reference in the shifting tide of human relations.

"The bond may be a common interest, purpose, a social relationship, or mere physical propinquity. But," said Dr. Berenson, "the person unable to make such attachments, the person who feels himself to be totally alone and unable to effectively communicate, is in most cases a person in need of help."

This view is supported by Dr. Robert Stanfield of the sociology department. Currently researching student attitudes toward education, Dr. Stanfield has found that students dissatisfied with the University are in many cases those who have failed to establish significant small group identifications.

DR. STANFIELD explained that because of their small size in relation to the student body, these groups are understandable, definable; hence concrete and easier to identify with.

"People," explained Dr. Stanfield further, "have difficulty in accurately internalizing their role as a large group member." "Personal adjustment is more complete," he went on, "when the individual stops thinking of himself as a 'student,' and begins to speak of himself as a football player, a fraternity man, an English major, etc."

Another aspect of college life that Dr. Stanfield feels is important is tradition.

"TRADITION," he said, "is an element capable of lending structure to an otherwise amorphous concept."

For this reason, he is enthusiastic about the recent UM triumphs at the nationally televised G.E. College Bowl and at the upcoming appearance of the University in the Tangerine Bowl.

"These two events," he said, "serve to redefine the University. No longer, so fleeting, our concept of 'University' has been given the form and bounds of a winning tradition, both academically and athletically."

Speedy Scheduling

Computer Purchased

The University has purchased a high speed computer system from the Control Data Corporation, it was announced by Dr. Edward C. Moore, dean of the graduate school.

One of the largest computer systems at any university in the country, the CDC 3600 at UMass, will be used for academic research and training in computer science courses. More than 300 faculty members and graduate students have been trained in the use of computers.

Control Data Corporation manufactures the world's fastest computer.

Dean Moore says, "The capabilities of this computer are impressive. With the remarkable strides being made in scientific research today, a top university must have a high powered computer. The CDC will be a definite help in recruiting outstanding faculty members because of the opportunities it offers for advanced scientific research.

"We believe that this computer system will solve our needs for the next five to ten years.

"There is an increasing demand for graduate education in computer science," Dean Moore added, "and we plan to develop programs in this area in the near future."

In addition to research work in the biological and physical sciences, the new computer system will be used for research in the social sciences and the humanities.

With the addition of the Control Data 3600, administrative functions such as class scheduling will be performed at the University's computing center instead of being sent out on contract. UMass already has attracted national attention in educational circles for its extensive use of computer techniques in the processing of admissions materials.

Susskind to Appear Wed.

Hemingway Film to be Shown Thurs.

The film Hemingway's Adventures of a Young Man, will be shown on Dec. 3 in the S.U. Ballroom at 6:00 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. The film stars Richard Beymer, Diane Baker, Paul Newman, and many others.

The movie is adapted from Ernest Hemingway's semi-autobiographical stories of Nick Adams.

In a series of adventures that turn a boy into a man, Nick runs away from home to escape small town life and joins an ambulance unit in the Italian Army during World War I.

Severely wounded, he falls in love with a nurse who revives his will to live.

Telling performances are turned in by Paul Newman as a prize fighter, Dan Dailey as a drunken advance man for a burlesque troop, Eli Wallach as a wartime buddy, and Jessica Tandy as a domineering wife and mother.

This film will be shown in place of The Horizontal Lieutenant.

Unique M.A. Earned

By Joe Bradley

THE DATELINE of this story might well have been Glasgow, Scotland.

For Thomas B. C. McGuffog, the subject of the story, brought together two universities — one ancient, the other comparatively young—when he received the first "transatlantic" master's degree ever awarded by the University.

UMass in the rolling hills of the Pioneer Valley and the venerable University of Glasgow in Scotland, had little in common until Tom McGuffog arrived in Amherst.

"IN MY FINAL YEAR at Glasgow University I decided I wanted to continue my education in economics in the United States," Tom recalls in a letter to friends at UMass.

He obtained a list of American colleges that grant M.A.'s in economics. A University of Glasgow professor recommended UMass, and Tom decided to enroll when he was offered a graduate assistantship.

BY THE SPRING of 1963 Tom had completed all his courses at UMass and had a job waiting for him in England.

A man of practical Scottish upbringing, Tom didn't want to let a job with the British Electricity Council go begging, although he had not written his thesis.

Tom brought an unusual proposal to his advisory committee, professors John L. Blackman and Marshall C. Howard of the economics department and history professor Harold J. Gordon.

They agreed young McGuffog's plan was novel and certainly worth a try.

Tom arranged to complete his thesis on "The Economic Characteristics of the Electricity Supply Industry" when he returned to Britain to take his job.

AT THE REQUEST of Prof. Blackman when he visited Scotland, the University of Glasgow agreed to conduct Tom's oral examination on behalf of the University of Massachusetts.

In August of this year, after two years of writing and study, Tom was given the oral examination or viva, as it is called in British universities.

SINCE TOM had been examined by two of the most noted experts on the British electrical industry, J. B. K. Hunter and Ronald L. Meek, the UMass committee, after reviewing the report, voted to give Tom a grade of "Good" and the degree of Master of Arts.

Said the professors from Glasgow in their report to UMass: "We have no hesitation in saying, on the basis of the viva we conducted, that McGuffog has acquired such (all-round) knowledge (of economics) and is able to communicate it easily and clearly."

Tom says it is difficult to compare Scottish universities to American ones, since Scotland's are "concerned with the education of the most intelligent of the population (5%). But the universities have always taken the best brains, rich or poor."

AN AMERICAN UNIVERSITY such as the University of Massachusetts, observed Tom, caters to more students and "provides a broader and more

Orchard Dedication

Local Figures Honored

Four eminent American literary figures — all residents of this town at one time during their lives — will be honored at dedication ceremonies of the four Orchard Hill student residences at the University, Sunday, Dec. 6 at 3 p.m.

Accommodating 1300 students, the new seven-story dormitories at Orchard Hill will bear the names of poets Emily Dickinson and Eugene Field, journalist-author David Grayson and lexicographer Noah Webster.

Following the formal dedication which begins at 3 p.m., visitors will be given the opportunity to take guided tours of the dormitories.

Dr. William F. Field, Dean of Students, will preside at the program. Speakers will be President John W. Lederle; George Pumphret, member of the Board of Trustees and chairman of UMass Building Authority; and John W. Haigis, member of the Board of Trustees and chairman of the committee on buildings and grounds.

A brief biographical review of the four literary personages prepared by Professor Emeritus Frank Prentice Rand will be read by Dr. H. Leland Varley, professor of English and House Master at Orchard Hill.

Miss Georgena Young will speak on behalf of the students. Rev. John L. Scott, chaplain to Protestant students at the University, will give the invocation.

The four dormitories, opened this past September, were named for the distinguished writers by the University's Board of Trustees.

New Speech Course Offered On History Of Motion Pictures

The Speech Department has recently announced a new course in History of Film, which will be offered for the first time next semester.

The course will be devoted to a study of the evolution of the motion picture through its high points of artistic growth in the United States and other representative countries. Attention will also be given to contemporary approaches to film form and subject matter.

In addition to lectures, read-

Panel To Discuss So. Africa

THE AFRICAN STUDENTS (Four-College) Association will sponsor a panel discussion on "South Africa—Its Problems and Its Progress" on Friday, Dec. 4, at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Council Chambers.

Dr. Anwar H. Syed, assistant professor of government at UMass, will be the moderator.

The four panelists will be Mphiwa, B. Mbatha, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology at Smith College; Miss Margaret L. Bates, associate professor of government at Smith College; John C. Osgood, associate professor of psychology and education at Mount Holyoke College; and Herbert J. Spiro, associate professor of political science at Amherst College.

MR. MBATHA holds bachelor's degrees from the University of South Africa and the University of Natal and a master's degree from the University of South Africa. His fields of research are Zulu tribal cohesion and cultural change, especially urbanization and labor migration in South Africa. He is the author of an article "African Education in South Africa: A Brief Survey."

MISS BATES is a graduate of Rockford College. She received her master's degree from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and a Ph.D. from Oxford University.

Her field of research is African affairs, especially the history and politics of Tanganyika and East Africa. She taught in British East Africa during an extension of a Fulbright Scholarship for study of international relations.

JOHN C. OSGOOD graduated from Harvard University. In the summer of 1961 he received a grant from the Four-College Non-Western Studies Program to travel in Tanganyika and eleven countries south of the Sahara on a trip sponsored by the Comparative Education Society. He returned to Africa in 1963-64 under the U.S.-South Africa Leader Exchange Program.

Mr. Osgood was formerly chairman on the editorial board of the Harvard Educational Review and has written articles for the "Encyclopedia Britannica."

HERBERT J. SPIRO received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard University.

He has traveled and studied in Africa on Guggenheim, Fulbright and Social Science Research Fellowships. He has published articles for political journals on African politics and has written a book on the same subject.

Editorial Policy

To better serve the growing campus community the Collegian has adopted the following policy for the editorial page.

The editorial page of the Collegian will endeavor to:

1. Uphold freedom of expression.
2. Clarify the goals of education.
3. Foster constructive criticism and meaningful debate.
4. Expose existing problems at the University and suggest remedies.
5. Render recognition of deserving individuals and groups.
6. Defend injured parties in order to promote justice.
7. Provide an unbiased forum to air campus grievances.
8. Stimulate creative thinking within the University community.
9. Bring into closer perspective campus happenings.
10. Comment on local, national, and world affairs.

The above principles will be followed with the discretion so as not to unjustly discredit students, administration, faculty, alumni, and friends of the University.

Value of News Writing

Professor Arthur Musgrave, in a recent journalism class, quoted some comments about newswriting that the Collegian believes may interest students who wish to acquire more skill at writing—a skill that is useful to anyone no matter what profession he enters.

These comments were made by Burges Johnson, former head of the College English Association, a former teacher of English at Amherst College, and the author of several books. He wrote:

"It cannot be merely coincidental that newspapers have trained so many writers who have distinguished themselves outside of the field of newspaper journalism. Their names are legion and range from imaginative writers such as Barrie and Kipling to essayists, biographers, and historians and writers of good verse.

"This record supports the contention that practice in any kind of good writing trains for any other kind of good writing.

"The training of the reporter has in the past emphasized certain techniques that tend to develop skilled writing in any field.

FIRST, there is the recognition of a sharp distinction between news and editorial, fact and opinion. Writing practice with this distinction in mind . . . is as good discipline for the imaginative writer as for the reporter of news events.

"SECOND, is an intensified consciousness of audience: an ability to imagine one's reader while writing, and to adapt word and style to the readers' understanding.

"THIRD, the acquired habit of getting to the point or purpose of the piece of writing as promptly as possible.

"FOURTH, the acquired ability to discover the element of human interest in dry fact, and then to emphasize that interest element without distortion of the truth.

"FIFTH, newspaper writing requires all possible evidence that assertions of fact have been verified . . . by a skillful use of direct quotation as well as by the frequent citation of authority.

"If these several elements which enter into the training of the newspaper-writer explain his success in other fields of writing, there is no reason why they should not be utilized to some extent in all classroom composition training."

Although the process of writing is the same whether the product is a news story, magazine article, short story, or editorial, news writing has the advantage of giving students training in the discipline of objectivity—a training not given when facts do not have to be presented accurately.

As Professor Musgrave pointed out, much of the writing done by college students is based on readings in books and articles rather than on accurate observation of the flux. Reporting for The Collegian offers you an opportunity to acquire a sharper sense of form about writing, and to learn many things about your campus community as well.

This year an unusual opportunity exists for students who have a professional interest in writing. The University has provided students on the Collegian with the tutorial services of a professional newspaperman, Mr. Alvin Oickle, an editor of the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette. Although his teaching services are primarily for the journalism students on the Collegian, he has been willing to provide professional advice to any student on the newspaper. He is available to any Collegian member, and he is glad to teach professional writing and editing methods to students who wish to write better.

CLEAN UP

To the Editor

In several of our newly acquired Town Conservation areas, particularly in the Puffer's Pond area, we felt we had a serious refuse problem . . . somewhat beyond our capabilities to handle. We contacted your Inter-Fraternity Council, through the office of the Dean of Men, hoping to gain help. As a result last Saturday, over forty University students showed up to help us clean up the debris. In a short time the job was done . . . and done well.

Needless to say this cooperation was very much appreciated. One of the prime objectives of the local Conservation Commission is to keep and maintain "green belt" areas in Amherst for the use of both townspeople and students alike for both hiking, picnicking, and just plain "outdoors." These are areas used a good deal by students, they are certainly welcome, and it is very gratifying to the Commission to see cooperation such as this in helping us maintain them. It re-affirms our belief that many of the students feel Amherst is a temporary "second home" rather than just a way-station.

We would like to express our thanks to the many students who participated in this project.

Crossword

To the Editor:

As outraged crossword puzzle fanatics, we would like to protest the Tangerine Bowl Crossword which appeared in Monday's (Nov. 23) Collegian.

Careless is the only word that can describe this attempt at a crossword puzzle. Major errors included misplaced and repeated numbers, numbers to which there were no words, and extra spaces which served no purpose but to confuse the reader.

We are ashamed that the Collegian would publish a puzzle that so obviously was not proof-read. If it was, we suggest that you outfit your proofreader with glasses!

One last comment — how the heck is someone supposed to turn in a correctly filled copy of the puzzle for a ticket to Highlights Night, if the puzzle itself is incorrect?

Noreen Blank '67

Editor's Note

Editor's Note: Thank you for your constructive criticism. We will try not to allow this type of error in the future.

As for your suggestion about glasses, the proof reader (our editor in chief) already wears glasses, as everyone knows.

VIEW ON BOWL GAME

To the Editor:

The discordant note struck by Prof. Harper in the November 20 issue deserves a reply. I served as Chairman of the University Athletic Council in '62 and '63 and am currently Secretary of that body, but the views expressed are my own, and not necessarily those of the Council.

The University has not accepted "the first bowl bid that came along." We had firm bids last year and elected not to participate, primarily on the basis of a Sophomore-Junior team that had not yet had the opportunity to establish itself academically. This year the presence of eighteen Seniors on the squad weighed heavily in our deliberations. I doubt that accepting this "second-rate" bid will endanger our "position in the college bowl market in the future." In fact, I'm not concerned about bowlmanship in the future. Let's play each season as it comes along and expect no more than a respectable showing against our chosen opponents.

I know our schedule through 1971, and we are not playing Pitt, Syracuse, Army, Penn State, or those other major powers that might provide a pathway to the Orange, Sugar, or Cotton Bowls. We are currently classified by NCAA in their small college division. The Tangerine Bowl has been designated by NCAA to determine the Atlantic Coast Championship of that division. If we would cherish major college rating, let's prove that we're the best in the lesser division.

It is true that "the date of the game puts it well out of prime time for holiday bowls." But if one is truly concerned about the extra weeks of practice taking an academic toll on members of the football squad (and band), then is not this early date a real advantage over a bowl that plays three weeks later. This was a powerful factor in influencing my vote for participation.

Who is E. Carolina? Certainly not a Notre Dame or Texas, but a football team that has been highly ranked nationally in our division both last season and this, and strong enough to beat an excellent Northeastern team last year. Next year they will be playing-members in the Southern Conference, which displays good football. I can't believe that Coach Fusia is taking them lightly.

I've talked to a number of members of the football squad, and somehow, I just don't get the impression that they feel that they're being exploited. According to a usually reliable source, their vote on participation was unanimous.

Perhaps by reading history, UMass might "learn that true academic greatness and stature has never been achieved by way of the football stadium." History does indicate that academic greatness and a good football program are not incompatible, and we should aspire to both.

If the Tangerine Bowl serves no other purpose, it seems to have given the University Community (with but few exceptions) a spirit of unity and pride in the pursuit of excellence the equal of which I have seen but rarely in my tenure as a faculty member. I am confident that this spirit will spill over into all areas of our activity.

Professor of Chemistry

A Word of Thanks

To the Editor:

I should like to thank all those students who contributed manuscripts to Caesura. The editorial board was overwhelmed with the fine response from campus writers; over two-hundred poems and eighty short stories were submitted. Because of the large amount of material and the limited size of the magazine we were forced to reject manuscripts which might in previous years have been accepted for publication.

I am very hopeful that the response for future issues will be even more enthusiastic, and urge all writers to submit their material for the Winter issue.

① The Washington Circumferential Highway allows speedy access to east suburban communities in the District of Columbia, Maryland, and Northern Virginia.

② HYDROMECHANICS LABORATORY facilities include this High-Speed Towing Basin almost 3/5 OF A MILE LONG, 50 feet wide, and 20 feet deep. This Laboratory is concerned with speed, stability, control and seakeeping qualities of floating or submerged naval designs, and with fundamental naval hydrodynamics.

③ APPLIED MATHEMATICS LABORATORY facilities include the latest, largest computer systems, and feature the LARC, the IBM 7090, and a 1401. This is BuShips' primary computing facility, working on engineering, research logistics, and numerical methods. Work carried on here involves mathematic simulation of the life cycle of nuclear reactors; automatic calculation of ship lines; and applications of computers to management problems.

④ In this giant new Maneuvering and Seakeeping facility, both fixed and free-running models may be tested under any sea-state condition. You may also work with the High-Speed Phanomana Division at Langley Field, Virginia.

⑤ AERODYNAMICS LABORATORY facilities include several wind tunnels—ranging from subsonic through hypersonic at Mach 10—which are used to determine and improve static stability, control and heat transfer characteristics of helicopters, VTOL's, supersonic aircraft, missiles, etc. Air flow studies also involve bomb design, bridge structures, aircraft turbulence when approaching carriers, and other government and private problems.

⑥ The unique STRUCTURAL MECHANICS LABORATORY facilities at Carderock are the new pressure tanks which permit the study, by means of large structural models, of the hull structures for deep diving submarines and deep sea research vehicles to reach all ocean depths. Additional Structural Mechanics Laboratory facilities are scattered throughout the 186 acres, and include a tridimensional Static-Load Frame, a Pentagonal Test Pond, Explosion Pits, and a 600,000-Pound Universal Testing Machine. With these facilities, Laboratory scientists and engineers conduct studies aimed at improving the hull structure and increasing the resistance of the Navy's ships to enemy attack. This requires development of fundamental, theoretical approaches of load and response, and development of engineering solutions based on the increased understanding. A substantial portion of the ship protection research is carried out at the Underwater Explosions Research Division of this Laboratory located at Portsmouth, Virginia.

⑦ The ACOUSTICS AND VIBRATION LABORATORY was just established to intensify research and development of ships of improved detection capability, and reduced vibrations and underwater sound output. Fundamental and applied research in hydrodynamics, structural acoustics, mechanical vibrations, and signal processing are supplemented by conduct of acoustic and vibration trials, and development of acoustic and vibration instrumentation.

The OPERATIONS RESEARCH GROUP cannot be pinpointed as easily because it ranges over all the RDT&E activities at The Model Basin — hydromechanics, structural mechanics, aerodynamics, and applied mathematics. Special applications today are in the fields of naval architecture, ship silencing, ship protaction, and weapons affects . . . setting realistic performance goals for ships and submarines in view of probable environmental factors . . . handling special externally-generated projects that tie in with DTMB capabilities . . . and making recommendations to the Technical Director as to improving research methods and orientation.

To staff these five operating Laboratories, we are seeking college graduates with BS, MS, or PhD degrees in Aerospace, Electrical, Electronic, Mechanical or Structural Engineering; in Applied Mechanics, Mathematics, Physics, and Naval Architecture.

You are high over the Potomac River just 12 miles from the White House . . . and viewing 186 acres of extraordinary research activity

Of course, from this height you can't see much detail, which makes the imposing expanse of the two main buildings all the more intriguing. Perhaps you can guess their functions, but it's also what you can't see (and this is summarized in the adjoining column) that makes the David Taylor Model Basin a compietely unique fundamental and applied research organization — and a place you should seriously consider for your career as a professional scientist or engineer. As the Navy's advanced facility for research into submarine, surface ship, aircraft and missile design concepts, the Model Basin can offer the young graduate certain specific opportunities hard to find anywhere else.

1. Reach the $10,000 to $12,000 level WITHIN 4 YEARS.
2. Take graduate courses for advance degree with Navy help.
3. Gain diversified RDT & E experience with the best equipment and facilities of their kind.
4. Work on research projects of recognized national importance.
5. Attain recognized professional stature sooner, at which point a number of futures are available.

Watch for the David Taylor Model Basin interviewer when he visits your campus, or contact Mr. S. Di Maria directly for information.

Housing Survey Distributed

The Housing Office recently mailed its survey on off-Campus Housing to one-third of all graduate students, and to all new faculty members.

Results of the survey are a prerequisite to coping with the problems inherent in the need for more adequate and increased housing.

A solid return of at least 80 or 90 per cent is necessary for the results to be effective. Student and faculty cooperation is hoped for, as future building plans hinge upon the published results.

Presently, 150 new apartments have been approved for next Sept. Their adequacy, and future needs cannot be determined without full assistance of those participating, regardless of whether or not they are now experiencing a problem.

"Peg-Leg," Trotters Coming

One of the grand old men of show business will appear Dec. 8 at the University when the world-famous Harlem Globetrotters take on the Washington (D.C.) Generals in the Curry Hicks Cage.

Clayton "Peg-leg" Bates, going strong at 57, stars in and will introduce the variety show that accompanies the Globetrotters team on its yearly tours.

General admission tickets are being sold at the Melody Corner in Northampton, C. E. Walker and Co. in Holyoke and Marty Bassell's sporting goods shop in Springfield.

Tickets are available at the Student Union.

Peg-leg lost his left leg and two fingers of his right hand in a mill accident in Fountain Inn, S. C., when he was only 11 years old.

Two years later, young Clayton was back in school, performing in amateur talent shows and traveling variety shows.

In 1928 he was cast for the Broadway hit "Blackbirds of 1928" after becoming a well-known performer on the minstrel and vaudeville circuit.

Peg-leg adjusted early and well to the coming of television. To date, he has made 18 appearances on the Ed Sullivan show and many more on other programs.

He has also traveled the world over, becoming one of the most appreciated and admired entertainers in the business.

BILLIARD TOURNAMENT

Players of any class may now sign up for the open pocket and three cushion billiard tournament.

Players must sign up at the game's desk. Entries are limited. Trophies will be awarded to the winners and runners-up.

In addition the winners of each event will represent the University in the Regionals at Boston University in February.

ings, and discussion, course work will include viewing and evaluation of a variety of film types. The department's collection of early American films plus the Film Study Series, inaugurated this past semester, will serve as a basis for this study.

The course should be of special interest to students in the Humanities but will also provide the student in other areas with a sensitivity and understanding of a medium which is playing an increasingly important role in many segments of our society.

The Museum of Modern Art has stated that "the motion picture is of key importance in the academic world. As one of the recent products of our culture, it concerns students of sociology as profoundly as those of the fine arts. An acquaintance with film technique is of value not only to workers in the motion picture field but to instructors who are alive to the benefits of visual education."

The course will meet on Tuesday and Thursday from 2:30-3:45 p.m.

UMass Alumnus Honored By Sports Illustrated

Brig. Gen. Albin F. Irzyk, 1964 Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary All - America winner, was the nominee of the University, where he lettered for three years in football as well as baseball and was graduated in the class of 1940.

General Irzyk is now Plans and Operations Officer, Allied Land Forces, Central Europe, with headquarters at Fontainbleau, France.

As an undergraduate, General Irzyk was a major in English. He had an outstanding record of achievement in campus activities and as an athlete. He was president of Adelphia (men's senior honor society); a member of the Senate and treasurer during his senior year. He served on the class nominating committee, was a member of the campus dramatic society, the Roister Doisters; also, the Newman Club, informal dance committee, Dad's Day Committee, Military Ball Committee, and was a member of the Interfraternity Council for two years, in the office of vice president as a senior. He was president of his fraternity, QTV.

Brig Gen. ALBIN IRZYK

General Irzyk was graduated from the University of Massachusetts as a second lieutenant. During World War II, by 1943, he had been commissioned a major and by January of 1945 was made lieutenant colonel in command of the Eighth Tank Division. During heroic actions in battle, he received the Distinguished Service Cross, two Silver Stars, four Bronze Stars, the Army Commendation Ribbon, two Purple Hearts, two Croix de Guerre, the Distinguished Unit Badge along with three theatre ribbons and five battle stars.

General Irzyk has written a number of articles for the Army, primarily on military tactics and especially on the subject of tank warfare.

WAA Ski Team Calls Candidates

The WAA Ski Team will hold a meeting on Thursday, December 3rd at 7 p.m. in the Women's Physical Education Building. All who are interested in racing are invited. Previous racing experience is not necessary. At this meeting conditioning and indoor ski techniques will be done. Those attending should bring skis, boots and poles.

The UMass team participates with nine other schools in the Women's Intercollegiate Ski Conference. During the season five races are held at various areas in New England. These include slalom and giant slalom racing. After several Thursday night practices at Mt. Tom, a team will be chosen to participate in these races.

Oriental Exhibition

The Judo season will begin at U of Mass. on Thurs. evening Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. At this time the Oriental Sports Club will present a lecture and exhibition in the Boyden Wrestling Room. The demonstration will consist of a match played by two of the club's more experienced beltholders. After the match there will be a demonstration of Judo techniques and a discussion of the goals and ideals of the sport.

THE ORIENTAL SPORTS CLUB, now three years in existance, plans to begin instructing interested male students next week. It is imperative that all persons wishing to participate in the sport attend this meeting in order that the instructors may formulate their schedules. The emphasis will be placed upon Judo as a sport and it is hoped that the club will soon be able to compete with some of the other college teams in the New England area.

Persons who are interested but unable to attend should contact either Capt. Parker of the Military Science Dept. or Tom Kiernan, the club's president.

Sextet Meets Williams

By Don Connors

The University hockey team begins another season this Wednesday when it travels to Williamstown to face a strong Williams College team. Coach Kozakowski is faced with the loss of several of last year's starters including last year's leading scorer, Charlie Glew. Another disadvantage the Redmen face is the lack of their own rink. The team must practice at Amherst College and transportation has been quite a problem this year. In spite of this, team spirit is very good.

COACH KOZAKOWSKI will start a young team tomorrow. Starting on offense will be Herd and Scaverra at the wings with Polchapek at center. Scaverra and Polchapek are sophomores. Sophomores Brown, Bisby, McCartey, and Hinkley will also play. Defense will be led by Co-Capt. Jack Clayton. Playing with him will be Callahan, Pulsifer, Feldhoff, and Donovan. The goalie will be Co-Capt "Skip" Bowen who will be backed up by sophomore Lee Sandburn. Rounding out the squad are Cook, Eaten, Demars, Ledwick, Celli, Shaughnessy, Mollander, Darling, Kimella, Brehn, Shaw, and Mclachlan.

TOUGHEST GAMES of the year should be against Colgate and Army, two Eastern powerhouses. New Hampshire is the defending Yan Con champion, but Coach Kozakowski feels all the teams in the conference are tough. Coach Kozakowski is mildly optimistic about the season. He feels that the team will win their share of games.

WAA SKI TEAM

All who are interested in racing are invited to attend a meeting Thursday, December 3rd, at 7 p.m. in the Women's Phys. Ed. Building. No racing experience is necessary. Please bring ski equipment for indoor ski techniques.

Lowe Award to Whelchel; Fusia Coach of the Year

By John Goodrich

Its awards time for the UMass football team and the club seems to be reaping quite a little harvest.

The first player in the history of the University has won the George Bulger Lowe award as the outstanding player in New England. He is Jerry Whelchel, the great Redman quarterback. Whelchel set 11 records; seven for kicking, three for passing, and one for total offense. In addition he was runnerup in eight more categories, thereby classifying himself as the greatest the Redmen have ever had.

Coach Vic Fusia has often called Whelchel the best in the East and it seems that the committee led by Nils (Swede) Nelson agrees with him. The award will be presented at a gala affair Wednesday night at the Kenmore Hotel in Boston. The Gridiron club has some 700 members who are expected to attend. Some of the past winners include Governor Endicott Peabody, former Harvard guard, Mike Holovak, Patriots coach, and Jack Concannon, a BC quarterback from a year ago.

COACH FUSIA was selected by the Boston Sports Writers Association as the Coach of the Year. The Redmen won eight of nine games and are moving to the Tangerine Bowl in December 12. Fusia has piloted the Redmen to an overall record of 27-8-1 in his four seasons here. The 1963 winner of the award was Joe Zabilski, Northeastern.

END MILT MORIN was chosen as one of the ends on the all East team for the year. Morin is a punishing two way player who is noted for his crushing tackles on defense and ability to move after catching a pass. He is also a fine blocker and can kick points as well as punt and kickoff. Just as a sidelight it is interesting to note that New England placed few men on the squad, but dominated the end positions on both offense and defense. The BC pair of Whalen and Cronin also made the squad. Whelchel received honorable mention at quarterback.

Redmen Co-Capt. Jerry Whelchel

The crowning finish occurred Sunday for Whelchel when it was announced that the San Diego Chargers of the American Football League had drafted him in the ninth round. It had been felt that size would be a handicap for Whelchel in the pros, but Coach Sid Gilman and his staff obviously want to take that gamble. Everyone here at UMass hope that Gilman is right and that Jerry might one day come back to haunt Mike Holavak and the Patriots.

Vermont released its all opponents team and as expected the Redmen dominated by being chosen the best opponent as well as placing six men on the team. This is the third year in a row UMass has been named the top opponent for the Cats.

Those named were Bob Meers at end, Bob Burke at Tackle, Peter Pietz at guard, Charlie Scialdone at center, along with Ellis and Ross in the backfield. Burke was chosen the outstanding lineman faced this year.

Phil Vandersea, a fullback a year ago on the Redman team, was picked as a future by the Green Bay Packers. In order to be eligible, a player's class must graduate this year, but he must still have a year of eligibility left. Vandersea is 6'3" tall and weighs in at 250. He did some punting also a year ago but was forced to sit on the sidelines this year.

All of these rewards make the season even more worthwhile for the Redmen. Whelchel, Fusia and Morin have been long overdo for the recognition they so justly deserve. Yet as far as the team is concerned, a victory in Florida would be the best award of all.

TICKETS

Tangerine Bowl tickets are now on sale in the Athletic Ticket Office at the Boyden Building. Tickets are priced at $5.00. and will be available until noon [illegible]. Tickets will also be available in Orando, Fa. at the following prices — $2.00, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00.

Hoopsters Commence Season vs. Terriers

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts opens the 1964-65 season at Boston University tonight. This date of December 1 is the earliest date the NCAA allows for the opening of the season.

The Redmen will be facing the first of the many tough opponents this year. The Terriers are a veteran squad with plenty of height and a sophomore flash to bolster their scoring.

The height consists of 6'9" Dick Moreshead, one of the leading rebounders in the country last year until he ran into academic problems. Giving him plenty of aid will be 6'7" John Osgood, another veteran, and Randy Cross, a 6'3" jumping jack.

Moreshead and Cross will probably be the most dangerous scorers of the trio, but the real threat lies in sophomore Dick Lee, only 6'1". Lee managed to put in 30 points or better in five of the BU frosh games a year ago.

The final man in the quintet is Ken Leary, a 5'7" fire brand who is the floor general. The Terrier coach, John Burke, has plenty of reserve strength to call on during the contest. Virtually the same Terrier team went on to a 16-7 record after bowing to the Redmen, 80-72, in last year's opener.

Coach John Orr of UMass is still not completely sure what his lineup will be. Seven men are in contention for slots, with only co-capt. Chuck O'Rourke and Tim Edwards assured of spots. The other position in the forecourt has Jim Painten and Paul Gullicksen as the candidates. The former is a converted guard while the latter was a starter down the stretch last season. The guess is that Painten will get the call because of his outside shooting ability.

All three of the starters and the reserve are veteran performers for the Redmen. O'Rourke will be seeking to close in on the school rebounding record this year. Edwards is a very mobile big man who can handle himself under the boards. The only thing holding him back from greatness here is his apparent lack of an outside shot, a problem Coach Orr has sought to eliminate

There are three men in line for the guard slots, and all figure to see plenty of action. Co-capt. Charlie Kingston moves the Redmen offenes with some skillful playmaking and is a threat with his outside jumper. Mike Meola, a sophomore, figures to hold down the other starting berth. Meola does a fine job with Orr's pressing defense and can hit from the outside.

The top sub who could move into the starting role is Clarence Hill, a talented returnee from two season's ago. Hill missed the last season because of mononucleosis, but has the speed and offensive ability to fit in just fine in the fast breaking offense of the Redmen. He scored over 13 points a game in his first year, despite the fact it was a slow down offense.

Others figuring to see plenty of action are John Lisack and Dick Benjamin in the forecourt, and Jim Babyak and Bob Murphy in the backcourt. With the exception of Benjamin, they are all sophomores.

The biggest problem Orr has to face is the lack of over all height which will hamper the rebounding efforts of the club. O'Rourke goes 6'7" and Benjamin 6'6", but after that it is not too big. Edwards is the exception because of his jumping ability that makes him seem bigger than his 6'4". Painten is 6'4" but was not noted for his board work last year. Gullicksen is 6'5" and will be called on to help out under the boards.

With the fast break offense and pressing defense, the new edition of the Redmen will be an exciting team to watch. There is enough talent on the squad to keep it in any ball game.

MJQ To Appear Monday

Four musicians who plunged into a new type of jazz 10 years ago will give a concert at 8 p.m., Monday, Dec. 7, in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Modern Jazz Quartet, featuring musicians who grew up with jazz during the Dizzie Gillespie era, bridges the gap between completely extemporaneous playing and the discipline of classical musicianship.

Group leader John Lewis, who doubles as composer and pianist, holds a master's degree in music and draws on his extensive works for much of the quartet's repertoire.

Milt Jackson, voted top vibraharpist by "Downbeat" magazine five years in a row, also supplies compositions for the foursome. He was a member of the famous sextet of Gillespie, Jackson, Charlie Parker, Ray Brown, Stan Levy and Al Haig, one of the most influential progressive jazz groups of the forties.

Percy Heath, another ex-Gillespie player, is bassist for the group and is in great demand for recordings.

The quartet is filled out with Connie Kay, drummer. He played the club circuit with such greats as Stan Getz, Charlie Parker, and Coleman Hawkins.

"All you have to do is hear them dip into one blues, play the melody of a syrupy ballad, and swing it slowly, to feel in your bones the truth of their ten-year experiment." So said one reviewer of the Modern Jazz Quartet.

The word "modern" means nothing more than a disciplined, highly personal approach to jazz. The quartet uses the familiar beats and melodies, but reaches deeper into the music by gearing improvisation to modern harmony and mood. After working together for so many years, the foursome can extract greater range and complexity from their music without losing the spontaneity which is a part of true jazz.

The MJQ doesn't publish a program as much of their music is spantaneous improvisation.

Students will be admitted with a student I.D. card. The performance, sponsored by the UMass Concert Association, is open to the public with an admission charge.

Left to right: Percy Heath, bass; Connie Kay, drums; John Lewis, piano; Milt Jackson, vibes.

Swan Sings Swan Song

By Dave Haracz

Hundreds of passers-by watched as a lone swan, the last of a group of ducks and swans being removed from the campus pond, eluded all efforts to capture it Wednesday afternoon. Finally, the outsmarted humans were forced to fight fire with fire and it was a dog that became the deciding factor in the capture of the swan.

"Lady", a four-year old boxer, crossed the pond's thin ice three times, each time dragging a rope which workers were using to herd the single bird to the end of the pond in the hope of forcing him onto land where he could be caught. All the other birds had already been captured, but the one swan continued to hop over the advancing rope as members of the Massachusetts Cooperative Wildlife Unit under Dr. Bernard Wentworth made their way around the edges of the pond.

When lady arrived on the scene, though, a rope was quickly sent across the center of the pond behind the swan, and after a few misses, workers successfully drove the bird to land, where it was quickly captured.

When Lady's owner, Mrs. Orna Seaver, was informed of her pet's role in the operation, she told the Collegian that she had not seen the dog since early that morning when Lady had left her Spring St. home with some other dogs.

Explaining that she had only had Lady for a month, Mrs. Seaver said, "She's very intelligent, but she doesn't know enough to

UMass Student Acquitted

By Don Boyd

Bob Meers, a junior end on the University's football team was completely cleared Tuesday in District Court of charges of alleged drunkenness and assault on three campus police officers.

Judge Charles O'Connor dropped the charge against Meers, and University officials announced shortly thereafter that no disciplinary action would be taken against the student who last week was named to the UPI All-New England football squad's second team.

This means that Meers will definitely be a participant in the Dec. 12 Tangerine Bowl Game with East Carolina State College.

At the same hearing, Judge O'Connor found Joseph Ross of Scituate guilty of assault on Officer Philip Cavanaugh, driving under the influence, failing to keep to the right and failing to have a driver's license in his possession.

D.V.P. Panel Pre-Empts Senate

The Student Senate, despite protest from some senators, adjourned at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday night after acting upon only four out of the 11 bills on the agenda.

The action was taken to enable Senate members to attend the Distinguished Visitors Program, a panel moderated by David Susskind, in the Union Ballroom.

Globetrotters Display Universal Appeal

"Abe Saperstein's Harlem Globetrotters are truly the Good Will Ambassadors of basketball, says Sam Balter, West Coast sports columnist.

"I saw the same show, for many successive nights. But I never really tired of it, and I especially never tired of watching kids of all nationalities hold their sides with laughter and jump up and down with glee," he continues.

The Globetrotters were honored by being the first sports aggregation invited to play at the New York World's Fair. On April 27, 1964, six days after the exposition's opening, they met and defeated the Canadian Dominions.

The next day the Globetrotters departed for Europe accompanied by the Dominions, whom they defeated in 115 successive games. They played in England, Luxembourg, France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Lebanon, Turkey, Greece, Italy, and Switzerland.

A highlight of the season was the Globetrotters' flight to London, where in the Grosvenor House, they played before Prince Phillip for his favorite charity.

These country hopping basketball players will appear at the University on Dec. 8, 1964 under the sponsorship of the senior class. Student tickets are on sale now for $1-.50 and will be on sale at the door.

"MY HERO! How handsome and brave!" Could it be Carolyn Miller as Lucy Fairweather looking adoringly at Tom Kerrigan in the guise of Mark Livingstone? The only way to find out for sure is to go see The Streets of New York December 10, 11, or 12 at 8:15 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium. Tickets on sale at the Student Union Box Office.

WBZ Not To Televise Bowl Game

Station WBZ in Boston announced yesterday that they will not televise the Tangerine Bowl game as planned. They will, however, broadcast the game by radio as part of the Redman Broadcasting network.

Bill Rasmussen and Charlie Hill of the Sports network will give a play-by-play account of the game. WBZ announced that they plan to give a pre-game rundown on the team at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 12. They plan to tie into the network coverage at 7:45 for the live broadcast from Orlando.

WBZ is temporarily taking the place of WORL, the station in the Boston area that customarily carries Redmen sports.

Art Aquisition Program Brings Original Drawings To University

By Ilana Motyka

A piece of welded steel called "No, Not Icarus" on the lawn beside Bartlett Hall has caused students' heads to turn as they move to and from the building.

Although works of art are periodically exhibited in Bartlett's foyer and in Memorial Hall, this sculpture, by Richard Fishman, is a gift to the University from the Class of '64 and is a part of the school's permanent art collection.

Elsewhere on campus, a number of varied exhibits is scheduled for winter and spring.

The art acquisition program at the University was begun in 1962 under direction of Walter Kamys of the art department. The University now owns 140 pieces which are displayed in departmental offices and lounges all over the campus.

Because of the high cost of other types of art, the emphasis of the collection will be on original drawings, although it is not restricted to this medium.

Within 10 years, there will, hopefully, be a collection of more than 500 pieces housed in the gallery of the projected Fine Arts Building.

Kamys outlines one of the purposes of the collection as enabling students to study meaning, style, and technique in original works of art. He adds that a gallery of original art will increase the University's prestige throughout the East.

Kamys describes this as a collection of the best art available with the limited funds of the acquisition program. Until recently, the program was supported entirely by donors, who included students, professors, University organizations, and nearby business concerns.

The collection is not limited to modern art; Kamys hopes to satisfy everyone's taste, "as long as it is good taste". He particularly stresses that this is an educational project for all students, not art majors only. He hopes students will come to enjoy and appreciate the collection as it is improved in quality each year.

Twenty new pieces, including a poster by Pablo Picasso, will be exhibited in January.

Student exercises from creative classes displayed in the halls of Bartlett attest to the growth and diversification of courses offered by the art department. A number of student and outside showings are planned throughout the year.

There are 78 undergraduate and 25 graduate students majoring in art at the University. Each of these groups will have a showing next spring. Also in the spring, Joseph Egan will exhibit his original paintings done in connection with his senior honors work in art.

Poly-material reliefs and drawings by John Cipot will replace on Sunday a current exhibition of the works of Uruguayan artist Julio Alpuy. In late spring a circulating Gibson collection of Japanese abstract art will visit the University.

Fraternity Men Help Town Conservation Work

Amherst's Mill river conservation area received a cleaning sponsored by IFC Saturday Nov. 22.

About 40 UMass fraternity men assisted members of the town conservation commission in cleaning around the Puffer's pond area and conservation land north of that.

The conservation commission is interested not only in the acquisition of conservation areas but also in improving the appearance of its recently acquired "green belt" areas and in keeping recreation areas as open as possible, according to Bradlee Gage, vice-chairman of the commission.

In a meeting a few weeks earlier, arranged through the Dean of Men's office, President Steve Graham of the I.F.C met with Gage, and learned that the pond was about to be closed to the public due to the excessive amount of debris from swimmers, picnickers, and fishermen.

President Graham immediately offered the Committee the aid of 40 volunteers to help police the area and open the pond to University students.

The volunteers representing every fraternity on campus worked as a unit to help the town.

Shown are some of the 40 UMASS fraternity men who helped the Town Conservation Commission.

Hillel Has Folk Singer For Festival

Latkes with sour cream and applesauce, Israeli folksinging and dancing will be the fare at the Hanukkah Festival to be held in lines 4 and 5 at the old Dining Commons Sunday night at 7 p.m.

The festival will feature Avram Graubard, an Israeli folksinger. Graubard had his own folk group in Israel while serving as a paratrooper in the Israeli army.

Besides playing the coffee house circuit and Borscht Belt, he has entertained on the Zim Ship line. His dynamic appeal to the college student lies in his accomplishment of interpreting on stage and in person Folk songs in twelve languages, including Hebrew, Russian and English.

Lecture In Spanish

Spanish Author To Speak

The distinguished Spanish novelist, Miguel Delibes, will present a lecture in Spanish on Monday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m. in the Council Chambers. The title of the lecture is "La Joven Novela Espanola."

Delibes was born in Valladolid, Spain in 1920. He holds degrees in law, journalism and business and is currently Professor of Cultural and Commercial History in Valladolid. He is editor of one of the oldest daily newspapers in Spain, "El Norte de Castilla."

Delibes is recognized as one of Spain's leading novelists, and his work has been acclaimed throughout the world. Delibes won Premio Uadal in 1948 for his first novel, "La Sombra del Ciprés es Alargada," and has since won numerous other literary prizes in Spain for his fiction. Although Spanish oriented, his works have been translated into five languages. He has travelled widely and lectured at major universities in Europe, South America, North Africa and now the United States.

Delibes' appearance is jointly sponsored by the UMass Department of Romance Languages and the Department of Spanish at Amherst College. Delibes will be in Amherst for three days and, in addition to his lecture at the University, he will participate in discussions with students of both Amherst College and the University who are currently studying contemporary Spanish literature. The lecture will be followed by a coffee session.

BOOK REVIEW:

"The Tarnished Eagles"

By Ben Sackmary

America perennially produces something that becomes so financially and administratively entangled that someone perceives it as a problem and presents the facts, figures and names to the public. The Abominable Airlines by George John son is such a document. It is a cleverly written book containing data that tells why Americans fly at higher speeds, higher prices and higher danger.

Mr. Johnson presents an analysis of the history of commercial airlines from conception to their modern subsidized monopolistic existence. He explains why airlines that fly half empty planes around the increasingly crowded sky, using outdated ground control equipment, and falling farther in debt would order supersonic transports (mach 3) that are not even designed yet. Perhaps to give their "featherbirded" flight crews a more luxurious setting for the in-the-air gin rummy games.

Both the government and the airline magnates are prodded by Johnson's vitriolic wit and embarrassing data. Although the mass of figures wearies the reader into an oblivion of sonorific strings of zeroes ONE CANNOT FORGET $2,000,000,000 in debts or $25,000,000 airplanes and $10,000,000 here and $20,000,000 there . . . Since the money is in good part subsidy the tarnished eagles can lift the fifty million Americans who do fly into the wild (with a reported four near collisions every flight it must be) blue yonder—blasting tax money out of their lovely new and noisier jet engines.

Johnson finds most of the troubles emanating from the unrealistic future plans of the major airlines and their naive sales programs, coupled with an innocuous and easily coerced governmental regulatory agency. Perhaps an investigation should be made into those plush airport towers before, as the book predicts, we end up paying big money for a big sonic boom and a bigger headache.

HomoSapienAbsurdis

(CPS) Good morning, class. Today's lecture concerns Man—classification: homo sapien absurdis.

Physical characteristics of this unfortunate mutation of a relatively straight-forward primate type are utterly laughable. His means of locomotion forces him to move by awkwardly shifting his entire weight onto a small, flat object at the lower extreme of his body. Further, evolution has robbed him of the advantage of his early predecessor: a tail.

This creature requires a huge amount of fuel to provide him with energy, because he is a prodigious waster of such energy, with a built-in energy canal about six times as long as his body. He spends about one sixth of his time fueling himself; a chore which he approaches with no little delight. When he is able to, he will invariably overfuel himself, thus requiring more time spent in disposing of the waste and in removing from his body the evidences of his gluttony. Such men are called successful.

Of all the many foibles of Man, none can match those which surround the process of reproduction. Virtually all of his thoughts, actions, movements, motivations—indeed, his whole purpose of existing—focuses upon his insatiable, unquenchable desire to participate in the act of reproduction. Naturally such conduct is inher-

Roister Doisters Set Search

This year, the UMass Roister Doisters, in search of new talent, have initiated a competition for prospective set-designers. The sets are to be used in a production billed. "An Evening of One-Act Plays", to be presented in February.

Anyone interested in this contest should get copies of the scripts in the R.S.O. office after Dec. 7th. A set design should be submitted for each play and the deadline for entries is the day after Christmas Vacation. For more information, contact Larry Wilker, Box 508, R.S.O. office.

COUNSELING DAY

Students are reminded that Tuesday, Dec. 8 has been set aside as Counseling Day. This is not a holiday. It is to allow advisor and student adequate time for consultation and pre-registration for next semester. Students are advised to check departmental bulletin boards immediately for particulars prior to that date.

Irving Irks Intellectuals

"Sir, this is student number 8549857 requesting a change of program. I have been scheduled for three classes at once." With each semester bringing multitudinous complaints, Irving, the IBM computer, looms as the despotic villain of automation. How many parents have nightmares of being indelicately displaced by a non-coffee klatching, non-commuting, perfect work - producing machine? Or, even worse their lives being run by a computer?

Parents, friends, UMies, machines don't think. Thinking is for people. Problems are put to the machines by people, which after due electro-mechanical processes arrives an answer. People thus further their knowledge without being human calculating machines.

Wouldn't you be surprised if the net result of your complaints was that the next time you put a dime in a coke machine it was politely handed to you with a straw in it? How many residents of Orchard Hill complain of the elevators robbing them of their leg development exercise or cars relieving them of the healthful jaunt into town? Students and profs alike use these mechanical slaves to their advantage and never complain that more and greater numbers of hairdryers, P.A. systems and air conditioners being used. It is true that the alarm clock has freed the bugler from his revillee. People can do what machines and computers do A mere 355 people working for 210 hours each could do the same problem a computer does in 35 minutes.

Fads Or Fun?

Hey frosh! What happened to your sneakers? The UMass. co-ed shows up as a fashion-conscious trend-setter from the Orchard to the Quad.

Swinging her shoulder bag over her suade jacket ,she wanders through the Hatch in her textured stockings and stack heeled shoes. Gone the Army & Navy surplus slicker, gone the green bag, gone the sweatshirt. Sally Co-ed has been pouring over those fashion magainzes and knows what's "in".

How closely do UMass girls follow the trends? Women's Wear Daily, the retailer's trade paper and the first and last word on fashion, reports on college fashion — New England style: "Capes are a thing of the past . . . and to be really with it, you've ditched the Greek bag."

And for the high brows in the audience, Wellesley College has the campus intellectual look. Pants are very "in". "Levis snag top rating . . . wool slacks also favored pullovers in either flat or fisherman knits . . . and loafers without socks," says Women's Wear Daily.

The above photograph taken at Radcliff shows the "real thing". Do you look like this, Sally Co-ed? Those sneakers were pretty shot anyway.

Editor's Note: Long ago there was the Mass. Agricultural College, now UMass. These originators of the COLLEGIAN had the same problems seventy years ago as we have today which our microfilm reporter brings you news of yesterday.

Your inquiring reporter has been fascinated by the "Old Aggie College down the road" which has become the dynamic institution known as the University of Massachusetts.

Does this sound familiar, upperclassmen? "The first thing to strike the reader of this volume of the Index is its late appearance. But, this we understand is not the fault of the editors."

A later article, in the form of a diary, went on to recount an incident on that "infamous" day in which the editors of the ever tardy Index were seen sneaking out of the tower of the Chapel.

Senate Questioned

On Tuesday night, Dec. 2, 1964, the student senate acted in a manner which must be questioned by the student body which they supposedly represent. At 8:15 that evening, a senator from the floor moved that the meeting be adjourned. A simple majority of 25 Senators voted in favor of the motion thus curtailing the session with much business still to be transacted.

Apparently, these representatives (?) were more interested in the Distinguished Visitor's Program (DVP), featuring David Susskind, than the remaining seven bills they left on the agenda without consideration. With only 11 bills to entertain that evening, there is absolutely NO reason why OUR senate could not give us the consideration of finishing the remaining business before adjourning. After all, they were elected to represent us at the senate meetings, not at a DVP program.

Many Senators, acting in a manner extremely flagrant to the ideals which they were elected to represent, pressed Senate President George Michael to dismiss the session early in order to attend the Susskind panel. When he would not, they took it upon themselves to disappoint us. Although Susskind's program was an excellent one, according to any standards, a Senator's first duty is to the Senate and the students.

Most of the Senate members who voted against the adjournment motion were completely appalled by the action. It was in effect an announcement by those voting for it that they felt no responsibility to the students who elected them.

With such a fine record to date, it is a shame that this had to occur and throw a poor light on the entire Senate. It is especially unfortunate that the entire Senate body must be disgraced when many members were not involved. If these senators are so anxious to adjourn early, they may try starting on time. It seems that the session started 15 minutes late, as it took that long to assemble a quorum. All eyes will be watching in the future to see whether the level of representation improves.

EDITORIAL FEATURE:

The Right To Join

The time seems to be at hand in the higher education system when the merits of individual self-improvement are discredited.

The college student is expected to devote a major part of his time to academics, while also attending to personal needs. Beyonds this, he is also expected to participate in recognized student organizations and to support the projects of other groups. When the student receives his degree, his participation in these organizations will be recorded.

But, it would seem that along with this right to join in recognized group activities should exist the right not to join. Cannot the student plot his own course of extra-curricular action? It would appear that valid recognition exists for student accomplishment only in the realm of the academic world or through recognized organizations. This premise would thus serve to re-enforce a concept that each student is dependent upon group activities to prove his personal initiative outside the realm of scholastic demand.

However, this concept does not consider the individual who fulfills his needs for outside challenge beyond the limitations of formal groups. This person will strive for new challenge alone or with associates with similar interests. This person asks for no recognition other than by those qualified to judge the results, in the hope that constructive criticism may lead to improvement. These interests may take the form of rebuilding an automobile, mastering a guitar, hunting, camping or painting.

For society to demand that every person join a group as a prerequisite to self-betterment is to refute the concept and worth of individual initiative. Many students are "loners". Why discredit the attempts of those who choose not to be "joiners" through a system which recognizes only the "joiners"?

These are not the times to discredit the worth of the individual working alone but to ascertain his value for a modern era. The individual who finds group acivity valuable should be serving a means to an end, not a goal in itself.

Allow the "joiner" the right to join and the "loner" the right not to join. Let the "loner" go his way, unimpeded with a false and artifical concept of accomplishment.

Blood Drive

To the Editor:

I should like to thank the Collegian for its fine coverage of the Campus Blood Drive.

May I make clear a statement made in the November 23rd, Collegian which said, "Fair, but we should have gotten more." This was in reference to the 183 pints collected on Wednesday and was not the overall picture.

The 1964 Blood Bank was a COMPLETE success. The 599 points of blood topped last year's total of 588. More student organizations participated than had previously. Over 70 students volunteered and worked at the donation center during the three days. They represented members from Gamma Sigma Sigma; A.E.Pi Fraternity; I.F.C.; A.P.O.; Panhellenic; R.O.T.C.; the Campus Medical Technician's Club; and the "Men from Wheeler Dormitory."

Congratulations for "a job well done" goes to Chairman George Marshall '65; co-chairman, Thomas Maclachlin and all who had a part in making the 1964 Blood Bank a success.

Mrs. Harold Watts

Highlights

To the Editor:

The ticket stub clearly announced that December 1, 1964, would be a "U.Mass 1964 Football Highlights" night. The entire program was built around the publicity of showing the highlights of the previous season.

The purpose of the highlights night was to raise money to send the band to the Tangerine Bowl. However, the evening should have been built up as a "Band Highlights Night". The majority of the small audience was present to see movies of the football team and hear one or two pieces played by the band. If the night was publicized as an evening of concert, I personally believe the audience would have been more appreciative and not have left after the drawing of the winning ticket.

Conductor Jenkins, an educated man in the field of music, should know only too well that the Cage is not conducive to the good boisterous music the band is capable of providing.

The audience showed their appreciation for what they came to see: highlights of the season. They were polite, as they anxiously waited for these movies and were not interested in hearing a superfluous amount of halftime music.

I would have to say that the band was given the majority of time for its publicity. However, I believe that the greater portion of the audience was surprised at the lengthy performance of music it was supplied with.

I am a Bowl Bound Band Backer and I believe that the band will be a great asset at the Tangerine Bowl. Last Tuesday should have publicized as "an evening of band music with a few films of the '64 Redmen."

Senators' Action Selfish

To the Editor:

There are times in one's life in which a decision between selfish and egotistical motives contend against a sense of duty and right. Last Wednesday 25 senators chose selfishness in voting to adjourn the Senate's meeting in order to view the Distinguished Visitors Program. These 25 were willing to leave seven resolutions, without proper discussion and action; and rush from the Senate floor on the pretense to hear the concluding remarks of David Susskind. Susskind's remarks may be worth hearing, but in some cases, as this, one's duty comes first.

These Senators have reneged upon the principles to which they have been elected. Namely to represent some 8,000 students and, as the oath of office states, to "carry out the duities of the Senate to the best of my ability." Have these Senators fulfilled their duty to the University? I emphatically say in regard to December 2, 1964, NO!! I feel ashamed and discouraged to realize that in my Senate dealings, I am contending with not representatives in some cases, but bigots.

I further praise and extoll the actions of the Senators who opposed this adjournment motion, and hope in the future that duty will lead all.

Senator James Fagan, Butterfield

Blood Drive Thanks

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Campus Religious Council we extend our sincere thanks to those individuals and groups who contributed to this year's Red Cross Blood Drive. In addition to the many individuals who came down to donate, our thanks goes to those who gave of themselves in the process of recruiting, publicizing and assisting in the drive.

Notice Negligence

To the Editor:

For the past two semesters, the irregular and incomplete publishing of Club Notices by the Collegian has been a source of irritation among the members of the SCUBA Club. Since it is my responsibility to see that meeting times and other pertinent information are submitted to the Collegian office, it has now, out of necessity, become my responsibility to see that the notices are printed.

Although I cannot cite the number of instances in which notices have not been printed, I do know that the record has been poor with regard to the SCUBA Club.

When I approached a member of the Collegian staff with my problem, he informed me that Club Notices was the first item to be cut from the paper to make room for other news. I realize that this view may not be the policy of the Collegian editor or the staff as a whole. However, I should think that a first class school newspaper, being a service to its student readers, would include information that would inform these students of meetings and enable them to get there on time.

Perhaps this problem has been created because of lack of organization and efficiency in the manner of submitting notices. Allow me to make a suggestion: The notices could be written on a regular form which includes the name of the organization, date, time and place of meeting, and other miscellaneous information, and also the date of the issue or issues in which the notices are to appear. The forms could be mimeographed on the same kind of scrap paper that is used for messages in the dorms. They would be a time-saving convenience to the submitter, and I believe, an aid to the staff member who now has to fumble through odd scraps of paper which tend to get lost. Not knowing how newspapers are run, this suggestion may be completely inadequate, but nevertheless, I feel some kind of reform is necessary, and would appreciate your consideration of the matter.

Secretary
SCUBA Club

Re: Harper

To the Editor,

Mr. Harper's editorial of Friday, the 20th, was somewhat unsound in content. He did strike a good point when he asserted that a delay in a bowl acceptance might result in the extending of other bids, possibly better bids. However, we must realize that our football team is still on the "college" level and that invitations from any major bowls were highly improbable. The Tangerine Bowl, although not quite as attractive as other larger bowls sanctioned by the N.C.A.A., still must be considered a good reward for our team's efforts during the season.

The Tangerine Bowl not only represents an opportunity to exhibit our football skills, it also determines the Atlantic Coast College Champion.

The attitude that winning the Tangerine Bowl will not improve our national recognition is questionable. Any team in the building stage, such as our's, has to start at a low echelon and gradually work up into a major power. This kind of team, must initially accept a minor bowl to draw recognition. It is felt that this bowl will certainly bring some of this sorely needed national recognition.

Lastly, Mr. Harper should do some research into the caliber of our opponent, East Carolina State. This team is rapidly advancing to major status and is one of the stronger college teams in the South. Next season they enter the tough Southern Conference which includes such teams as West Virginia, The Citadel, Furman, V.M.I., and George Washington. It can be safetly asserted that our opponent is as worthy of our play as they are of our's.

In the final analysis, most will agree that the decision was a very prudent one. It is encouraging to know that Mr. Harper's attitude was not shared by the Administration.

Just a brief letter in regard to the fine editorial feature by Harriet Braunfeld, but with particular reference to Al Oickle and his genuine interest in helping others to write better.

In case some of the students do not realize it, they are fortunate to have Al Oickle's availability on campus. Al has helped to put the Greenfield Recorder in its position as one of the finest newspapers of its size (and otherwise) in the country.

Bee Hive Stirs Hornet's Nest

By Joe Sullivan

Heads in the anthropology department are buzzing these days — over beehives.

If that seems strange at first glance, don't be alarmed — it gets stranger yet.

No ordinary honey-producing beehives, these enigmatic structures have produced nothing but problems since the department became aware of them.

This BEE-HIVE is dug into the side of a small, perfe c t l y r o u n d mound near the course of a small stream.

Obviously man-made, Prof. Thomas Frazer said, the beehives were constructed of dry-laid rock and usually built into the side of a hill. They are dome-shaped; have an interior diameter of approximately six feet and are capped with a massive flat rock.

In Massachusetts, three are located within five miles of one another near the Shutesbury-Wendell line. Another may be found in West Pelham. Other beehives have been located in southwestern Maine, in New Jersey and as far west as New York.

Who built them, however, is a mystery, according to Prof. Frazer.

Various theories have been advanced to explain the origin of the beehives, none of which has been enthusiastically and unequivocally accepted by those interested in studying them, Prof. Frazer said.

They have been called Colonial root cellars; Indian sweat baths; pre-Colombian monastic cells and vaults in which bodies might await the spring thaw for proper burial, he said.

One theory was even advanced explaining them as pre-historic hunting blinds from which Indians hunted the mighty mastodon.

What they actually are is not clear to the many investigators and all indications are that the mystery of the man-made beehives may remain a mystery for quite some time.

Art Exhibit Opens Dec. 6

An exhibition of polymaterial constructions and drawings by John Cipot will go on display in the foyer of Bartlett Hall, Sunday, Dec. 6, and will continue through Dec. 19.

The University Art Club will formally open the exhibit with a coffee hour from 3 to 5 p.m. Cipot will be present at this event which is open to the public.

Cipot is currently teaching at the University of Connecticut, Stamford, and was formerly at the Rhode Island School of Design where he was acting head of the ceramics department in 1954-1955.

Susskind Panel Discusses Murder In Mississippi

By Dave Moore

Three students and a junior high school teacher recounted the ideological problems and physical hardships which they faced this summer in Mississippi in a panel discussion "Murder in Mississippi — Four Who Came Back" Wednesday in the Student Union.

Nationally known producer-moderator David Sussikind directed an in-depth analysis of southern racism and challenged the four civil rights workers with controversial aspects of the situation.

Asked to comment on a Philadelphia, Mississippi banker's picture of white Mississippians as the "salt of the earth" and "what made America", Jacob Blum, a sophomore at Yale, said that racism is firmly imbeded in the social structure and institutions of the state.

He said that the killing of civil rights workers Schwerner, Goodman, and Cheney last summer in Philadelphia, Mississippi was typical of southern "irrational action."

David Gelfand sighted an incident in which he was shot at, clubbed, and chain whipped while relaxing at a lake.

Anne Moody, a Negro who cannot return to her home town in Mississippi because of her civil rights work, said there are "lots of moderates" in the south who are afraid to speak out.

Luther Seabrook, an East Harlem junior high school teacher, spoke of the difference between the honesty of southern whites in referring to "you black nigger" and what he termed the northern hypocrisy of discrimin-

ELECTRONIC ENGINEERS MATHEMATICIANS

Let's discuss tomorrow

In science and technology, the accomplishments of today are but direction for tomorrow. Why? Simply because resting on the accomplishments of today is a luxury we cannot afford.

In Communications Engineering, where others are content to modify, our mandate is to CREATE.

In Electronic Data Processing Systems, where others are content to innovate, our mandate is to CREATE.

This, then, is the philosophy . . . the crux of intellectual thought . . . at the National Security Agency—where the concepts of tomorrow are the problems of today.

So let's discuss the future . . . yours and ours

If you are a gifted and interested Engineer or Mathematician, we have much in common—including A COMPULSION TO SUCCEED.

Our future is contingent upon a constant input of new . . . and creative . . . scientific talent . . . the lifeline of any institution. Our success is embodied in the technical capabilities of our professional staff. To assure this, scientific employees are encouraged to pursue graduate studies at local universities under Agency sponsorship. Your future with NSA will entail education . . . early responsibility . . . and unusually challenging assignments. Why? Because . . .

• We MUST create completely new kinds of communications equipments and systems embodying concepts and techniques THAT HAVE NO PRECEDENT . . . antennas, transmitters, receivers and terminal hardware of a most advanced design.

• We MUST assure the complete invulnerability of message content through the novel . . . but never static . . . science of cryptology.

• We MUST develop special refinements for computers and electronic data processing systems . . . experimenting with the latest semiconductors, magnetic film and superconductive devices to provide new logic circuits and memory units for increased speed and capacity.

Interested? . . . If so, then LET'S DISCUSS TOMORROW. Representatives of the National Security Agency will be on campus in the near future. Check with your Placement Office for details and dates, or write to:

Journalist Mills To Host Lovecrafters,

Andrew Rothovius, a New Hampshire journalist, will be the guest of Mills dormitory and the H. P. Lovecraft Fan Club and Necromancy Society at a coffee hour in the Mill's house lounge Sat. afternoon, Dec. 5, at 5 p.m.

A man of varied interests, Mr. Rothovius is active in the fields of meteorology, colonial history, and archæology. He has contributed to such publications as the Anthropolgical Journal of Canada, the New York State Archaeological Bulletin and Yankee Magazine.

Rothovius has done research on Howard Phillips Lovecraft (1890-1937), a writer who has been rated next to Poe for his excellence in prose and poetry of the macabre genre. Of special interest is the fact that many of his short stories are set in central Massachusetts towns and are based on little known historical incidents.

The local settings and historical bases will be the subject of Mr. Rothovius' talk. The talk is open to the public.

Night of R 'n R

Revelers To Hold Shindig

Since their appearance on the UMass campus, Revelers has been an organization marked by imagination.

Traditional events, such as the annual Scholarship Night, are no exception. Although the end is the same—a scholarship for a worthy undergraduate,—the means are totally new. On Friday, Dec. 4, Revelers will present "Shindig".

Three outstanding vocal groups will provide continuous music from 7:30 till midnight in the Student Union Ballroom. Headlining the event will be "The Crests", hit-makers of "16 Candles" and "Step by Step". The Crests, currently touring the Eastern States, recently appeared at Amherst College.

"Shindig" will mark the return of "Dickie and the Sierras", who are well-remembered for their last appearance at the University. Completing the bill will be an exciting vocal group known as "The Conservatones".

Tickets will be on sale in the Student Union today. Tickets will also be available at fraternities from representatives of the Revelers. Price of admission is only $1 per person.

The Conservatones will appear at the Revelers sponsored "Shindig" Friday, Dec. 4.

Annual Christmas Concert To Be Presented

The University of Massachusetts Chorale's annual Christmas Concert, to be held Sunday, December 13, at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, is in the final stages of rehearsal.

The program this year promises to be interesting to a wide variety of musical tastes. It contains works of both older and contemporary composers, including several Americans who are still living and composing.

One especially interesting aspect of this year's concert will be the performance of different settings of the same text by composers of different ages.

The Chorale will sing two settings of "Gloria"; one a short modern version in English by Martin Shaw, the other a longer baroque setting in Latin by the "red-haired monk" Antonio Vivaldi. The Shaw version will be accompanied by two trumpets and organ.

Also planned are two settings of "On This Day." The first, by Gustav Holst, is a modern setting of a medieval tune. The second is a 20th century arrangement by H. C. Stewart.

Five pieces by modern American composers are planned. These include two lively secular carols by Arthur Shepherd and the moving "Watchman, Tell Us" by Alan Hovhaness. Hovhaness is now teaching at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y. His work is distinguished by a combining of modern idioms in a folk-song background.

The remaining two American pieces were written by a Harvard professor, Randall Thompson. They are the well-known "Alleluia" and the Nowell from "The Nativity According to St. Luke."

ently evil by the terms of his own code!

Physically there seems little to recommend the act. It is typically inefficient and burdensome. The organs are placed so as to require a maximum of effort and energy. The act lasts but a particle of a moment, and seems to disable the participant from productive activity for a goodly length of time. The results take ages to produce, and often the result of the act is assiduously and methodically prevented.

Reproduction is the topic of incessant discussion and debate. Books are written by the thousands about it, sometimes in minute, clinical detail. Sometimes these books are barred from the public view; the authorities apparently believe that the public should not be allowed to read about virtually the only thing in their lives that interests them.

(It should be pointed out that not all of the books are banned. As far as we have been able to determine, those books in a hard cover are moral—those in a soft cover are evil. We have as yet been unable to find an anthropomorphic significance, except that the hard cover books involve a greater sacrifice of that which Man worships above all else.)

The young are rarely told about this act, despite the fact that were they left to total ignorance, the race would die out completely. They are informed by the most efficient underground information receiving system extant; and by a moderately advanced age are enthusiastically practicing the act. Time has run out. Class dismissed.

Foreign Film To Be Shown This Sunday

The film Loss of Innocence will be shown in the SU Ballroom Sunday, December 6 at 7 p.m. Kenneth More and Susannah York star in this English film.

A screen exploration of a young girl's sudden awakening to love and jealousy based on the widely read novel "The Greenage Summer" by Rumer Godden and filmed in color in the champagne country of the Marne River in France. Susannah York received critical praise for her performance as the girl who takes charge of her younger sister and brother when they become stranded in a chateau. Kenneth More plays the mysterious English guest who befriends them and sees his own affair with the chateau-owner (Danielle Darrieux) torn apart by her jealous resentment of her innocent younger rival.

Keys And Scrolls Selling Trees

The Maroon Keys, a UMass men's sophomore honor society and the Scrolls, a women's sophomore honor society, will sell Tangerine Trees in Amherst and Northampton stores until Friday Dec. 7. The proceeds will be used to help send the University Band to the Bowl game, announced Brian Healy, Maroon Key president.

The trees will be sold at Stop & Shop and Bradlee's in Northampton and at Louis Foods and House of Walsh in Amherst from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

During the last week of the fund raising campaign, Tangerine Trees and Tags will be sold in the Student Union Lobby from 9:00 to 3 p.m.

PANEL DISCUSSES . . .

ation.

Moderator Susskind pointed to statements by Director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, that the civil rights movement had many "Communists and moral degenerates." Seabrook said that the Communist "pitch" was an affliction of the 30's and that if it were true, he welcomed the work they were doing.

Reaction of the panel to recent charges by Rev. Martin Luther King that the FBI was lax in Mississippi was strong.

Anne Moody noted that they were afraid to do anything and as scared as other whites. She said they had become southerners and were sympathetic to the southern attitude.

Seabrook said the FBI was too little affected by mysterious happenings and brutality and were generally apathetic.

Both Seabrook and Moody emphasized that "if there is going to be a change in America, it's got to take place in Mississippi."

Moody added that any revolution in Negro rights will be spear-headed by poor whites and Negroes "at the bottom", although the national government is needed to start the process through integration in the beginning.

The panel concluded that their summer's work in Mississippi served to focus national attention on the situation.

Pre-Law Presents

De Facto Segregation

The Pre-Law association will present a talk on the first New England de facto segregation case, Barksdale v. Springfield School Committee, on Friday, Dec. 11 at 4:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Student Union.

Speaking and answering student questions will be Atty. Herber O. Reid, Professor of Law at Howard University Law School. Along with Reid will be Atty. Henry Weissman also counsel in the segregation case, and Newton Pacht, Asst. Prof. of Law at Howard University Law School.

Reid served as an attorney in the Solicitor's Office, Department of Labor and as Law Clerk to the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Concurrent with his teaching he has participated as counsel or consultant in a large number of criminal cases and in almost all the major civil rights cases since 1947.

He was Counsel of Record in the District of Columbia School segregation case, Bolling v. Sharpe, which was decided in 1954 by the Supreme Court along with Brown v. Board of Education. Recently he was trial counsel and counsel of record in the case of Commonwealth v. Henry, a Virginia "sit-in" case.

Presently Mr. Reid is serving as special counsel in a number of pending suits attacking de facto school segregation.

He was one of the trial attorneys in the recent case of Barksdale v. Springfield School Committee tried in Springfield, Massachusetts, a pilot suit in the New England area. Together with Attorney Henry Weissman of Springfield, he presented this suit in the courts. Both Reid and Weissman will speak on the significance of this case as the first segregation case in the New England area.

SENATE PRE-EMPTED . . .

Due to the uncertainty at the time of adequate radio and television coverage of the Tangerine Bowl, the Senate appropriated $200 to enable station WMUA to broadcast the game.

WMUA has received the approval of the National College Athletic Association for the broadcast.

A bill to send the Precisionettes Drill Team to Orlando, Fla., to perform in pre-game activities was defeated at the Wednesday session.

Several senators stated that they felt the time allotted to the girls for their performance was not sufficient to justify the expense of the trip.

These charges stemmed from involving Meers, and Officers Taylor, Cavanaugh and Sienciewicz.

Ross was fined $100 on the first two charges and the remaining ones were filed. According to University officials, he was also placed on strict disciplinary probation.

stay home." Wednesday's absence was the longest that Mrs. Seaver remembered since she has had the dog. After receiving a reward of a rare hamburger, Lady posed for photographers and quietly left campus.

The familiar ducks and swans were brought to the campus pond in the spring of 1963 in an attempt to eradicate the weeds which formerly choked the slow-moving water throughout the summer months, but both students and visitors have enjoyed their aesthetic contribution to the campus as well.

Dr. Wentworth, who had charge of removing the birds from the frozen pond during the absence of the regular director of the program, Dr. David Wetherbee, said that all the birds will be housed for the winter in a barn in New Salem. He added that the students may be sure that the birds will be back in the pond next spring.

The Wildlife Unit in charge of the birds is a Department of the Interior agency under the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, and operates on campus in cooperation with the University's wildlife department.

Fusiamen Pick All Opponent Team

Buffalo and Holy Cross dominated the University of Massachusetts 1964 All Opponent Team.

Buffalo players chosen are end Gerry Pawloski, tackle Leo Ratamess, quarterback Don Gilbert and fullback Denis Pryzkuta. Holy Cross players are tackle Joe Lilly, guard Charlie Tarasiweicz and halfback Jim Marcellino.

Other selections are tackle Joe Buesing and end Dan Dean, Rhode Island, guard Ed Meixler, Boston University, center Rusty Brink, Vermont, and halfback Wally Grant, Harvard. Grant is the only repeater from last year's team.

Buesing was chosen the most outstanding player to face the Redmen with Gilbert placing second. Buffalo was an overwhelming choice as the best team to face UMass in 1964. Harvard, the only team to defeat UMass, received just one vote.

The complete 1964 Massachusetts All Opponent Team:

Ends — Gerry Pawloski, Buffalo; Dan Dean, Rhode Island.

Tackles — Joe Buesing, Rhode Island; Joe Lilly, Holy Cross and Leo Ratamess, Buffalo. Tie.

Guards — Ed Meixler, Boston University; Charlie Tarasiewicz, Holy Cross.

Center—Rusty Brink, Vermont.

Quarterback — Don Gilbert, Buffalo.

Halfbacks — Jim Marcellino, Holy Cross; Wally Grant, Harvard.

Fullback — Denis Pryzkuta, Buffalo.

Best Team — Buffalo.

Best Player — Joe Buesing, Rhode Island.

Honorable Mention—End Dick Kochansky, Holy Cross; tackle John Dugan, Holy Cross; guards George Oelze and Ron Hertel, Vermont, and Joe DeFalco, Rhode Island; center Tom Nissi, Holy Cross; quarterback John McCluskey, Harvard; halfbacks Bob Edward, Buffalo, and John Billingslea, Connecticut; and fullbacks Pat Conway, Harvard, and Bill Bryant, Rhode Island.

Mermen Open Today Vs. So. Conn.

By Bud Pratt

This afternoon at 4:00 P.M. the UM Varsity Swimming Team opens the season against one of its toughest opponents, Southern Conn., at Boyden PEB. Coach Joe Rogers is seeking his third winning season in a row, despite the loss of two great swimmers, Mike Bjornholm and Mike Rothschild, both of whom completed their third year of eligibility last winter.

Coach Rogers admits that while the team has some outstanding individual performers, it also has some gaping holes to fill. The gap left by Rothschild (who finished second in the small college Nationals 1650-yd. event last year) will, Joe predicts, be ably filled by Dick Daniels. As a sophomore, Dick was right on Rothschild's heels for all of the 500 and 200 free style races last year. Dick is already closing in fast on Rothschild's records. While Coach Rogers is usually tight-lipped about optimistic predictions, he has been elated with Daniels' performance since the beginning of last season, and predicts that Dick will be one of UM's all-time great distance swimmers.

Co-capt. Charlie Monnier, UM breast stroke record-holder, can be counted on against most of his opponents in his event, and senior Dan O'Mara has always been an outstanding individual medley man. Bill Cowern '65, Frank Wilson '66, and Chip Weiser '67 are counted on for important free-style points if Rogers is to have the points he needs to win the tough ones. Junior Tom Hoffman, out most of last season with a wrist injury, may be valuable here.

Diving prospects are excellent with the return of Tom Hanley '66, a consistent point-getter and Bruce Colby '67, who was outstanding as a freshman last year.

Perhaps the greatest loss of all, however, came just a short time ago, when doctors announced that due to medical reasons, senior co-capt. Jim O'Sullivan, UM Butterfly recordholder, will be unable to compete this season. Sophomore Steve Levy will have to do some fine swimming to fill in O'Sullivan's shoes.

The loss of Koss and Bjornholm in the backstroke places this event solely in the hands of Walt Orzak, still a green sophomore.

A big factor in the team's ability to produce its third straight winning season will be the return of Dick Lennon. A specialist in the individual medley, Dick was one of the finest freshman swimmers Rogers has ever coached last year. Lennon does everything a coach could ask, and does it well; but Dick is lost for the remainder of this semester for academic reasons, and a great deal rests on his ability to return in February.

So this will be a season of "ifs" for the Redmen. As in previous years, Coach Rogers has some fine individual performers, but depth is yet to be seen.

INTRAMURALS . . .

average of 180.

Intramural Basketball got under way Tuesday night. Provost Tippo was present to throw out the first ball. The campus champions, Lambda Chi, began a successful defense of their title as they dumped TEP 61-35.

Other IFC results saw ASP over AEPi 45-31, TKE besting BKP 60-49, KS over ZN 51-36, TKE in a romp over PMD 55-35, PSK squeaking by QTV 38-34, and SPE defeating PSD 67-19.

Top scorer for the night was Shea of LCA with 27. Goodhue of SPE had 23, The latter was top man in the rebounding department with 22. His teammate, Saila, was next with 21.

The following are the results of the Dorm Leagues: East Buffaloes 42 - Bruins 26, Maroons 67 - Broncos 27, Eagles 32 - Barracudas 22, Lemons 52 - Grants 32, Garfields 53 - Limes 17. West: Chestnuts 53 - Slippery Elms 35, Elms 29 - Hickory 19. North: Hurricanes 43 - Aces 42, Redwoods 29 - Redmen 28, Birch 37 - Hemlocks 19, Rams 48 - Cherry 34, Nationals 62 - Hawks 37.

The top scorers in the dorm leagues show Chase of the Chestnuts on top with 29 points closely followed by Canatta of the Nationals with 26 and Kelly of the Garfields with 23.

The rebounding leaders are Flint of the Buffaloes with 14, Leary of the Maroons with 10 and Chapin of the Birches with 9.

Vicky's 202's, led by two members of last year's campus champs, Charlie Fohlin and Al Garsys, won their first game in the independent league beating the Buggers by a score of 58-23. The next game saw them on top with a 49-31 victory over the Smiley AC.

The P.E. Majors, who look like the Redmen football team in shorts, with Terry Swanson, Jerry Wheichel, John Schroeder, Phil DeRose, have hooked up with a former All-Ivy League basketball player in the likes of Dr. Carl Belz of the Art Dept. They romped over the AIIE 79'ers 79-42. Swanson and Belz, a Princeton grad, both picked up 21 points.

Redmen Cagers Down B.U. In Season's Opener

By John Goodrich

The sign on the far side of the Boston University gym read, "This is the year." This may be true but it was not their night when the Terriers faced the invading University of Massachusetts and bowed 93-89.

The Redmen were sharp in this their season opener. They shot .534 from the floor on 39 of 73. Leading the Redmen were Clarence Hill who put in 22 points and Tim Edwards with 21.

Boston U. was not a weak opponent for the UMass club and performed well also. The game was close throughout with the outcome in doubt until the last minute.

CHARLIE KINGSTON got the first goal of the 1964-65 season on a follow up to a missed hoop. The club led in the early going, but the home forces behind the skillful work of Randy Cross worked their way past the Redmen and into a 28-20 lead. Cross had 17 points in the first half and 15 of the first 28.

Massachusetts rallied behind Hill and Paul Gullicksen to pull ahead at 37-36. The rest of the half was tight with Dave Delaney's 3 point play tying the contest at the half, 43-43.

EDWARDS should be singled out for his work in the opening session. He demonstrated some fine moves that kept the Terriers off balance. He finished up with 14. The Redmen were bothered by an old problem, foul shooting. Gullicksen made five in the first half, but that was all the team could manage.

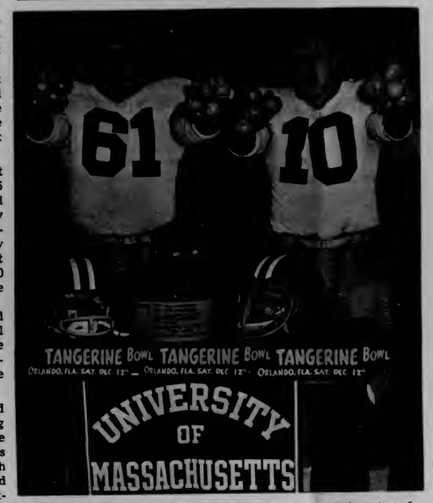
CLARENCE HILL took charge of the team in the second half as he scored 18 points and led the fast break repeatedly. If BU had any ideas of running with the Redmen they were soon discouraged by the work of Hill and Mike Meola, who sparkled with some fine passing.

The Redmen had opened a six point lead with 13 minutes left in the game when Chuck O'Rourke, fouled out. He left with 16 points and 10 rebounds. Gullicksen, Edwards, Jim Painten, and John Lisack all filled in to take up the gap.

Led by little Ken Leary, the Terriers took a brief 77-76 lead, but goals by Lisack and Hill put the visitors back on top. After another tie, the Redmen raced to a 91-84 lead as Hill hit a 3 point play.

SOPHOMORE DICK LEE converted a goal and a foul of help from 5'7" Leary with 21 and Lee who hit all 14 of his in the second half. Dick Moreshead got 12 in a limited playing time.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY will come to Amherst for a return engagement in February in what could be a real tight game.



UMass football co-captains Peter Pietz (left) of Belmont, and Jerry Wheichel of Cochituate, practice getting a grip on tangerines in preparation for the Redmen team's appearance against East Carolina in the Tangerine Bowl on Dec. 12. Redmen Dominate All Yan-Con Team

The University of Massachusetts' classy backfield of Jerry Whelchel, Phil DeRose, Bob Ellis and Mike Ross, which swept through Yankee Conference opposition in devastating style was selected as a unit on the all-conference team.

In fact, so completely did the Redmen dominate the conference that the coaches at the six New England state universities selected eight of Coach Vic Fusia's bowl-bound men for the first team and two for second team honors.

Milt Morin and Bob Meers, who were selected a year ago, were repeat choices at the ends; Bob Burke was named to a tackle post and Peter Pietz was the choice at one of the guard spots.

Two of the remaining three positions went to the University of Vermont's interior line stalwarts, George Oelze at Guard and Arthur "Rusty" Brink at center. The final spot was given to Joe Buesing, the University of Rhode Island's tackle who also was named to that position a year ago.

The second team comprises: Nick Rossetti, Connecticut, and Ken Olson, New Hampshire, ends; Don Hagburg, Massachusetts, and Joe Licata, Connecticut, tackles; Ron Hertel, Vermont and Dick Kupec, Connecticut, guards; John Huard, Maine, center; Dick DeVarney, Maine, quarterback; Ken Palm, Massachusetts, and Brent Keene, Maine halfbacks, and Richie Reynolds, Vermont fullback.

Also receiving votes were Alan Riley, Maine, end; Frank Foerster, Vermont, halfback, and Bill Bryant, Rhode Island, fullback.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

Zeta Nu accomplished the first big upset of the intramural Ten-Pin Tournament as they defeated AEPi 6-2 Monday night. For Pi it was their first defeat after winning 32 straight games. Their six losses Monday night dropped them from the sole leadership to a first place tie with TEP. Both teams show a 34-6 record. QTV rounds out the top three with a 25-7 record.

Frank Nesvet of Pi rolled a brilliant 221 game for the high single of the season. Morrison of PMD had the best three game total, 566, and the best three game average, 169.

The BIG story of the bowling race is the #1 team from Grayson. They are currently displaying a sparkling 40-0 record and are 18 full games ahead of second place Greenough, with an 18-14 record. They have been paced all season long by Tiberio, with a 167 average, Banks 170, Lipman 170, and Minton, 165. As a team they lead the Dormitory East League in all major categories: high single, high three game, and high average.

Middlesex and Mills are tied for first in the Dorm West League. Tordoff of Middlesex is the individual campus leader in all three categories. He has a high single of 267, high three game total of 595, and high

Big Redmen Send-Off Scheduled For Tuesday

The vaunted UMass football squad leaves snow-bound Massachusetts tomorrow for the lush Tangerine country of Orlando, Fla.

"It's a long way to go for a football game", quipped Redman Coach Vic Fusia, "but then we don't expect it to be a fruitless trip."

The Redmen leave Curry Hicks Cage tomorrow at 2:15 p.m. for Bradley Field. They will fly to Orlando.

Fusia hopes to see a big send-off for the team, and, according to Adelphia rally coordinator Bob Healy, he's going to get it.

"Tuesday is counseling day," Healy pointed out, "the Band and Cheerleaders will be there, and so will everyone else with an ounce of school spirit and a desire to see the team win in Orlando."

Old Math Building?

Land. Arch. Seeks Home

By Carol Nellon

Professor Gordon King of landscape architecture has requested a "home" for his decentralized department that is burdened with a growing enrollment and lack of classroom space. His department is scattered over three buildings.

IN ANSWER to Prof. King's request, the administration offered him the old math building.

At the same time, unaware of Prof. King's request, the Student Senate requested that the building be demolished because it is a sore spot on campus.

Prof. King, however, states that with minimum improvement this building would be a "suitable place for a program of our size." He needs two large classrooms, four offices and a library.

THE BUILDING WOULD ALSO HOUSE the Horticultural and Park Management as well as the four year park administration program.

King admits the Senate is right in suggesting that the building would be improved with new paint and shutters.

"Basically, the problem is how much money should you invest in improving it for five years," he said.

HE GOES ON TO EXPLAIN that plans are underway for a new building.

Senator Philip Berlin, who is working on the case for the Senate Services Committee, maintains that the building should still be torn down.

Asked to explain his statement, he said, "Just take a look at it. There's nothing in there but mangy old pillows."

SENATOR BERLIN QUOTES Dean Field as saying that the building will also be used for the construction of a model room of the Southwest dorm.

Senators Berlin, Chambers and Levenson are meeting regularly with Dean Field to discuss the problem.

Take Three Firsts

Debaters Win Yan-Con Title

The University of Massachusetts Debate Team took first place at the Yankee Conference Championship held last Saturday at the University of New Hampshire.

In addition to compiling the best won - loss record at the round robin tournament, the Redmen debaters won the first negative team trophy and tied for the first affirmative team.

It was the first Yankee Conference triumph for the team since the tourney was conceived two years ago.

To complete the sweep of the tournament, the debaters won several individual awards. The two members of the negative team, Larry Rutstein and Mike Farrell, were first and second respectively in speaker rating with Rutstein receiving the best negative speaker award.

The affirmative team, Wren Farren and Marshall Goldberg, were third and fourth among the affirmative debaters.

Although the '63-'64 team compiled the best record since the outstanding '39-'40 team, the Forensic Society coach, Mr. Phillips Biddle, predicts that this year's team will exceed the record of any team in 55 years of competitive debate at the University.

Hell Called A "State of Mind"

By Joe Sullivan

"Dante and the Journey to Hell" was the title of the lecture delivered by Dr. Charlotte S. Spivak of the UMass English dept. at Bartlett Auditorium last Friday night. Its theme, however, was "know thyself".

DR. SPIVAK, SPEAKING before a capacity plus crowd of more than 400, explained Dante's journey to the inferno in terms of its moral application to individual human behavior.

"Dante learned," said Dr. Spivak, what every man must learn if he is to successfully come to grips with himself: That there is in the nature of each man, a segment of the inferno, the fires of which, fanned by the fetid winds of moral abandon, will consume his very soul."

Dr. Spivak termed this nether region the Shadow and went on to say that if man did not recognize it as evil, he would live not with it, but under it.

"HELL," DECLARED DR. SPIVAK, is a state of mind which choses sin so completely that it cannot act otherwise. Hell thus represents the final choice

MJQ To Appear Tonight

Four musicians who plunged into a new type of jazz 10 years ago will give a concert at 8 p.m., tonight in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Modern Jazz Quartet, featuring musicians who grew up with jazz during the Dizzie Gillespie era, bridges the gap between completely extemporaneous playing and the discipline of classical musicianship.

Group leader John Lewis, who doubles as composer and pianist, holds a master's degree in music and draws on his extensive works for much of the quartet's repertoire.

Milt Jackson, voted top vibraharpist by Downbeat magazine compositions for the foursome.

"Streets of New York"

U. T. Returns to 19th Century

By Dave Moore

The Streets of New York will be paved through Bowker Auditorium this week with what appears to be a uniqueness in staging and characterization not seen before at the University.

This 19th century melodrama will be produced almost exactly as it was originally written for New York audiences and staged as it was in the 1890's by the traveling companies who played in Amherst and Northampton.

Streets promises to provide an evening of exciting entertainment in a vein unusual today. Melodramatic acting heightens the portrayal of deceit, absconding banker, a crafty clerk and underhanded dealings in an episode based on the commercial panic of 1837.

DR. CATALANO, DIRECTOR of the University Theater's production and member of the UMass speech department, has emphasized that the play is primarily a learning exercise or lab for dramatic arts students.

The enthusiasim the principals have for the play, as expressed in interviews with them, comes largly from knowing how and why the play was produced as it was—why they themselves must act as they do, says Catalano.

Chuck Interland, Eddie Brock in last season's production Born Yesterday, sights the definite contrast involved with his character Captain Fairweather of Streets. Fairweather has a depth of personality and feeling that Brock did not, he says.

Carolyn Miller plays the Heroine Lucy, in her first stage appearance as a UMass freshman. Carolyn has had experience in Stockbridge, Mass. summer stock She points out that the lines are deep and need to be analysed more than usual.

WELL KNOWN for his performance as Ed Devry in Born Yesterday, Tom Kerrigan talks of Streets in Aristotle's term of Specticalan artistic unity of scenery, costume, make up and music. He says that the Olio, a gally painted movable backdrop, was painted by Dale Amlund, a graduate of the Yale School of Drama, who studied under Oenslager, the foremost scene design teacher in the country.

It is in front of this drop that the entracte, or between scene vaudaville acts, go on.

These routines, Tom noted, are not used in the legitmate theater, but were incorporated as a scene changing device by the traveling companies.

KEN BORDNER, also a veteran of Born Yesterday, portrays the side-burned villian. The problem, he says, is in believing the character yourself.

Ken tells of the difficulty in taking the character seriously and of thinking in terms of character types. It takes, he estimates, 10 times the concentration as in a modern play.

Ken makes clear that the exagerated gestures used in the 1800's were devices to overcome lighting conditions. The dim glow from gas lamps used for floodlights made viewing difficult, and necessitated "holding" the action for as long as possible.

Author Explains New Work

Third in the week-long Meet the Author series was a discussion of the new book The Talkative President by one of its editors, Prof. Howard Quint, chairman of the history department. Dr. Quint has for many years been a controversial figure in the world of journalism. He has written two other books, one being Black and White in South Carolina, and has also contributed to many distinguished publications.

Quint describes his book as "a happy accident," and went on to explain to his receptive audience how the idea for the book first came into being.

The transcripts of the Coolidge press conferences had been sitting in the Forbes Library in Northampton since 1959. Then Professor Farrell, a diplomatic historian, came to the University as a visiting lecturer in the summer of 1961. He and Prof. Quint went to look over the transcripts and together decided that they would be worth editing for a new book.

Professor Quint went on to tell a little about the philosophy that was brought out in the Coolidge press conferences. By the previous weeding of questions and refusing to answer others, the President managed to avoid commenting on many of the major issues of his time.

Rapport between Coolidge and the press was surprisingly very good. The press conferences were described by Dr. Quint as being a cathargic experience for the President which brought about the title of the book.

Quint closed his remarks by stating "the day is here when we need a new biography of Coolidge."

Civil Rights Conference Proposed

By Victor Aronow

A proposed civil rights conference will be held in the four college area on Feb. 12, 13, 14. The conference, sponsored by a coalition of interested faculty and students from the four colleges is entitled: The Civil Rights Movement, Reform or Revolution?

The conference will begin on Friday evening, Feb. 12, at Smith College with a keynote speech, followed by a panel discussion on "Community Organization." The following day, the conference will move to the University of Massachusetts, where there will be two panel discussions, "Political Action" and "Economic Reorganization."

Saturday afternoon, 13 concurrent seminars will be held at Amherst College fraternity houses. Among the topics to be discussed at these seminars will be "Forced Integration", "Mississippi: Closed Society", "Black and White Together?", "Jobs and Automation."

The University of Massachusetts, as an intellectual and educational institution, is called upon to play an integral role in organizing, sponsoring and promoting such a conference. The sponsoring group on this campus is the Young Independents, but support from all members of the campus and the community is needed.

Specifically, what is needed? People are needed who are willing to contribute a few hours to the routine work of stuffing, addressing and mailing information.

Also necessary are typists and writers, as well as people to do research and help put the proceedings of the conference into a booklet form.

The University group will be responsible for housing at least one hundred delegates; therefore faculty and students are asked to help find and provide housing.

Although an effort has been made to keep expenses to a minimum, an additional $2500 above what organizations and colleges have already pledged is necessary. Students are asked to contribute directly, and to help solicit contributions.

All those who are interested in contributing in some way to this conference should leave their name and address in the mailbox of Young Independents, c/o RSO, or with the following campus coordinators:

Victor Aronow, 235 South St., Northampton, JU 4-5652; Dani Ostrow, Crabtree House; Anne Voehringer, Dwight House.

There will be a general meeting for all interested on Thursday, Dec. 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union council chambers.

Taking another ho-hum vacation because you think traveling is expensive? Cut it out.

HELL CALLED . . .

of its occupants."

Dr. Spivak said that the allegorical journey to hell was as essential to Dante's process of self-realization as it is to everyone in search of himself.

"The journey to hell," he said "is essential to the moral wisdom of the human race. It has thus been a theme constantly recurrent in the course of literary history."

DR. SPIVAK WENT ON TO cite modern day parallels to Dante's journey of nearly six hundred years ago. Notable among them was that taken by William Golding's innocents" in Lord of the Flies:

"Put to a severe test of their strength, the mores of civilization—at best a pitifully thin veneer—soon disappear, and elemental savagery rules the island. Piggy (good) is killed, and Simon who perceives what is good, becomes a hunted outcast."

"Thus," says Golding, "must good always fare."

"KNOW 'THYSELF", says Spivak, and the knowledge will conquer evil."

Fit For A King?

— Pillow Talk —

Is Tobacco Road located on North Pleasant St. or on Stockbridge Road? If the new Provost had seen the old math building when he arrived, perhaps his criticism would not have been aimed at the student body and South College would have been closed instead of the Hatch.

The condition of the old match building stands as evidence of poor planning. An organization which is cocerned with preserving the university image does not allow campus faciilities to approach the condition of this building. An institution which desires to remain free from state control and interference does not place epidemic signs at its entrance. A body which expects to receive individual contributions does not broadcast its neglect. Had the math building been turned over to the Greek system when it was abandoned, it would be in a less sorry condition than that in which we find it.

If it was necessary to store pillows and mattresses on campus, at least the appearence of the building could have been preserved. As it stands now, the only worthwhile improvement is removal. The building stands out like a sore on a respectable, responsible University.

One begins to wonder what the pillows were doing there in the first place. Granted there is a lot of red tape involved in moving state property from one state organization to another, but why were so many unneeded pillows purchased in the first place? Perhaps, we have another example of lack of foresight. Or perhaps, we have an example of state and national cooperation .The federal government supports an unnecessary industry by subsidizing feathers; the state stamps its approval by purchasing worthless pillows. Surely, an organization that spends money supporting another institution can support the preservation of its own.

Next year, some students may be forced to have classes in that foul-smelling, derelict-looking building. Prof. King who upon requesting a new home for his expanding landscape architecture class was offered the old math building, should be commended on his fortitude and sense of humor under the circumstances. May he be content in his new "home".

Review of Critique

The Critique staff may be justly proud of both the quality it has maintained and the improvements it has made over last year's first edition publication.

The second edition Critique, includes more lower level courses than did the previous issue, and generally covers a wider resume of a departments and courses within each department. Although this represents an improvement, it does not however soothe the disappointment and frustration of students who of students who cannot find "their" courses listed. To accomplish a broader critique, the know-your-department discussions found in the first edition have been omitted. What little opportunity there was for each student to become familiar with the inside workings, plans, standing, and progress of his department has thereby been eliminated. If properly made up, this part might be significant addition to the main purpose of the publication; namely, that of an inside guide to course offerings.

Format and layout of Critique are both good. Material under the content heading is very useful when original. For the sake of space and better inclusions, the descriptions should not parrot those found in the Undergraduate Bulletin which students can obtain free. Descriptive sections under each course heading are well fitted to the nature of individual subjects. They are not stylized to a point of dry factual presentation, making the publication readable and editorially pertainent, besides factual.

Advertising layout is varied and eyecatching, but not obtrusive. The larger print is a saving grace, lending itself to a neater, cleaner looking issue.

The major criticism which one might have for Critique concerns the Feature Section. Could not the space be better used. With the possible exception of "English: Thirty Credits: Too Little?", the articles are irrevelent to the purpose of Critique as outlined by the Editor. Editorial expressions such as these are needed, and should be encouraged, perhaps in a special supplement or in a Collegian series. They would thus be less widely ignored in one's haste to use the publication as intended, and less bemoaned for taking valuable space.

Critique is, all things considered, on the track to becoming a top notch student information source of highly directive value.

Letters To The Editor

NEEDLESS EXPENSE

To the Editor:

The current drive to raise funds to send about one hundred members of the University Band and twenty cheerleaders to the Tangerine Bowl on December 12, apparently has the strong approval of the University Administration which already is paying some of the expenses connected with the fund-raising campaign.

Responsible officials in RSO have told me that about $14,500 will be needed to underwrite expenses for the Band and cheerleaders. They anticipate that about $8,500 could be raised by the sale of badges, which now is underway, and the sale of tickets to the "Highlights Program" which was held in the Cage. The difference between the $8,500 and the $14,500, that is, $6,000, apparently is going to be split 50-50 between the administration and the Student Senate.

This means that the Student Senate will be expected to appropriate at least $3,000 more of student funds for this trip.

As you certainly are aware, this year the Student Senate already has appropriated $10,000 for ordinary expenses connected with the Band, $2,500 for trips for the Band, and $4,000 for Band uniforms, making a total of $16,500 of student tax money which is employed to support a Band which essentially is useful to the Athletic Department, but for which the Athletic Department assumes no financial responsibility whatsoever.

I have also been told that the Band and cheerleaders probably will be able to perform no more than seven minutes and thirty seconds of the total fifteen minute intermission between the halves at the Tangerine Bowl. In addition, I believe that the Tangerine Bowl seats no more than 10,000 persons. In short, for this seven minute and thirty second show, the cost per spectator will be something in the range of $1.40 of student funds per person, regardless of the basic underwriting of the Band which I have discussed.

I am appalled that there has been no criticism by the Faculty or the Student body of this inordinate expense. I seriously doubt that in any significant way the University benefits from a seven minute and thirty second spectacle in which our team plays the highly prestigious team of Eastern Carolina College.

John R. van Steenberg
Assistant Professor of History

An Apology

To the Editor:

I would like to apologize to the people who went to "Shindig" Friday night. Due to inclement weather and poor road conditions, one of the groups we were featuring was unable to be here. The proceeds of this dance will go to a scholarship and I regret to announce that it was not an overwhelming financial success.

In the future we will try to plan the weather a little more carefully and we hope our upcoming events will be a little more successful.

MJQ TO APPEAR . . .

He was a member of the famous sextet of Gillespie, Jackson, Charlie Parker, Ray Brown, Stan Levy and Al Haig, one of the most influential progressive jazz groups of the forties.

Percy Heath, another ex-Gillespie player, is bassist for the group and is in great demand for recordings.

The quartet is filled out with Connie Kay, drummer. He played the club circuit wih such greats as Stan Getz, Charlie Parker, and Coleman Hawkins.

"All you have to do is hear them dip into one blues, play the melody of a syrupy ballad, and swing it slowly, to feel in your bones the truth of their ten-year experiment." So said one reviewer of the Modern Jazz Quartet.

The word "modern" means nothing more than a disciplined, highly personal approach to jazz. The quartet uses the familiar beats and melodies, but reaches deeper into the music by gearing improvisation to modern harmony and mood. After working together for so many years, the foursome can extract greater range and complexity from their music without losing the spontaneity which is a part of true jazz.

The MJQ doesn't publish a program as much of their music is spontaneous improvisation.

Students will be admitted with a student I.D. card. The performance, sponsored by the UMass Concert Association, is open to the public with an admission charge.

Swimmers Fall To So. Conn.

Depth told the story as Joe Rogers' Mermen fell to Southern Connecticut College 67-28 at the Boyden PE pool Friday.

Facing one of the leading teams in New England, the Redmen turned in a fine performance despite the one-sided score.

Without sidelined co-capt. Jim O'Sullivan, UM was lost in the butterfly, and hence, the medley relay, but was strong in most other events.

JUNIOR DICK DANIELS was amazing in the 200 and 500 free styles, winning both in 1:59.2 and 5:37.0 respectively. In breaking two minutes in the 200, Dick came within two seconds of Mike Rothschild's UM record. In the two years he has remaining, Daniels may set records that will last a long time.

Tom Hanley turned in his strongest performance to date in winning the diving. Co-capt. Charlie Monnier found himself up against two of New England's top breaststrokers, and had to take a third place. But his time of 2:34.5 was just one second off the UM varsity record, which Coach Rogers has no doubt that Charlie will break before this season is finished.

THE BIGGEST SURPRISE of the meet was sophomore Chip Weiser's two second-place performances in the 50 and 100 freestyle. With the loss of Bjornholm from last year, Weiser is the key man now in these two events and he is handling the responsibility extremely well.

Senior Dan O'Mara turned in a strong 2:31 to take second in the individual medley, with Hoffman taking third. Sophomore Steve Levy, swimming his first full 200-yd. butterfly, took third in admirable time. Coach Rogers is watching Levy optimistically, suspecting that Jim O'Sullivan's record in this event may soon be in serious trouble. Orzak's third in the backstroke was UM's final point of the meet.

JOE ROGERS made no effort to hide his pride in the performance of his swimmers in this meet. Daniels is already in a class with the graduated Mike Rothschild, and Monnier and O'Mara are looking better than ever. Weiser and Levy appear to be just what Rogers needs to beef up the team's weak spots.

Stockbridge Riflemen Outshoot Northeastern

The Stockbridge School Rifle Team opened its season of shoulder-to-shoulder matches with a 37 point win over the Freshman team from Northeastern University in Boston on Saturday. Firing on the International targets, Steve Dicks, captain of the Stockbridge team, was high gun for the meet with a three position total of 244. Best effort for the Northeasterners was Sprowl's 227, but the deciding factor in the match was the better team score by Stockbridge in the kneeling position.

Frosh Down Leicester

Redmen Trip Rutgers, 93-82

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team opened the home season by racing past Rutgers, 93-82, before 3100 fans at the Cage Saturday night.

It was the second win of the year for the Redmen as they prepare for the Yankee Conference action that is soon to come. The home team showed a lot of speed and fancy ballhandling as they downed a club that nearly beat BU the night before. Rutgers made the game close for about the first nine minutes until Charlie Kingston and Chuck O'Rourke connected on two hoops each to open a 25-6 lead.

From then on, the Redmen seemed to roll along in high style. With Jim Painten and Kingston doing the scoring the margin grew, reaching 47-31 just before the half; Rutgers however, managed to close it to 47-34 at the break.

The Redmen had some trouble in the early going trying to get through the aggressive man to man defense of the Scarlet Knights, but the problem was solved when the team started running. The ballhandling of Clarence Hill, Mike Meola, and Charlie Kingston played a big part in the effectiveness of the running game.

The only thing that kept the game from becoming a complete rout was the work of Bob Lloyd, a fine sophomore, who had 30 points. He had 26 against against BU, so his northern trip was profitable for him if not for the team. Along with Phil Robinson, a strong forward who added 24 points and 19 rebounds, he was the backbone of the team.

THE VISITORS were most persistent throughout the second half, but Charlie Kingston put out the last of their hopes after they had closed the margin to 81-70. The Redmen ran off nine straight points with Kingston hitting seven of them.

That made the margin twenty points and a late rush by the Knights only made the game look closer than it was. Coach John Orr had his men freeze the ball away just to make sure.

It was a foul filled contest with 28 being called on the Redmen and 22 on Rutgers. Paul Gullicksen, O'Rourke, and Painten all departed via the foul route, while Dennis Earl took the walk for Rutgers.

None the less, it was fine effort for the Redmen. Particularly impressive was the board work of Tim Edwards with 18 rebounds and O'Rourke with 16. If the running game is to work, the rebounding must get the ball.

THROUGHOUT THE GAME Massachusetts showed some good feeding for the shooters. Once again the team has surpassed the 50% mark in shooting. A good deal of the credit for this can be given to Meola and Kingston who get the ball to the men underneath for good percentage shots.

Besides Kingston who had 25 in his finest hour as a collegiate player, Jim Painten added 21 as he hit 10 of 11 shots from the field. O'Rourke had another 16 point performance and appears to be the steadiest of the Redmen. Clarence Hill, who really generates crowd excitment, had 12.

Charlie O'Rourke, Redmen co-captain, goes up for a jump shot. The big 6'7" forward had 16 points versus Rutgers.

Lloyd had his 30 on 10 hoops and 10 of 10 from the foul line. In fact, Rutgers made 32 of 42 foul shots. The thing that killed the Knights was the aggressive defense of the Redmen which allowed the visitors only 25 hoops in 78 tries for a weak 32.1%.

NEXT CONTEST for the Redmen is a Wednesday night encounter at Rhode Island, the first of four important Yankee Conference games in December.

In an interesting prelim, the little Redmen downed Leicester Junior College, 89-78. Big hero was Mike Bernard, brother of last year's leading scorer and co-captain Pete Bernard, who had 30 points and paced the big comeback.

With the frosh trailing 68-60, Bernard and Bill Tindall caught fire and got their mates back into the lead. From the 8 minute mark until there were two minutes left, the frosh outscored Leicester 23-4 for an 83-72 lead, and the ball game was decided.

Redmen Roundup

By Marshall Karol
Sports Editor

On a cold December evening, when the temperature drops below freezing and the ground is as cold and hard as cement, few people would venture outside their cozy habitat. But to a football team preparing for a post-season encounter, this frigid condition is nothing more than an occupational hazard. The ball players bundle up with sweat clothes and gloves, hoping to accomplish as much as possible without incurring unnecessary injuries on the frozen turf. The spirits are high and the anxiety is great. As Coach Delaney yells "ARE YOU HAPPY?" the players respond in the affirmative. There is a thrill in the air which nothing could surpass. For the first time in University history, a football team has accepted a bid to participate in a bowl game.

The lights glare harshly across the practice field and after a quick warm-up session of stretching exercises, practice gets underway. Big Milt Morin places a football on a tee and practices his field goal kicking, while Head Coach Vic Fusia offers corrective advice. The line men move off to a corner of the field with Coach Schmitt who runs the huskies through intensive drills. The quarterbacks, adjusting to a Wilson ball which will be used in the bowl game, bark out signals, drop back, and throw to the halfbacks and ends, running in basic patterns. While all this is taking place simultaneously, Terry Swanson is punting to the "deep men", and Jerry Whelchel tries place kicking without a tee, the method used by the pros.

Coach Fusia scans the various activities, walks to one end of the field and blows his whistle. The players quickly and spiritedly jog toward their coach and gather around him. Now is the moment they have been waiting for, the head-on scrimmage. Terry Swanson moves into the offensive backfield, which quickly shifts into punt formation. The ball is snapped and the charging line men put the pressure on Swanson, who gets off a long spiral. The ball taken by a halfback is run back in dummy fashion, since the back is only tagged rather than tackled. That is the first phase of the scrimmage. The second phase consists of the "East Carolina" team running typical single wing plays against the UMass defense. Adjusting to this unique offensive formation could be a difficult chore, however Dave Kelley and the other line-backers work with confidence. Versatile coach, Frank Shields, runs the single wing from his tailback position, demonstrating a typical sequence of Carolina plays.

So the practice continues day in and day out, for there can be no mistakes in the December 12 contest. The players hope to reach the epitome of their potential, and if the practice is indicative of the total performance, the Southern boys are in for a bleak evening. Milt Morin characterized the attitude of the ball players when he stated that East Carolina is in for a big surprise.

Bobby Kaye Orchestra

Xmas Dance Will Be Friday

This year's Christmas Dance will be held on Friday, Dec. 11 in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets will be on sale Wednesday through Friday in the S.U. Lobby and Friday night at the door. The admission price is $1.00 per couple.

Bobby Kaye and his orchestra, recently chosen by the National Ballroom Association as one of the country's finest ballroom orchestras, will provide the music.

Clarinet, saxaphone and trombone playing Bobby Kaye, who toured the country during the early war years with some of the country's top instrumentalists, is one of the most versatile bandleaders in the business.

The orchestra features Conni Vignone, who is considered by many to be one of the East's finest female big band singers.

The Bobby Kaye Orchestra is as listenable as it is danceable. As arranger and conductor, Bobby encompasses a repertoire of remarkable, authentic dance music, created for anyone's enjoyment.

His music is characterized by distinctive arrangements, widely varied tempos, modern and reminiscent melodies, and perfect coordination between individual instrumentalists, sections and the conductor.

Orchard Complex Dedicated

Four eminent American literary figures were honored at the formal dedication of the Orchard Hill residences.

The four seven-story dormitories, housing 1,300 students, are named for poets Emily Dickinson and Eugene Field, author-journalist David Grayson and lexicographer Noah Webster. The four writers were all residents of Amherst at some time in their lives.

DR. WILLIAM FIELD, UMass Dean of Students, presided over the dedication program. Speakers were University President John W. Lederle; George Pumphret, member of the Board of Trustees and chairman of the UMass Building Authority; and John W. Haigis, member of the Board of Trustees and chairman of the committee on buildings and grounds.

A brief biographical review of the four distinguished writers, prepared by Prof. Frank Prentice Rand, was read by Dr. H. Leland Varley, professor of English and House Master at Orchard Hill.

GEORGENA YOUNG SPOKE on behalf of the students. Rev. John L. Scott, chaplain to Protestant students, gave the invocation.

The four dormitories were named for the eminent writers by vote of the Board of Trustees.

From their vantage point on Orchard Hill, the new residences command a panoramic view of the Connecticut River Valley. Women reside in the Eugene Field and Emily Dickinson Houses while men are in the David Grayson and Noah Webster Houses.

A unique residential college program has been established this semester. Using a pilot plan of four classes the project will increase next semester to 50

Univ. Theater Does Justice To Bloodgood

In this week's University Theatre production, student-actors will dash into a burning building, save the evidence, and do justice to evil Gideon Bloodgood.

The plot is simple, the characters are exaggerated. The name of the play is The Streets of New York. The author is Dion Boucicault.

Diversity is the keyword to University Theatre, now in its third year.

Students majoring in theatre have had the chance in the last two years to take part in Greek tragedy, Roman comedy. Isbsen's realism, Penn Warren's modern epic All the Kings Men, and experimental plays staged for the first time.

Since audiences at University Theatre performances are mostly UMass students, Prof. Catalano, director of the play, says he feels "a special responsibility to the student audience, many of whom are completely naive to theatre."

The University Theatre is like

Professor of Art

Belz To Discuss Popular Art

Dr. Carl I. Belz of the Art Department, will present an illustrated lecture on the subject of "Pop Art, New Humanism and Death," on Monday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. The talk will be given in Mahar Auditorium and will be open to the public.

Dr. Belz studied art history at Princeton University before joining the University faculty last year. His major involvements are in the field of modern painting and sculpture. This will be the second public lecture on Pop Art that he has given. The first, presented in the fall of 1963, was recently featured in the Chicago Review. He has written many articles and reviews on contemporary art which have appeared in periodicals such as Arts and Architecture, The Art Journal and Film Culture. The current lecture will be published in the spring issue of Kulchur.

Speaking on the subject of death in contemporary art, Dr. Belz will discuss the work of Leonard Baskin and other New Humanists, and the more recent and widely publicized treatment of the American way of dying by Pop or New Realist artists Andy Warhol, Bruce Connor and Robert Indiana.

Dr. Carl Belz of the Art Dept. will lecture on "Pop Art" Mon. at 8:00 P.M. in Mahar Aud.

Irish Satire To Be Staged

The Hostage, a tragic-comic satire by the late Irish playwright Brendan Behan, will be offered by the Amherst College Masquers this week as the second major production of the current Kirby Theatre season. Tickets for the performances which are scheduled for Dec. 11 and 12 at 8:15 are now on sale at the Kirby Box Office.

When it opened on Broadway in September 1960, The Hostage was described by Time magazine as "Sprawling, shocking, howlingly off-key, marvelously in tune, humane and hilarious." The play is set in a disreputable Dublin lodging house during the Irish Revolution, and boasts a strange gallery of characters including I.R.A. men, religious eccentrics, ladies of ill repute and other exotic types.

Into this menagerie comes a young Cockney soldier of the British Army held as a hostage in reprisal for an I.R.A. man who is to be hanged in the morning. During the course of the drama, the inmates of the house agree, disagree, and finally decide his fate.

CURFEW

Curfew for upperclass women will be extended Thursday evening for those women who attend the second showing of "The Diary of Anne Frank." Sophomores, juniors and seniors who sign out for the 8:30 showing of the film must be in their residences by one-half hour after the movie is over. Freshman women must attend the first showing of the movie at 5:30 p.m. If they wish to see the film.

JFK Memorial Room

Tribute Planned By Students

To honor the memory of one of America's greatest and most beloved Presidents, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the students of UMass have decided to initiate a art, science and literature.

They plan a reading room on campus to hold duplications of the works collected by the late President Kennedy in his own White House Library.

The books, by Americans and of Americans, cover every field, including government, history, art, science and literature.

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy Memorial Committee plans to incorporate the proposed reading room in the new campus library. Until such time as this library is built, it is necessary to find a temporary room on campus to hold the books. They will be stored until moved to a permanent site, and remain accessible to those of the campus community interested in reading them.

The JFK committee now has approximately $2,800, enough money for a good start in buying the books, with additional funds from the student's parents, to whom letters were sent enlisting their aid.

The JFK memorial Committee would appreciate any suggestions from students and faculty concerning the site of a room. Suggestions may be sent to Box 806 in the RSO office or delivered in person at a meeting of the committee any Tuesday, at 11:15 a.m., Worcester Room, S.U.

Panel Considers Grading

What's wrong with students? What's wrong with professors? These two questions were the focal points at a coffee hour held in Lewis House, Wednesday, Dec. 2.

On the panel were Dr. Gregory Webb of the Geology department as moderator, Dr. Robert Wellman of the education department, Dr. Terrence Burke of the geography department, Linda Pratt and Mary Lou Hummer.

The discussion was open and informal, centering upon students' and professors' attitudes toward the University and, in particular, the grading system.

The solution set forth by Dr. Burke and Dr. Wellman was based upon an attempt to synthesize the British tutorial system and the American lecture system.

The students participating in this the discussion talked with the professors about synthesis and the discussion branched off into various problems involving interpersonal relationships between students and faculty.

All agreed that there was a definite lack of such relationships and felt that an effort of all concerned would ameliorate this situation.

Coming Lecture Series

The University Theatre will present a lecture by Helen Krich Chinoy, a noted authority on the theatre on Wednesday, Dec. 9 at 8:00 p.m. She will speak on The Innovations of Dion Boucicault.

The lecture, to be held in Bartlett Auditorium, is being offered in conjunction with the UT production of Boucicault's Streets of New York, which open here Dec. 10th.

Mrs. Chinoy is well-known as an author and editor of books on the theatre. She is co-editor with Toby Cole of Directors on Directing (1953) and Actors on Acting (1954). She has contributed articles to various theatre publications and encyclopedias. Currently she is working on a book about the impact of the theatrical director on American plays.

Tickets for The Streets of New York, to be presented Dec. 10, 11 and 12 in Bowker Auditorium, are now on sale at the Student Union box office. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Experimental educational programs for culturally-disadvantaged children and potential drop-outs will be the topic of a talk to be given Wednesday evening, Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. in the School of Education auditorium at the University of Massachusetts.

Dr. Clarence C. Sherwood, director of research for Action for Boston Community Development, will speak on research aims and procedures in studying the effectiveness of such experimental programs.

According to Dr. Albert Purvis, Dean of the UMass School of Education, Sherwood's talk is being offered to education graduate and undergraduate students as well as educators and others in the area interested in similar experimental programs.

World-traveler, author, broadcaster and journalist, Frederick L. Schumann, Woodrow Wilson professor of government at Williams College, will speak at the University Thursday, Dec. 10 at 11:15 a.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

His topic will be "The Fiftieth State: Racial Relations in Hawaii."

Student Demonstrations Sweep Across Nation

by Paul Danish
Collegiate Press Service

This is fast shaping up to be the year of the student protest at the nation's colleges and universities.

Students on campuses in all parts of the country have staged a rash of demonstrations and protests on a wide array of national, international, and local issues, and no let up seems in sight.

Protest action has been aimed at everything from new regulations governing the consumption of alcohol at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. to policies restricting student political activity at the University of California, and almost everything in between.

At the University of Pennsylvania, several hundred students demonstrated against the construction of a new fine arts building on campus on grounds that it would destroy one of the few tree-shaded open spots at the university.

At the University of Texas, the campus chapter of the Students for a Democratic Society picketed against the use of Black Face in a campus minstrel show on grounds that it was degrading to the Negro and the university's Negro students.

At City University of New York, students organized a two month campaign favoring free tuition, and worked to defeat candidates for the state legislature who opposed it.

At the University of Michigan, a student political party staged a demonstration demanding "campus democracy now," as well as more money for teaching, new student housing, better facilities, increased student wages, and a lower cost of living on campus.

Much student protest activity has centered on civil rights. At the University of Colorado, the campus chapter of the Congress on Racial Equality picketed a restaurant which had refused to hire a Negro girl. The restaurant gave her the job within an hour after the picketing began.

At Bradley, the university chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been trying to get a local barber to take Negro customers.

California at Berkeley

By Paul Danish
Collegiate Press Service

The controversy at the University of California's Berkeley campus reached a new level of intensity as police arrested hundreds of students for staging a sit-in in the university's administration building.

Near chaos reigned on the 83,710 student campus as state and Berkeley police, acting on orders from Governor Edmond G. Brown, hauled away 801 student demonstrators who had "seized" Sproul Hall in a protest growing out of the University's decision to ban student political activity from the campus.

The students, who were joined by some professors, said they were setting up "The Free University of California" in the building, and for twelve hours before Brown ordered some 600 policemen to disperse the demonstration, they sang freedom songs and listened to lectures by student leaders and professors.

The arrests began shortly after 3 a.m. Thursday. Dec. 3, after students were urged to get out of the building of their own accord. When only a few got up to leave, the police moved in and started arresting demonstrators, who retaliated by going limp.

Police at first used a small elevator to carry students from the building, but when this process proved to be too slow, they simply dragged them down the stairs, sometimes as many as four flights of them.

Although police had sealed the building's entrances to prevent anyone else from joining the demonstration, students lowered a rope from a second floor window to sympathizers below, and until they were discovered by police, students were entering Sproul Hall faster than police could arrest them.

Police booked, photographed and fingerprinted students right in the building, and then dispatched them in bus loads to wherever they could find detention facilities in the Bay area.

The arrests took a total of 12 hours, and before they were over some students had already been released on bond raised by faculty members.

Students returning from jail charged a number of instances of police brutality and unnecessary roughness. One demonstrator, a law student, claimed a policeman deliberately broke his finger.

Most of those arrested have been released on bond totaling over $72,000 raised by faculty.

Efforts to settle the dispute were severely hampered by campus police action to prevent the student leader of the Free Speech Movement from addressing 13,000.

University of Florida

United Press International

Eight thousand University of Florida students, egged on by panty-waving coeds, rioted Saturday night after their school games won football and basketball

At least one student and two policemen were injured in the almost two-hour demonstration. Police closed bars and parties except for the annual policeman's ball.

Campus police were hampered in quelling the riot because coeds stood in the windows of dormitories waving their panties, brassieres, slips and shouting at the boys to "come and get it."

The students started a bonfire on U. S. Highway 441 in front of the administration building, blocking traffic. When police and firemen moved in with riot equipment, the students crossed the campus to join an official bonfire rally on the University parade ground.

They turned the rally into a melee. They chopped up bleachers and set bonfires. They were pushed down University Avenue and set fires in trees and automobiles as they moved down the street.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Campus Citrus Cheer

This Saturday will feed the last bit of fuel to the blaze of spirit that has characterized the fever of bowl preparations. The flames will die to a smouldering post-mortem of the night's battle, be it joyous or sad.

What has contributed to the creation and sustenance of the spirit that has aroused congratulatory messages and critical letters?

Who's helped to infuse the student body and townspeople with visions of a great contest to be held in a sunny Southern stronghold?

The Student Senate's leader, George Michael, has spent many hours cajoling fruit concerns, communications media and any other parties whom he thought would lend a hand.

A flood of tangerine colored tags has covered campus apparel. They have yet to replace clothes, no doubt due to the cold spell that we are currently experiencing.

Highlights Night gave the band a chance to show that they're worth $12,000. Apparently the predominantly male audience expected more football flicks and fewer marching tricks. Nonetheless, Karl Putman won a jet trip to Orlando, as promised by the promoters.

The IFC donated their share of the IFC-PanHel Skits proceeds to the band fund. And we thought that co-eds adored football and the military precision of a marching band.

Gamma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Phi Omega, our Greek service organizations, have been doing crowd studies in the SU lobby. They've been finding out who'd buy tags, tickets and trees.

The Redman Network will broadcast the game and we almost got TV coverage from WBZ and WWLP. Apparently because of the prime time and difficulty involved in filming a night game, it was not possible to telecast the game.

The Collegian made a supreme effort to publish an unusual Tangerine Special issue. Though this may have offended the taste of some, the color served to focus attention on the cluster of activities generated by the bowl.

Also, the team has attempted to foster the preparations fervor. They appeared for Highlights Night; they posed for promotional pictures with tangerines; the team has even consented to travel to Orlando to play in the Tangerine Bowl. Peter Hendrickson

Letters To The Editor

ALUMNI APPRECIATION

To the Editor,

I wish to express to you in behalf of the Alumni body, the great satisfaction that is ours at the superior record established by the University of Massachusetts football team this fall, and the invitation to play in the Tangerine Bowl in December. We extend our heartiest congratulations to the administration for establishing the setting and atmosphere that made such a success possible. This splendid accomplishment is most gratifying to all of us who are deeply interested in the attainment of excellence in all activities connected with the University.

Speaking of excellence, one of the most outstanding events of this 1964 season has been the metamorphosis of the University Band. Alumni attending games this fall have been completely "bowled over" by the size, skill, precision and professional quality of the band presentations. Our sincere compliments go to President Lederle, who had such a direct hand in this important University development.

This happy combination of a superior football team and a great band, presented to the people of the Commonwealth, the image of an alive, alert, able University of Massachusetts. All of us in this University family should be spurred on to even greater accomplishments, by these significant happenings. I assure you of the strong support and assistance of the Alumni group, in this forward movement.

With kindest personal regards,

John J. Maginnis, President

— Misinterpretation —

To The Editor,

In last Monday's Collegian I was quoted in what seemed to be an unequivocal and perhaps dogmatic statement favoring the destruction of the old Math building. I do not believe that the reporter distorted the facts but simply misinterpreted them.

The suggestion for the removal of the building was investigated by myself as a member of the Senate Services committee; one can certainly not deny its deplorable state. I believe that if the building were to continue in this condition, then there is no alternative other than to remove it. Yet, with my investigation completed, I discovered that the building will be renovated. Hence, any improvement on the old Math building is considered by the committee as forestalling the eventual demise of the structure.

Thus I would like to say . . . long live the old Math building, as long as its conditions meet necessary standards.

Senator Phil Berlin,
Service Committee

Dean Acheson Will Speak On Ethics

Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson will give a public lecture in Johnson Chapel tonight at 8:00 p.m. He will discuss "Ethics in International Relations Today."

Mr. Acheson has served as Under Secretary of the Treasury, Assistant Secretary of State, Under Secretary of State, and as Secretary of State from 1949 to 1953 during the Truman Administration. Since January, 1953, he has maintained his membership in Covington & Burling.

A member of the American Bar Association, the American Society of International Law and the American Law Institute, he is also a recipient of the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

Ski Club To Reorganize

An organizational meeting of the Ski Club will be held in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union, Wednesday, Nov. 9 at 7:00 p.m.

Students and faculty who are interested in reorganizing the ski club are invited to attend.

The club will make plans for night, weekend, and vacation ski trips; special rates for lift tickets, rentals, and lessons at local ski areas; ski movies; guest speakers; and apres ski parties.

Officers for this coming season will be elected.

The ski club is for both the beginning and novice skier who would like to improve their skiing ability as well as for the non-skier who would like to learn.

classes and 1,250 students when more classrooms become available.

Initial groundwork for the in-residence study plan was laid by a committee of four faculty members who attended the Danforth Foundation Conference in Colorado Springs, Colorado, in the summer of 1963.

As the result of their report, a conference was held at the University to consider the development of some form of residential college plan.

It became apparent that there was substantial agreement among the faculty and staff that the residence plan should be explored. Prof. Joseph Marcus of the School of Engineering headed a committee to study the plan.

The committee's report was submitted to President Lederle. A Board of Trustees committee authorized the plans for implementation this fall. The Danforth Foundation agreed to assist the plans with $7,500 this first year. Later they expanded their support three more years with an additional $22,500.

Not only are faculty available in the dormitories, but classes are held in the lounge areas throughout the buildings. Events in the dormitories range from intellectual to purely social in an attempt to stimulate University students with ideas and values otherwise difficult to attain at a large state university.

The experiment will run for four years with a committee watching over and evaluating the progress made under the plan.

Gymnasts Tumble To Southern Connecticut

The University of Massachusetts Gymnastic Team opened its 1964-65 season with a 78-40 win over Southern Connecticut State college. The meet at the New Haven college got the Redmen off on the right foot for their first season as members of the oldest gymnastic league in the country, the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic league. The remaining meets will all be against league opponents who will provide the stiffest competition the University has faced in the history of the sport here at UMass.

IN THE INAUGURAL MEET, the gymnasts showed good balance as they swept the first three places in five of the seven events on the program, and took six firsts over-all. Fred Peterson, who returned to the team after a four year service hitch, led the team with two firsts (parallel bars and rings), while Dave Lizotte (floor exercise), Jim Dusenbury (side horse), Al Carver (trampoline), and Stan Brallier (high bar) took single firsts. UMass swept the side horse, trampoline, high bar, parallel bar and ring events.

The first home meet of the season will be held on Saturday, Dec. 12 at 1:00 p.m. The opponents will be the United States Military academy. Other home meets this year will feature as opponents such teams as Navy, Syracuse, Temple and Springfield.

Bowl Aired On Network

Warren McGuirk, University Director of Athletics and William Rasmussen, President of the New England Sports Network, today jointly announced the completion of arrangements for the radio broadcast of the Dec. 12 Tangerine Bowl game from Orlando, Florida. The game matching UMass with East Carolina College for the NCAA College Division Atlantic Coast Championship, will be carried over nine radio stations in Massachusetts beginning at 7:45 p.m. Rasmussen, the Voice of the Redmen on the regular season network broadcasts for UMass, will handle the play-by-play. Here is the Redmen Tangerine Bowl Football Network:

"Chuck's a swinger," says she. "His Coronet is quick and clean, with a lean and hungry look. It's equipped with a 426 cubic inch mill that will mock your turtle at the strip or on the street. He's got four-on-the-floor, buckets, belts, carpets, console, spinners, and a padded dash. And he said that everything but the four-speed stick and the 426 was standard." 8 THE MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1964

SUN and TANGERINES

Redmen Head South

For the last week, Coach Vic Fusia and his charges have battled the elements in a losing contest. First the cold made drills virtually impossible and then the snow and sleet of the weekend wiped out any remaining hope. Consequently drills had been moved indoors, until the departure on Tuesday.

The weather has really effected the plans of Fusia. He spent the greater part of last week on the banquet trail with his quarterback Jerry Whelchel. The assistants have run the drills with the emphasis on trying to defense the single wing of East Carolina.

The team had expected to start work on the offense patterns later in the week but the weather wiped that out.

Tuesday afternoon Fusia left the cold of New England for the warmth of Florida and some decent practice weather.

HEADQUARTERS for the team is at the Cherry Plaza Hotel with practices set at Rollins College. Double sessions will be held today with single practices Thursday and Friday. In addition many team meetings will be held to go over the game plan.

While mentioning the game plan, Coach Fusia said, "The plan is never varied. It is the result of year around work by the staff and extensive scouting by George Karras and Fred Glatz" He noted that each opponent is scouted three times so that the way they react in a specific situation can be determined with some certainly. The game plan will contain the play that has the highest efficiency rating for that situation.

In essence this explains why the sideline quarterbacks do some second guessing when a play might not work. Such a system takes most of the gambling out of the game. For the offense, a team like Massachusetts is well scouted so the other team knows its plays. The key is therefore execution.

The game that best pointed this out was the first part of the New Hampshire game. Because the blocking was so effective, there was little the opponent could do to stop the Redmen as they rolled up 27 points.

Fusia is definitely worried about the duo of All America Bill Cline and Dave Alexander. "This is the first time we have had to face two triple threat backs," he said, "and they pose obvious defensive problems."

Its hard to say just how important these are because of the quality of the opposition.

With the loss of television chances, the only way contact can be made with the field in Orlando will be over the Redman network on the radio. The basketball game scheduled for 8 against Maine has been changed to 6 with the frosh prelim at 4 in the afternoon.

REDMEN AT KINGSTON

Undefeated Orrmen Meet Rams

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts having successfully completed their first two games swing into Yankee Conference action against highly rated Rhode Island at Kingston.

An offensive performance that saw the Redmen score 93 points against both Boston U. and Rutgers stamps the Redmen as one of the clubs that will be heard from in the conference this year.

IN RHODE ISLAND, the UMass team and John Orr will be facing the team given the best chance of beating out UConn for the conference crown. The Rams lost star Steve Chubin through disciplinary action last year. They are a team that is loaded with returnees and transfer talent.

Coach Ernie Calverley has been experimenting with different lineups in the first three wins for the Rams over Brandeis, Brown, and New Hampshire. Sure starters would appear to be Jim Cymbala, Frank Nightingale, and Dennis McGovern, all starters on the team that tied UConn for the crown a year ago. McGovern was a 20 point per game man while the other two also made double figures.

The rest of the team is still undecided but will come from returnees Mike Fitzgerald and John Mulfinger along with transfers Ted Haglund and Henry Carey from junior college and Bob Boehm from West Point. The team lacks any great height, but will be a typical Calverley team: good, well-drilled ballplayers that can score.

MASSACHUSETTS, with six men averaging in double figures, is considered by league members as the darkhorse. However, to establish themselves they must win at least three of the next four games, all against conference foes. This span will have the team facing both URI and UConn on the road, so it will be no easy task. They face Maine and New Hampshire at home in between the other two contests. Maine is currently in first place after thumping Vermont twice last weekend. Rhody is second as they walled New Hampshire.

THE CONFERENCE RACE shapes up as just as close as the one a year ago. Then U-Conn and Rhody split a pair of games by the narrowest of margins, the Huskies taking the first 43-41, then Rhody the second 54-53. An unprecedented playoff for the NCAA berth had the Huskies on top 61-60.

Massachusetts was third with a 5-5 mark, simply because they dropped all five games on the road against conference foes. The team will be out to snap this unfortunate string tonight.

There are five teams loaded with veterans, and only one that does not appear to have much, and that is UNH. Coach Bill Olsen lost the two top scorers in the league, Nick Mandrevalis and Jim Rich, which really hurt the chances of the Wildcats.

THE POWER is lodged in Connecticut at usual. The Huskies have won or tied for the title 14 of the last 17 years. Toby Kimball is the man to be reckoned with this year. After the first two games, this potential All-American is averaging 25 points per game and 26 rebounds per game. The rest of the team is made up of five lettermen and the tops from a good frosh team that stood 11-3 last year.

Vermont will be veteran, but small, and will have their troubles this year. Milt Goggans, a 6'4" rebounder, is the leader of the team that has five lettermen. He is also the biggest.

Maine is a club that could well surprise the leaders. With such stars as John Gillette, Dave Swendsen, Guy Strang, and Bruce McKinnon, the team has been around long enough to do well against the rest of the league. In addition, the frosh had a 12-2 record and could provide some reserve help.

WITH FOUR TEAMS in the running, it is virtually impossible to predict a winner, but the choice has to be UConn until they are beaten. Their home court makes them very tough. The Huskies will end with a predicted 8-2 mark. They will be hard pressed by URI and Massachusetts with 7-3 records. Maine should surpass the five hundred mark by upsetting one of the big three and finish about 6-4.

Vermont will probably beat New Hampshire, and no one else for a 2-8 mark in the league. UNH does not appear to have the material to win any league games. Save this copy until the end of February, it might be interesting.

Senate Discusses Bowl Funds, Accepts New Clubs

By Jim Foudy

With present band expenditures totaling $12,665, and only $3,500 raised by the band fund raising programs, the amount to be paid by the Student Senate, utilizing S.A.T. funds, may run well over the projected $3,000.

Senate President Michael pointed out at Wednesday night's Senate meeting that, since the balance totals $9,165, and the agreement was to split the balance with the administration, the amount to be paid by the students is approximately $4,500.

Defending the Senate's position, senate Treasurer Joe Plecuch stated that payment of the deficit should present no problem, and it is hoped that additional funds might be raised at Monday's showing of the Tangerine Bowl films.

President Michael also stressed the continuing support of University personnel, stating that the administration has agreed to pay for the unbought seats on the plane, a total of about $2,000.

Council Action:

Amherst STUDENT Suspended

Student Council voted 7-0 to suspend publication of the Amherst Student as of Monday, pending a financial audit which would show that the Student would not substantially overspend its budget this semester 'if it were to continue publication."

The motion to stop publication, was approved by the Council after Student representatives were silenced by indicating that discussion of the motion was limited to Council.

According to figures presented by Business Manager Bruce Wintroub, the Student's total assets exceeded its liabilities. Wintroub admitted uncertainty in his estimates, due to the illness of Student Treasuer Rick Conelius.

Council President Wolff, in considering this current year's assets and liabilities, estimated that the newspaper was approximately $3000 in debt. He too admitted uncertainty in his figures.

Davenport

Student activities Co-ordinator Arthur Davenport said, "It is unfortunate for Council to try to suspend publication with only two issues left in the semester, because two issues can just about support themselves."

He added that "Finances of an operation as complex as the publication of a newspaper need a competent audit to determine where they stand. Council's figures are not better than Bruce Wintroub's."

Council President

Wolff, prior to presenting the motion, challenged, "What grounds does the Student have for coming out next Monday if it has spent its year's allotment already?" He indicated that Council action was instituted to prevent the incurrence of further debt this semester.

After the meeting Student representatives directed that an audit be conducted over the weekend.

The Council investigation began some three weeks ago when a member quoted a number of figures from the Student book, indicated some expenditures which merited Council attention. The presentation resulted in a directive that Student representatives appear and declare their financial state how much of its year's budget had been exhausted, and to explicate some of its past expenditures. No financial statement will be made until the audit is completed.

UMass Professors Join National Protest Group

ABOLISH HUAC

Charging that the Committee is "irreconcilable with a system of free expression in this country," one hundred constitutional law authorities have petitioned the House of Representatives to abolish the House Unamerican Activities Committee (HUAC).

THE HUNDRED, calling themselves the National Committee to Abolish HUAC, include Professors Loren Beth and Guenter Lewy of the UMass government department. The petition was made public a few days ago in New Haven by Professor Thomas I. Emerson, Professor of Law at Yale University, and Doctor Alexander Meiklejohn, winner of the Presidential Medal of Freedom, two of the sponsors.

Emerson said that the committee has presented copies of its petition to House Speaker McCormack and that copies are being sent to all members of the next Congress. The petition asks that the Congressmen refuse to continue HUAC as a standing committee when the new House rules are considered on January 4.

Two Years Instead of Four

AFROTC Initiates New Program

Lt. Colonel Roy D. Simmons, Jr., Professor of Air Science, has announced that significant changes in the Air Force's traditional on - campus AFROTC program are taking place under the provisions of the recently enacted ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964. (Public Law 88-647).

Of primary concern to students at the University of Massachusetts is the new two-year feature of the program which allows interested and qualified students to substitute a new six-week Field Training Course for the first two years of the four-year Air Force program and then enter the advanced Air Force ROTC program. The six week program is to be conducted at an Air Force base or bases yet to be named.

The new two - year program permits students, if qualified, to begin their officer training in their junior year. The new six-week training course is designed to compress the basic course requirements of the four-year program so that students entering the program at the junior level, will do so on a par with their contemporaries who have completed the basic course.

Applications are now being accepted, for enrollment. Students applying for the two-year program must qualify on the Air Force Officer Qualifying Test, pass a medical examination, appear before an interview board conposed of senior Air Force officers of the AFROTC program, and successfully complete the new six - week Field Training Course in the summer of 1965.

Actual enrollment in the program as a cadet begins the first day of classes in September, 1965. Male students who have two more years of academic work remaining until the award of their degree, either at the baccalaureate or the graduate level, are eligible to apply, providing they can complete such work by their 28th birthday.

All cadets in the advanced program will benefit from the new legislation through the raise in monthly pay from the present $27 to a monthly retainer pay of $40. Advanced cadets now in the program will receive the increased amount, retroactive to 13 October 1964, as soon as they have been sworn into the Air Force Reserve. Membership in the Air Force Reserve is required under the new legislation.

Interested students are urged to contact Lt. Colonel Simmons All processing for entry into the two-year program must be completed by 1 May 65.

Those who attend the new course will receive travel pay to and from the Air Force base designated to conduct the training and will receive approximately $120 while in the course.

De Facto Segregation Forum Topic

The Pre-Law Association will present a discussion on the first New England de facto segregation case, Barksdale v Springfield School Committee, today at 4:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Student Union.

Atty. Herbert O. Reid, Professor of Law at Howard University Law School, will be guest speaker. Accompanying Prof. Reid will be Atty. Henry Weissman of Springfield, also counsel in the segregation case.

Reid served as an attorney in the Solicitors Office, Department of Labor and as Law Clerk to the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Concurrent with his teaching, he has acted as counsel or consultant for a large number of criminal cases and almost all the civil rights cases since 1947.

Among his accomplishments in civil rights cases, these stand out: Bolling v Sharpe, District of Columbia School segregation case which was decided in 1954 by the Supreme Court, Brown v Board Of Education, a landmark in segregation cases; Commonwealth v Henry, a Virginia "sit-in" case.

Presently Atty. Reid is serving as special council in a number of pending suits attacking de facto segregation.

Prof. Reid was one of the trial lawyers in the recent case of Barksdale v Springfield School Committee, tried in Springfield, a pilot suit in the New England area. Together with Atty. Weissman, Prof. Reid will discuss the case and answer student questions.

Preceding the talk the Pre-Law Association will present Atty. Newton Pacht, Assistant Professor of Law at Howard University. Atty. Pacht will speak on law as a career.

This talk should prove most interesting since several de facto segregation cases are still pending in the courts. All interested persons are urged to attend.

Army ROTC In Action

One of the special forces teams receives patrol mission prior to departing for the Pelham hills.

The Army ROTC Bay State Special Forces Unit conducted a training problem in the Amherst-Pelham area last weekend.

A recon patrol was sent behind aggressor lines to determine the strength and condition of enemy forces and to observe the nature of the terrain.

Part of the action was to prove to the cadets that they could live off the land without contacting their own forces.

To do this, the men were provided with live chickens to kill, clean and cook for their meal. This was the only food available.

An overland route was taken with the four teams avoiding contact with aggressors. Despite the snowy, cold conditions, the mission was successfully accomplished.

French Art

Binet Prints Go On Display

The George Binet Print Collection, an exhibition of 75 original prints that distinguish the great periods and major developments of French art of the past and present, is on display in the Commonwealth Room of the SU. The masters of each period are highlighted in this exhibition.

The Baroque style is viewed through the works of Mellan, Lorrain, Nautouil, Nassar, and several others.

The change from the classic to the Rococo, a style concurring with the taste of the pleasure loving court of Louis XV, is exemplified by the elegant works of Watteau, Baucher, Fragonard and others.

The Rococo ended with the Revolution and the Empire revived the Greek and Roman art through the works of Desnoyer. Ingres, Gencault and Delacroix.

In the nineteenth century the Barbizon group and the realists Manet, Ribon, Fantin-Latour, Toulousse-Lautrec and others led the way to the new movements in art, such as Impressionism.

Many groups evolved from this center, influencing art in various directions. From these beginnings came some of the greatest names in contemporary art: Matisse, Rouault, Vlaminck, Picasso, Dufy and Fieszr. Another ripple of Impressionism and the influence orf Cezanne, Cubism was followed by Picasso and Villon.

Although abstraction and abstract-impressionism have many followers in France, today the works of the Neo-Cubists, Carzou, Gischia and Singler hold places well above works done in the international style of non-representational art.

NOMINATION PAPERS AVAILABLE

Nomination papers are now available in the R.S.O. Office for the following positions: '65 at-large, Commuter and Greenough House. Papers are due no later than Monday, December 14, at 5:00 p.m. They may be returned to either the R.S.O. office or the Student Senate office. Those students who run for one of these offices are reminded that they must sign that they have read the election rules, which are available in the R.S.O. office. The elections for Commuter and '65 at-large will be held in the Lobby of the Student Union from 8:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. The Greenough House election will take place in the dorm from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. on Thursday, December 17, 1964.

The Redmen have moved south and tomorrow their fighting spirit will be with them to inspire them.

Metawampe, in full Indian array, will go through his paces in Orlando to help create the atmosphere of victory which has surrounded the Redmen during this year's successful season.

The live Metawampe this year is John Makos, a senior from Dracut, Mass.

Preparing for an appearance, he says, takes about an hour and a half. Makos applies his own war paint and make-up.

Then he is ready to issue his war cry and put everyone in the mood for a hard fought battle.

More than a cheerleader and more than a mascot, Metawampe symbolizes the leader of the fighting UMass team just as the original Chief Metawampe was the leader of his Norwottuck tribe here in Amherst years ago.

Metawampe came to be a legend among his tribesmen, who revered him as their guiding spirit.

Now he is a legend among the students of the University.

He stands watch over the campus from his pedestal in his own little niche behind the Student Union. The statue was donated by the Class of 1950 and was erected by the Class of 1956.

But anyone who goes to football games or pre-game rallies and bonfires knows that the bronze Metawampe is not the only one on campus.

John Makos Metawampe was put out of action briefly this season when the University of Connecticut cheerleaders kidnapped him and held him for the duration of the game.

But he was active for the rest of the season and will be performing his ritual with a little extra vigor tomorrow, trying to evoke the spirit of that immortal Redman, Metawampe.

Umies Peer Into Past

Reveal the secrets of a Roman villa, an iron-age hill fort or the structure of a medieval town or Anglo-Saxon cathedral before they disappear as you spend next summer in Europe. Expanding housing programs, city centre redevelopment and new highway projects in Britain today have opened up many new possibilities for archaeological investigation.

You may help in this important work, earn credits, make international friends and receive valuable training in archaeology, by joining a program sponsored by the Association for Cultural Exchange, the British non-profit organization.

Volunteers first join a three-week seminar for training in British archaeology and excavation techniques at Westminster College, Oxford. They then split up into small groups for three or more weeks "digging" on an archaeological site. Total cost of the program is $575, including round-trip air transportation from New York. Part scholarships are available to suitable students with a "B" plus average.

Write now for further details to hon. United States Representative: Dr. John H. Slocum, Association for Cultural Exchange, 202 West 10th Street, ..New York. Closing application date is expected to be January 8, 1965.

Murder, Mayhem, Mood — The Movement

Title: The Movement

Recent years have brought an increasing number of books, both fiction and fact, concerned with the myriad of interrelated problems of America and the Negro. All of these books serve at least a dual purpose. On the one hand they open an area of American life heretofore relatively untouched by literary exploration. On the other hand many of these books represent an effort to reduce and stem the growth and continuance of prejudicial practices. They are aimed at enlightenment; they a area protest. And literature is a powerful conveyance for protest.

The Movement—Documentary of a Struggle for Equality is both a protest and a search into life. However, in the place of words, photographs are used and the outcome is an excellent review of the battle for civil rights in the deep south.

It is a book of 120 paperbound, yearbook size pages of photos coupled with a terse text written by Lorraine Hansberry. This narrative adds a cohesion to the book and elevates each picture into its respective position in the document.

The Movement shows quickly the historical background of the south and then concentrates on events after 1960, delving deeply into the emotional aspects. One noticeable quality is the neutrality of the narrative. It speaks out neither in disgust nor vengefulness: the text simply tells what happened and the intensity of the freedom fight inheres in the photos. Many of the events of the last four years are included but it does not dwell on atrocities nor focus for long on police and civil attempts at quelling the "Revolt." The protest emanates forcefully from the photographs of the central theme of the book—the people. Most of the photos are of these determined people who stood together, these people who composed the movement for equality. Scenes of violent action are scarce but the reader finds action, defiance and determination in the faces, the expressions, of those who attempted to topple an obdurate and viscious system of hate.

The mood of the south is in this book and the mood of the movement and both are portrayed most effectively. Reading at one sitting (it takes less than an hour) gives the reader a strong feeling of the tragedy and triumph of the civil rights movement.—Ben Sackmary.

Four College Program

Have you ever noticed the little blue buses shuttling students to and from the University campus? These are probably the most well known part of a relatively unheard of phase of education at UMASS. They belong to the Four College Cooperation, a program which allows students of: UMASS, Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke to attend classes at any of the four colleges.

Unfortunately, it is the general opinion on this campus that the program is strictly for "brains." This is far from true as there are certain parts of the program which anyone, regardless of his cumulative average, is eligible to attend. This is the part of the program known at the Four College Courses.

These courses are only given through this program. They are not given individually at any of the four participating colleges. As a result, anyone interested in these subjects is automatically eligible for the program.

The other phase of the Four College System is the Exchange program. Through this program, students are permitted to take courses at any of the four colleges and to trasnfer the credit to the University. It is this part of the program which requires the approval of the student's advisor and Dr. Venman, the asst. Provost, who is the head of the program at UMASS.

There are three basic requirements of eligibility for the exchange program. The first, a grade average requirement is inevitable due to the time required in transit.

A one hour lecture, due to this problem requires close to three hours of time to attend. However, only five students have been refused enrollment into this program in the past two and a half years.

The other two requirements have more to do with the Program Office than the applicant. The course desired must be integrated with the student's major, and the course can not be offered here at the University.

Relatively few (24-40 per semester) students, unfortunately, are taking advantage of this program. Dr. Venman has stated that he hopes more students will make use of the system in the future, as Four College Cooperation offers a chance to any interested students for broadening their scholastic background.

The Modern Mind of Caesura

Enter Caesura

Jody Norton's "Mt. Fuji Rose Dhyana" has introduced the fall issue of the Caesura to the campus; traditionally late in arriving, but nevertheless here, with a thoughtfully-put-together appearance.

Fiction and poetry selections are arranged to complement the center focus: delicate examples of Chinese art by Margaret Chen and a delicious taste of the modern mind of Jody Norton. The traditional sensitivity of Chinese landscapes is successfully upheld by Miss Chen while Norton's art is vibrant with modern life. Appreciation of the latter art form is perhaps a personal thing where each reader may laugh because it's ridiculous, or ponder because it's meaningful to him.

Each fiction selection is poignant in its character revelation, from the startling "Three Parables" by Joe Krausman to the sharp, bitter and thought provoking "Beach Scene" by Norm Trump.

Poetry selections compose a major portion of the issue; and a generous sample of campus talent is displayed. Each contributes his individuality of thought, and also, his common creative feeling to the un.fied-whole of the poetry section.

A compreshensive essay on Richard Kim's "The Martryred" ends this issue of the Caesura. In all, the fall issue has made a pleasing appearance with meaningful selections for the varied tastes of the campus readers, due equally to the talent of the contributors and the conscientious make-up of the magazine by the Caesura staff.

Letters To The Editor

Critique and Leonard

We viewed with regret the review of Critique which appeared on your editorial page of December 7.

It is the purpose of this letter to call attention to one of the articles appearing in Critique not mentioned in the review: its arguments, its basis in fact, as demonstrated by a current situation on another campus, and its pertinence to this campus.

Finally, we would like to conclude this letter with some questions, which we hope to see answered by appropriate members of the administration.

The article which impressed us as having the greatest relevance to the current situation at this University was the one entitled "Persons or Perish: A Time To Lead" by J. C. Shusta. In this article, Miss Shusta records, primarily, the opinions of Dr. David Leonard, a departing member of the University's history department.

A brief precis of the article cannot possibly do justice to it, its author or Dr. Leonard. We suggest that it must be fully read to be fully comprehended.

However, the main points of Dr. Leonard's philosophy are the following. At this axial point in history it is incumbent upon man and the institutions he has created to develop a human community: a community in which men must use all their faculties to harness the powers they have created. They must do this through the judicious use of their growing leisure time and knowledge, and for the benefit of themselves and their fellows. Simply, Dr. Leonard feels that man must develop a society in which all men can live, love and learn together. Unless we do so, it is possible that we may all die together.

The University, Leonard feels, must assume the responsibility for the creation of such a society. It must provide the correct climate in which the teacher and the student may learn together. In other words, the University must promote interaction between individuals as a first step in the creation of a human community.

In the face of this great challenge, Leonard finds the University of Massachusetts not responding. In fact, he finds that with the notable exception of the Orchard Hill complex, the University is not making any attempt to foster a climate in which the searching mind of the undergraduate can meaningfully communicate with the more experienced, but no less inquisitive mind, of the educator.

Instead of response, Leonard finds withdrawal. He finds his colleagues spending more time publishing than teaching; and when they do teach, it is the graduate student, not the undergraduate.

Leonard argues that it is not too late. The University should critically analyze itself, and not necessarily try to pour itself into the obsolescent molds of such Universities as Michigan, Chicago, and California.

Here, it might be worthwhile to call the present chaotic situation at Berkeley and the articles and letters in the current Newsweek which cast a shadow of doubt over the vaunted educational programs of that school.

One letter which is quite congruent with the thoughts of Dr. Leonard is printed in which three Berkeley students complain that the quest for "cyclotrons and industrial contracts" which along with a great image seem to be the goals of Berkeley and other nameless institutions, "has resulted in a conflict of priorities which has led to the sacrifice of full academic freedom and a humanized undergraduate experience."

Therefore, the question we must all ask is whither goest this University? Are we heading towards a dehumanized brain factory, or are we going to reassess our values and move in the direction of a human community.

We and the faculty know, that the current price for a promotion is publication and research. Where in this framework does the teacher who wants to "live' with his students fit? Must they all 'leave the University as Dr. Leonard is?

What will the University do to help foster the development of the human community?

J.S.D.

CRITIQUE

To the Editor:

With the appearance of the fall - semester Critique several corrections and editorial comments are in order. Apologies go to Miss Ilana Motyka whose by-line for the article "English: Thirty Credits: Too Little?" was mistakenly omitted; and to Dr. Honigberg (critique: Zoo. I) whose name was misspelled. Professor Gregory W. Webb was also miscredited in the critique of Geology I. The instructor should have been listed as Thomas E. Rice.

The Critique is a self-supporting publication dependent upon both student and faculty co-operation. We are grateful to all faculty members who allowed us to enter their classes. Their obvious desire for course-betterment is an important reason for Critique's existence. We also thank all those who have bought our magazine, while emphasizing the need for full student support.

Purchase of Critique not only aids the student in intelligently selecting his courses, but assures the continued success and improvement of the magazine.

We hope that we have rewarded the faculty and administration's trust in us by helping them continue their excellent job of providing high-calibre education for the largest number of students.

ATTENTION ADMINISTRATION!

Open Letter to the Administration of the University of Massachusetts

We are writing to protest the administration of the University of Massachusetts' seeming lack of concern for those students of Eugene Field Dormitory P. In the spring of last year the University of Massachusetts was well aware that the Orchard Complex would not be even near completion in September. Yet it publically announced that the dorms would be ready for occupancy in the fall. When we, the house counselors arrived on September ninth there was not water, no heat, no electricity, and there were even no doors on the building. Luckily emergency electricity and cold water arrived so that the freshmen could move in that following Friday. The students and parents reluctantly agreed to wait for these "conveniences" to come. The promised completion was set for sometime in November. December is here, and so is the dirt, the dust, the unique landscaping, the workmen, and the noise.

We realize the problems the university faces when it has to deal with contractors, subcontractors and unions who are not directly concerned with providing adequate housing for the students of this complex. Coordinating the efforts of so many phases of construction is a gargantuan job. The housing office, contrary to popular student belief, is trying hard. But this unfortunately is not enough. The contractor appears not to be moved by pleas and reminders from the housing office. We understand from the housing office that an established fifty dollar restriction has been dropped in compromise. We now suggest an even more stringent monetary restriction for the contractor. This may be considered a breach of contract on the part of the university, but we feel convinced that there are enough reciprocal counts against the contractor. There is something greater at stake than a pending lawsuit; that is the physical and emotional welfare of the students, their academic standing, and the success of the Residential College experiment.

In the three months that students have been living in the complex, life has been typified by the noise of the construction. Daily inconveniences arise, such as locks that won't work, elevators that are stuck, water pressure that is low, heating that is insufficient and unpredictable, combined with the lack of privacy owing to no drapes and the constant presence of workmen, some of whom do not work but waste time playing ping pong, drinking coffee, and loitering around. In addition to these inconveniences, studying in the dormitory during the day is impossible because of the noise of construction, and in the evening because of the poor acoustical planning of the building. Noise echoes down the corridor even when it is of whisper intensity and conversation in the rooms is impossible without it disturbing your neighbors. This acoustical planning is another unjust disadvantage that the university should attempt to rectify immediately. The inconveniences taken one by one are relatively small; taken together they constitute the biggest tension powder keg on campus. Immediate steps should be taken to alleviate this problem.

The university has started a great experiment with its Residential College System. All the state universities are watching to see its progress. It would be a shame to see such an experiment fold up before it is properly started because of disinterest on the part of the administration.

We therefore demand to see some definite steps being taken by the administration to speed up the construction. We no longer are satisfied with progress, but demand immediate completion. The student welfare, and the future of the Residential College is at stake. Can the university afford to make such a mistake?

REASON FOR BOWL

To the Editor,

In the last few weeks, we have noticed that several people on this campus think our team should not have been sent to Orlando. Aside from previous reasons given for our participation, we feel that the real reason behind this bowl should be mentioned. As stated in the Boston Globe of Dec. 8, ". . . this bowl . . . has produced more than $200,000 for the crippled children of this (Florida) area."

Down there, the bowl is referred to as "the little bowl with the big heart.' Certainly this reason deserves some consideration when deciding the true worth of the bowl game.

Other Colleges Speak:

He

We, as rational intelligent human beings, are amused when we contemplate the Ra of the Egyptians and the Zeus of the Greeks. To us they are little more than fairy tales, and any ethereality these ancient gods may have possessed has as much meaning to our spiritual beliefs as does Alice in Wonderland.

We do not become confused nor do we become undecided when we contemplate the existence of Ra, the Egyptian sun god, because with dogmatic conviction we present cogent arguments that satisfactorily and positively denounce the existence of such a being. We know better than to believe in a sun god.

The same is true for the gods of Olympus.

Yet we are not amused at the concept of our own god -- the Christian-Judeo version of the super, omnipotent, omniscient, intangible being that brought order and intelligence to the universe, the Christian-Judeo universe.

All of Western man -- Protestant, Catholic and Jewish -- places his faith in a being he cannot see, cannot hear and cannot feel. God is there because the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Pope and the Jewish way of life says He is there. There are those who doubt and there are those who just as dogmatically disclaim the existence of God, but they are in the minority.

There are many -isms -- philosophy books are heavy with them -- that attempt to define the existence of OUR God -- each -ism just another suffix on the word of an individual philosopher's beliefs.

There are arguments for the existence of God that run the gamut from the Creation to the concept of an ordered universe -- that without God there couldn't have been a Creation and there would not be order.

Man -- Western man -- claims that God created man in his own image and that God presented Moses with ten commandments atop Mount Sinai. Perhaps he did.

But Man also said, in the 17th century, that a king was inspired by God; that kings should possess a divine right because of their godlike abilities, abilities which were instilled by God's presence. And so Louis XIV of France became an absolute ruler.

A sacrilege? Was Man "using" God to further his own ambitions? Had God become just a convenience? Possibly.

But doesn't Man "use" God when he thinks of Him in terms of a crutch, as something to lean on or to turn to in time of need? Is that why God is there? Shouldn't God be more revered, more esteemed -- more meaningful -- than a salve for the wounds of Man?

When Man rose from the primeval slime, built temples to "false" gods near the Nile, marched in the Crusades, became a monk during the Middle Ages, died of the bubonic plague, participated in the Renaissance, established colonies on unchartered continents, created new governments and wars to fight those governments, invented machines, fought the First and Second World Wars, exploded the hydrogen bomb -- was God watching? Did the hand of God guide Man or did Man's pen guide the mind of God?

Man says that he must believe in God because he must believe in something, and yet there are those who claim that if Man must believe in something he should believe in himself. For, philosophically speaking, how can we determine the existence of a deity when we cannot prove that we exist? Are we, for example, only the figments of our own imagination?

The mind of Man, it seems, can do almost anything, for if it can force its body to sit quietly while it burns to death, then most assuredly the powers inherent in the mind are far beyond our comprehension. The mind, somehow, is almost godlike.

Perhaps we were not destined to prove the existence of a deity; perhaps that isn't our place. But we can question and we can wonder; that's why, if there is a God, he provided us with a mind. But what makes the Christian-Judeo god more real, more true than the Egyptian's sun god? Will tomorrow's generations be amused at the concept of today's God?

Perhaps the human race will get its answer when beings from another planet land on Earth -- perhaps tomorrow, perhaps in ten thousand tomorrows.

Two Noted Campus Poets Read Work To Students

By Dave Haracs

Faculty poets Ann Halley (Mrs. Jules Chametsky) and Martin Halpern read from their works in the second of the Meet the Author series on Tuesday, Dec. 1.

Miss Halley read from her book Between Wars and Other Poems, soon to be published by the Gehenna Press in Northampton. Halpern read from Two Sides of an Island and Other Poems, published by the University of North Carolina in its Chapel Hill contemporary poets series.

Born in Bremerhaven in 1928 of a Jewish father and German mother, Anne Halley came to the United States at the age of ten. With degrees from Wellesley and Minn., recipient of a Longview Award in 1960 for her memoir "Children and Liberty," she is now a member of the University English faculty. Between Wars is her first book.

A NATIVE OF NEW YORK CITY, Martin Halpern was educated at the University of Rochester and Harvard University. Before coming to the University, he taught English at the University of California, Berkeley. He has been awarded both Fulbright and Howard Foundation grants to write and study in Italy. His poetry has appeared in many magazines, and his verse plays have been produced in Cambridge, Mass., New York and Berkeley. Two Sides of an Island is also his first book.

Although both books are first collections, they have unifying themes. Miss Halley's title poem "Between Wars" is one of a series concerning Germany in the period between the two world wars. Each of the poems in the sequence is narrated in the first person by a half-German, half-Jewish girl in Germany and later in America in the period between the wars.

THE UNIFYING ELEMENT IN HALPERN'S book is his attempt, through poems diverse in form, style, and substance, to present the polarities of the "two sides" of human life, the ultimate or "tragic" experience, and the human or "comic" experience. The poems, set both in America and in Italy, play back and forth between these two poles or at times present the contrast between the two in a single poem.

When asked her future plans, Miss Halley indicated that she has been working on prose memoirs of the same period which the poems cover. One of these is scheduled to be published soon in Genesis West, a California magazine, and will be included with "Children and Liberty" and other memoirs in a book.

CONCERNING HIS FUTURE WORK, Martin Halpern mentioned the scheduled production of his verse play The Reservation in Cambridge, Mass., early next year, and the possibility of another volume of his poetry. This projected second volume is intended, he said, to have more unity than Two Sides of an Island which, as a first book, he described as "necessarily a miscellany from a fairly long period of work."

Student Editors Ousted

The editor and editorial board of the Roosevelt Torch, student newspaper at Roosevelt University, Chicago, have been suspended from their jobs by a vote of the Student Activities Board.

The board's action re-affirmed a temporary suspension that had been handed the group by the university's president, Robert Pitchell, for publishing a story which alleged that Pitchell had been asked to resign by the school's board of trustees and that the university was heavily in debt.

The activities board passed a three-part resolution stipulating:

—that the five members of the editorial board and the editor, Judi Halprin, be relieved of their duties.

—that the editor retain her tuition grant (a part of her salary, the money for which comes from the Women's Scholarship Association, an extra-university group.

—the suspension of the board from participation in all student activities be lifted. Pitchell had previously barred the group from taking part in any student activities whatsoever.

Publication of the Torch has been suspended until a new editor can be appointed by the activities board. This was done because the six persons suspended from their jobs were the only ones on the paper's staff with enough technical skills to put out a paper.

The six are now planning to publish another paper, the Roosevelt Free Press, as a student activity. The publication will probably be mimeographed unless enough funds to hire a printer can be obtained, which appears to be an unlikely prospect.

University officials had seized the issue of the Torch containing the story on Pitchell. It was later released with a four-page supplement in which they denied that Pitchell was on his way out as president, as the Torch story had claimed.

They acknowledged, however, that the school was deeply in debt. (CPS)

Sociology Club Plans Activities

This year the Sociology Club was re-activated after its dissolution during the summer. The new officers (Don Hastings, pres.; Bill Mills, v.p.; Ben Sackmary, treas.; Dede Seder, sec.) pledged themselves to activating the club.

Recent activities include a movie dealing with mental illness and another on the subject of prisons and parole systems. A panel discussion concerning summer employment in social work was also held.

A coffee hour with the members of the faculty of the sociology department is being planned. Another project is the survey committee that will release information and conduct its first survey shortly.

The major activity at the moment is recruitment of new members and the raising of funds. Anyone interested in joining is invited to attend the next meeting to be announced at a later date.

Health Grant Awarded For Study of Botulinum

A $25,000 National Institute of Health grant has been awarded to UMass for the study of a microorganism that can cause food poisoning if not controlled.

The research is being conducted by Dr. John H. Green of the UMass department of environmental sciences. He will work with the physiology of "C. botulinum, type E", to find out how this minute organism lives, what it lives on, and, indirectly, what conditions keep it dormant or kill it.

Botulinum, once responsible for many food-poisoning cases, has been kept under control since the introduction of scientific ways of heat-processing foods during the 1920's. Basic research during those years established that temperatures needed to can food satisfactorily would also keep potentially harmful microorganisms in check.

Today, however, canning is only one method of food preservation. As newer processes such as vacuum cooling, irradiation, and freeze drying have been developed, there is a question about whether they can control botulinum, since high temperatures are not present in these methods.

None of these new food preserving processes has come into wide use yet. They will not be common in the marketplace until costs come down and they have been cleared for general use.

Dr. Green's research, therefore, is preventive. His studies are intended to pinpoint and eliminate possible microorganism problems before they occur.

Bowl Coverage Recapped

WMUA will broadcast live the bowl game, Saturday at 8 p.m. The game will be broadcast in the S.U. Anyone who has a f.m. radio or who lives in a dorm with a converter will be able to listen. Tune in at 7:30 for the half-hour pre-game show.

Films of the bowl game will be shown Monday in the SU Ballroom at 8 p.m. and 8:30. Students with an ID will be charged 50¢ admission and all others, $1.00

Proceeds will be contributed to the band bowl fund.

The band fund is close to $3,500 at this time, according to George Michael, co-ordinator of the bowl activities.

Suggesting that adequate authority for investigations of internal security already exist in the Judiciary Committee, the petition also asks that the HUAC files be placed in the government

The petitioners point out that archives and sealed for 50 years. the HUAC's jurisdiction "is limited to inquiring into ideas, opinions, speech, and other forms of expression" by the power given it by Congress to investigate "un-American propaganda activities" and "subversive and un-American propaganda."

"No precise meaning has been, or can be, given to such vague terms as 'un-American' or 'subversive,'" they said. They described HUAC as an attempt to establish within the legislative branch "a permanent institution, consisting of staff, files, informants and similar mechinery, designed to serve as a bureaucratic Big Brother to censor the opinions and associations of American citizens."

Alpha Zeta Has Initiation

The Fraternity of Alpha Zeta, honorary agriculture fraternity, held its fall initiation last Saturday afternoon, Dec. 5

To be eligible for membership in the fraternity, candidates must be male tudents, (as least second - semester sophomore) with good character and leadership qualities, who rank in the upper 2/5 of the 4-year College of Agriculture. The eight new initiates are: Michael D. Carleton, Chester D. Cramer, Bruce E. Cutter, Rudolph L. Graf, Robert C. Lebida, Charles H. Nelson, George A. O'Connor, and David W. Root.

A banquet was held at the Grist Mill after the initiation. 59 persons attended, including members, their dates, faculty and alumni. The guest speaker was Dr. Haim Gunner, who spoke on "The Changing Face of Agricultural Science."

Music Courses Changing

By Steve Gordon

Many new changes have been carried out by Dr. Phillip Bezanson, new music department head, in his effort to improve the University music department.

The music department has recently acquired five large house trailers for use as classrooms, teaching studios, and department offices.

One of the house trailers to be used by the Music Dept. due to a shortage of space in Old Chapel.

The trailers, located in the Dickinson Hall parking lot, will be ready for use immediately after Christmas vacation. They are 38 feet long and 20 feet wide, and equipped with heat, light, and ventilation.

Dr. Bezanson said the new facilities were necessary because of the lack of practice space in the Old Chapel, currently being used as the home of the music department.

With classrooms and offices moved to the trailers, students will have more practice space. Dr. Bezanson also noted that music theory and ear-training classes will encounter less sound interference.

Dr. Bezanson, in his first year as head of the music department, has already taken action for a more complete music curriculum. He is building a standard music curriculum and an extensive music library to meet the National Association of Music Schools' accreditation standards.

With regard to the Fine Arts building, scheduled for completion in 1968, Dr. Bezanson expressed hope that the music section of the building would supply sufficient facilities for the growing number of music majors at the University.

With increased facilities, a broadened curriculum, and an enlarged library, Dr. Dezanson predicted a comprehensive music department capable of serving over a hundred music majors.

Many Students Shop At Univ. Store

By Howie Davis

"We're doing our Christmas shopping at the University Store this year." This seems to be the war cry of thousands of UMass students.

Because of the popularity of the store, Winthrop Cummings, the store's manager, has purchased 7,500 Christmas cards and many UMass embossed sweatshirts, beermugs, stuffed animals and gimmicks for students to choose from.

If past years are to be taken as examples, students who wait until the last minute will find a limited assortment at their disposal.

One function not always realized is that the University store will gift wrap and package any merchandise for mailing.

A book fair being run by the store is Christmas orientated and enables students to purchase books and paintings not ordinarily found in stock.

Students planning to mail packages to the West Coast should DO IT NOW!

Students should be sure to double check all names, addresses and zip codes to facilitate efficient mailing. All packages should have strong wrapping.

crowd in Johnson Chapel, he said, "We need not aspire toward perfection, but we need a strategic foreign policy."

Acheson stressed that the United States be candid with all nations.

Though we tell nothing but the truth," he continued, "we need not tell the whole truth. This," he said, "will inspire trust and confidence in our nation.

The United States must keep its goal in mind, he said, to foster an environment in which free nations can exist and flourish.

"Only the end justifies the means," he noted.

Pointing out the irrelevance of moral considerations in policy decisions of the past, Acheson said that decisions in the realm of international relations are not based on the criteria of "brotherhood and the golden rule."

Such events as the Cuban crisis, the development of the nuclear bomb, and Lincoln's decision to "save the Union," exemplify this statement, he concluded.

Revelers' Activities

Campus Group Adds Spirit

By Charlotte Langone

Activities Night . . . Freshman Ball . . . Scholarship Night . . . Campus Varieties.

These events may not seem related but they are.

All are the work of The Revelers, one of UMass' most active — and perhaps least recognized — student organizations.

So the question that most students ask is, "Who are The Revelers and what do they do?"

The Revelers are a group of about 25 upperclassmen interested in one of the greatest phases of University life — spirit. They have concentrated their work toward freshmen and for a good reason. It is during the first years of college that spirit and interest should be developed, not only for the student himself but for the University as a whole.

The Revelers' first step was a handbook — containing traditions, songs and cheers — which was given to each freshman at the beginning of the year. Next, they sponsored Activities Night in the Student Union Ballroom and gave freshmen a chance to visit booths representing organizations on campus. Displays were set up and freshmen were acquainted with each organization's activities and what they had to offer the student.

The Freshman Ball was something to be remembered and there in the background again were The Revelers.

Football has been on The Revelers' schedule — and rightly so with the pride and spirit of students high for the tremendous team we have. The rallies on Friday nights were lifting the University's spirit and The Revelers co-sponsored these along with other groups.

Their biggest project of the year will be Campus Varieties by talent from the student body. The show, April 23-24, will consist of three one-act plays, including one by the loyal high-spirited faculty and administration. They will write and star in a play which will poke fun at the students.

Then it will be the students' turn to poke fun at the faculty. The students will do this, of course, remembering the high spirit and loyalty of the faculty and administration.

The president of The Revelers is Art LaBrie and the group is sponsored by Wes Honey.

TANGERINE BOWL

WMUA 91.1 FM., broadcast live the Tangerine Bowl Game from Orlando Saturday at 8 p.m. The game will be broadcast throughout the Student Union. Anyone who has an F.M. radio or who lives in a dorm with converter will be able to listen. Jeff Baker and Bob Healy will announce the game. For complete coverage tune in at 7:30 for the half hour pre-game show.

WRESTLING

THE VARSITY WRESTLING campaign gets under way at 4 p.m. against Tufts in the Auxiliary Gym of the Boyden Building. The frosh wrestlers will meet the Tufts frosh at 5 p.m.

Cath. Innovations Intended For A Deeper Faith

"The Liturgical Renewal is intended to bring the people into more effective contact with the sacred scriptures and the texts of the liturgy, thereby fostering deeper faith, greater knowledge and more sincere prayer."

These words of Rt. Rev. Msgr. David J. Power, the University's Catholic chaplain, explain the purpose of changes taking place in the Catholic Church. Last Sunday marked the official beginning of the Mass changes brought about through the work of Vatican Council II.

The major changes in the Mass are in the language used, the position of the altar and the posture of the people attending Mass.

At the Newman Center Chapel the new rites include a greater use of English, the faithful joining the priest in English recitation of the Introit, the Gradual, the Offertory, and the Communion Prayers.

Also a lay person, such as an acolyte serving Mass, reads the Epistle and the Gospel.

A portable altar allowing the priest to face the congregation while celebrating Mass will frequently be used.

Msgr. Power commented: "In this period of the church's regime, patience is required of all for change of custom is not easy to accept. However, in time, through more active participation, the faithful will become more aware of what they are doing, engage more actively in the public worship of the Mass and be enriched by its effects."

Graduate Grants Awarded

For the 1965-66 academic year the National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta will award the Maria Leonard, the Alice Crocker Lloyd, the Adele Hagner Stamp and the Kathryn Sisson Phillips Fellowships for graduate study. The amount of each fellowship is $1500. Use in a college or university where there is a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta is encouraged.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta who graduated in 1962, 1963 or 1964 and who has maintained the scholastic average throughout her college career is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have maintained this average to the end of the first semester (or first quarter) of this year.

Applicants will be judged on scholastic record, recommendations, the soundness of the applicant's project and purpose and, to some extent, on need.

Application blanks and information may be obtained from Dean Helen Curtis.

The application must be completed by the applicant herself and submitted to the National Fellowship Chairman by January 15, 1965.

Grenadiers Win First

The UMass Army R.O.T.C. drill team, the Grenadiers, went to Boston Sunday, Dec. 6, and returned home with first place in IDR competition, basic infantry drill.

The competition was part of a two-day exhibition at the Commonwealth Armory.

In the second phase of the competition, trick drill, the Grenadiers placed second behind the experienced Boston College team. This was the first public competition of the Grenadiers since their inception just one year ago.

All Army R.O.T.C. cadets are invited to come and watch the Grenadiers in action each Tuesday and Thursday at 11:15 in Dickinson Hall.

Air Force Flies Drill Team To Florida

The Flying Redmen will leave tomorrow morning for Orlando, Florida as part of a field trip to McCoy Air Force Base.

The 24 man team will participate in the pre-game activities of the UMass, East Carolina game. The drill team under the command of Cadet Major Carl Stidsen has been practicing up to ten hours a week for this event since the confirmation of the Tangerine Bowl bid.

Stidsen said, "Although this will be the first major performance before an audience of this size for the majority of the team members, I am confident that they will do an excellent job. The enthusism they showed at practice sessions will be reflected in their performance Saturday."

The performance will include, except for the "Meat Grinder," all the maneuvers of the past years which have made them New England champions.

Fred Lewis Enjoys New Sports Life

By Howie Davis

One of the strongest sideline supporters of the bowlbound University of Massachusetts Redmen is a bull-necked athlete who knows well the thrill of smashing the line before screaming crowds.

UMass spectators may remember the 5'11", 215 pound Fred Lewis. They see him now as one of them: yelling, cheering and somehow wishing he could help. They remember the 22-year old Lewis as the hulking halfback who scored three touchdowns against Northeastern in 1961. They remember last year's Bucknell game when Lewis scored a TD immediately after coming off the bench. Where was Fred Lewis this Fall? Why wasn't he playing?

A series of knee injuries beginning in his sophomore year in high school slowed Lewis down and eventually ended his football career.

If there is any person who ever watched a football game and tried to associate himself with the players it is Fred Lewis.

Before coming to the University, he was a star halfback for Springfield Tech. In the spring he was equally sensational on the track team. Yet it was a combination of hard practice and harder performances that resulted in his injuries. He had two cartilage operations while in high school and his speed and lateral movements were noticeably reduced. Lewis said he feels he lost something physically and psychologically as a result of the operations.

The records tell the story: He still holds the New England Schoolboy broad jump record at 23'8", achieved before his injuries. His best effort in college, despite his handicap, was good enough to set a UMass record that still stands, 22'11".

When he arrived at the University, Fred was still determined to fulfill his childhood ambition of playing professional football. He starred for the Redmen until last year's UConn game, in which he re-injuried the knee and broke his right leg. After another operation, the doctors warned him to forget football and track.

When a person bases his entire life around athletics it is not an easy matter to forget them. Lewis had been the star performer of the 1963 track team against the University of Miami when he won the 100 yard dash, the high jump, broad jump, and triple jump. And now his career was through.

But Fred Lewis was not about to let his muscular body deteriorate. To stay in shape, he ardently began lifting weights last February. He progressed so rapidly that he decided to enter the Junior National Championship Weightlifting Tournament last May. He had been practicing for only four months and his expectations were not high. But Fred's desire to excell was stronger than most of the contestants and he placed third in the heavyweight-unlimited class.

Lewis admits his total lifting weight must improve from 945 pounds to at least 1100 before he can consider an Olympic tryout. He is now pressing 300, jerking 370 and snatching 285. When these totals add up to 1100 pounds or better, he says that he will become a candidate for the Olympic team.

The softspoken Lewis, a member of the class of 1966, said that his knee still bothers him a bit when he lifts, but he wears a brace to keep the knee from jerking out of place.

The Olympics are four years away and Fred realizes that since he cannot play professional football he must get an education and make a living. He wants to coach on the high school level in this part of the state.

If Fred Lewis ever decides that his knee has strengthened so he can give pro-ball a try, a bid is waiting for him from the Oakland Raiders of the American Football League. But the way it looks now, the only place you're going to find him in action is at the Mexico City Olympics in 1968.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

Both AEPi and TEP won their Intramural Ten-Pin matches by shutouts this past week to remain in a tie for first place in the IFC league.

AEPi, led by Capt. Jeff Gale, whitewashed PSK, and TEP blanked ATG by 8-0 scores. The teams now post 42-6 records. Unless these teams get upset, the last regularly scheduled match on the program will determine the IFC championship on March 22.

AEPi holds the lead in all categories of team play with the high single, high three game total, and high three game average. Frank Nesvet from Pi still has the top single in the competition with a 221 and his teammate Mike Kaplan has the high three game total to date with a 561.

In the West League Mills with a 32-8 record maintains a slight lead over Middlesex with a 24-8 record. Tordoff of Middlesex holds the campus lead in all three categories: A high single of 267, high three game of 595 and high average of 180.

In the Dorm East League, the championship looms as a runaway. Grayson #1 remains undefeated with a 48-0 record and is 20 full games ahead of Greenough with a 24-16 record. Unless Grayson falls into a Phillies Flop, they will easily win the dorm championship and could go all the way as the campus champs.

The big story in the IM basketball Tournament seems to be the high scoring duel between Vicky's 202's and the P.E. majors. Playing in the Independent Division, the P.E. Majors beat the Bailhawks 97-46. However, Wednesday night Vicky's 202's set a campus IM record as they steamrolled the Hoopstuffers 110-23. All the players, ten strong, hit in double figures.

In the IFC League, LCA and TC hold an early lead with 3-0 records. Shea from LCA is the top scorer with 78 points followed by Goodhue of SPE with 55. Goodhue is the top man in the rebounding dept. with 51 followed closely by teammate Saila with 49.

The Maroons and Eagles are tied for the Lead in the East League with 3-0 records. In the West league it's the Chestnuts and the Elms with 2-0 records; and in the North league it's the Hurricanes all alone with a 3-0 record. Thomas of the Aces is the leading scorer with 61 points and Kent of the Birches is the rebounding leader with 31.

Trophies will be awarded to the leading scorers and rebounders.

All male students with a background in basketball are urgently needed to officiate games in the Intramural program. Conditions are ideal—the pay is terrific. Games are played at 6:30, 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Choose your own hour(s) and day(s). Just drop into the Intramural Office in Room 215 of the Doyden Phys. Ed. Building.

Sextet Overpowers M.I.T. Squad, 7-1

By Gary Molloy

On Wed. December 9, the Redmen hockey team hosted MIT at the Walter Orr Rink. This was a makeup of the game scheduled for Dec. 5. Returning to the ice for the first time since their defeat by Williams the previous week, the Redmen swamped the Engineers with a fine passing and scoring attack which led to a seven to one victory.

IN THIS SECOND GAME of the season the Redmen used three powerful lines and a strong defense, spearheaded by Goalie Skip Bowen, to completely overpower the hapless MIT team. The pucksters took period leads of 4-0, 5-1, 7-1. In the first period, Peter Hurd opened the scoring followed by Bob "Egg Man" Edmonston, Dick Feldhoff, and Ed Polchpek. The lone UMass goal of the second period was scored by Dick Callahan on a solo rush. Eaton opened the third period with his first goal of the season, while Co-Captain John Clayton rounded out the scoring with a blazing slap shot from just inside the blue line, late in the third period.

DICK CALLAHAN, a center last season, has been converted to a defense where he has played exceptionally well. Bob Edmonston and Paul Donovan have been tremendous while playing on the third line. Next game is Sat. at 2:00 against WPI.

BASKETBALL . . .

strong game for the Redmen as he scored 12 points and pulled down 14 rebounds. The UMass statistician had O'Rourke with 21 rebounds and Edwards with 17, but the figures used here were provided by the Rhody man who is official for home contests.

Mike Fitzgerald had 15 points for the Rams, mostly in the first half to go along with McGovern and Nightingale. As a team, the Rams made only 28 of 87, a tribute to the fine defensive game Massachusetts played.

UMass fell below the .500 mark from the floor for the first time this year, but still hit on 28 of 62 for 45.0%.

This marked the first Yankee Conference road win for John Orr as his club failed five times last year. The last victory had been in Matt Zunic's final game at Maine in 1963.

Massachusetts now will meet a veteran, but small Maine quintet in a 6 o'clock contest Saturday. The Black Bears already stand 2-0 in the conference, and along with the Redmen were rated the preseason darkhorses in the race for honors and the NCAA berth. A frosh prelim with Worcester Junior will start at 4 in the afternoon.

FOOTBALL . . .

four interceptions, one going for a touchdown. A pair of junior guards are the heaviest men on either ECC squad. Jay Andrews 215 at 5'11" and Mitchell Cannon tips the scales at 214. The defensive tackles are Jim Leftwich, a senior, and sophomore Leroy Cobb. Ends are Pete Crane, a sophomore at 186 and 6'1, and Wallace Collins, a senior at 205 and 6' even.

The regular Redmen line that will go most of the way averages a little more than 220 while East Carolina's defensive front seven averages a little less than 202 pounds. The offensive line figures about 194 per man. The outcome of the game will probably result from whether UMass takes advantage of its 25 pound per man edge over the Pirates in smashing through to smear the potent backfield before it gets a chance to get an offense in motion. Unless the heat changes get to the Redmen like they have to many Northern teams playing in Florida, they should manage a workable attack of their own against the much smaller line. One other advantage the Pirates have over UMass is that they played seven of their nine games under the lights this season while Massachusetts had none. Whether this will be important or not will be known by about 10:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Redmen Squad Faces Big Test Against East Carolina

By Al Rice

The hour finally comes tomorrow at 8 p.m. when Massachusetts and East Carolina College meet in the long awaited Tangerine Bowl. It was on Nov. 16 that the University campus first heard about the East Carolina football team, but for most UMass students, the facts about that up and coming southern school are as cloudy now as they were when it was officially announced that Mass would meet East Carolina in its first post-season football contest.

The Pirates, coached by Clarence Stasavich, a veteran of 19 seasons of southern small college football, are a paradox; they are one of the few teams using pro type offensive and defensive platoons. Yet, at the same time, they go back to the early days of football with a single wing formation that most schools abandoned years back. The combination has worked well for Stasavich, who has amassed a 142-42-7 coaching record at Lenoir Rhyne and East Carolina, including a pair of 8-1 seasons the last two years after a 5-4 mark in 1961. In addition, the Pirates have a 27-6 victory over previously unbeaten Northeastern University in the Eastern Bowl game at Allentown, Pa., last winter.

East Carolina has been jinxed the past two years by Richmond in what otherwise would be two perfect seasons. The Spiders handed the Pirates an opening day loss last year and then knocked them off 22-20 this season. This was a hard loss for the Pirates since Richmond had only a mediocre season. They lost to the Citadel 33-0, a team that ECC bumped off 19-10 late in the season. Richmond was the team Holy Cross beat for its third win in a row before the Redmen took them apart 25-6 in Worcester.

East Carolina depended more on a high powered offense that the Redmen did this season. The Pirates scored 267 points in nine games and averaged 343.5 yards total offense per game. Of the 3,092 yards the team rolled up, tailback Bill Cline accounted for 1,574 and that in only eight games. Cline did nothing but punt in a 25-0 win over Catawba in the opener, but he made his backfield debut for 1964 a memorable one by personally picking up 257 yards running and passing against West Chester State for a new school record.

Cline was the second leading rusher on the team with 630 yards, a 5.9 average gain, and eight touchdowns. His passing record was 63 completitions in 111 tries for 944 yards and 12 scores. He also was the leading punt and kickoff returner on the team. His kickoff record was a fantastic 34.5-yard average in eight returns. For his phenomenal season, Cline was picked as quarterback on the same Associated Press Little All-American team to which Milt Morin was picked as an end.

The big man in the ground attack was Dave Alexander, a 191-pound junior from Washington, D.C. Alexander rusher for 849 yards with a 6.2 average and 16 touchodnws. His yardage broke the former ECC record set by Buffalo's Glenn Bass during the 1960 season. Alexander presents another threat to the Massachusetts defensive team with his passing ability. He tried the fullback option 20 times and completed 10 for 129 yards.

Both Cline and Alexander have the same backup man. George Richardson has been the second string tailback and fullback all season with good results. Richardson led the team to a win over Catawba when Cline was hurt and rushed for 202 yards during the season. In the last few games he had a nearly 10 yard average per carry.

guard slots. The center will be John Crew, the only other sophomore in the starting lineup for the Pirates.

The defensive unit is composed of four seniors, four juniors, and three sophomores. Cline and Mills alternate at one spot in the secondary, but otherwise it is a separate unit entirely.

Jerry Tolley, a senior with four interceptions, and Dick Ellis complete the secondary. The linebackers are Ikey Bullard, a 5'9" 174 pound junior and sophomore Harold Glaetti, the defensive signal caller. Glaetti also had

Hoopsters Outshoot Rhodie Rams, 79-67

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts started the Yankee Conference basketball season by upsetting the University of Rhode Island Rams, 79-67.

A man-to-man defense by URI kept the visitors from their usual fast breaking style until late in the the second half. However, the Redmen defense was equally as good as it held the Rams in check.

MIKE MEOLA should be singled out for the job he did on holding Dennis McGovern to just a single point in the first half and kept him further under control until the last five minutes when he scored nearly all of his 15 point total.

O'ROURKE HAD 18 points, 18 rebounds, and held Frank Nightingale scoreless after he had 10 in the front half. Hill exploded for 24 points in the second half to keep the Rams off balance.

Actually the game was decided on the foul line, where things were a little different than usual. The Redmen hit on 4 of 11 in the first half but converted 19 of 20 over the rest of the game, Hill getting 9 of 9. The Rams never got to use the 1 and 1 as the visitors never fouled them.

After an 8-8 tie, the Redmen ran eight straight points and Rhody never got closer than the 32-30 halftime margin. The Rams had closed very fast, outscoring the Redmen 9-1 and the home fans thought the Rams were going to make a contest of it. Then Hill appeared on the scene to remove any doubts about the outcome.

As the Rams continued their poor shooting, the Redmen took advantage to widen the margin so that it reached 68-57 with five minutes left. Rhode Island went to the full court press. Hill scored seven of the last 11 UMass points and helped them open a 77-61 gap at the one minute mark.

The teams then played out the game with the result no longer in doubt.

Hill set two records in his performance. The 24 points in one half is a new mark, and during the game he scored 11 straight foul shots for another.

UMass Gymnasts Meet West Point

By Steve Perkins

The University of Massachusetts Gymnastic team, having won its first meet of the season last week over Southern Connecticut, turns its sights towards the Cadets of West Point, as it prepares for its first home meet of the season.

It appears that Army will be supporting a powerhouse team this year, since three out of its four men who placed within the top ten in the Eastern Inter-collegiate Gymnastic Championships last year, will be returning as strong starters in Saturday's meet. Floor exercise will probably be the toughest event for the UMass team, since all of the floor exercise men for the Cadets have returned from last year. However, the parallel bar and still ring events could conceivably be captured by the UMass team.

LAST YEAR the gymnasts lost to the Cadets by a score of 149-121. This result could be indicitive of a good showing for the UMass team, since there are quite a few veterans returning to their team, plus some strong additions. Coach Kjeldsen will be relying upon the team's stability in performance, rather than upon the spectacular performance of any single individual. This in the past has brought a commendable record to the team, and has positioned the team at a level of consistency. A team relying entirely on the performance of certain strong individuals often finds its scores as well as its win-lost record greatly fluctuating.

This first home meet of the season will be held Saturday, December 12 at 1:00 in the Boyden Gymnasium.

Forum Discloses Gov't. Involved In Springfield De Facto Issue

By Steve Gordon

The Council Chambers was the scene for Friday's Pre-Law Association forum on de facto segregation in Springfield. A number of students and faculty were on hand to hear Attorneys Herbert O. Reid and Henry Weissman present the issues.

Reid, currently a Professor of Law at Howard University Law School, has had extensive experience in the legal aspects of segregation. He played an important role in the monumental Supreme Court school desegregation decision in 1954.

Weissman, local attorney for the N.A.A.C.P., was instrumental in bringing Springfield de facto segregation to light. He, himself, prepared the briefs when the case came to court last October.

The forum was preceeded by a talk by Professor Newton Pacht, also from Howard University Law School, on legal education. Professor Pacht discussed the image of the legal profession and the valuable purpose it serves in our society.

Professor Reid began the forum by tracing the history of legal protection of education since the Civil War. He cited the initial legal policy that "separate but equal" did not violate the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

He continued by examining the various legal attacks on the separate but equal" doctrine leading up to 1954, when the Supreme Court decided that separate could never be equal.

In regard to the Springfield situation, Professor Reid was of the opinion that de facto segregation was "obtained and maintained not by accident, but as the result of manipulation by government and school officials."

Weissman referred to the Springfield de facto segregation problem as descending from the vicious socio-economic circle the Negroes find themselves in, coupled with the sacred-cow treatment of the neighborhood school concept.

While the general populace discourages bussing, Weissman contended, the city school department spends $250,000 a year to bus white students to white schools and Negro students to Negro schools.

Weissman cited an example of flagrant segregation where, be-

Cline Leads East Carolina To Win 14-13 After Strong UMass First Half

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts football team faltered in the second half to lose a 13 point lead and the 19th annual Tangerine Bowl game to a speedy East Carolina eleven, 14-13.

The Redmen were on top until the midpoint of the fourth quarter, when All-American Bill Cline sprinted around left end nine yards for the score. He fired a short conversion pass to Pete Crane to make the score 14-13 and ruin the Redman debut in post season action.

The passing duo of Ken Palm and Jerry Whelchel had carried the Redmen to their lead as they connected on passes of 12 and 61 yards. It was most unfortunate for Whelchel that his second conversion try was wide and that that was the margin of victory.

The kick was most unusual in that the people on the sidelines.

Student To Publish Today; Audit Clears Up Debt

Editor-in-Chief
By Scott Freedland

The Amherst Student will publish today as usual. The financial dispute between the Student and the Student Council has been settled on the basis of an audit of the Student books by the Student Activities office of Amherst College.

The dispute arose over an alleged $300 debt discovered by the Council at their meeting last week. At that meeting the Editor of the paper was unable to present financial figures for this semester. Student Council President Bruce Wolff stated that, based upon figures presented at the meeting and worked out on a blackboard, the Student was headed for a $300 debt. Under a section of their constitution which gives the Council power to regulate any extra - curricular activity, the Council ordered the Student to cease publication as of their Thursday issue of last week, a move which cancelled the two issues remaining to be published before the vacation break.

An audit of the books by the office of Student Activities made after the Council decision revealed a profit of $1,850. Some doubt as to whether or not the Council would accept the audit was settled when Council President Wolff agreed to accept the audit late Sunday afternoon.

Director of the Student Activities Office, Arthur Davenport, revealed that the Council and Activities office lacked adequate financial figures before the audit, but that the Student was financially strong. The lack of figures was due to the failure of the former treasurer to keep them and to the illness of the new treasurer.

When questioned about the possibility of a change in Student personnel due to their irresponsibility, it was noted that the Student is now in the process of its normal transition of editorial control.

U.Mass. Symphony To Open Concert Series Wednesday

The University Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Ronald Steele will present its first concert of the season on Wednesday, Dec. 16 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker auditorium at the University.

The Symphony Orchestra made its debut Dec. 12, 1963, with Steele conducting.

What had originally begun as a 27 piece string ensemble, later expanded into a full orchestra. The Orchestra now totals 70 members. Amherst and its surrounding communities as well as the four college campuses are represented among the players.

Augmenting the orchestra's growth, Steele has chosen more difficult and challenging pieces to present this Wednesday night.

The program will begin with Aaron Copeland's "Fanfare for the Common Man", the best known of Copeland's "Ten Fanfares".

Also presented will be the "C Major Symphony No. 9" by Franz Schubert.

Following an intermission, the concert will continue with Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question" and will conclude with Franz Liszt's symphonic poem, "Les Preludes".

There will be no admission charge.

The University Symphony Orchestra will present its first concert of the season December 16 with Ronald Steele conducting.

Honor Society To Initiate 19 Students

Nineteen undergraduates will be initiated into the Phi Kappa Phi scholastic honor society this week.

PHI KAPPA PHI IS A NATIONAL SOCIETY that recognizes and encourages superior scholarships in all fields of study.

Speaker at the initiation ceremonies will be George Marston, former dean of the UMass School of Engineering. Initiation will be Wednesday, Dec. 16, at 8 p.m. in Skinner Auditorium. Dean Marston's talk is titled "Something for Nothing," and is open to all who are interested.

cause of overcrowded conditions at a Negro school, a class of Negro students was bussed to a white school intact, and, when the overcrowded situation was rectified, transferred back to their old school, still intact.

The attorney also condemned subtle segregation, where guidance counselors in the junior high schools encourage Negro students to go to the commercial and vocational high schools, and whites to go to high schools emphasizing preparation for higher education.

In a question and answer period following the forum, the question was raised as to whether litigation and governmental interference were morally acceptable means to achieve integration.

In answering the question, Professor Reid showed that when the local units fail to provide the citizens with their rights, the aid of higher powers must be enlisted.

Review: MJQ

"It Kind of Tickles"

By Peter Hendrickson

"It kind of tickles me and then I feel it growing into some kind of monster" was the way Percy Heath, the bassist of the Modern Jazz Quartet (MJQ), described the feeling he gets before he takes off in a spontaneous effort.

Monday night in the SU Ballroom as part of the University Concert Series, the MJQ appeared before a turnaway crowd. The writer wishes to describe his personal impressions of the quartet as he felt them during the concert.

Django, dedicated to a French gypsy guitarist, was the first piece. The lead was swapped among the artists with the precision of a computerized product. Lewis (aranger, composer, pianist and leader) soloed, with Kay (percussion) and Heath (bass) backing him up—light as a feather on a breeze from the hills.

Cortege, from the film No Sun in Venice, gave Jackson (vibes) his chance to leave the crowded room and enter his own world. Eyes strangely unfixed gave the first hint of the coming note, followed by an assertive nod and determined lip, finally expressed in flashing hands caressing, then striking the notes with authority and perfection.

Kay stroked the triangle as though the bell were his voice. Weird but regal, the entire impression was not offensive to but persuasive of the majesty of the piece. Crescendo with Kay, and over to Lewis for a meandering summer stroll by a river.

A train was travelin' farther and farther with My Man is Gone Now in an up tempo rendition of the Gershwin tune. Jackson and Kay dominate, whirling the black sadness of despair that welled into a totally possessive nightmare. Lewis finally resolved the crisis and broke the enchantment with a piano relief.

The gentleman of jazz returned after intermission with a lukewarm The Little Comedy followed by Little Bach Fugue in D minor. Heath, a superb bassist, was fully up to the challenge of the difficult fingering. He meshed elegantly with Lewis as they tripped lightly through the piece.

Intima and Winter Tale were slavically oriented. Lewis led off with a piano solo, resembling a concerto for about 30 bars until Kay cut in with one eyed percussion a go-go. The audience was spellbound as Jackson closed with giant snowflakes of mellow vibes. Intima had the bite of a triple martini.

Lewis' In a Crowd let Jackson wander with head held high, a Sammy Davis with no home but a long, dark corridor.

The subdued and polite audience displayed their approval and granted the quartet a standing ovation. The men responded and returned to play God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen. A very clever arrangement, it had the class of a ballet dancer in crystal slippers. Percy Heath was king.

"Streets of New York"

Review by Dave Moore

Opening night of the Streets of New York signaled green-light going for the third season of University Theater. The melodramatic plot thickens with villainous deeds and heroic gallantry as both cast and production crews do justice to playwright Dion Moucicault's genius.

Director Cosmo Catalano guided his cast of speech and drama students through their sentimental 19th century roles. The company's sincere character portrayals were evidenced in the good fun with which a predominately faculty audience hissed and cheered the stage characters themselves. Unneeded was complimentary applause for just a good acting try.

Villainous Gideon Bloodgood, played by graduate student Ken Bordner, is honestly hated throughout the entire play as he mercilessly swindles and forecloses the penniless of New York. Ken makes every perfectly nasty movement in perfect melodramatic character. The cry "curses, foiled again" is as humorous in "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl", one of the few well done entrance numbers, as is the love he avowes for his cold hearted daughter Alida (Frances Gasson).

There is little doubt that James Stockman has the talent as Badger, banker Bloodgood's bookkeeper and later deceived partner in crime, taking command of long speeches which might otherwise have bogged down the play.

Tom Kerrigan does a thoroughly delightful job as Mark Livingston, the good, upstanding hero who is finally forced to admit his financial ruin to keep in the graces of his poor New York friends. Tom's entrance routines are noticably strained in parts, the song and dance number "Oysters and Wine at 2

Variety Of Winter Sports Open To Women Students

Part One in a Series

By Anne Sherwin

The University offers women students a wide variety of sports: competitive, group and individual sports.

Dr. Coffee, heads the women's athletic department.

Basketball, field hockey, skiing and swimming are offered as extramural or intercollegiate competition. The women's athletic department is starting to organize for the winter intramural activities in which anyone interested in participating is welcome. This program offers swimming, volleyball, basketball and bowling. Students may see their dorm or sorority WAA representatives about joining.

EXTRAMURAL TEAMS are starting the year in good style. Miss Upton, advisor to the field hockey team, is proud of her team and with good reason. The first eleven won all its games except one.

At the Wellesley playday, Mary O'Toole and Julie Holm were named to the All-College first eleven team. Ann Mathieson was named All-College second team goalie and Pat Beaumont was given an honorable mention.

Mary O'Toole and Julie Holm were chosen to play for the New England hockey team first eleven at the New England U. S. A. Field Hockey Association trials. Over Thanksgiving, the New England team played at the national tournament at Philadelphia.

MISS ALICE STRUZINSKY is scheduling games for the basketball team. So far there are five: Keene State College, Jan. 9; Springfield College, Feb. 23, at Springfield, and March 4 at home; and Mount Holyoke, Feb. 18 here and March 18 at South Hadley.

Miss Struzinsky, the team's advisor, hopes to schedule three or four more games. The team started practice a couple of weeks ago and it is looking forward to a good season.

The Agony and Ecstasy

The Tangerine Bowl Game is over. The Redmen have lost to the Pirates of East Carolina by a single point. The game is history now and the outcome cannot be changed.

However, much post-bowl emotion still lingers on. Undoubtedly, there is a sense of frustration on the part of the University community for having the coveted prize slip away from their fingers by so slim a margin. There is a feeling by all of having prepared so long, worked so hard, and traveled so far, only to lose by so little.

Yet, there is a brighter side to the picture. Preparations for the bowl sparked a school spirit unsurpassed in UMass history. One needed only to look at all the tangerine tags on student clothing, at the numerous letters-to-the-editor in the Collegian, and at the countless smiling faces to see that the campus community was behind the Redmen Football Team all the way.

The team members did their best to live up to the loyalty shown them by their numerous supporters. They compiled an impressive score, and made the Pirates struggle for every yard they gained. Anyone who watched the game or listened to it on the radio is certain to agree that it was one of the most exciting and evenly matched games of the year. Even up to the very last minutes of the game, the final outcome was not certain.

Although the Redmen lost, they proved their ability to play fast, hard-hitting football, and gave an indication of their future potential. Moreover, the excellent performances of The Redmen Marching Band and The Flying Redmen reflected even further on the high quality of the University.

Perhaps the most heartening aspect of the whole affair is that by its participation in the bowl, the University has helped to raise money for the crippled children in the Florida area.

To everyone who has made the Tangerine Bowl possible congratulations for a job well done.

Poems by Maralee Davis

When passions, emotion, well up within in moments of great strain, deep thought and revelation, then for a certain kind of person, poetry is created. So it is for Maralee G. Davis, an articulate and sensitive person, who recently found her married life coldly ended in divorce after twenty-one years. The loneliness and self-appraisal she endured are subject for her first book of verse, "Soliloquy's Virgin" (Golden Quill Press) an attractively bound volume of sixty-four poems and four brief prose excerpts from her current writing.

According to the poet, the poems were written very late at night, after awakening with a need to relieve a tension, or express emotion. The poems seem to employ all devices, curiosities of language and images that could be seized and flung on paper in those intense moments of composition: "gentle zyphers", "Friendship—ambergris/(Oriental Topaz)". An overall impression of quick, intense verse is created by punctuation (the hyphen replacing most other grammatical puncutations), by quickly presented metaphors ("the cave of my mind", "The ivy of my emotions"), by loosely connected images.

The poems are not "polished", but seem, rather, to be left choppy and even flat (often in a last line or thought). With her struggle for expression and the rapid presentation of images a certain unfinished appearance has also crept into many of the poems. Archaisms, inversions of speech, and lines that tend to be "prosey", occasionally disturb the reader. But some of the poems only three short lines in length, are still highly communicative.

It is in this expression of intimate thought and feeling that "Soliloquy's Virgin" is worthwhile and enjoyable. Mrs. Davis's desire to communicate in verse (and in her prose selections which read like verse), is the desire to build and experiment in language. In this desire, in her ability to communicate, in her successful poems, there is satisfaction and fulfillment.

HOW ABOUT SOME SAND?

The Temperature has fallen below 32 degrees, and the first snowfall has already past. Nearly all the sidewalks around the University are covered with ice, and it looks as if they are going to stay that way for a long while. In the mean time, ankles are spraining, legs are breaking, and shins are scraping.

How long is this going to continue? Obviously, sanding all the University's sidewalks is no small job, but it is a very necessary one. Many people have already been hurt, and the winter has just started.

If time between classes were unlimited, then the problem would not be so extreme. But with only fifteen minutes, and the entire campus to cross in many instances, students can not take the time to avoid all the icy spots.

The only answer is for the Maintenance Dept. to sand or salt the walks around the University . . . immediately. There is no reason why these hazardous conditions must continue.

Letters To The Editor

DISTRIBUTION

To the Editor:

Our room, and I repeat room, has received only one copy of Caesura. I enjoy reading Caesura, and the attempts by my fellow students to produce works of literary worth. However, I am unsatisifed with the distribution of the magazine.

According to the 1964-65 Handbook I pay a Student Activities Tax of $20.00, part of which goes to support Caesura's $3,768.50 operating fund. As I am paying for your-our-Caesura, I would like a copy of it. One copy for every person who pays his Student Tax.

If Caesura is unable to provide enough copies for each student, then I suggest that magazine not be printed. I can see nothing worse than providing a magazine for half the Student Body. How do you expect any response from interested students if you do not provide everyone with a copy of your product?

Last year a similar event occurred when insufficent copies of Yahoo were prepared for the dorms. Again this year, another source of Campus information has decided that, since every student visits the Union on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, a majority of the papers printed will be left at the Union for the students to pick up a copy themselves. I pity the poor student who does not "HATCH IT," and who cannot get his copy of "A Free and Responsible Press." Dorm copies are insufficient to meet the demand.

Please remember that, as every student pays for the cost of your magazine or paper, every student is entitled to receive a copy of said works.

— Infirmary —

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that some of the students on this campus do not fully appreciate the medical facilities in the University complex. I wish to set them straight.

I spent some three days in the Infirmary this week with an uncomfortable disease. But the stay was made more pleasant by the confidence that there were always qualified nurses and doctors near at hand. The wards are maintained neat as a pin and the food is more than acceptable. With all the minor injuries and diseases that pop up at the front desk just before a tough hour-exam, one might almost except the Infirmary to be closed down as a mockery and just a legal "cut". But when attention is needed, aid is near at hand.

In case this has not been made self-evident: My congratulations to Dr. Gage and his competent staff.

Ostentatious Fan Fare

To the Editor:

I refer to Mr. John J. Maginnis's letter of December 9, in which he states that the University football team and band presented "the image of an alive, alert, able University of Massachusetts." The purpose of this university is to educate. That we have hired a score of semi-professional athletes and maintained a conspicuous, brassy band does not mean that we are alive, alert and able as a university; such ostentatious fanfare is appropriate to a circus whose purpose is to entertain.

Mr. Maginnis's attitude, typical of much of the alumni, the administration and the student body, is largely responsible for our academic atrophy. Rather than dedicating ourselves to improving our intellects we are obsessed with peripheral activities such as the Tangerine Bowl, College Bowl and Winter Carnival.

I propose that the University of Massachusetts—alumni, administration, faculty and students—realize that whatever it has in frivolous trappings it lacks in educational seriousness, and that it devote itself to the latter end.

Stephen W. Smith '68

Editor's Note: As you have stated Mr. Smith, the purpose of this University is to educate. However, this education should include athletic and musical as well as academic. Our society is based on a variety of activities, on people knowing their field well, be it football or physics, and not on mere bookworms who would discriminate against other scopes of endeavor.

It is our opinion that the members of the Redmen Football Team and the Redmen Marching Band have a right to exhibit their talents just as you have a right to lock yourself in your room and pour over your books.

Twilight Zone

To the Editor,

How long, gentlemen, are we going to be subjected to living in a twilight zone of 11:59. We are, of course, referring to the clocks in the new School of Business (Administration Building which have been showing 11:59 (no more, no less) since their installation.

Of course, there are the bells. Yes, where are the bells? In such a life, so regimented by bells and clocks, the absence of either can completely shatter our existence.

So we ask, gentlemen, how much longer must we carry on in the face of such servere deprivation?

Amherst Lecturer Questions Use Of Controversial Drug

By Joe Sullivan

LSD: chemical vacation, psycho-thylidimide or genuine psychoanalytic tool?

This was the question posed by Dr. Haskell Coplin in a lecture on LSD at the Octagon building, Amherst College, last Thursday night.

LSD, more properly known as dysergic acid, was first brought to public attention with the 1963 expulsion of Drs. Alpert and Leary from Harvard College. These men, both teaching psychologists at Harvard, had continued to administer the drug to students despite repeated warnings from the College to desist.

Just exactly what this mysterious substance is, no one actually knows, according to Dr. Coplin.

"Despite some 1,100 articles published on the subject in medical books and journals," he said, "I think I may say that no scientificially sophisticated or valid research has yet been done."

SPEAKING OF THE ACTUAL EFFECTS of the drug, Dr. Coplin said, "LSD goes beyond the threshold of imagination, thus negating the ability of Western languages to effectively communicate the experience."

For this reason Dr. Coplin, who took the drug for experimental purposes while working with the Univ. of London, was unable to produce a narrative of his experiences while under the drug's influence. He did say that it affects the mental mechanisms which impose order on sensory perception.

"I THUS," he said, "EXPERIENCED GREEN SOUND."

It has been described by Aldous Huxley, perhaps the most articulate of its proponents, as "a ten hour journey into inner space."

Huxley also discussed LSD in a book called Doors to Perception, in which he said, "He who has entered that door [experienced the drug himself] will never be the same again."

"That," said Coplin, "has been my experience."

Noted Author Praises New Presentation

Sentiment and sensation in Streets of New York was emphasized by Helen Krich Chinoy, well known author and editor, who lectured on The Innovations of Dion Boucicault Thursday night in Bartlett Auditorium.

Mrs. Chinoy praised Boucicault's innovations as a playwright, actor, and director. She noted the advancement of melodrama by the playwright which gives realistic color to the play and portrays life as intense and exciting by means of daring techniques.

As an actor and director, Boucicault made his most significant innovations. Acting, according to Boucicault, is performing, not merely speaking.

Streets of New York, deals with social problems, mixing reality with incredibility, said Mrs. Chinoy, and it is a play which is full of creativity and vitality.

Professors Named For Committees

Two more UMass faculty-staff committees have been named to assist in planning operations for UMass-Boston, University President John W. Lederle announced today.

One, reporting to a previously established Boston branch curriculum committee, will work on general problems connected with setting up courses of study at UMass-Boston.

The other will act as an advisory board on developing a library for the Boston institution scheduled to open next fall.

Arthur R. Williams, associate professor of English, will head the general curriculum committee.

Other members of the committee include Lorraine D. Lavallee, assistant professor of mathematics; John H. Lilly, head of the department of entomology and plant pathology; Albert S. Anthony, professor of education, and Carl Dennler, Jr., associate professor of accounting.

University Librarian Hugh Montgomery has been appointed chairman of the library committee. Other committee members are Milton M. Gordon, professor of sociology; Harold W. Cary, professor of history, and George R. Richason, Jr., associate professor of chemistry.

U. Mass. Professor Dies En Route to Bowl Game

Dr. Charles S. Oliver, 61, died at his home last Friday afternoon. Dr. Oliver was professor of education and coordinator of graduate study at the School of Education.

A great follower of the Redmen's teams, Dr. Oliver was struck down by a heart attack while preparing to leave for the Tangerine Bowl. He had been bothered by heart trouble for some time.

Dr. Oliver came to the university in 1946 as an assistant professor. He was previously a teacher of science and principal of Dartmouth, Mass., high school.

Dr. Albert W. Purvis, dean of the School of Education, said that no action to replace Dr. Oliver will be taken for at least a month or two.

a.m." still being in rehearsal stages but his character portrayal is enjoyably done.

Charles Interland falls to put across the part of Captain Fairweather as he invests his ill-fated fortune with Bloodgood in the opening scene, but does better as he later demands it back in a frenzy, falling dead of apoplexy. Lucy (Carolyn Miller) has the heroine, and Mrs. Fairweather (Elizabeth Corea) compliment each other well in the comically tragic life-sacrificing scene, one less mouth to feed routine at No. 19½ Street.

Lawrence Wilker must be given much credit for his supporting role as Mr. Puffy. He can only be described as lovably captivating as he pushes his hot chestnut wagon around the stage in "When It's All Goin' Out, and Nothin' Comin' In".

Cigar puffin', piano banging accompanist Bruce Macombe is a definite asset to the show, playing an off-key "Ragtime" in typical 1900 tradition.

If the Streets of New York company needed any incentive to put their all into the production it was certainly provided by Dale Almund's artistry in set design and painting. Staging in general was first rate, with the effects of snow falling past the dim glow of street lamps causing chills even off-stage, and the use of fire in windows of a burning building scene being no less than frightening.

Dr. Musgrave Affirms Freedom Of Student Press

By Terry Stock

"Freedom of the student press is a measure of the maturity of the institution at which it is published," Dr. Arthur Musgrave, head of the UMass journalism department, said Wednesday.

In an interview with the Collegian, Dr. Musgrave pointed out that "Human progress depends on the contest of ideas."

A controlled paper is a tame paper, he noted, but it can be a good one.

"Responsibility is the main point", he stressed, "and responsibility is the result of freedom."

Dr. Musgrave pointed out that responsibility means "accountability". A campus newspaper, he said, should be accountable to the reader first.

"The reader is entitled to the facts and the paper has the responsibility to present the facts."

The paper has, he continued, a responsibility to the institution as well. It should encourage higher education, but it should not become an arm of the administration.

"Errors in a student newspaper are tremendously unimportant," he said, "because although people are critical, they believe in democracy, free student press, and the growth intellectually of students.

"A censored paper would present a poorer image than mistakes in a free paper," he said.

Dr. Musgrave concluded, "A paper has the right to take a stand, but it should present both sides of an issue. What people learn from a student press are its reasons for being free."

"Students realize how a mistake glares out of an otherwise correct page, especially when it is their own. They are chastised by their own mistakes and the criticism of their peers. This criticism may be more effective than the harsh words of any number of teachers," he said.

DODGE DIVISION CHRYSLER MOTORS CORPORATION

Got a second? Lend an ear. Dodge's all new, hot new Coronet 500 has got an awful lot going for it (besides your girl). For instance: buckets and backup lights, full carpeting and a console, spinners and a padded dash—all standard equipment. More? Much! Like an engine lineup that would make any car squeal for joy: 273, 318, 361, 383 or 426 cubic inches. Like a lean and hungry look. And like a low, low price tag—Coronet costs less than any full-size Dodge in years. Ski The Charleston

If you want to improve your skiing versatility this winter, do the "Charleston" on a snowy hill, advises the current issue of Ski magazine, just released.

Introduced in the magazine by Art Furrer, a leading Swiss Ski instructor, the "Charleston" is an exercise designed to get the skier accustomed to balancing on foot. Here's how to ski the "Charleston":

Choose a gentle hill. Start down the fall line and, without shifting the central position of the body between the skis, jump rhythmically from one ski to the other. At the same time, swing the tail of the unweighted ski out, so that it forms an angle to the ski in the snow. The pole on the unweighted side may be used to help this maneuver, the magazine says.

The quicker the change can be made, the better. The skier coming down the slope should look as if he is kicking up his heels in the "Charleston" dance step.

Medium Stiff Ski Boots Best Bet For Most Skiers

How stiff should your ski boots be?

Generally speaking, they should be medium stiff, according to the current issue of Ski magazine, just released.

"A stiff boot must fit absolutely right the first time. This is why, unless the skier is prepared to buy a custom boot or spend a great deal of time finding just the right ready-made boot, he is better off with a boot that is medium stiff at most," reports he magazine.

"Ideally, a boot should be quite stiff at the bottom and lower sides and semi-stiff, but quite strong, over the instep. The front portion of the uppers, around the shins, should be adequately hinged," Ski says.

How should you go about choosing ski boots?

"One of the first rules for a prospective boot buyer is not to rush," the magazine states. "Boots are more important than skis. Work with the retailer, talk things over. If your feet are thin and long-toed, or particularly short-toed, one manufacturer's boot may be better for you than another. Possibly the retailer may not have the width you need. If not, wait. Rent boots or make do with your old ones until you get the proper fit . . . It is definitely worth experimenting to find out who has the boot closest to your type of foot . . ."

An adequate ski boot should function as follows, says Ski:

1. The boot must surround snugly not only the bottom of the foot but the instep and the ankle, and particularly the back of the heel.

2. The sides of the boot must help your foot resist the lateral and vertical twisting forces that are focused on it.

3. The boot should keep your feet warm in zero weather.

4. The boot should allow your foot to "breathe" so that moisture does not build up inside.

"Cheating Rampant In Baseball"

"Cheating is rampant in baseball," according to an article by sportswriter Maury Allen in the current issue of Sport magazine. "Cheating has become as much a part of the game as the bat, the ball, and the glove," he says.

According to Allen, the biggest cheaters in baseball are the pitchers. Many of them throw the spitball for their "out" pitch, while others ignore the pitching rubber and throw from nearly a foot closer to the plate, making their "59-foot fastball" a tough, but illegal strikeout pitch.

"Infielders, too, are expert in the cheating department," says Allen. "Often, the shortstop and second baseman either will have not received the ball or have already relayed it to first, while tagging second in a bogus double-play attempt. At other times, they never touch the bag at all, but merely straddle it while making the pivot and throw. And some weak-armed second baseman," adds the author, "actually take the throw up the line toward first to cut the distance of their own relays."

The first baseman has his own method of cheating. He either comes two or three feet off the bag and into the infield to take the throw sooner, or slaps his glove with his hand to fool the umpire who prefers to watch the footwork and listen for the sound of the arrival of the ball.

"Even the outfielders 'cheat'," says the author, "though in their case, it's accidental. After scooping up a pop-fly on a bounce while attempting a diving catch, outfielders generally race toward the infield with the ball held high. The maneuver occasionally is convincing enough to influence the umpire to signal that the catch has been made and the batter is out.'

' Why all the cheating? "Because everybody does it and the umpires don't do much to discourage it," contends Allen.

So "cheating" will continue to be as much a part of the game as is the bat, the ball, and the glove, concludes the article in Sport magazine.

Packer Sub Better Than Hornung

Tom Moore is a better runner than Paul Hornung, according to an article about the Green Bay Packers' number one backfield replacement, in the current issue of Sport.

"Moore is a ripper with the speed and power to break tackles and the ability to catch the ball with anybody in the league," continues the article. "He can't throw the ball as well as Hornung on the half-back option, but he gets it there. Hornung, however, is a better blocker," concedes the story.

Last season, his fifth in professional football, Moore had his only opportunity to play regularly due to Hornung's suspension. Tom responded to the challenge by finishing eighth in the league in rushing with 658 yards gained, while posting a 5.0-yard per carry average, topping all runners in the top 15 but Jimmy Brown, who posted a league-leading 6.4-yard average.

One Packer rival views Moore as "a complete player, a slashing runner, a great receiver and a good team man. There isn't a team in the league which could not build an offense around him," he adds.

Considering Moore's obvious gifts and his acknowledged ability to perform as a regular elsewhere in the league, would he like to be traded?

"Not as long as the coach views me as a valuable property," says Tom.

Says coach Vince Lombardi of his backup star, "Tom Moore is one of the outstanding backs in the National Football League. He's dependable and a man who can get the job done."

Since Lombardi is also the Packer general manager and the man in charge of negotiating salaries, and since his opinion of a player is reflected in his paycheck, substitute halfback Tom Moore is happy to remain in Green Bay.

trapped and as the teams headed into the fourth quarter it was 13-6.

Early in the period, Swanson got off a beautiful 53 yard kick that Bob Ellis downed on the one yard line. Cline's passing got EC out of trouble here but they still had to punt. Whelchel hit DeRose on a 30 yard pass play to get the Redmen deep in Pirate territory.

Then came the play Fusia calls the turning point of the game. Whelchel dropped back and fired for Morin at the 10. The pass was a little high but Morin got a hand on it and deflected the ball. Dinky Mills picked it off to stop the last real good drive the Redmen had.

East Carolina then drove 91 yards for the deciding score with the key play a 67 yard pass to Dick Bass. The scoring sweep was to the weak side on the unbalanced line and no one even touched Cline as he crossed the goal line.

The Redmen handled the ball twice more, but never got beyond their own 37 despite a tactic that had Schroeder at quarterback and Whelchel at a halfback slot.

Part of the reason for the loss was the heat. At game time the temperature was 69, and this sapped the strength from UM while EC felt right at home.

Awards were made after the game to both teams. All the players received individual awards for participating from both the NCAA and the Tangerine Bowl. Bill Cline, who completed 8 of 16 passes for 178 yards and ran for 39 more, was rewarded with the outstanding player award. A sportsmanship award given to the best of the losers went to Ken Palm who played one of his best games of the year.

Richardson was the leading rusher in the game with 69 yards. Mike Ross had 55 yards total. Whelchel completed 8 of 14 passes for 145 yards and ran for 35 more to almost equal Cline.

Palm had three catches for 84 yards to lead the Redmen while Dave Bumgarner had five catches for EC.

East Carolina, in its last year as a college level team, now holds the title of NCAA College Division Atlantic Coast Region Champion. For the Redmen, they have nothing to be ashamed of. They played a fine game but just did not get the big break when they needed it. UM finishes with an 8-2 mark while the Pirate are 9-1 on the year.

children's fund), and that the goodwill and creditable performance of the ballplayers reflects upon the University of Massachusetts in an admirable manner.

The halftime score read only 7-0, but UMass scored again in the third quarter, missing the temporarily inconsequential point after touchdown. It was assumed by almost everyone that the University was on its way to a splendid victory in its first bowl appearance.

Suddenly, the roof fell in on the Redmen as the Pirates of East Carolina came roaring back. While Alexander the fullback plunged up the middle, Bill Cline, the All-American tailback, fired accurate passes to his sure-handed receivers. Alexander bulled over from the two yard line and East Carolina was finally on the scoreboard. Midway through the final period, a Terry Swanson punt put the Pirates on their own one yard line. With the snap back from center, the Redmen line applied the pressure, but the tailback, Cline, hit his receiver at the 19 yard line. This still left the pirates deep in their own territory, with the Redmen leading 13-6, and only 10 minutes remaining in the game. Bill Cline proved more than capable of throwing the long bomb . . . one good for 67 yards, to the UMass 23.

Fusia and company never recovered from this play as the southerners moved on to another touchdown on a Cline end sweep, followed by a successful two point conversion play. With less than 8 minutes remaining, the Redmen fought desperatively to recover the previously apparent victory. But by this time, the Pirates had the psychological advantage which never relented. Whelchel was pressured from all sides, and the Redmen attack was stalled. Time ran out on the UMass eleven, and the Carolinians recorded another bowl victory.

Redmen Edged By East Carolina

Cline Stars As Pirates Surge In Second Half

including Coaches Karras and Delaney thought it was through the uprights. However, the officials saw it differently.

Both coaches had predicted a high scoring offensive game but while the accuracy of this prediction wasn't shown in the score, the game was one with long plays and plenty of action.

UMass showed early that it had the way to defense the single wing. The Redmen held the Pirates in check forcing them to punt, but Jerry Tolley intercepted a Whelchel pass and returned it to the UM12. The U-Mass team held on downs and got the ball back at the 3. Terry Swanson got off a 56 yard kick to get the team out of trouble.

EC got off a pretty fair drive that moved them down to the 29 where John Schroeder recovered a fumble. Then the University set off on a drive that set up their first score.

From the 29 they moved to the EC 12 where Phil DeRose fumbled over to the Pirates, but two plays later, Dave Alexander returned the favor with Bob Gogick recovering. On the first play, Whelchel found Palm as Ken cut to the right for the score. The P.A.T. was good and the Redmen were on the scoreboard.

After receiving a punt late in the first half, the Pirates moved down field toward paydirt, but a fine interception by Palm wiped out the threat. The Redmen then lost a race with the clock. Whelchel carried for 9, Mike Ross got 10 more, and Whelchel passed to Morin for 11, but time ran out before the Redmen could get off another play.

Whelchel hit on 5 of 7 passes for 44 yards and ran for 33 more, while Mike Ross had 50 yards rushing to lead the Redmen.

The second half was a different story as the Pirates began to come to life. Even when the Redmen scored the TD they had to come out of deep trouble to do it.

The UMass team took the kickoff and moved to their own 49 before being set back by two penalties. Whelchel, however, then found Palm at the 23 as he threw a perfect strike into the wind. Ken broke loose from the last tackler and went all the way on a 61 yard play. The kick missed and it was 13-0 at the midpoint of the period.

East Carolina still was not very successful in breaking the UM defense, but late in the period set out on a 44 yard drive for the score. Cline carried for 23 yards, then George Richardson went over center for 11 on a fourth and six play. He next carried three yards for the score. A conversion pass was

Redmen Roundup

This was the first bowl game for the University and certainly not the last. A season which began in early September reached its culmination in the tropics of Florida. No one wanted this victory more than those individuals who practiced day after day for four long months, enduring the weather, the bumps and bruises, and the trials and tribulations of each Saturday afternoon. The past two seasons have produced the finest football squads that the University has ever assembled. We can be proud of their performance, one which symbolized not only the progress made in sports, but of the University as a whole. To the oddsmakers, this was an upset, to East Carolina, a fine come-from-behind victory, and to the Redmen, a disappointing loss. "So near and yet so far, describes the bitter taste of defeat. However, we must not forget that the game was played for a worthy cause (crippled

Fourth Victory

UMass Cagers Win Over Maine

By Alan Lebowitz
Associate Sports Editor

A highly surprising University of Massachusetts basketball team continued its unbeaten streal by downing the Maine Bears, 82-70. Charlie O'Rourke and Tim Edwards dominated the boards and grabbed in 65 rebounds, while Mike Meola and Clarence Hill hit from the outside. As usual the Redmen pressed their opponents and utilized the fast break to their own advantage.

High scorer for the Redmen was Charlie O'Rourke with 23 points, followed by Mike Meola with 16 and Tim Edwards and Clarence Hill with 13 points each.

MEOLA, the only sophomore starter, had been a standout in previous games through his defensive performances, especially in the Rhode Island game. In this contest, however, Mike opened up with his fine jump shot. Clarence Hill, playing in his accustomed manner, hit for a 13 point total, while alternating with co-captain Charlie Kingston.

MAINE, using a zone press, frustrated the Redmen at the beginning of the second half. The Black Bears overcame a nine point half-time deficit to gain a 54-53 lead with just over 10 minutes remaining. Paul Gullicksen clicked on a three point play and UMass was back in the lead. The Orrmen pulled away as O'Rourke, Meola and Hill delivered key hoops.

TUESDAY NIGHT, the Redmen meet the Huskies of U-Conn, a game that may determine the conference champion.

Pres. And Mrs. Lederle Extend Cordial Wishes For The Holiday

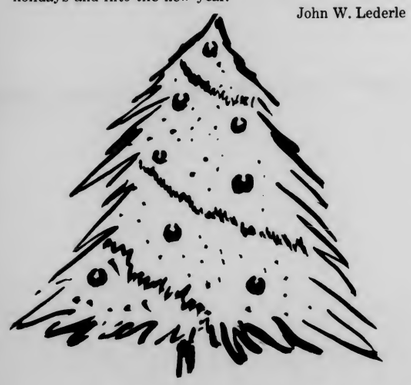
In an era of continuing crisis and unrest, we are fortunate to have an opportunity to pause and to direct ourselves to matters of the spirit and to a renewed hope for world peace.

As you leave for this vacation period, I urge you to place yourselves in relation to others in the world for whom there is no peace and little cause to hope. Let us give thought too, to our fellow Americans who must spend their "holiday season" in active defense of freedom on frontiers far from our own shores. And certainly let us give thought to those who have given their lives in that effort.

Those of us who begin this season in the warmth of our own homes should consider ourselves supremely privileged, and we should derive the full richness of this great festival season, giving it all the more meaning by pausing to reflect upon those who are less fortunate than we and hoping for their peace and renewal.

Mrs. Lederle joins me in wishing all of you the most cordial wishes for contentment and happiness during the holidays and into the new year.

John W. Lederle



From The Staff

Once again we are approaching the Holiday Season, a time of festivity and happiness. It is a time when most of us will be with our families, enjoying the celebrations that are part of the holidays.

With this season, we should also remember that a holiday is first a holy day. Let us take a moment out from the festivities and recall the reason for our celebration. Let us remember that this is the time of year to think of good will toward our fellow man. It is a time to evaluate ourselves and to try to find a means of reaching our goals.

We of the Collegian Staff take this opportunity to wish you all the sincerest Season's Greetings and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Chaplain's Christmas Words

Christmas has become a universal festival. At least by name, this day is now known to the entire human race. In one form or another Christmas has entered the social patterns of the followers of a variety of religious beliefs, and of many who profess no beliefs.

Christmas sometimes become a bit stuffy about the universal gaiety and festivities which now surround the twelve day season. Because we associate with it the Saviours Birth, we are tempted to stifle the good things which universality brings. We think in terms of the slogan "Put Christ back into Christmas!" I hope we do not really mean by this "Take the joy out of it!" Christ is never out of Christmas, or of any other event in which people find real joy. He is present wherever human aspirations are lifted by the warmth of human encounter.

Christian people believe with St. John that "No man has seen God at any time; but God's only Son, He who is nearest the Father's heart, he has made Him known." We believe that the longing we know for human peace and unity is fully met in relationship with Christ the Light. When Christians are faithful to Christ they are also able to recognize the bond of unity which is present among all men of good will. In this unity we have common cause with all who search for truth and an end of human idolation and aloneness.

So we as Christians say heartily to all:

May you find in this season every good gift of Joy and Peace, through the Father of Light, made known in Jesus Christ!" Or, as we generally say it: "A Merry Christmas to one and All.' "

The Reverend John L. Scott
Protestant Chaplain

At this time of the year we find an attitude on the part of people and the atmosphere in which we live so different. Everyone and everything—it is all thoroughly refreshing. Without any question it is the happiest time of the year.

The reason behind it all? It is the anniversity of the birth of the Son of God. Truly then we have good reason to rejoice and be happy. We have reason to do for others even as He has done for us. And in this we shall find our happiness.

Yes, Christmas is indeed a day in the Christian world that is truly meaningful. However, after a bit of reflection we must agree that everyday can and should be Christmas. The lessons Christ brought into the world were not intended for a particular season but for our daily living. With love of God and neighbor as our motivating force we can carry out His directions, we can live constantly in imitation of Him. Rest assured it is this that gives life true meaning and man true happiess.

May the Infant King inspire and help us to appreciate more fully the Christmas message. May He strengthen us to have the courage to accept His will and to be faithful to it in all things, at all times. This is our prayerful wish for our students, faculty, staff and their loved ones. To everyone we say—a Happy and Blessed Christmas.

Monsignor Power

It hath been told thee, O man, what is good,
And what the Lord doth require of thee:
Only to do justly, and to love mercy,
And to walk humbly with the God.

Micah 6:8

Chanukah, perhaps more than any other holiday in the Jewish calendar, emphasizes the ideal of religious freedom. Originating in the successful defense of Judaism against the onslaught of Syrio-Greek paganism, the observance of Chanukah through the ages has been the occasion for a yearly affirmation of Jewish devotion to freedom of religion, not only for ourselves as Jews, but for all men.

This year we again make that affirmation. As we look forward with our Christian friends, towards the observance of respective holidays, may the freedom in which we do so continue to flourish, that we may be enabled to enrich our lives with the religion of our choice, in devotion of God and in service to our fellow men.

Foreign Students Here:

Open Hearths—Open Hearts

By Ilana Motyka

As the Christmas season draws near, most students need look no further than the dimensions of the ride board for transportation home.

But for 257 students, trips to more than 40 countries are not possible at Christmas time.

Some of the international students will holiday in New York City and Washington, D. C., with friends or relatives.

FOREIGN STUDENTS who would like to spend Christmas with American families should contact their advisor, Mrs. Evelyn Russell, in Machmer Hall. She is happy to fill requests from interested parties, and knows of several groups in Amherst that perform a similar service. Each year at this time, the South Amherst Congregational Church arranges visits with local families.

Several international students will journey to Vermont for a week of skiing when school closes. Other group activities included an International Club Christmas party last Saturday in Bowditch Lodge.

Although Christmas is not a part of each international student's culture; many of them mention festive days which often begin a new year.

INDIAN STUDENTS recently celebrated Diwali, the Festival of Light, which symbolizes the expelling of evil. Kenya Republic Day, which can be compared to the Fourth of July, was observed Saturday by several African students.

The Christian international students are familiar with Christmas customs such as family reunions, church attendance, the decorated tree and the exchange of gifts. Indeed, gift-giving seems to be a characteristic feature of international holidays which parallel the significance of Christmas and Chanukah in this country.

IN EGYPT, where the non-Arabic population of Greek Orthodox and Catholics, Armenian Orthodox and Egyptian Christians observe three different dates for Christmas, a compromise is reached by exchanging gifts among friends on New Year's Eve.

Eighty-two students from Taiwan form the largest single national grouping on campus. The Christians among them emphasize the religious aspects of Christmas, which is not a legal holiday on Taiwan and their Christmas customs have been adapted from western practices.

American holiday habits are of northern European origin, the most well-known probably being the transformation of Saint Nicholas into Santa Claus.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB PRESIDENT DONALD MOORE has observed that for many of the foreign students, this will be their first American Christmas, and they are looking forward to it with enthusiasm.

Students from warm places like the Philippines and other Asian and African countries, who are in the majority among foreign students, have found special excitement in a sight all too familiar to the American: snow.

Holiday On Campus

Strange, the silence stretching
'cross the land;
Chapel to college pond, to dormitories,
Empty now.
Few the lights, ideas in the nights,
Lighting the book,
Or the beer.
Where?
"Home."
A church, familiar faces, new places.
Old sounds unto the night,
Unheard, but known—unknown;
And why?
A sky;
Dark, but light with promise:
A message, "on campus".
The blue station wagon ambles back forth; up, down—
Seeing few, hearing little; dreary in the void.
Intense, but empty now, in the greatest hour;
With none who ought,
To hear.
"on campus".

Taiwan Yule Very Similar

By Debbie Kaiman

"The celebration of Christmas in Taiwan is really very much like the Christmas celebration in the United States," agreed May Huang and Grace Yang, two students at the University.

May and Grace are both on student visas to study here, from Taiwan (Formosa) a Nationalist Chinese island. May was graduated from Taiwan Normal University, which is similar to a U. S. teacher's college. She is studying home economics education here. Grace was graduated from Tam Kang College, and is here studying chemistry.

When asked about Christmas in Taiwan, May said, "I will tell you about the celebration in the church, and then about our family celebration." She said that one week before Christmas there are church services of Christmas music. The Sunday school presents a pageant of the Christmas story.

There is a Christmas Eve service, followed by a reception at which tea and cookies are served. After the reception the choir goes caroling at the homes of the church members. May explained,"It is not just the choir who sing the Christmas songs; after they have sung one, the family sings one to them."

There are Christmas trees in the homes in Taiwan, but there is no Santa Claus. Evergreen trees are used as they are in this country. They are decorated with colored bulbs, stars and cotton which represents snow, "since there is no snow in Taiwan, many Chinese children have never seen snow except on the hills."

On Christmas Eve the family's gifts are placed under the tree. "The children stay up to open the gifts at midnight," said May, "but the parents persuade them to wait until morning."

On Christmas Day, a special Christmas dinner is served. Many of the families ask students from the University, who are away from home, to come and have Christmas dinner with them.

May said, "We spend Christmas day playing games and telling stories to the children." The day is ended with the singing of Christmas carols, just as it is ended in many homes in this country.

S.U. Trims A Limb

By Ethel Kaplan

T'was weeks before Christmas and all through the Union students were scurrying to decorate the building at the annual Trim-a-Limb.

The small trees were placed in the Cape Cod, the Colonial and the Governor's Lounge in hopes that the S. U. Program Council would be there to decorate with assistance from their committees.

In the ballroom and the lobby the larger trees were set to awaits the arrival of passerbys to string some popcorn and hang some lights.

As the finishing touches were added Christmas music was piped throughout the building and students drank hot chocolate by the fireside.

Later in the week, students sprang from their residence halls with quite a clatter to pick up their dates for the annual Christmas dance.

Traditional as the dance is, girls were late and danced from 9 to 12 rather than from 8.

Bobby Kaye's orchestra entertained the couples in the gaily decorated S.U. ballroom.

At midnight girls were rushed to their dorms and ran in quickly to hear only their counselors saying "You're not late," and to all a "Good Night".

In Dorms: Fun, Frolic

By Alan Weinberg

The new dorms in Orchard Hill took the lead in officially opening the Christmas season by hosting a snowball fight with all comers on Dec. 5. The climax of the evening was the ceremonious smashing of the winter's first window, kindly donated by Eugene Field. The gentlemen of Webster served refreshments to the crowd by dumping water from the top floor of the dorm.

On the next night, the girls of Dickinson and Field sang carols from their balconies, while Webster and Grayson exchanged Christmas pleasantries in the quad below. No injuries were reported.

Throughout the dorms, Christmas parties, trim-a-limbs, open houses and social events ranging from mixers to dinner-dances were conducted. The sounds of caroling have been heard around the campus and the town this past week from spontaneous groups of students as well as from organized parties of carolers such as that sponsored by the Scrolls of Mary Lyons.

Most of the women's dorms have a system of Secret Santas, in which each girl sends another girl three or four anonymous little gifts, and reveals herself as the sender after the last gift. Emily Dickinson, however, has a slightly different system. It sends its gifts to Webster. Webster's janitor received a letter from the North Pole warning him not to make the same mistake that Chadbourne's man did last Christmas when that dorm was receiving gifts from Van Meter. He mistook the last shipment of presents for junk and burned them.

Some other dorm activities for Christmas included a shipment of toys for the children at Belchertown State school from Chadbourne and a sale of Christmas cards in Knowlton to help support a Korean orphanage.

In Stores: Cards, Gifts

By Howie Davis

Thousands of Christmas cards and gifts were bought and mailed by students on the UMass campus during the past few weeks.

Winthrop Cummings, the manager of the University Store, increased his inventory to cope with the Christmas buying sprees of the students.

Piggy banks, stuffed animals, ashtrays and gimmicks were all bought in a greater quantity than usual. The greatest buying trends were in sweatshirts and beermugs.

For this Christmas season the store purchased 7500 cards varying from the traditional to contemporary. An additional function the store performed was the gift wrapping and preparation for mailing of packages.

The University Post Office, in Draper Hall, handles no appreciable increase of mail during the Christmas season. Reasons such as the early vacation and regulations forbidding personal greetings to be sent by the faculty and administration have been cited.

Ordinarily the campus mail service handles 3000-3500 pieces of mail each day. This figure will remain stable or even drop a bit as the students evacuate the campus between December 19 and January 4.

For Club: Rosary Rite

By Maureen Gamache

The Newman Club at the University annually fills the last weekend on campus before Christmas vacation with traditional activities.

To create the proper festive setting, a "trim-a-limb" party is held on Friday evening. With a fire crackling in the fireplace and the sound of familiar Christmas carols everywhere, the students string popcorn and cranberries to put on the tree in the lounge of the Newman Center.

A party is held in Springfield for the underprivileged children of the area. Each child receives a gift donated by the students of the University.

The Newman club choir presents its annual Christmas concert on Sunday evening in the chapel of the Center.

This year the concert, directed by Gilles A. Hebert, included a musical program with a narrative of the Nativity. The choir also sang selections from Handel's Messiah.

The climax of the weekend is Sunday night, when a Living Rosary can be seen surrounding the campus pond. Rt. Rev. David J. Power leads about 150 students who assemble to take part in this impressive ceremony.

Greeks Play Saint Nick

By Linda Paul

At Christmas play and make good cheer,
For Christmas comes but once a year.

This verse describes the U-Mass Greek fraternities and sororities which are working to make Christmas more enjoyable for the underprivileged.

Christmas parties with gifts from Santa, games and refreshments were given for different groups of patients from Belchertown State Hospital through the combined effort of six houses—Alpha Chi Omega and Beta Kappa Phi, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Zeta Nu, and Sigma Kappa with Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Area underprivileged children were also feted at parties by six houses. Chi Omega and Kappa Sigma entertained welfare children and orphans from Holyoke; and both Kappa Alpha Theta with Alpha Epsilon Pi and Sigma Delta Tau with Lambda Chi Alpha showed cartoons and gave gifts to welfare children from Amherst. Springfield orphans were treated at a party by Pi Beta Phi and Phi Mu Delta.

Special projects were undertaken by several houses. Chi Omega and Tau Epsilon Phi sponsored the Statesmen at a party for professors' and married students' children early in the month. Sigma Delta Tau contributed five quilts and children's toys to the Amherst welfare board, and Sigma Sigma Sigma prepared a food basket for a needy Amherst family, supplying them with a complete Christmas dinner plus toys for the children.

Caroling has also been done by several houses. Alpha Chi Omega went to Belchertown State School to sing, and Lambda Delta Phi entertained patients at an Amherst nursing home as part of its philanthropic project of a certain number of girls doing volunteer work there every week.

Thus the Greeks strove to spread good cheer,
At this special giving time of year.

Christmas In Sweden

Around The World

Yuletide Spirit

Washington, D. C. (ED)—Christmas is celebrated many ways, but how it's done depends on where you are.

Sweden, Mexico, the Netherlands, Spain, Denmark, France—wherever you go in the world—you will find that each country has its own Christmas traditions.

IN BETHLEHEM, the birthplace of Christ, the streets are filled on Christmas Eve with thousands of devout pilgrims, representing the many faiths, who journey there to worship. Back and forth they pass in processionals, holding candles and singing, as they visit sacred crypts, grottos and churches.

That evening a special mass is held in the Church of the Nativity, believed to be the oldest Christian sanctuary in the world. At midnight, church bells ring for miles around calling the celebrants to assemble at Shepherd's Field to sing hymns.

IN SWEDEN, Christmas is celebrated in a different way. Here the Yuletide officially begins on December 13, St. Lucia's Day. Everyone goes outside, carrying lights and singing carols door to door. The ancients believed this day the darkest of the year. Thus man-made brightness is used to dispel the "spirits of darkness."

IN DENMARK, Christmas is celebrated—not on December 25—but on Christmas Eve. Late that afternoon, all work ceases, church bells peal, and people flock to the churches that have been festively lighted and decorated with fragrant green pines.

In neighboring Norway, Christmas is celebrated still another way. Here, besides the traditional customs, animals are given extra rations since they witnessed the birth of Christ. Also, peasants attach large bundles of oats to sticks and put them on roofs to chase away evil spirits. The theory is that the green roofs and crops are effective helpers against the "evil one."

IN THE UNITED STATES, Christmas is also celebrated in many ways. Sending greeting cards to friends and loved ones at this time of year has become a tradition.

One widely-used card has special meaning. It is sent by Lutheran ministers over the nation to their church members in military service far from home. For the past eleven years the practice has been carried on with more than 800,000 of the uniquely designed Christmas cards sent out.

This year, according to the National Lutheran Council, more than 70,000 of these Christmas cards will be mailed.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER IN MEXICO, religious-social celebrations called Posadas are familiar throughout the country. "Posada" means lodging or shelter in Spanish. However, "Posadas" now is the collective term given in Mexico to the nine days of celebration with which Mexicans commemorate Joseph and Mary's difficult journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem.

Across the Atlantic in Spain, Christmas ceremonies begin early in December. Here the religious focal point is the "Belenes" or "Nacimientos" — the nativity scene—which holds a place of honor in every home. Weeks before, street vendors sell clay, wood and cardboard figures representing the Holy Family, shepherds and animals in the manger. Then each family goes to work to make its nativity scene as beautiful and traditional as possible.

IN FRANCE, Christmas is celebrated by religious processionals, steeped in tradition, and attended by people from all over the world.

At Baux, for example, a centuries-old ceremony is repeated each Christmas Eve. A shepherd brings into the ancient St. Vincent's church a new-born lamb that is placed in a grotto where the figure of the Infant Jesus lies in a creche.

In the Netherlands, the Christmas celebration centers around the home. After attending church services on Christmas Eve, the family returns home, enjoys a traditional dinner, then sits around the tree re-telling stories of Christmas in an atmosphere of peace and happiness.

IN NEARBY SWITZERLAND, in some provinces the children await the arrival of the Christ Kindl—the little Christ child, always depicted in white, carrying a magic wand, and wearing a shining crown.

Polish "Star-boys" roam the countryside on Christmas day portraying the wise men of the East and performing the drama of the Nativity.

IN ENGLAND, many Christmas traditions go back to ancient times. At Dewsbury in Yorkshire, Christmas Eve is the time for the unusual customs of "Tolling the Devil's Knell." Performed for more than 700 years, this involves tolling the bells of the local church—this year 1,964 times—the Devil supposedly perishing on the final stroke.

T'was the Night . . .

By Joe Sullivan

'Twas the night before Christmas and all thru the frats,
No creature was stirring, not even a rat.
Our mugs were all hung from the bars with a prayer
That St. Nick the Greek soon would be there.
My roommate and I had just hit our racks,
Lying there blowing Zzzz's flat on our backs,
When out in the fratyard arose such a clatter
We both hit the deck to see what was the matter.
We ran to the window, was it the dean?
No, big Nick the Greek had just made the scene!
He wore dungarees and an old army jacket,
Grey socks, a blue shirt and we all knew his racket.
He had a long white beard, and a belly so gran',
You could see with one eye he was a cool frat man.
He had a cool fratsleigh (a '48 Olds)
The floor and the windows were all full of holes;
It had no interior; the brakes were inferior;
The engine was shot and the body had rot.
It ground to a halt and Santa got out,
The Greeks had all seen him and all gave a shout.
We all gathered 'round him, we all sung his praise
But Santa just stood there—he seemed in a daze.
"Please can you tell me," he said with a smile,
"The way to the dorms, for I've come a long mile.
Please don't delay me, I must be there and gone
For I've a long, long way to go before dawn."
We told him the way, and he was gone with a grin,
But just as he left, he flashed us his pin.
Everyone moaned as Nick clattered away,
There would be no joy in fratland that day,
For we all realized with a tear in our eye,
That jolly St. Nick was a G.D.I.

Santa's Season

YES!

By Charlotte Langone

Because Christmas lights appear on Thanksgiving day, and retail stores begin advertising for shopping in mid-November, some people complain that Christmas is to commercialized. But is it?

Perhaps, we do listen to Christmas music in the downtown stores and in the home for a few weeks and hear the radio advertise over and over again the "present for the girl who has everything." Maybe we do not want the department store counters filled with Santa's presents and tree decor for such a long time. But what if goods appeared later? Chances are that complaints would run high.

IN THE FIRST PLACE about 40% of annual retail business is done during the Christmas Season. Many jobs would be lost if the season were shortened and the stores ignored the commercial aspect of Christmas. Not only would the Yuletide season itself suffer, but the effects of less business would show through during the entire year.

With a short Christmas campaign would come later buying trends and the confusion of all the late shoppers would be too much for most of us to bear. Right behind later buying trends would follow later mailing—and the post office has enough trouble now. The number of cards and presents delivered late would be unbelievable.

And the children—who can't be forgotten in any discussion of the grand old season—how would this affect them? From the first time they hear Santa's name, they look forward to Christmas. The lights and music bring excitement and anticipation for the day to arrive. So spirit mounts—and stores advertise—and yet some people complain that Christmas is too commercialized.

The real meaning of Christmas—is it lost? Do we forget the birth of Jesus Christ—and the love his birth stands for?

THE ANSWER IS NO, because love and happiness can be seen when children loow with a smile at the amazing sights they see during Christmas. The love is heard when the words "Merry Christmas" are uttered. At no other time of the year are people so caught up in the happiness of the wonderful world that surrounds them.

Too commercialized? How can a season with so much meaning be advertised too much? How can a nation as great as ours put too much emphasis on the gifts we have to offer in celebrating the birth of a Lord?

Perhaps, we should be thankful that so much opportunity and prosperity surround us, enabling people to buy as they do. The so-called "commercialized Christmas" is exterior evidence of our wealth for which in the heart we should feel thanks to the One who made it all possible. Then, we as a nation can give thanks and know the real meaning of Christmas.

Businessman's Boom?

NO!

It's Hard To Think of:

By Tom Henderson

Christmas without Santa endorsing every product on the market from thermal underwear to blintzes.

Christmas without seeing Dickens' "Christmas Carol" by at least five different casts and realizing after watching Frederic March's portrayal of Scrooge that the other four didn't really count.

Christmas free from "just to keep the rust-off" readings, research, projects, reports and exam cramming.

Christmas in Mississippi or Stanleyville.

Christmas without hearing "The Chipmunk Song," "Jingle Bell Rock," "Green Christmas," and "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer," an ad nauseum number of times.

Christmas without plenty of egg-nog to wash away the taste of all that stamp glue.

Christmas without a real honest-to-goodness, genuine, 100 per cent green and aromatic fir tree.

Christmas without the fascination of watching "The Wizard of Oz" and electric trains.

Christmas when there wasn't any of those humbug one-day-wonder editorials on the nasty evils of over-commercialization.

Christmas when there was peace on earth and good will toward all men.

By Peter Hendrickson

To the tune of "Greensleeves"

What child is this that's laid to rest
On a phony beard and pillowed breast?
His beady eyes doth spy afar
The magic glint of a six dollar star.

Hark! Hark! the dollar sign
Your cash in hand will soon be mine.
Christmas comes but once a year
Make the most of a dollar's cheer.

The train is $14.98
The trucks are $6, the bombs are $8.
Lay-a-way plans can work all year
So grab your toys while spring is here.

Ring! Ring! I hear the bell
The cash drawer pops, we're doing well.
Pick 'em bare and rob 'em blind
No visions of Christmas are in their mind.

There is an underground current of anti-commercialism that is surging through the streets and blacking out the light and gaity that is Christmas 1964.

The brilliant lights of Northampton, put up for the festivities of Thanksgiving, are also being used for Christmas this year in an economy drive by the city. But the darkness descends; those merchants who did not choose to contribute to the Christmas light fund have had the lights unscrewed in front of their establishments.

This surge of anti-commercialism is endangering the economy.

Imagine what could happen if we started preparing for Christmas as late as Halloween.

Printers would have the bottom knocked out of the "Keep Christ in Christmas" car stickers. Madison Ave. (some claim they created Christmas) would lose the majority of their yule accounts. Periodical special holiday subscription rates, religious knick-knack shops and overstocked department stores would never be able to move their "specials."

The children would suffer. Thousands of tots to whom Christmas means a coup in the gift department would find that they have been disillusioned.

Could they bear the shock of discovering the religious spirit of the holiday? Could they translate the joy of milking their parents' last dollar of credit to the joy of discovering that, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a King is given?"

Finally there is one dorm kept open for the women and one for the men over the holidays. The specific dorm is decided upon by the Dean of Women and Dean of Men, respectfully. At both dorms, the Head of Residence is present on Christmas day.

Some Must Labor On Christmas Day

By John Cushing

At least a dozen people here at the University must work Christmas day, according to Police Sergeant Daniel Schwartz.

These include skeleton crews in the police force and the College of Agriculture. There is at least one policeman and possibly two on the job 24 hours a day patrolling the campus. The student telephone operator takes any phone calls for the police, though, as there is no one at the police station.

The College of Agriculture must have a skeleton crew on hand to feed and take care of the animals.

Also on the job, states Sergeant Schwartz, are the night watchmen with a "minimum complement of five men" and the full crew at the campus power plant.

We also find some people on call. These are the doctors and nurses at the infirmary, the maintenance crews, and the resident janitors, especially at the family houses, namely Suffolk and Hampshire and the Lincoln and University Apartments.

In the cases of the doctors and nurses and the maintenance crews, it is the responsibility of the police to call them if they are needed. Maintenance gives the police a roster telling them the names of all those on call. They call one man, who in turn calls the rest of the crew in. Situations that might require this action would be electrical or plumbing failures of a snow storm exceeding two inches accumulation.

Promise Her Anything, But Give Her . . .

By Anne Sherwin

Are you in a quandary as to what gift you should give to the girl or guy you've been dating the past few months? Or is it a serious question of what to give to your one and only?

Giving a gift which will be sincerely appreciated will make Christmas merrier and perhaps a list of possible gifts will make shopping trips shorter and more enjoyable.

Men—take heed! These gifts are the result of asking twenty-five girls what they would most like to receive.

From a Casual Date
$5 and under (we don't expect casual date to go hog wild; as a matter of fact it's kind of embarrassing):

Perfume or cologne (be original), record albums, a wallet or key case, a beer mug or other souvenir, a book (such as a "happiness" book), and candy or flowers are always appropriate.

From a Steady Beau
(who's broke)
$5 and under:

A stuffed animal, a wool or a silk scarf, a charm, a bracelet, a pin, earrings, or perfume.

From a Steady Boy
$10 to $25

Perfume, a sweater, kid or some other leather gloves, a silver bracelet, a cigarette case and lighter, a mohair scarf.

From a Very Steady Guy
$10 to $25

A ring (possibly pearl), a scarab bracelet, or pin, a locket (put your picture and an inscription in it), a wrist watch, a piece of luggage, a cashmere sweater, a ski parka, or most anything in the jewelry line.

From Those to Whom Money Is No Limit:

A night out on the town, Boston or New York including dinner and a show, a weekend in New York, a ski weekend, a string of cultured pearls, a record player, a hope chest, silver or china, ski equipment, and of course a fraternity pin or a diamond is usually acceptable.

Of course girls aren't the only ones who enjoy getting what they want. Boys have some definite ideas as to what is a good gift. Twenty-five boys had many suggestions to make.

From a Casual Date
$5 and under:

An album is always a safe bet, a beer mug or other souvenir, aftershave lotion, a shaving set, a lighter,a pipe, a scarf.

From a Steady Girl
(also broke)
$5 and under:

The same gifts as mentioned above, also a tie tack, or a fraternity recognition pin.

From a Steady Girl
$5 and $10

A shirt, ski poles, leather gloves, an ID bracelet, ski mitts, a wallet, a key case, a flask, a fifth of Seagram's V.O., a dress scarf.

From a Very, Very Steady Girl
$10 to 25

A hunting scarf, a dress shirt, a sweater (hand-knit if you've talent), a picture of yourself, a ski parka, a transistor radio, a wrist watch, an electric razor.

The Sky's the Limit from the Girl Who's Loaded (definitely not a college girl):

A radio, a stereo set, a pair of skis, a sports jacket, a G. T. O., water skis, and any number of things that a man's consciousness of money kept them from naming.

The general feeling was to try and get something you feel they would enjoy and yet would consider too much of a luxury to buy for themselves. Also all of these people were asked what they would consider a good all-round gift suitable for either a boy or girl, those which seemed most popular were: sweaters, records (such as Peter Paul and Mary in Concert), and books (very popular are The Family of Man, The Profit and The Agony and the Ecstacy).

Perhaps you have gotten some ideas, now enjoy your shopping trip and have a very Merry Christmas.

Under The Mistletoe

Kissing Custom Ends Long Mistletoe Tradition

By Ginny Sheinhouse

None of the evergreens used in decorating the homes for Yuletide is richer in symbolism than the mistletoe, which means the shoot of a tree.

According to an old Celtic tradition, it was a tree until it furnished wood for the cross to which Christ was nailed. Thereafter, it was condemned to exist as a parasite, but superstitions and myths prevailed.

ONE SCANDINAVIAN MYTH is concerned with Balder, the Sun God, who was killed by a bow made of mistletoe wood. When Balder was born, his mother Frigg took an oath from every creature and plant that they would not harm her son, but she forgot the insignificant mistletoe. Balder was deemed invulnerable and remained unharmed until the evil god, Loki made an arrow from mistletoe and got Balder's blind brother, Hoth, to shoot the arrow. Loki aimed it for Hoth and Balder fell dead, pierced in the heart much to the grief of all the gods. However, by the strength of his mother's love, he was brought back to life.

The pearly berries of the plant symbolize Frigg's tears and the mistletoe became an emblem of love which is stronger than death. From that time, mistletoe was considered sacred.

JUST AS THE MISTLETOE, the oak trees were sacred to the ancient Druids. As a result, special veneration was given mistletoe growing on oak trees. To the Druids, the mistletoe worked miracles of healing, protected from witchcraft and promoted fertillty in fields and barnyards. Historians have even suggested that willy priests went so far as to transplant this miracle-working plant from apple-trees where it grew in abundance, to the less abundantly endowed but sacred oak tree.

Gaiety was inspired by the mistletoe then as now. In Druidical times, the cutting of this plant was accompanied with grand ceremony.

The only remaining suggestion of the happy benefits the mistletoe conferred is evident in the custom of kissing. At one time the plant and kissing were both part of the Christmas church services, but because of the romantic revelry they suggested, both were abandoned.

ALTHOUGH THE MISTLE-TOE disappeared from religious ceremonies, the kissing custom was preserved in the servants' halls and soon spread to upper regions of the homes. With each kiss, the young man plucked a berry of the plant hanging over his head.

Today, kissing under the mistletoe, symbolizing love as stronger than death is all that's left to the magical powers once attributed to the mistletoe. However, it shows no signs of dying out!

Red Stranger On Campus; Can He Escape Campol?

By Jack Eldridge

Is it possible that the campus police are involved in some strange episode? Speculation runs high as to the underlying motive behind Chief Alexander Blasko's tearing up a handful of parking tickets yesterday and shaking hands with a violator who rode off laughing, "Ho! Ho!"

Eyewitnesses related with disbelief incriminating phrases allegedly whispered by Chief Blasko to his men as they were leaving the scene. Among these were such as "big time spender", "large gifts", "reconnoitering" and "moonlighting". As rumors rampage over the campus, Chief Blasko informed the press that he and his men are unavailable for comment.

Since the police have erected this ominous wall of silence, reporters were sent to investigate the actions of the mysterious stranger.

After much diligent searching, a few pieces of this strange puzzle were collected and they succeeded only in darkening the picture.

THE FIRST REPORT came from Freshman Elmer P. Schlunk III, who lives in Baker Dormitory Schlunk states that he saw a hulking stranger dressed in a large red cape, which covered him from head to foot, lurking around the dorms.

As Schlunk walked past this man, he overheard him muttering about the lack of chimneys and the steep slopes on the roofs of the dorms as he stroked a long white beard. Schlunk politely asked the stranger if he could help him. The figure in red immediately whirled away from Elmer, touched his finger to the side of his nose, and disappeared.

Mrs. Thelma Grippe of Amherst, who works at the cash register in the Hatch, reported seeing the remarkable stranger shortly after Schlunk's sighting. "This fat little guy with a red cape and a long white beard came through the line with a cup of coffee and asked me where he could find a seat. Well, at first I thought he was one of those beatniks or a psychology teacher but he seemed awfully nice and pleasant. Anyway I told him he'd probably be happiest down by the windows on the right hand side by the guitars."

Tho girls, or boys, or maybe a boy and a girl — one still isn't sure from the way they were dressed — reported having seen the stranger sit at the table next to them. They overheard him muttering to himself something about "cold..better hurry ...Donder and Blitzen!" They thought he was a slightly addled German professor and left him alone.

Shortly thereafter Chief Blasko was seen in the parking lot behind Stockbridge Auditorium shaking his finger at the stranger and pointing at an odd vehicle which apparently belonged to the stranger. According to reports it was a huge sled with bells all over it and several large deer tied on to it.

THE RED CLOAKED STRANGER whispered into the Chief's ear for a few minutes, then Chief Blasko looked under the red cloak for a second and to the amazement of the crowd standing around tore up a hand full of tickets and let the stranger go free.

With the addition of the comment overheard from Chief Blasko as he departed no one could believe their ears or eyes.

Collegian lab experts were sent to the parking lot to collect the torn up tickets and try to piece them together. The results were: (1) No Mass. license plate, (2) No parking sticker, (3) Vehicle parked partly on lawn (cinders), (4) No headlight, (5) No taillight, (6) No brakes, (7) Cruelty to animals, (8) Unlicensed pets. The rest could not be assembled in time for the Collegian deadline today.

What does all this mean ? ? Who is the stranger in red ? ? No one has been able to come up with any plausible answers. Suggestions have ranged from Chief Blasko's mother-in-law to old Nick himself.

Ski, She, or Study; Vacation Looks Good

By Harriet Braunfield

While youthful revels, masques, and courtly sights
Sleep's leaden spells remove—

—Thomas Campion

The second mass holiday departure of the fall semester from Amherst starts tomorrow, and along with the piles of books, laundry bags, and half-shut eyes that students annually drag home as evidence of their good intentions go some major plans for having fun—for one day, anyway.

Ski Wonderlands

Students interested in skiing have a wide choice of areas to visit.

In Massachusetts, try Bousquet's in Pittsfield—great for beginners, "mecca for unmarrieds," night skiing on Wednesdays and Saturdays, ski shop at area . . . Bay State's biggest ski resort, Thunder Mountain, in Charlemont, offers 12 trails, three slopes on a steep mountain; races almost weekly; is frequented by Connecticut Valley college students.

Travel to Vermont and ski Killington—snowmaking covers 15 acres of novice trails. Dress is personal preference—dungarees to the latest ski fashions . . . "The place for skiers seeking the ultimate in Spartan life," Mad River Glen in Waitsfield caters to a college-young executive crowd, features parachute-ski races . . . Stowe, "Ski Capital of the East" offers 28 slopes up to four and one-half miles long, is frequented by vacation crowds of all ages. Dress is smart but conservative.

Visit Cranmore Mountain, in North Conway, N. H.—"Birthplace of Austro-American skiing" — featuring two skimobiles among its many lifts, public skating rink lighted until 10 p.m. Skiers include many college students during vacations; dress is fashionable, informal apres-ski . . . . Also in New Hampshire, ski the 15 wide, well groomed, varied trails of state-run Sunapee at Mt. Sunapee—all types of skiers—more zest than skill. Dress is mostly ski clothes because of transient nature of area.

Go North and sample the real outdoor atmosphere of Maine's moose country, at Sugarloaf in Kingfield. Skiers here are rugged; dress is informal, attention is to skiing, not attire.

Go South to New York's state-operated Belleayre in Pine Hill (Kingston exit-NYS Thruway) featuring four slopes, 19 trails and lower trails for novices. Little fashion dress here.

All areas mentioned except Sunapee have ski shops on premises; all except Bousquet's offer five-day special rates, including lessons.

Around the Towns

In Boston for a day, pay a visit to any of the museums and art galleries in the city. Museum of Fine Arts, featuring prints of Toulouse Lautrec . . . Beacon Hill Mansions—preserved by the Women's City Club of Boston . . . Child's Gallery. Among the theater offerings of the season is a new play, Everybody Out, the Castle is Sinking, opening December 26 at the Colonial, by Henry and Phoebe Ephron, authors of Take Her, She's Mine . . . Also Peter Pat with Dick Shawn and Joan Hackett, playing at the Wilbur through December 28.

Visitors to Rhode Island will thrill to the decorative lighting to be seen on the numerous fighting ships in port in Newport at the U. S. Naval Base. The public is invited to view the spectacular effects brought out by the friendly rivalry between ship's crews from 5-8:30 nightly. Admission to the base may be gained at Gates 10-17 from December 18 to January 3 . . . In Providence, see the annual display at the Roger Williams Park from December 19 to January 1.

Visitors to New York City are invited to museums there . . . At the Museum of Modern Art, see the extensive Max Beckmann exhibition . . . The Metropolitan Museum of Art features a rare collection of ancient Peruvian ceramics . . . Take a ride on a ferry to view the majestic New York skyline and the Statue of Liberty . . . Hear Handel's "Messiah" performed by the Oratorio Society of New York on Dec. 22 at Carnegie Hall . . . Attend the January 2-3 performance of Saint Saens Piano Concerto No. 5 and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" at the Lincoln Center Philharmonic Hall . . . See the New York City Ballet dance "The Nutcracker" at Lincoln Center's New York State Theater throughout the holiday week.

Book Nooks

For students who find studying a must, the following information from city libraries may prove useful during vacation travels:

The Boston Public Library suggests that students wishing to obtain information not easily obtained elsewhere do as much in the way of consulting periodical indexes, bibliographies, etc., at college libraries before going to the Boston Public Library. This will save considerable time. Also ,the library has two coin-operated Docustat machines, which students may use to photocopy materials in books which do not circulate. Boston residents may borrow books without charge; other Massachusetts residents may borrow books upon payment of a small fee.

The Worcester Public Library informs the Collegian that, while it offers no special services to students, its professional staff is available to aid students in the use of library materials from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. during the Christmas holiday period with the following exceptions: The library will be closed December 24, 25, 27, January 1 and 3. The library closes at 5:30 p.m. on Saturdays and on New Year's Eve. No books will be lent to students who are not registered patrons of the Worcester Public Library or of the Central Massachusetts Regional Library System.

The Springfield Public Library will be closed from December 24 at noon through Saturday, December 26, except that the Periodical Room will be open December 25 from 2-8 p.m. The Reference Department will be open Sunday, December 27 from 2-6 p.m. On December 31, the Library will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Reference Department will be open from 2-8 p.m. on January 1. On all other weekdays the library will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. On Saturday, January 2, it will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students wishing to borrow material from the library should be prepared to show personal identification in order to obtain a library card if they are nonmembers.

Students traveling to New York City who wish to use the Public Library there should be prepared to present their student identification card.

Panel Discussion Cites Obstacles To Internationalism

By Pat Petow

A panel composed of four members of the International Club, with Associate Prof. of government Anwar H. Syed as moderator, discussed the topic, "Obstacles to Internationalism," Monday evening, Dec. 14 in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union.

Mrs. K. J. Carter of the United States, a graduate student in sociology, began the proceedings by dealing with the influences in childhood which teach that our way of life is the "right way not simply for us but for all people for all times."

Considering this preconception as hindering international understanding—the meaning of internationalism—she posed the question for later analysis, "does increased contact between people, in and of itself, increase understanding?"

Mr. Alexander Okugo of Nigeria, also a graduate student, offered his views on politico-socio-economic obstacles. Stressing political and social conduct, Mr. Okugo decried the presence of military bases on foreign soils, which he believes an inducement to interference in the affairs of the host country; he deplored the harsh affect of religious prejudice and racism, particularly, racial discrimination and insult directed against an emblem of sovereignty as an ambassador.

Mr. Budiano of Indonesia, a graduate student in economics, discussed difficulties to understanding arising from the method of foreign aid distribution, both military and economic. "Recipients of military aid," he explained, "feel quite hurt when the giver nation also grants assistance to the recipient's adversary as in the case of the United States with India and Pakistan."

Regarding economic aid, Mr. Budiano said, "The detailing of plans before the granting of money is resented as well as conditionals in spending and/or repaying a loan."

Miss B. Kinast of Austria, whose field of study is languages and literature, spoke of the value of education in fostering understanding, pointing out that an international community among artists and scientists and intellectuals has always existed. She called for an inquiry into long-established beliefs and described her experience in languages and literature as permitting the achievement of a view without national bias.

Following the statements of the panel, questions and comments from the other members were offered including an exchange on the nature of foreign aid. Dr. Syed, in his closing remarks, suggested that enlightened self-interest in internationalsim was an adequate beginning.

Junior Class Announces Finalists For Carni Queen

By Ethel Kaplan

Campus votes were counted and a panel of judges representing the class of '66 chose the five finalists for the Winter Carnival Queen Contest this week.

The students decided by vote the ten semi-finalists who were then judged on the basis of appearance, poise, character and their interview.

The five finalists are: Joanie Ford, '66, a physical education major from Bristol, Connecticut; Sandy Olsen, '67, a microbiology major and a member of Chi Omega from Worcester; Sue Platt, '68, an elementary education major from Framingham; Ruth Rubin, '67, a government major and a member of Chi Omega from Great Neck, New York, and Maaja Sidoja, '65, an English major from Pittsfield.

Astronomy Club Set To Observe Eclipse

The Astronomy club, weather permitting, plans to observe this weekend's total lunar eclipse.

The eclipse will begin at 7:00 p.m., when the moon enters the penumbra of the earth's shadow. This portion of the eclipse cannot be seen without optical aid. The eclipse will be visible to the naked eye when the moon enters the umbra, the dark central portion of the shadow.

The schedule of the eclipse is as follows:

Moon enters penumbra	7:00 p.m.
Moon enters umbra	7:59 p.m.
Totality begins	9:07 p.m.
Totality ends	10:07 p.m.
Moon leaves umbra	11:15 p.m.
Moon leaves penumbra	12:13 p.m.

The Astronomy club invites the public to observe with them Friday night in the parking lot on front of the engineering building starting at 6:45 p.m.

Unlike solar eclipses, a lunar eclipse is perfectly safe to view, and no smoked glasses, special filters or other protective devices are necessary.

A lunar eclipse occurs when the moon enters the earth's shadow. Since it has no light of its own but shines by reflected sunlight, this cuts off its light source.

The moon is not always completely invisible during totality, however, because the earth's atmosphere bends sunlight to the moon.

In the eclipse of last December 30, however, the moon was unusually dark during totality. Astronomers think this was due to clouds and volcanic dust in the earth's atmosphere.

One of the observations to be made Friday will be timing the moment when certain craters enter and leave the umbra. From this information, data on the size of the earth's shadow can be obtained.

Friday's eclipse will be the last one for several years. The next total eclipse of the moon visible in this part of the country will be in April, 1968.

Faculty Decries Future Bowl Bids

By Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

Members of the faculty will present a resolution to the faculty senate today advocating that all post-season games for UMass athletic teams be banned unless faculty consent is given.

Professor Loren Beth of the government department drew up the resolution that was first published in the University Bulletin last Friday. It was made public before the team lost 14-13 to East Carolina in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Florida, last Saturday night.

Beth's resolution reads:

"Resolved that the university adopt as its rigid policy the principle that post-season athletic contests not be played and that no exceptions to this policy be permitted without an affirmative vote by a majority of the faculty, polled by mail."

The main complaint of the faculty members who presented and supported the petition is that two much time has been lost from studying by those who went to Orlando—football squad, band, cheerleaders and student fans who made the trip.

Judging from the letters addressed to the Collegian from faculty members on the advisability of attending the bowl game, it would appear that they are divided on the issue.

Professor Harper of the speech department said, "Two more weeks of practice plus the time away from campus may take a heavy toll where academic standing is already in jeopardy. I am not anti-athletics. I have supported our teams in the past and will continue to do so (but) UMass ought to read history. It might learn that true academic greatness and stature was never achieved by way of the football stadium."

Professor Richason of the chemistry department said, "Perhaps by reading history, UMass might learn that true academic greatness and stature has never been achieved by way of the football stadium. History does indicate that academic greatness and a good football program are not incompatible, and we should aspire to both. It (the bowl) has given the University Community (with but a few exceptions) a spirit of unity and pride in the pursuit of excellence, the equal of which I have seen but rarely in my tenure as a faculty member."

The senate, although it is but an advisory body to the administration, can be a very influential power if united on a particular issue.

Their decision will be known after the meeting this afternoon at 4:15. There is a bill before the senate to allow the Collegian editor-in-chief to cover the meetings as they are closed to all but those who are members of the body.

Pop Art Evades Death As A Reality

By Loren Cablenz

The search for the realities of comtemporary life in art was the theme of Dr. Carl Belz, professor and historian of art, who gave a lecture on Pop Art, New Humanism and Death Monday night in Mahar Aud.

Belz contrasted the romanticism in New Humanism with the realism in Pop Art. The concept of resurrection in a statue by artist Leonard Baskin was shown as an example of romanticism. He also pointed to artist Andy Warhol who was noted for the acceptance of reality which prevails in his art.

"While the Twentieth Century has often witnessed and been threatened by death," Belz said, "there has been a reduced occurrence of death subjects in modern art."

Citing Freud on death, Belz emphasized the tendency of man to see death as a spectator —no one wants to see death as a reality. It is difficult to portray death in its reality, because of prefabricated ideas and prevailing public opinion.

Belz explained that the ambiguities of Pop Art lead to new dimensions of meaning in its acceptance of the reality of death. "Every death is unique," he said. "Although the meaning is often lost through mass media, such as the toll of death predictions which is constantly being broadcast."

Turning to the solutions of the New Realists, Belz concluded, "the solutions of romanticism have now grown sterile."

Critique Seeks New Personnel

Critique needs people to select courses to be critiqued and to administer questionnaires in these courses between now and the end of the semester. If interested, sign the list on the bulletin board in the Critique office (Franklin Room, S.U.).

Since most of Critique's editorial board and secretarial staff will be graduating in June, it will be necessary during the next semester to train new people.

Responsible students having organizational abilities, qualities of leadership and the ability and desire to get things done will be selected.

This training will probably require all of next semester. If interested in a position on the editorial staff for next year, write to Critique, Box 345, R.S.O., Student Union, to arrange an interview.

Meaning Of Christmas

Christmas in America is a combination of German and English traditions plus American commercialism.

Christmas is not among the earliest festivals of the church. The first evidence of Christmas celebration is from Egypt. In the year 200 AD, Clement of Alexandris placed Christmas on the 25 Pachon (May 20) in the 28th year of Augustus. This was the ninth month of the Egyptian calendar. In 385, Pope Julius I assigned Dec. 25 as the day of the presentation from census documents brought to Rome. This began the formal, church celebration of the birth of Christ. At this time, the holiday was a church ceremony limited to the literate members of the church.

In order to bring the meaning of Christmas to the people, St. Francis of Assissi, in 1223, originated the initial Christmas crib. Martin Luther first introduced candles to the church celebration.

The practice of giving to others on Christmas, as well as the concept of Christmas trees and decorations, was introduced to the Christian celebration from pagan rituals during the early conversions to Christianity. Ancient peoples held feasts in mid December in which they built bonfires to give the winter sun god strength. From the pagan accent on light came modern lights and open fires. From the bonfires came yule logs and candles.

The sigificance of the holiday is evident in the fact that it gave a new date to the world—Anno Domini. Christmas, separated from Christianity, is historically significant for its results outside of the church ceremony. Great compositions of exceptional musicians were written on this theme; for example, George Frederick Hangel's "Messiah" with its "Hallelujah Chorus". Last year, thousands of East Germans were allowed to see relatives for the first time on Christmas day.

Has the evolution of Christmas carried it away from its true meaning? Perhaps, the answer must be affirmative if the meaning is defined from the church interpretation of the birth of Christ. But, in doing this, one must remember that while Christmas is no longer a purely religious ceremony, it has become a holiday with meaning for all people, Christian or otherwise.

Xmas Effect On Profs

Does the spirit of Deck the Halls, Jingle Bells and Peace on Earth, extend to professors at UMass? Does the Santa Claus feeling invade the faculty offices resulting in benevolence, leniency and understanding with students?

A happy holiday for all depends on the answer. Do professors get soft at Christmas? For the answer, the Collegian went straight to the source—the faculty:

"No, they become hardened," grinned an English prof maliciously, adding that the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas is the last-ditch attempt at completing the semester's work. "I become a Scrooge," he chuckled. He confided however that most professors cover their sadism successfully.

A member of the Business Administration staff answered indignantly: "I don't think any professor sets out deliberately to spoil anybody's Christmas. HOWEVER, exams are usually scheduled before vacation and papers are due also to make it more convenient for the instructor." Asked if the pressure might be let down a little because of the holiday season, he replied that he doesn't think this is ever done consciously. "At least they'd never admit it," he added.

From the cellar of Bartlett Hall, a psychology professor said that he felt the Christmas season had no effect at all on faculty policy. He admitted that the vacation does work to the advantage of a professor who neglected to assign a paper.

Lack of outdoor diversions, confines both the students and faculty to their desks." "Since the faculty is working harder it naturally expects the students to do the same," he explained. He added, however, that faculty usually does go "soft" during summer session.

Thinking that the sample of faculty was not representative or that opinion had colored the facts, a survey of upperclassmen was also taken.

Students of UMass, do professors go soft at Christmas?

Class of '67—"Go soft? They don't ever go soft!" "You've got to be kidding." "They're hard clear through!" "Get real.'

Class of '66—"Yeah, soft! Every one of mine scheduled an hour exam before we leave." "Is this some sort of joke?" "NO!"

Class of 65—"For four years I've waited—nothing." "Don't put me on!" "You know something I don't?"

With heavy hearts we compiled the results. Do professors go soft at the Christmas season? The answer is one large, bell-ringing, ribbon-tied, Christmas sealed, red-nosed NO!

Letters To The Editor

Christmas Spirit

To the Editor:

What is Christmas spirit at the University? It's many little things that add up to an indefinable whole. It's Chanukah services and the Living Rosary, decorating Christmas trees in the Union and seeing the lights shining on the snow. It's Christmas parties, both for ourselves and for the orphans and underprivileged children in this area.

In women's dormitories, it's the fun of "Secret Santas" and designing doors. It's having "open house", when friends and relatives can visit and see the decorated rooms. It's Christmas caroling, both in large groups and small, informal ones, the voices ringing out together.

Most of all, it should be a sense of gratitude; in the midst of the last-minute rush of papers and exams, to think for a moment of all we have to be thankful for.

As most of us prepare for a happy holiday, many families in this area and across the state can look forward to nothing but a bleak Christmas. Illness, accident, loss of a job means that these people must depend in part on the gifts of those more fortunate; of those like us.

We often find ourselves complaining about the difficulties of college, of the defects that we may see in the University. Yet we are receiving an education, a good and relatively inexpensive college education, that will enable us to find a place in the modern world. To many who have lost jobs, who cannot advance in life for lack of just such an education, we have been given an enviable opportunity.

Yes, Christmas is a time to count our blessings, and in doing so perhaps discover that we have more to be grateful for than we ever realized.

The Mortarboards

Witch Hunt

To the Editor:

December 12 is over and we have lost. The Monday morning quarterbacks have gotten an early start and the mudslinging has begun.

The administration and Faculty are now soul-searching for our actions in accepting the bowl bid. Pending in the Faculty Senate is a bill banning post-season games without the approval of the faculty.

Although this resolution was introduced prior to Saturday night, would the resolution have received such support and publicity had our team won?

Frustrated football fans are beginning to perpetrate rumors for our defeat at Orlando. Students and others fail to accept the only fact that is documented—we lost to a team that played better than we. But this answer is not enough for some people, and thus the witch hunt has begun.

VACANCY TO FILL

Due to the resignation of its chief justice, there is a vacancy in Area II of the Men's Judiciary.

All those interested in applying for the position may obtain forms from their house mothers. These forms are due back on Friday, December 18. Selections will be held Saturday, January 9.

Bus Service

To the Editor:

The Senate Services Committee has again arranged with the Peter Pan main business office in Springfield to provide a special bus service to Boston on Friday, December 18. The bus will leave the campus at 6 o'clock; if conditions warrant it, two busses will be provided with one being designated as an express.

Berkeley Demonstration

To the Editor:

It was unfortunate that your recent article on the arrest of nearly eight hundred students at the University of California's Berkeley campus appeared on the same page with reports of a panty raid in Florida and the beer protest at Trinity — all grouped together as student "demonstrations."

This gave, I believe, the mistaken impression that all student demonstrations are the same. Quite the contrary is true: the protest for political rights on the Berkeley campus is a far cry from childish riots for beer or panties. The Berkeley student body has a long (and, I believe, unmatched) history of mature confrontation with political questions, including anti-capital punishment, abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee, and student peace movements.

Those who are interested in the background of the current controversy might read Student, a paperback written by David Horowitz.

One further matter needs correction: the Berkeley student body numbers 27,500, not the more than 70,000 figure which you attributed to it. The larger figure represents the total enrollment of all campuses of the University.

Bowl Broadcast

To the Editor:

My friends and I cheered the Redmen at the Tangerine Bowl as we listened over WMUA radio.

But at the half-time, when we eagerly expected to hear the Marching Band's performance, all we got was a recapitulation of the game and a description of Florida weather.

It seems only fair that we be given a chance to listen to the band which we backed by buying tangerine emblems. Couldn't the announcers have saved their comments until after the game?

Redmen Five Suffers First Loss Of Season To UConn

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team was handed its first defeat of the season by the undefeated University of Connecticut, 77-67, at Storrs on Tuesday.

MASSACHUSETTS, which hasn't won at UConn since 1936 made a game try but ran into a string of bad luck for about seven minutes midway in the second half to lose the contest.

With 15 minutes left in the game, the Redmen battled into a 48-46 lead behind Clarence Hill and Tim Edwards. Then the Huskies' Bill Della Sala hit for two hoops and Wes Bialosuknia hit ten of the next twenty points while the Redmen scored but two.

That made the margin 66-50 and the Redmen had been defeated again at Storrs. During this span, UMass was caught for three offensive fouls, a traveling violation, and missed eight of nine shots.

CONNECTICUT, with an abundance of sophomore talent, plays a real tight defensive game. Twenty-three year old sophomore P. J. Curran, calls the defensive signals as the Huskies don't play the same one each time.

The game started off very close with the teams exchanging hoops until UConn opened a nine point lead. Then Coach John Orr sent in Clarence Hill, probably the best sixth man in New England, and the Redmen caught fire. Edwards came up with eight points and Hill 12 to cut the difference to three with the score at 37-34. By half time the margin was 51-36 with the Huskies in control.

A big factor in the game was that Toby Kimball had three fouls and had to sit out a good portion of the opening half with only five rebounds, far below his pace.

UMass came out for the second half and began the climb back into the game. Edwards had 7 and Hill 5 as they combined for all the points to give UMass its shortlived lead. Then the Redmen hit their slump with Chuck O'Rourke scoring the only hoop.

Once the disastrous span was over, the Redmen got back to within ten points, but couldn't make up the rest against a UConn team that makes very few fioor errors and takes only the best shots.

BIALOSUKNIA, a 6'2" guard, matched his season's high with a 32 point performance on 11 of 22 field goals and 10 of 11 foul shots. His best move is a pick where he runs the defensive man into the center and gets clear for the moment he needs to fire the shot. In the late stages he was hitting from about 30 feet out with consistency.

The UConn statistician gave Kimball 22 rebounds for the game, but this was obviously an excess. In the end, the UM and UC men got together with a compromise figure of 16. Kimball got his 1,000 career point with about 6:50 left and was presented the ball.

HILL had another fine night with 27 points on 12 of 24 shots and three fouls. While at times he appears to be taking too many shots, few can argue with the fine percentage for the year. Edwards was tremendous for the Redmen, far outshining Kimball as he scored 22 points and pulled down 20 rebounds. These two accounted for all but 18 of the Redmen points.

In an interesting prelim, the UMass frosh trounced UConn 81-64. The little Redmen opened a 28-7 lead and coasted to victory. Six men scored for the club and they all were in double figures as Hagen Anderson with 21 and Mike Bernard with 15 led the way. UConn's big gun was Bill Corley, a talented big man, who had 22 points. The club now stands 3-0.

The varsity with a 4-1 record, 2-1 in the conference, now faces UNH Friday evening at home. During the Christmas recess the club will make its swing through the midwest, facing Evansville, the top small college in the nation last year, Bradley, the NIT champ, and Washington of Missouri, the number eight small college.

Then they will travel to Northeastern on January 2 where those UM fans in the Boston area can see the club play prior to returning to school.

Redmen Roundup

By Marshall Karol
Sports Editor

An unfortunate factor in the recent Bowl game was that because of the great distance and expense in traviing to Orlando, Florida, few fans were able to attend the event. Yet, as always, the two most loyal Redmen fans were on hand. Polly Ball and Lita delaMar have one very important propensity in common ... both are followers of UMass football.

Lita, a graduate student in food technology, is a native of the Philippines, and has been in this country a relatively short period of time. However no one could possibly be a greater advocate of American sports. Being relatively familiar with baseball and basketball, which are popular sports in her native land, along with soccer, she has become a true enthusiast over the "novel" sport of football.

Polly is a secretary at the University and has experienced a great thrill in seeing UMass football slowly develop to its present status. Like Lita, Polly enjoys sports in general, but Redmen football in particular.

The result of one common interest is the great friendship between the two young ladies. Having attended each and every practice since the season began, the girls are well-acquainted with the individuals on the team, who in turn have acknowledged Polly and Lita as their number one rooters. Diminutive Lita, who stands under five feet, is quite a contrast to her buddy, big Bobby Burke. But all the players consult her concerning the latest college and professional ratings and statistics.

Polly and Lita made the long sojourn to Orlando as they have travelled to Vermont and other away games. As all Redmen fans, they were disappointed with the final result, but next year offers a new season, which they believe will be equally as successful as the past one.

Redmen Sextet Beaten By Amherst College 4-1

By Gary Molloy

The third hockey game of the season was played yesterday against Amherst college. A sparse crowd was on hand to witness this hard played contest.

First period—Amherst took a 1-0 lead at 4:52 when Diamond cut across center and fired a shot to the lower left corner to beat goalie Skip Bowen. Amherst's second goal of the period came at 6:32. Philiston split the UMass defense, circled the cage and tucked the puck in the near corner past Bowen. Action picked up slowly, but Amherst maintained its 2-0 lead.

The second period was not much better for UMass as Amherst continued to dominate play. The first line failed to backcheck and the defense was still weak. Amherst scored its third goal at 2:16 when Washburn fired a 30 foot screen shot while UMass was shorthanded. Amherst scored again at the 5 minute mark to boost its lead to 4-0. UMass began to show life midway through the period and finally scored when Dave Bisbee backhanded a pass into the far corner at 19:15. The assist went to Bob Edmonston. The period ended with the score 4-1, Amherst.

UMass finally began to play the hockey it is capable of in the third period. They controlled the puck and had numerous scoring chances. The Redmen, however, were unable to score and the game ended 4-1 Amherst.

Looking forward to the Christmas tournament at Vermont, the Redmen had better sharpen up on offense or they may find themselves being left behind by the pack.

Chamber Soloists To Perform Tonight

The New York Chamber Soloists, here pictured, was formed in 1957 to fill the need for a group of artists to perform music not written for standard chamber music groups.

Six members of the New York Chamber soloists will perform in concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom. Admission is by I.D.

Brought to the campus by the student-sponsored University Concert association, the chamber group will present in its program a work written especially for them by the American composer, Hugh Aitken.

J. S. Bach's Cantata 160, "Ich weiss dass mein Erloeser lebt," will be followed by Beethoven's Trio in G Major, Opus 9, No. 1; Aitken's Cantata No. 1 on Elizabethan Texts; Mozart's Quartet in F Major, K. 370, and Handel's Cantata, "Crudel tiranno Amer."

Members of the New York Chamber soloists who will perform at this concert are: Charles Bressler, tenor; Albert Fuller, harpsichord; Melvin Caplan, oboe; Gerald Tarack, violin; Ynez Lynch, viola, and Alexander Kouguell, cello.

Gov. Anderson Named Prof. of Public Affairs

Governor John Anderson, Jr., of Kansas has been named Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs at UMass, it was announced Sunday by President John W. Lederle.

The Republican Governor, now completing his second gubernatorial term of office, will teach at UMass during the second semester of the current academic year.

The program in public affairs, established under a grant from the Ford Foundation, has been conducted for the past four years as a means of spurring student interest in local, state and national politics.

One of the first of its kind in the United tates, the professorship was established on a five-year basis in conjunction with the work of the University's department of government.

The program brings to the campus persons who have held top-level positions in Federal, state or local governments and who have an intimate knowledge of the decision-making process by which public policies are determined.

Gov. Anderson, elected Governor in 1960 and again in 1962, is leaving public office after two terms as Kansas' top official. He did not run for office this past November.

Gov. Anderson, a "moderate Republican," has frequently been mentioned as possible successor to Dean Burch, present Chairman of the Republican Party.

In 1952, Anderson was elected State Senator from his county. He served four years on the Legislative Council and as chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee.

Price Hikes Lead Senate To Vending Machine Boycott

By Jim Foudy

Following complaints of increased prices in residence hall vending machines, the Student Senate, at its last meeting before Christmas, passed a bill giving its support to a boycott of these machines.

During the hour debate on the bill, the Senate defined its position to support only legal and non-violent boycott measures, and President Michael, commenting on the debate, said that, "It shows the Senate as a place where personal opinions can be voiced and respected."

Defending the bill, Senator Betty Chambers (Van Meter So.) pointed out that, "The student body is being robbed of hundreds of dollars each year," and that it was the Senate's duty to protect its constituents.

Senator Chambers explained that it had come to the attention that the prices of these items had been raised from their previous cost of ten cents only because the concerns controlling the pastry machines wanted more profit from their better selling items.

However, she pointed out, "It must be realized that there was no subsequent change in quality." She further explained that, "The group controlling the prices of these items stated they would lower their the pastries."

Senator Chambers drew up the following protest and posted it in the dorms:

Do you like paying 15¢ for a pastry that was 10¢ last year? If so, read no further, but if you would like to see the price lowered, show your protest by not buying any 15¢ items in the pastry machines on campus. These prices were raised not because of a change in quality but ONLY because the owners of these machines wanted more profit from YOU the student. Therefore your Student Senate and the Administrative sympathizers urge you to boycott these items until their price is lowered.

Realizing the need for a constantly improving curriculum, the Student Senate moved to recommend to the administration that programs of Asian and African, and Latin and South American studies be established.

These programs would be interdepartmentalized, enabling students to concentrate in these areas which are integral and necessary parts of the world today."

Willis Education Report: UM In Dominant Role

by Jeff Davidow

BOSTON—The picture painted for the University of Massachusetts by the Willis commission in its recent report is generally bright—with some shadows cast by its language.

The master plan for education in the commonwealth was made public at a press conference here December 26.

The report named UMass as the state's one and only public university. Recommendations put the clamps on expansion hopes of other institutions, notably Lowell Technological Institute which wants to become a full-fledged science and engineering university.

The commission, with Supt. Benjamin Willis of Chicago as executive director, recommends that the University be the only public institution to grant doctorate degrees.

According to the report, Lowell Tech would continue to grant a doctorate in chemistry, but future doctoral programs would be possible only in conjunction with UM.

New Board Suggested

A major recommendation of the commission is a board of higher education. It would coordinate growth, budgets and programs of 22 public institutions—UofM, its Boston branch, the technical institutes, state colleges and regional community colleges.

The BHE would have 11 lay members with a chancellor (at $35,00 per year) to preside. It would have final say over the university's trustees and, from what Willis said, could—in theory at least—veto recommendations by the UM board.

In more than one instance, the report is unclear about the university. At one point it says that, in addition to establishing branch campuses of its own, the university also would have the right to "take under its jurisdiction other elements of the state system of higher education with the approval of its board of trustees and the board of higher education."

Does this mean the university would be given the right to control state colleges?

Rep. James Nolen of Ware, one of 21 commission members, told a reporter that the commission had specifically voted not to allow the UofM to assume such control. Nolen admitted he found wording in the summary report unclear and likely to be misunderstood.

In answer to a reporter's question, Supt. Willis said, "The University doesn't take anything from anyone."

Ask Solons Hold Off

The commission recommended that the general court hold off action "which would alter present operational programs of any public institution," until legislators could consider a measure to set up a board of higher education.

The chairmen of the commission—Sen. Kevin Harrington of Salem and Rep. Nolen — both said such deferment would not affect the UofM Boston branch or medical school. Both programs, the two said, are in operating condition and would not be halted to await a problematical BHE.

The Willis report also called ford a shakeup in the state's public schools.

Famed Poet T. S. Eliot Dies At 76

by Joe Sullivan

This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
Not with a bang but a whimper.

Thomas Sterns Eliot, the unassuming poet-collossus of our times, is dead.

He died quietly, even as he had lived. He was 76 years old.

Born an American in St. Louis, Mo., Eliot lived and worked as an Englishman. He moved to England before World War I and assumed British citizenship in 1928. As Eliot himself put it, "Here I am, making a living, enjoying my friends here. I don't want to feel like being a squatter. I might as well take full responsibility."

He garnered in his lifetime perhaps every wreath available to a poet, including the Nobel Prize, the British Order of Merit and ... -ary degrees from 14 of the wo.. top universities.

The poet received world-wide critical acclaim for his play, "Murder in the Cathedral," a grim account of the murder of the Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas A. Becket.

He achieved a fame which time may crown with immortality for a poem, "The Wastelands," a poem which, in the words of Thomas Lask, "... caught and expressed ... the sense of a doomed world, of fragmentation, of a wasteland of the spirit that moved the generation after the war."

We are a generation after

Olmstead Exhibit Honors Naturalist's Achievements

An exhibit of the life and works of one of America's "great organizers of nature" will be held in the Commonwealth Room, Jan. 3 to 10.

Dedicated to the memory of a man few have ever heard of, Frederick Law Olmsted, the exhibit is open to the public without charge.

It traces through drawings, photographs and handwritten manuscripts, the career of a man whose interests ranged from social criticism to conservation.

To give depth to the exhibit, and to explore the areas in which Olmsted pioneered, Raymond H. Otto, Head, UMass department of landscape architecture, will introduce a six-man panel in the Council Chambers Jan. 7 at 8 p.m. that will discuss Olmsted from different points of view.

The panel, to be moderated by UMass resource specialist Dr. Andrew J. W. Scheffey, will include Charles Eliot, professor of city and regional planning at Harvard University's graduate school of design.

In 1858, Olmsted won a competition to design and build a useable park out of raw acreage in New York City. His plans for what we know as Central Park incorporated sunken roadways, so that passers-by could see grass and trees unmarred by ribbons of cobblestones. He used over- and underpasses to keep the park from being artificially subdivided.

In 1869, he designed the entire community of Chicago's northern suburb, Riverside, in what was America's first planned new town. Olmsted also planned the green and rocky vastness of Yosemite National Park and the stately redwood stands of Mariposa Park in California.

His last great achievement was the colossal design for the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893, a concept that brought into being his idea for a "super-block." This cohesive complex of nature and buildings was enclosed by a wide road that gave access to all parts of the Exposition.

Frederick Law Olmsted's main contribution to his country was to firmly establish society's need for environmental

GOV. ANDERSON . . .

He was appointed State Attorney General in 1956. Later that year he was elected to that office, and was reelected in 1958.

As Attorney General, and during his prior service in the Legislature Anderson was directly associated with the enactment of the various small loan laws that now regulate this industry.

The Governor will take up his teaching post in February, 1965.

Scholarships To Be Given By Sorority

For the 1965-66 academic year the National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta will award the Maria Leonard, the Alice Crocker Lloyd, the Adele Hagner Stamp and the Kathryn Sisson Phillips Fellowships for graduate study. The amount of each fellowship is $1,500.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta who graduated in 1962, 1963 or 1964 and who has maintained the scholastic average throughout her college career is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have maintained this average to the end of the first semester (or first quarter) of this year.

Applicants will be judged on scholastic record, recommendations, the soundness of the applicant's project and purpose and, to some extent, on need.

Application blanks and information may be obtained from Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women, Machmer Hall.

The application must be completed by the applicant herself and submitted to the National Fellowship Chairman by January 15, 1965.

REVIEW

The Black School Today

The Devin-Adair Co., publishers, N.Y., N.Y., have just brought into circulation a rare and indeed daring book, by Robert Kendall.

About The Author

Declining to go into his family's business, Kendall went to Hollywood where he replaced Sabu in "Song of Scheherazade" and subsequently appeared in several TV and motion pictures. He then spent three years studying for the ministry. A leading role in a Youth for Christ movie entitled "Betrayed" made it necessary for him to study the problem of Juvenile Delinquency in Chicago, Detroit and New York City. He has since given over a 100 lectures and continued his research in 40 major cities before deciding that teaching was to be his life work. He taught for two years in the two schools he describes in his book as a composite and at present is teaching in a private school.

The Book

"Never Say Nigger" was going to be the original title of this book. Apparently, there was a great criticisim concerning the provocations that such a title might evoke; thus the present title. Dropping most inhibitions, that seem to be the norms of those having them-behind closed doors. Kendall, has brought forth a work that, in my opinion should be read by teachers and students alike, by the intelligentzia and the lay public with the same concern, bring the same pleasure as an artistic creation, and elicit the same concern as a public document that merits more than merely "attention".

Whether the author creates

The UMie Syndrome

Ask the average UMie (who must be a pretty weird creature being '56 male and '44 female about your club. If he says "Huh?" "Never heard of it," or some other indication he only knows his way to and from classes, your publicity is showing signs of the common syndrome-aenemiUmitis. Dr. Collegian prescribes a Collegian notice for mild cases and a massive does of feature for more severe symptoms.

Feature is what's inside and behind the front page news, from the latest play to the oldest prof. We can investigate curfews for girls at UMass in 1900 or project the look of the dromitories of the future, or featurelight anything from jazz to jargon.

Feature is a new and growing department with over 20 staff members. Together with the photography department they can project, plan and present a finished article that shows one reason why Collegian rated first class.

We can't possibly come to each club. Deep down, didn't

SEX (Again)

ROCHESTER (CPS) — The I.F.C. at the University of Rochester has passed a resolution outlawing sex in facilities operated by members of the IFC.

The resolution, "specifically prohibits sexual intercourse in any fraternity house or (non-house) lounge." The resolution adds that the council "does not want to legislate on the morality of sexual intercourse, but must prohibit such acts in fraternity houses and lounges" because of possible injury to reputations.

The code, said the student newspaper, the Campus Times, was passed in an attempt to meet the demands of deans for uniformity in social standards throughout the campus.

Student opinion varied concerning the university administration's new so-called "bedroom rules" which prompted the IFC resolution, but one student commented: If you take a girl in your room, you should be able to entertain her any way you want.

It's That Time Again

The time of the most institutionalized practice on any college campus is almost upon us again. It serves to scare the freshmen half to death, and give the upper classmen the classic feeling of, "Here we go again!"

Once again it is open season for final exams.

However, are these tests, upon which up to 50% of a semester grade may rest, actually necessary?

Or, are they merely a practice which has been so thoroughly inculcated into the minds of our educators that they would consider it absurd to curtail them, while often having little reason for employing them.

Does it not seem strange that the results of 16 weeks of consistent work may be cast aside by the score of a single two hour examination?

After serious consideration, one could hardly maintain that the result of a final exam is a better indication of a student's work than the results of all of his assignments and tests throughout the semester.

Could it be possible that we have been living under a misconception all these years?

Certainly, a final exam is necessary in many instances. It can help a professor to decide on a grade where the work of a student has been on the borderline. Is it necessary, however, when a student has a 75 average to put him through the inconvenience of a final? For an inconvenience is all that it amounts to. The only effect a final could have would be to decide on a high or low "C."

It would appear that any person who is qualified to teach University students, and decide the grade they will receive, would also be qualified to decide whether or not a final exam is necessary.

Many instructors are admittedly opposed to them, and many more feel that they could be eliminated with certain students, but they all claim that "their hands are tied."

It is time that the ties were cut and the decision of whether or not to give a final exam be left to the instructor involved!

UMASS GRADUATE SCHOOLS

To the Editor of The Herald:

In a Nov. 29 article on New England state universities by Herald Education Editor John Chaffee, Jr., the plans for the University of Massachusetts branch campus in the Boston area were further disclosed. In pointing out the need for "enough educators, engineers and scientists to meet . . . economic needs in the years ahead," he noted the prediction of Dr. John W. Lederle, president of UMass, that approximately 10,000 PhD.'s or the equivalent will be required in Massachusetts alone between now and 1975. To help meet this demand UMass will both expand at Amherst and build in Greater Boston.

Of the latter project, Mr. Chaffee said: "So far, the Greater Boston plan has been termed a 'branch campus.' But Lederle hopes eventually to make it as big as the main university itself, with a full array of undergraduate and graduate programs." This recalls to mind the "at least 20 high-rise structures" to house among other specializations "engineering . . . science, law and medicine," possibly in the Blue Hills, that Senate President Maurice A. Donahue called for last May. However, the academic need generally cited to secure leislative approval of a Boston branch was a fairly well established one on the undergraduate level.

Thus, several questions might now be asked. If specialized graduate training and research are the essential academic attractions for the "frontier" industries such as electronics, then will not the highly probable concentration of such educative operations at UMass-Boston have a crushing effect upon the hopes for such industrial development in western, northeastern, and southeastern, Massachusetts?

Secondly, if there were to be established an adequate system of federal, state, and private scholarships, assistantships, grants, and loans to individual students, or a cooperative arrangement between UMass-Amherst or UMass-Boston and such private institutions as MIT, Tufts, Northeastern, Harvard, Boston University, Boston College, and Brandeis (similar to the "four-college cooperative plan" at Amherst or the mid-West CIC plan) could not graduate training be provided far more economically by these private institutions than by a fabulously expensive duplication of their specialized facilities and faculties.

Finally, although NASA and related installations will require thousands of the most highly trained engineers and scientists, is not the problem of supplying the employees for such a unique research and development complex a nationwide (as apparently Mr. Conant would contend) rather than merely a statewide consideration?

Ambition, either in public institutions or in public officials, can be a beneficial force as long as it serves the best interests of the state. Whatever the present case, the far-reaching implications of the graduate phase of the UMass-Boston build-up would seem to require a careful scrutiny by the entire Commonwealth.

And, in this connection, one hopes that the Willis Commission demonstrates unchallenged competence in its handling of the complex interrelations among education, economics, technology, sociology, public and private interests, etc., that higher education involves in Massachusetts. It will be interesting to see.

Letters To The Editor

Band Thanks

To Students, Faculty and Administration of the University:

On behalf of the members of the 1964 University of Massachusetts Marching Band, we would like to thank you for the support you have given us both during the regular football season and during the preparations for our appearance in the Tangerine Bowl. We were gratified to receive the almost unanimous vote of approval of the Student Senate questionnaire concerning our appearance at the Bowl. We deeply appreciated the support of the many students, faculty members and administrators who assisted in the fund raising activities prior to the trip to Orlando.

It is our hope that the University Marching Band will continue to earn your interest and respect by providing for the University the finest possible combination of music and marching in support of Coach Fusia's "Fighting Redmen."

Civil Rights

To the Editor:

Recently the Collegian printed an article announcing a civil rights conference to be held in the four-college area in February. We commend the students who are organizing this, and we hope that it will be a non-partisan, all-University effort. Although the preliminary announcement looked promising, we wish to warn the students against allowing this conference to degenerate into nothing more than a complaint session. It is easy to point an accusing finger; it is more difficult to offer solutions.

However, it is necessary to air these problems, and there are few places more fitting than a rapidly growing institution such as ours. We must never forget the need of extending education beyond the confines of the classroom. We therefore endorse this conference and urge all members of the academic community to support and participate in it fully.

Action In Orlando

To The Editor,

The students representing the University of Massachusetts in Orlando, Florida, acted truly like ladies and gentlemen. The management and all employees who served this student group have no complaints.

Now I would like to say a few words concerning the performances at the Tangerine Bowl Game held on the night of December 12.

After seeing all nineteen Tangerine Bowl Games ever played, I would like to pay tribute to the University of Massachusetts Marching Band as the finest band ever to appear in the Tangerine Bowl. The standing ovations received by the band were well deserved.

I would also like to say that the spirit generated by your Cheerleaders and Metawampee was a credit to your institution.

I just wish that all students, faculty, and administration at your University could have attended the Tangerine Bowl Game to appreciate the performances of those students who so admirably represented the University of Massachusetts.

Thanks for Encouragement

To The Editor:

It was indeed a shock and surprise for me to see my editorial, "He," reprinted in your edition of 11 December. I would like to extend my appreciation and gratitude to you, for seldom have I received such rewards. Above all else, it is gratifying to know that the hours spent at the typewriter have a significance beyond the sometimes-cathartic communication between the typewriter and me.

Again, thank you—mainly for the encouragement.

"White Teacher in A Black School"

his characters as mosaics of concrete and diverse characteristics of the youths and men he came in contact with, or he merely describes reality with sincerity is not of prime importance. What is important is that, in his book, Kendall, gifted with a literary talent, which is characterized by a simplicity of language and yet capturing with vividness, is presenting a situation that should alarm every staff member of the Dept. of Education in Los Angeles or Washington, D.C. by the same token.

And yet, the importance of this book does not lie exclusively with its contents. Though many insights will be gained by the reader, concerning the Education that Negro and minority children were getting in the schools where the author taught, yet the book will bring a memorable experience in the enjoyment of literature.

Deliberately or subconsciously, the author is achieving one thing: Though his book reads as a novel, at no moment does the reader loose contact with reality, never does one forget that what Kendall depicts are characters and situations of everyday reality . . .
